We used to hear a good deal about Jones, and Jones used to advertise that Jones paid the freight. Sometimes Jones paid the freight and sometimes Jones did not pay the freight. If Jones was making more wagons than he could sell, then he would pay the freight to get the wagons in the market. If the market was demanding more wagons than Jones was making, then the purchaser would have to come to the factory to make the purchase, and the purchaser paid the freight.

Now, take the great question of wheat. The price is largely fixed, perhaps, in Liverpool, and the farmer out in Renville, Minn., when he goes to sell his wheat, gets a price for that wheat based upon the price in Liverpool, less the freight. In that case the farmer pays the freight. But the coal operator of the East, sending his coal to Renville, does not fix the price by inquiring what coal is selling for to-day in Renville, but he fixes the price by taking the eastern price, whatever that may be, and adding the freight to Renville, and in that case the consumer pays the freight.

Then there is a vast amount of merchandise where the freight is paid indiscriminately and indifferently. So it seemed a hopeless task to trace this freight to the man who finally paid it, and who should be reimbursed if the plan for reimbursement was made.

There are certain cases where it is very plain who pays the freight. I knew of a case in Illinois where a man engaged in the pottery business, and pottery interests having been opened in Ohio, the railroads there, with the desire to develop business, which has crowned the greatest railroad operators in this country with success, reduced rates so as to get the business of those potteries in Ohio carried to St. Louis, and the man in Illinois had to suspend operations. Now, if a railroad commission had granted him a reduction to enable him to reach St. Louis, then, clearly, he would be paying the frieght, because that reduction would be absolutely necessary to his getting to the St. Louis market.

Instead of trying to provide in this law for the reimbursement of this freight, it seemed that the wisest plan was to leave it where it could be disposed of in each instance, and absolutely free from any constitutional question.

I certainly entertain the highest respect for the Senator, who, I presume, will be quite instrumental in presenting this plan of impounding the excess by making provision for its distribution. I have a right to. It was my rare privilege to read law in his office, and it is with extreme hesitation that I approach the suggestion of a constitutional question in opposition to what I understand is a view of his. But I want to submit this to the members of the Senate: What plea will the carrier make who seeks the interposition of a court of equity to secure a restraining order until his case can be heard? It must be the plea based primarily upon what we broadly call "confiscation." If it is claimed to be more than the mere change of a rate from an unreasonable to a reasonable rate; if it is an unlawful change, it is the unlawful invasion of a man's property. The invasion of that property may be by the very bill of complaint which he files such a threatened injury as to threaten him with insolvency, or perhaps even to threaten his ability to continue the operation of that road. And yet can we, as a legislative body, say to that man, "Yes; the door of that court is open to you, provided you must first take out of your revenue the very item which you plead as you enter the portal of that court, the taking out of which is an unjust taking and perhaps ruinous to the extent of confiscation?"

But a court can do what the legislature can not do. The court can impose any terms it sees fit; and in this particular instance, which I have illustrated, in the case of the pottery factory, where it is self-evident and plain who pays the freight, if we leave this to the court, the court can, as a condition precedent to issuing its restraining order, require the impounding of the excess or the giving of security for the return thereof. So it seemed best to leave the terms which a court might impose to the control of the court itself.

I pass now—for I notice the time is passing rapidly—to the next serious objection made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], and I address myself somewhat to his objections because they stand to-day as the only concrete form of the objections made to this bill.

We were told by the distinguished Senator that this bill would be fatally defective in that it attempts to lay the heavy hand of the Government upon two parties who will not make a contract for themselves as to a joint rate and, confiscating their property, make a contract for them.

As to confiscation being involved, I want to recur to the suggestion I have made that the right of Congress to fix a reasonable rate is not the taking of private property. It is simply defining the boundary between the property on the one hand of the carrier and the shipper on the other.

Here are two connecting roads physically connected, but they refuse to make any arrangement for through transportation. Let us again go to the source. Each of those carriers obtained their charters from a State government, we will say, but, in the language of Judge Miller, they obtained those charters subject to the power of Congress to regulate interstate traffic. The exercise of that power by Congress in the reduction of rates to a reasonable point certainly can not be, as we have already shown, the taking of private property for public use. If the operation of the order goes below the point of a reasonable rate, then the remedy is in the court, as though the Commission were dealing with a continuous line and the question of the two lines on a joint transportation contract was not at all involved.

But there is a higher principle than that applicable to this case. In the first place, it is not the making of a contract for parties who will not contract for themselves, but the law recognizes everywhere this condition, that where an obligation rests upon a party to make a contract and he refuses to make it, then the law does not make a contract for him, but imposes a condition which shall take the place of the contract which he ought in good faith to have made. When the carrier started, before the carrier built a foot of railroad, the carrier had to invoke that same principle. Failing to agree with the landowner, the law provided a machinery by which a condition should obtain that would take the place of a contract which the carrier could not make with the landowner.

Now, we do not have to depend upon the logic of the situation in this case either. In 1901 a case came before the Supreme Court of the United States from the State of Minnesota. The railroad commission of Minnesota made an order there as to a joint rate. It is true there was already a joint rate between the two carriers, but I submit that the ignoring of the contract which the carriers had made and substituting another contract or condition in its place was as absolute exercise of power as though no contract had existed in the first instance. The commission there made an order affecting this joint rate. One of the carriers appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that court, in the case of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad Company v. Minnesota (186 U. S., 257), sustained the order of the commission, saying:

> The practical result of that argument is such that if there were within a certain State five connecting roads of 100 miles each in length which among themselves had established a joint tariff for the whole 500 miles, the State would be powerless to interfere with such tariff, though its right to do so would be unquestioned if the whole 500 miles were owned and operated by a single company. To state such a proposition is practically to answer it.

If that does not establish the power of government, State or Federal, which may deal with traffic as it may be intrastate or interstate to impose a condition upon which they shall discharge their duty to the public, in the case of the failure of the companies to make the agreement themselves, I can not apply a principle of law to a given case.

But here we have a still stronger case. That same commission made an order requiring two railroad companies that had no contract, that had no agreement, to put in a Y, so that freight might be transferred from one track to the other. Not only that, but in the Minneapolis case, where there were existing contracts, where the railroads had their physical connection, where it required no outlay at their hands, where they had their trains, where they had all the machinery of their roads for transportation, and simply required a condition under which that machinery should be operated, the same commission, in the Jacobson case, went further than that. They made an order that the two carriers, having no facility of transfer, having no contract of any kind, should put a transfer in there at their own expense, and that the expense should be divided between the two carriers, and that, too, where it involved, probably for the first time in the legal history of the United States, an order which required a corporation to exercise the right of eminent domain; yet the court said the fact that it required this light expenditure, the fact that it required the exercise of the right of eminent domain, did not defeat the order, and the order was affirmed. (Jacobson case, 179 U. S., 287.)

I pass now rapidly to the last objection which I shall note of the Senator from Ohio. He called attention to the fact that the bill under consideration prescribes a penalty of $5,000 a day, and contended that that penalty renders doubtful the constitutionality of the proposed law, because the carrier seeking to get a stay order from the court takes the order at his peril, and if that order is subsequently vacated, the penalties for the intermediate time pile up upon the carrier and are such a burden as would render the law in that respect unconstitutional as imposing a burden upon him who goes into equity to protect his property from confiscation. I can not think that the Senator from Ohio read the proposed law with that care which he should before making a criticism of this kind.

When a law prescribes a penalty and the person against whom that penalty is prescribed secures from a court a temporary restraining order, it may be said he does that at his peril; and if the court, upon final deliberation, finds that that order was erroneously made, having been made at the request of the party, the party must suffer, and the penalties are piled up against him. But this proposed law does not present that case. The proposed law, in express terms, provides, speaking of the order of the Commission:

> Such order shall go into effect thirty days after notice to the carrier and shall remain in force and be observed by the carrier unless the same shall be suspended or modified.

Now, under that order, when the carrier obtains his restraining order, so far as the court speaks, it says this order is in abeyance and at the peril of the petitioner who has asked for its suspension. But operating upon the act of the court is the act of Congress, the declaration of the legislative branch of the Government, that that order shall not be in effect pending that suspension. That removes this particular provision of this proposed law from the criticism that has thus been made against it.

It could not be stated more plainly. No man will question but what Congress might read into a law that contained penal clauses a provision that a man obtaining a temporary restraining order should be protected as against those penalties pending the time that order was in force, provided that the order was finally vacated. I know of no plainer way of reading the provision than by using the word "unless." If there is a plainer word, if there is one which more distinctively provides that the order should be in effect unless suspended, then I think, at least speaking for one member of the committee, that the committee would have no hesitation to use that term.

This, then, is not the sole act of the court so far as the court is concerned. The court says: "I will suspend the order until I investigate this matter," and the legislature says that "in that case we suspend the order pending the investigation;" for it does not become an order under the terms of this provision if it is thus suspended. It becomes an order unless it is suspended.

Mr. President, in this brief way I have at this time and for the present reviewed in a somewhat perhaps imperfect manner the objections which have been urged to this bill.

I have only to add that no one claims for this bill perfection. It has been the earnest effort of those who worked upon it to produce a measure as plain and as free from complications as possible. We realize that it could not be perfect, not only because of that imperfection inherent in human nature, but every student of the great problems of the hour must recognize that every effort to solve these problems simply produces, in addition to the progress of the solution, new problems to be solved; and that applies with as much force to this question as to the other great questions affecting the policy of our Republic.

We have tried to keep in mind in the preparation of this bill the rights of all. It has been sought to provide remedies as plainly as it could be done and as prompt and efficient as it might be, having due regard for the rights of all and recognizing those great principles of American law that spread their mantle over all classes and all conditions.

Mr. TILLMAN. I wish to ask the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] a question in regard to his exposition of the meaning of this bill. I want to see if I got him down right. Speaking of the order of the Commission, the language of the bill is:

> Such order shall go into effect thirty days after notice to the carrier and shall remain in force and be observed by the carrier, unless the same shall be suspended or modified or set aside by the Commission or be suspended or set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Did I understand the Senator from Minnesota to interpret those words to mean that any circuit judge or district judge, upon complaint, can suspend this order until this litigation is completed?

Mr. CLAPP. Oh, no; not in a thousand years.

Mr. TILLMAN. Well, then, what did the Senator say? I tried to listen, and that is what I understood him to say.

Mr. CLAPP. I suppose the Senator has reference to what was said toward the close of my remarks?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. CLAPP. What I said was that where the court suspended this order pendente lite, it not only operated as the expression of the purpose of the court, but in view of the language of the provision, "unless the same shall be suspended," it also operated as the purpose and will of the legislature as to its not being in effect while suspended. Consequently the carrier, obtaining this temporary restraining order, would not be liable for the penalties in the meantime if the restraining order was finally vacated.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the penalty of $5,000 a day is suspended by an order of the court pending the litigation, where is your punishment to compel the carrier to ever obey an order? Is not the whole case given away if the Senator's contention as to the interpretation of these words is right? Are we not face to face with an absolute surrender of relief to the shipper?

Mr. CLAPP. I think we are face to face with the statement made in the paper from which I read. I can not express it any better than it was expressed by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX] when he said:

> Of course I do not mean that, in an independent proceeding begun in the court, the court could not, in the exercise of its discretionary powers, when satisfied that the rate fixed by the Commission was unlawful, enjoin its operation until a final hearing. That is a power that inheres in the court that need not be conferred by statute, and probably can not be taken away by a statute.

If it is the design that the party seeking the restraining order should be subject to a penalty, and if, after the lapse of some time, the court should refuse to make that order permanent and vacate it, I am very fearful that the language of that provision would have to be changed, and, I want to add, I am very doutful whether it would be valid if changed. We are face to face with the proposition, for if Congress, through a commission, fixes a rate in fact below what the law recognizes as a reasonable rate, then clearly you are invading the property rights of the carrier, and it would seem that it might apply to the court.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, unless some Senator desires to speak on the statehood bill, I ask unanimous consent that it may be laid aside for the rest of the day without losing its place.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, I understood that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] intended to speak on the statehood bill this afternoon.

Mr. NELSON. In that case I will modify my request, and ask that the statehood bill may be temporarily laid aside until the Senator from North Dakota returns.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. WARREN. With regard to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER], I desire to say that I understand that an arrangement was made whereby it was his intention to ask for an earlier meeting of the Senate to-morrow and to speak to-morrow.

Mr. NELSON. I was not aware of any such arrangement.

Mr. WARREN. That arrangement was made with the understanding that the Senate would take up the bill in relation to the efficiency of the Medical Department of the Army, which was before the Senate yesterday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. At the request of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] the unfinished business has been temporarily laid aside.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, there is objection to that. I should like the indulgence of the Senate for fifteen or twenty minutes to speak upon this measure in relation to one of the amendments which has been proposed to the bill. It was understood, however, that the Senator from North Dakota was to speak, and that I should follow him, but it is quite as convenient for me to make the few remarks which I desire to make at this time as at any other.

Mr. BAILEY obtained the floor.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. BAILEY. Certainly.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I see the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] is now in the Chamber. I also understand that the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] desires to speak. I therefore ask that my request to temporarily lay aside the statehood bill be withdrawn and that the statehood bill may remain before the Senate.

Mr. BAILEY. That need not be done, because at the conclusion of a question which I desire to ask, the Senator's request being that the statehood bill be temporarily laid aside, that bill will be resubmitted to the Senate.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to say that it was not my purpose in making the request to foreclose anybody.

Mr. BAILEY. I understand that. But I desire to ask—and the question will require only a moment—does the Senator from Minnesota doubt that Congress can provide in this bill that no interlocutory decree or order shall suspend the rate prescribed by the Commission?

Mr. CLAPP. I would dislike very much to risk a provision of that kind.

Mr. BAILEY. Then would not the Senator be willing to join those of us who sincerely desire to avoid a suspension of the rates in drawing and adopting an amendment which does provide that the court shall not suspend them by an interlocutory decree, and yet so write it in the law that, if the Supreme Court should take the ground that Congress had no constitutional power to enact such a provision, they could cut it out of the law without invalidating the act?

Mr. CLAPP. The difficulty about that is—and I meant to have referred to that in regard to the impounding of the excess—that while it is true we can provide in this bill that the finding of a provision to be unconstitutional shall not avoid the balance of the law, yet if that provision is the provision upon which the enforcement of the law depends, it would go largely to the life of the law if the provision was declared unconstitutional—that is, it strikes me that way.

Mr. BAILEY. I think it very easy to draw a provision and incorporate it in the law which the Supreme Court might eliminate as unconstitutional without marring either the symmetry or the effectiveness of the act.

I want to say if there is any doubt as to the power of Congress to forbid the suspension of these rates by an interlocutory decree and I myself shared that doubt, I would support the proposition which, though not yet submitted to the Senate, the Senator from Wisconsin has prepared. I think he has prepared a proposition that as thoroughly safeguards it as it is possible to do if the rate is to be suspended at all by any interlocutory decree. But it seems to me just and right if the rate is once established and prescribed by such a commission as I think the President will appoint and the Senate will confirm—a commission composed of men of great ability, of high character, and with qualifications for the performance of their duty—it is not unreasonable to require that that rate shall remain in force until the question has been thoroughly determined upon its merits by the court. To say that a rate established by a commission of men supposed to be especially fit for the performance of that duty shall be set aside by a judge who may know everything about the law, but may know very little about the justice of a railroad rate, is, to my mind, conceding more than Congress is under the necessity of conceding to what are called "the inherent equity powers of the court."

Mr. CLAPP. I would suggest to the Senator that while a penalty of $5,000 a day might render the act void, a penalty which would be fair in the mind of the court, suggestive of obedience to the law, might not render the law void. The difficulty is right here: While we may impose a penalty without violating, as it seems to me, the property rights of the litigant, yet those property rights would be violated if, as a condition precedent to asking a court to pass upon his rights, the court happened to require of him temporarily that which he might allege was essential to the maintenance of his business.

Mr. BAILEY. It occurs to me that if it is an inherent right of a court to hear, and, pending final determination, to suspend the enforcement of the rates, and if it is a right of the carrier to have the rate suspended, you concede something to the force of the contention which I have just indicated when you require the carrier to deposit a bond or money in the court until the proper and final disposition of the case. In other words, if the carrier is entitled to the rate which it establishes as against the rate established by the Commission, then you ought not to require the carrier to deposit in the treasury of the court what it is entitled to have in the treasury of the corporation; but if you concede that that must be done, then, undoubtedly, I would rather have the money deposited in the court than to have the bond.

But, Mr. President, in view of the fact that in most of the States in the Union when the railroad comes to take the citizen's property and they disagree about the price which shall be paid the carrier is authorized to apply to the court for the appointment of a commission, and when that commission assesses the value of the property actually taken and the damages to the remainder of the tract the carrier can deposit the assessment with the court and appropriate the citizen's property to its use, it seems to me we are not asking too much, when the citizen is compelled to apply to the Commission to assess the value of the carrier's service to permit the citizen to have it at the value assessed by a commission, just as the railroad was permitted to take the citizen's property at the value assessed by a commission.

It does not seem to me that there is any difference in principle, and I suggest to the Senator from Minnesota that we all agree upon an amendment which provides against the suspension of rates by interlocutory decree and then in justice to the carrier—because I want to be just to the railroad as well as I do to the shipper—expedite the decision. I have never seen the hour when I would consent to close the doors of the courts of this country to any person; nor have I ever seen the time that I wanted to obstruct the free and open access of every man to the courts of this country for the protection of his property rights. But opening the doors as wide to the railroads as to the shipper—and I want them to stand equally open and as widely open to one as to the other—still it seems to me that we should provide for the rate established by the Commission to remain in effect until finally suspended by the court upon a full investigation into the merits of the case, and provide that when this suit shall be instituted it shall have precedence over every other case on the docket of a different nature, first in the trial court and then in the court to which it might be appealed. When that is done there can be no serious delay in the final adjudication of the case upon its merits.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, if the Supreme Court adhered to the principle involved in the Minnesota Milk Rate case, I doubt very much whether it could be done. I have thought often since that case—and I had the privilege to argue that case in behalf of the State—that as this subject has grown perhaps to-day the court would say, although the State said this is final so far as the State went, somewhat along the line of the argument I have made to-day in regard to the act of the Postmaster-General, that notwithstanding that, the remedy is in a court of equity.

Mr. BAILEY. But the cases are different in the State from a Federal regulation. If a State attempts to deprive a party of his proper and suitable remedy at law, it deprives him of his property without due process, and of course they could appeal to the Federal court to protect that under the fourteenth amendment.

Mr. NELSON. I should like to ask the Senator from Texas a question, with his permission. Have we any more power to prohibit a court of equity of the United States from issuing a temporary injunction in a proper case than we have to prohibit it from issuing a final injunction? Can we do anything here by legislation that will restrain a court of equity, in any case where an injury is threatened and imminent, from issuing a temporary injunction? That is the question involved. If the Senator from Texas thinks we can limit the power of courts to issue temporary injunctions upon an appropriate state of facts, then he is right. If we can not restrain the courts, then the suggestions of the Senator from Texas are immaterial.

Mr. BAILEY. That is true. Speaking for myself, I have no doubt that Congress can provide against the issuance of an interlocutory decree or order suspending these rates. I have never been able to fully subscribe to the doctrine that there is any more inherent equity power in a circuit court of the United States than there is an inherent legal power, and the Supreme Court has more than once declared that all courts below it, or what they call "Congressional courts," possess only the jurisdiction conferred upon them by Congress. Now, if Congress does not choose to confer upon a circuit court of the United States a jurisdiction which is ordinary and usual—and which, except in a great case like this, I would not myself think necessary or proper to modify—it has power to withhold it. Mr. President, if we can not do so this whole bill might as well be left to sleep upon the Calendar, because it is not, in my opinion, worth the time and the trouble involved in its discussion and passage.

If any court to which the carrier may apply—and it may apply to any circuit court of the United States through which its line is located, or, as some provisions say, in which it has its main operating office, or, if the bill is silent as to the jurisdiction, then wherever it can get service—if it has that wide latitude it is certain to find a United States judge who will issue a preliminary restraining order.

I do not mean to imply by that statement that it will find a dishonest judge. I think judges are very much more honest even in corporation matters than it is the habit of some men to describe them. I have not seen very many men on the bench whom I thought ought to be taken off, and on a memorable occasion, even when I thought one ought to be taken off, I was in a minority in this body. Taken as a whole the Federal judges are upright men and learned in the law; but I shall be surprised if the railroads and their attorneys can not make out a case before final hearing which will induce some friendly judge to issue an interlocutory decree, and unless we can give this rate immediate and continuing effect until the case is disposed of upon its merits we are preparing a disappointment for the people of the United States.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I rise to a question of the order of business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The unfinished business—the statehood bill—is before the Senate.

Mr. HALE. So I understand. Of course, after that is disposed of the important questions involved in what is called "the rate bill" will possess and engross the attention of the Senate for days—may be weeks. There is no opportunity for anything else to intervene, except for the remainder of the day and perhaps to-morrow and the next day. I should like very much to have an agreement made now, and to that end I ask unanimous consent, that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow. That will extend the time for the debate upon the statehood bill, which is the order of business and the unfinished business, and it will give an opportunity this afternoon, after the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] has submitted his remarks, for the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] to call up the bill which was before the Senate and not finished yesterday, and get it out of the way.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator from Maine forgets that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] has given notice that he desires to address the Senate this afternoon; and he is now in his seat.

Mr. HALE. I do not forget, for I have conferred with the Senator from North Dakota, and the arrangement is entirely satisfactory. The additional hour that will be given in the morning will enable the Senator from North Dakota to address the Senate.

But I think Senators will see that if we do not now dispose of this matter there will be no opportunity in the near future. I am not speaking in the interest of the bill of the Senator from Wyoming, because I am opposed to it, but I think we could finish it and have it out of the way, one way or the other, this afternoon. Then the statehood bill will have free rein and will be disposed of Friday. I suppose the Senator from South Carolina will ask the Senate, after the statehood matter is disposed of, to make the rate bill the unfinished business. After that practically the rest of the time for weeks is confiscated. Nobody will want then to come in or expect to come in with other matters when any Senator desires to debate the great contested question that is resting in the minds of Senators as more important than any other matter. Therefore I will submit my request now that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow. Is there objection?

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator from Maine is making that request upon the assumption that after the Senator from North Dakota——

Mr. HALE. No; the Senator from California.

Mr. SPOONER. That after the Senator from California and the Senator from North Dakota——

Mr. HALE. No; I said the arrangement is perfectly satisfactory to the Senator from North Dakota, who would use the hour in the morning.

Mr. SPOONER. That may be; but it has always been the practice of the Senate, when an hour has been fixed for the disposition of a bill, especially if it were a short time in advance of action, that other matters should not intervene to the exclusion of full and fair debate on the unfinished business.

Mr. HALE. That is why I asked for the hour in the morning.

Mr. SPOONER. Speeches have been made, interjected into the debate, on the railway rate matter, of which no one complains. To-morrow the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], who has charge of the Statehood bill, will take the floor and conclude the general debate in behalf of the measure. I understand the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] is to close the debate for the opposition. Whether the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] desires to speak in support of his amendment I do not know. But there are several who wish to speak on the statehood bill. I myself wish to occupy a little time on it. I do not think anybody would suffer particularly if the medical bill should not be disposed of until later in the session.

Mr. HALE. I have said, of course, that I am not for the bill, but against it, but I do not desire to delay it or proiong it, if we can reach it. It is only by unanimous consent that this programme which I have indicated can be carried out. I should be glad to see it carried out, and to dispose of the medical bill to-day. If it is not disposed of to-day, I think the Senator from Wyoming will see that it can not be disposed of for some time to come. So far as I am concerned, I shall not be here, and I should like very much to be here when that bill comes up.

Mr. SPOONER. How long will the Senator be absent?

Mr. HALE. Perhaps for a week or more.

Mr. SPOONER. The contract surgeons, I fancy, are doing fairly well——

Mr. HALE. I think they are.

Mr. SPOONER. In time of peace, and I rather think these officers, who are to be promoted to be majors and lieutenant-colonels and colonels and captains, and so on, can be induced to possess their souls in patience until we can reach that bill in order.

Mr. HALE. My proposition involves unanimous consent, of course. If the Senator from Wisconsin or other Senators believe that the statehood bill has not only the right of way, but ought to occupy it, neither the Senator from Wyoming nor I, who are acting together in this matter and in good faith——

Mr. SPOONER. Acting together in opposition to each other.

Mr. HALE. Acting together to get it disposed of, can object. We can not do it except by unanimous consent, and if the statehood bill not only has the right of way, but wants to occupy it, neither I nor the Senator from Wyoming can prevent it. My proposition depends upon unanimous consent.

Mr. SPOONER. If it develops later in the afternoon——

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. NELSON. I desire to say that there has been an understanding that the Senator from Colorado and the Senator from Indiana are to close the debate to-morrow. They expect to occupy the whole day. I think it would be an injustice to both of those Senators to deprive them of that privilege and to arrange to take up the time by other speeches to-morrow. I think other speakers ought to have the rest of to-day.

Mr. SPOONER. I think the Chair would be entirely justified in inferring from my observation that the proposed arrangement is not agreeable. It is objected to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that there is objection to the request made by the Senator from Maine.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, it is true the statehood bill should have the right of way if demanded. It is also perfectly competent for the chairman of the Committee on Rules to have a say as to the disposition of the time. There has been no disposition on the part of those who favor the medical bill to rush it or to take up time belonging to some other measure. It has been brought back before the Senate because of a motion to reconsider, made by the Senator from Maine, who now joins with me and asks for the early consideration of the bill. I have asked it because it has been long before us—I believe it should be disposed of on its merits—and I also ask its further consideration at this hour to accommodate the Senator from Maine. I do not think it is necessary to refer to the merits of the bill at this time, with respect to captains, majors, colonels, etc., as the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] has done. That is a matter to be discussed later.

Mr. TILLMAN. I will detain the Senate for only a minute. I am not trying to rush into this rate making matter prematurely, but as one Senator has announced his interpretation of certain words in the bill, which is contrary to my own, I merely wish to say that this whole court question is right about the spinal cord of this issue. I will not now proceed to give my views upon it, but I want to say that if the Congress of the United States is hedged about by judicial decrees that will prevent it from granting relief to the people we will have to reform the Supreme Court, because the people are going to have relief from this intolerable condition. [Manifestations of applause in the galleries.] I myself do not believe any such thing.

Mr. TELLER. I call for the regular order now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The regular order is called for.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 16305) authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

FUEL IN ALASKA.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, the bill which has just come over from the House of Representatives is an exact duplicate of a joint resolution which was passed this morning by the Senate. I ask unanimous consent that that bill may be now considered and put upon its passage.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 16305) authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes; which was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to cause to be sold to the citizens of Nome, Alaska, at its actual cost to the United States at the place of sale, such limited quantities of coal for domestic uses as, in his judgment, can safely be spared from the stock provided for the use of the garrison at Fort Davis, Alaska.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wyoming asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. WARREN. I now ask that the vote by which the joint resolution (S. R. 40) authorizing the Secretary of War to sell to citizens of Nome, Alaska, limited quantities of coal for domestic uses was read the third time and passed be reconsidered.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I now move that the joint resolution be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

THE STATEHOOD BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of

New Mexico and Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, I will trespass for but a few moments upon the time of the Senate. I would not venture to do so even at this time were it not for the fact that coming from the far West, representing in part the great State of California, which has identified her interests—business, social, political, and otherwise—with the Territory of Arizona, I think my silence might be misconstrued by my constituents into indifference to this question.

Mr. President, I have listened with great interest and instruction to the very able addresses in this Chamber on the subject of the pending statehood bill. As far as I have been able to judge from the facts elicited during the discussion the people of Oklahoma and Indian Territory are more than willing that their respective Territories shall be merged and admitted to the Union as a single State. I have had brought to my attention no protests against such action, and the recent history of the Territories gives no reason why there should be antipathy toward joint statehood. The million and a half of white people who are embraced in the present population of the two Territories are all of sturdy American stock from the States within the Mississippi Valley and have settled there within the past fifteen or sixteen years. They form a homogeneous community, within which there are no alien elements to create antagonisms or differences which would tend to embroil factions in political strife. It is easy and natural, therefore, for the people of both sections to come together under a single State government, and as joint statehood is the unanimous desire we have no good reason for denying it to them.

But the conditions in Arizona and New Mexico are totally different. Because I have a personal knowledge of Arizona, and as a witness, as it were, I place myself upon the witness stand to answer any questions, if it is in my power to do so. If not, I will do as some of the judges do when cases are submitted to them; I will take it under advisement and render a decision later.

Several Senators who have made brilliant addresses in favor of forcing these two Territories into a union clearly believe that conditions are similar, though they have never seen any part of either Territory, and others have made no observations except, perhaps, through the windows of a Pullman car. I therefore, as one who has traveled on foot or by means of the automobile of the mountain trail—that is, on the hurricane deck of a mule—over at least one-third of the Territory of Arizona, desire to briefly give my views as to the expediency of forcing joint statehood upon these two Territories.

In passing I wish to say that my friend the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], in his very able address to the Senate, differing from others in that when he talks he always says something, uttered these words:

> We hear a good deal said, Mr. President, as to what the wishes of the people may be. Ordinarily we ought to assent to the wishes of the people, but sometimes it is better for us to use our own judgment. These Territories are the children of Uncle Sam. Ordinarily the kind parent sees to the wishes of his children, but sometimes the wise parent finds it judicious to take the bit in his own mouth and to curb the zeal and the energy of his children and keep them within the proper channel.

My friend forgets that these children have come to years of maturity. They belong to Uncle Sam's family. They have an equal voice in the administration of Uncle Sam's affairs. When the Senator from Minnesota says, as he virtually says by inference, "My son Samuel, I want you to marry Eliza," it is a wedding that will not bring happiness to the family or peace to the community in which they live. So it will be here if we force the marriage of Arizona and New Mexico when Uncle Sam's family and children are protesting against the marriage. For that reason I am in favor of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], that we should submit this question to the votes of the people of Arizona and New Mexico separately, and if either one of those Territories says, "We do not want to be married to each other," then I say that as true Americans it is for us to say: "Remain as you are, as Territories, and when you come into the estate to which you are entitled and develop the great resources of your Territory, the time will come perhaps when we will admit you into the family of States."

Twenty years ago, when I spent two months in Arizona investigating its agricultural and live stock possibilities, the murderous Apache was abroad in the land and no man's life in certain sections of the Territory was safe without the shelter of the cities and towns. There were no farms, no ranches, no attempts at agriculture, except in the immediate vicinity of large settlements, where the inhabitants could join in mutual defense against the red-skinned murderers. Only a few of the more adventurous or reckless prospectors dared to go into the interior to search for minerals. The entire Territory was, in a manner, terrorized by warlike Indians, and up to that time there had been possible no attempt to develop its resources.

When at the foot of Mount Huachuca, in southern Arizona, in 1885 I camped out for several nights the Apache Indians were making raids all around us. I do not attribute the little hair I have left here to that experience, but I think it materially affected it for some time, for certainly my nights were very restless, as naturally they would have been when camping in that vicinity, for ten Mexicans were murdered within a few days within two miles of where we were in camp.

But with the subjugation of the Apaches and the building of railroads opportunities were afforded which were taken advantage of by the class of men and women who went into the wastes of California and in fifty years built up a State which has been and for a long time to come will be one of the wonders of the world.

Twenty years ago there were comparatively but a few miles of railroad in the Territory of Arizona. There was no way of passing over the sands of that Territory except upon a coach or a mule or afoot, and, as I stated, the Indians were so hostile at that time that one's life was in danger if he went a few miles away from a camp or a village. But since then the people have built up Arizona. They have not come from Mexico or from regions where Mexican blood prevails, but from the purely American States, where they were born with the pure American spirit of self-reliance and independence. I am acquainted with very many of them, and know that for good citizenship, high character, and public spirit they can not be surpassed. They form a typical American community.

In New Mexico we have entirely different conditions. When that region came to us and was formed into a Territory, which then embraced Arizona, we took over with the soil some 60,000 Mexicans, who were the sole population and from whom have sprung the greater part of the population of to-day. When Arizona was set off as a separate Territory only 8,000 or 9,000 Mexicans went with the land, and that element makes no showing at present in the total of the population of the Territory. The blood and spirit of New Mexico is Mexican, while that of Arizona is American. I therefore deem it my duty to protest against the passage of any bill which proposes to join New Mexico and Arizona in statehood. I earnestly believe that the people of Arizona are unalterably opposed to such action, and to join them by compulsion with a community with which they have, and will for generations have, nothing in common is un-American and repugnant to the belief in fair play and a fair chance which exists in every true American.

Were we an empire, like Germany, we could consistently join peoples who were totally lacking in sympathy one for the other, as was done when Alsace and Lorraine were added to the German Empire. But I do not understand that imperial methods of procedure have yet become so attractive to the American people that they will countenance such an act of imperial power as proposed in the bill before us.

Within the established boundaries of States and Territories there grow up communities which by reason of their political isolation take on certain characteristics, develop along certain lines, and have interests that differ in many points from those of their immediate neighbors. This is as inevitable in States and Territories as it is in families. The families in a given municipality have a common interest in the affairs of the city, and work together for its best interests; but no two families are so nearly identical in habits, character, education, aspirations, aims, likes, and dislikes as to render it possible to join them in one household with any chance that harmony and happiness would result.

If two households desire to try the experiment of forming one family from their numbers, no one has the right to endeavor to prevent them; but should an effort be made to join two families, one of which found nothing in the other with which to sympathize, whose habits of life were different, whose education was totally unlike, and whose development was along very different lines, there would arise such universal condemnation that the crime—for crime it would be—could never be consummated or sanctioned by the people.

The State, the Territory, is simply a political family, which has grown up under conditions determined by boundary lines as the walls of the home determine the condition of domestic life and shape the destinies of the individual members of the family. Since 1863 Arizona and New Mexico have been independent of each other, and in the forty-three years which have elapsed have developed along lines determined by the characteristics of climate, soil, laws, population, and customs which have obtained within their respective boundaries. As these elements have differed, the development has differed, until now the two Territories are so dissimilar that there is little in common between them. New Mexico has retained the characteristics of old Mexico, while Arizona has entered into the full spirit of modern progress. Can it be wondered at, therefore, that from practically every inhabitant of the latter Territory comes a protest against being brought under the influences of a comparatively unprogressive people? What is the opinion of one of the advocates of joint statehood as to conditions in New Mexico? The honorable Senator from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] had this to say on this point a few days ago:

For many years the population of New Mexico was largely Spanish and Mexican and a mixed breed, where the Spanish language was the prevailing language, not only among the people generally, but in her schools and in her courts. I remember, some years ago, when a bill for the admission of New Mexico as a State into the Union was under consideration in the House of Representatives, when I was a Member of that body, that the statement was made by one of the leading Members of the House, who had given careful investigation to the subject, that 70 per cent of the people could not read or write in any language other than the Spanish language, and that the percentage of illiteracy was ten times greater than the illiteracy of a State like Michigan or Iowa. I am glad to state, however, that there has been a decided improvement in the condition of the people of that Territory within the last ten or fifteen years, and that they have developed a school system that is giving ample facilities to the children of school age to acquire a good common school education, and that while interpreters are used in the courts and many of the transactions in business life are conducted in Spanish, year by year substantial gains are made, not only in education, but in the use of the English language in all the vocations of life.

It is my opinion, however, Mr. President, that New Mexico is not now entitled to admission as a separate State and never will be.

But the Senator from Illinois thinks that if New Mexico is joined to Arizona the State thus formed will be worthy of admission. What stronger justification could there be for the opposition of the people of Arizona to the proposed action? If to bring New Mexico up to the standard which will warrant statehood it is necessary to join Arizona to that Territry, it seems to me that the sense of justice of this body should cause them to heed the protests of a people who object to being swallowed up by a comparatively unprogressive community in order that the general average may be raised.

Let us see what the differences between the two Territories are. The census figures tell the story. It speaks in language so potent and with such emphasis that it can not be contradicted.

In Arizona in 1900 the total male illiterates of voting age were 11,215, of whom 4,776 were white and 5,948 Indian; in New Mexico the same class numbered 15,585, of whom 12,504 were white and 2,901 were Indian. In Arizona of these illiterate whites 1,017 were native, and in New Mexico 10,260 were native. The percentage of illiterates in population at least 10 years of age was, for total white, in Arizona, 14.9; and in New Mexico, 29.9. The percentage of illiterates in the native white population over 10 years of age was, for Arizona, 6.2; and for New Mexico, 29.4. The percentage of illiterates among the total white male population of voting age was, in Arizona, 13.7; and in New Mexico, 24.6; the percentage of illiterates among the native white male population of voting age was, for Arizona, 4.5; and for New Mexico, 23.6.

These figures, it seems to me, are a perfect justification of the demand of the people of Arizona that they shall not be joined in statehood with their neighboring Territory. The smaller population of Arizona, started on a certain line of development, would be compelled to meet a larger population which has taken a different course, and where their interests conflict the 25 per cent of the votes of New Mexico cast by illiterates would hold the balance of power. The male population of voting age, excluding Indians, in Arizona numbered at the time of the census about 39,000. The number of males of voting age in New Mexico, excluding Indians and illiterates, was practically the same, there being a difference of only a few hundred. The voters of Arizona, therefore, just equal the educated males of voting age in New Mexico; but in the latter Territory there is a reserve of illiterate voters, excluding Indians, of 12,684. Everyone who knows anything whatever of politics will recognize the fact that, were the two Territories joined in statehood, every question—and there would be many—where the interests of the two sections conflict would be decided by the huge illiterate vote of that portion which was the Territory of New Mexico. This vote could be so handled that in very truth, as the people of Arizona assert, the Arizona portion of the new State would be completely Mexicanized.

I may say in passing, Mr. President, that for ten years or more after California became a State in the Union the laws of our State were printed in Spanish and the two or three political parties contending for office and the emoluments for office did not go into a convention before the people without at least having one or two candidates on each ticket of Mexican birth. Have we any reason to believe that different conditions would exist in New Mexico if it were merged into a State with Arizona?

On this showing, I think it is very easy to understand why there is opposition to statehood in Arizona. What man in that Territory would be willing to see placed in a position to affect his vested interests the great mass of illiterate voters of New Mexico. And how can we, in cold blood, vote to deliver over to the domination of ignorant voters of alien blood the men who, imbued with the spirit of modern progress, have in the last few years pushed Arizona to the front as one of the progressive regions of the continent? In the ten years from 1890 to 1900 Arizona gained 63,300 in population and New Mexico only 41,717. In 1880 the acreage of improved lands in Arizona was only 56,071, against 237,392 in New Mexico; but in 1900 Arizona had added 200,000 acres to her area of improved lands, while New Mexico had added only 90,000. Another fact showing the difference in character of the population in the two Territories is that the average value of the products of an Arizona farm was, in 1900, $1,205, against $825 for New Mexico; and while New Mexico has over 12,300 farms, against 5,800 in Arizona, it possessed only 670 whose products exceeded $2,500, while Arizona had 509. In manufactures the same disparity is found. In 1880 Arizona had 66 establishments against 144 in New Mexico. In 1900 Arizona increased her establishments to 314 and her capital invested from $272,600 to $10,157,000, and in 1905 to $14,395,000, while New Mexico increased its capital from $463,275 to $2,698,788 in 1900, and to $5,705,880 in 1905. Arizona far outstripped her neighbor in the industrial race, as the value of manufactured products more clearly shows; for while in 1880 it produced only $618,365 worth against $1,284,846 in New Mexico, in 1905 it produced over $28,000,000 worth of manufactured products against only $5,700,000 in New Mexico. Horsepower development tells the same story. In 1890 Arizona had 826 horsepower against 1,825 in New Mexico; but ten years later it had 9,110 against New Mexico's 4,360, and in 1905 had increased it to 26,068 against New Mexico's 5,978. But the whole progress of development in the two Territories is epitomized in the following figures:

Value of agricultural and manufactured products per capita in Arizona and New Mexico, 1890 and 1900.

| State. | Agricultural products. | | Manufactured products. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 1890. | 1900. | 1890. | 1900. |
| Arizona | $18.00 | $58.00 | $16.00 | $173.00 |
| New Mexico | 12.00 | 52.00 | 10.00 | 29.00 |

In agriculture Arizona maintained her lead of $6 per capita, but her new irrigation systems will soon increase that lead tenfold and more. In manufactures, in 1890, Arizona had a lead of $6 per capita, but in 1900 had increased that lead by $144 per capita, and whereas the production was only $16 in 1890 against $10 for New Mexico, ten years later Arizona was producing $173 per capita while New Mexico was producing only $29.

Every fair-minded person can, I think, on this showing fully understand why men of the highest character, intelligence, and public spirit write from Arizona like the following, which I quote from the letter of a gentleman who represents the class of broadest education and widest cultivation in Arizona. I will read this letter coming from him as reflecting the sentiment there. It was a personal letter to me, yet I have no hesitancy in giving the author of it if required, because he is identified with the interests of that Territory and is a gentleman of culture and education. He writes:

The people of Arizona are a unit against the passage of this bill. Their interests in every particular would be greatly injured and in many cases ruined by the passage of this bill. Is it not un-American to force a measure upon a loyal, enterprising, and progressive people against their united protest? I have quite large interests in both New Mexico and Arizona and know that they are unlike in the character of their inhabitants and in their interests to such a degree that the same legislation would not be adapted to both. Their union would provoke controversy, endless litigation, and racial trouble. It would open the door to political marplots and engender civil strife, and in the end probably bloodshed. Arizona would suffer most, for our educational, mining, and business interests are by far superior, our rulers and office-holders almost to the man are now white Americans, while the very opposite is true of New Mexico. The union is abhorrent to Arizonians, and our loyalty to every interest of the nation should be respected and be rewarded by fair treatment and not with punishment.

This is the protest of education, pure and simple; that of the professions is voiced by the remonstrance of the Bar Association of Arizona, who say:

It is impossible by resolutions to convey to you or to the honorable body of which you are a member the intensity of the feeling of our people upon this subject, and their loathing of the proposed union. In this time of our peril we appeal to the Senate of the United States, and to each individual member thereof, not to put upon the people of Arizona the blight which this odious union will entail.

The people of this Territory are homogeneous, with similar tastes, ideals, and ambitions, and they have, at great sacrifice, established and maintained appropriate educational and charitable institutions, conformable to those ideals and ambitions, and they desire the opportunity to work out their own destiny in accordance with those ideals. * * *

The inhabitants of this Territory differ from those of New Mexico in race, government, ideas, political ambitions, and otherwise to such an extent as to make it impossible for the people of the two Territories to unite in harmonious conduct of a State government.

The business interests of Arizona are unanimous in protest against joint statehood, and the welfare of business men in that Territory is so dependent on their ability to develop along the course that they have marked out for themselves that commercial bodies in States where Arizona has business connections earnestly protest against the proposed crime. Of the fifty-four newspapers in Arizona all except three are strenuously opposed to joint statehood, and of the white inhabitants it may confidently be asserted that nine out of ten prefer a Territorial government to statehood in conjunction with New Mexico.

It seems to me that the burden of the argument in favor of forcing Arizona into union with New Mexico is that Arizona has no chance for future development—that it has already reached, or nearly reached, its limit, and therefore will never be fitted for statehood if left to itself. One answer to this is that the people of Arizona would prefer a permanent Territorial organization rather than to be joined to New Mexico. But another answer is that there is no good ground for an assertion that the limit of Arizona's progress has been reached. Only a few years have elapsed since the subjugation of the Indians has rendered it possible for Americans to enter the Territory for the purpose of settlement and the development of the resources of the country. In those few years—and to-day there are only some 800 miles of railroad in the Territory—vast changes have occurred, and more are impending. Already the assessed valuation of property in the Territory exceeds that of New Mexico by $15,000,000, of which $12,000,000 was put to the credit of Arizona in the single year 1904. The people of the Territory have just laid the firm foundations for a prosperous future, and will not submit to having those foundations undermined by the injection into their political and business policies of ideas, which have kept the land over the national boundary line in a somnolent condition for a century or more.

No one who has read Two Years Before the Mast can ever forget the picture of desolation which California presented as drawn from the pen of Dana. A vast extent of dry and dusty plain, waterless and treeless, met the traveler from San Diego to San Francisco Bay. The only inhabitants were Mexicans and Indians, and the only occupation was the herding of cattle.

Contrast it to-day, Mr. President, with the picture drawn by Dana in the memorable voyage he made on the coast of California. The principal products then exported from our State were hides and tallow. To-day everything that is known that would grow in the garden of paradise will grow in that great State. We are exporting a million tons of wheat, more or less, to Europe and foreign countries per annum to feed the crowned prince and the pauper alike.

We are exporting 30,000 carloads of citrus fruits from California overland, besides that which we consume ourselves in our own State. It is the only State in the Union that produces raisins, olive oil, and a hundred other articles in such abundance that it excites the envy, or certainly the emulation, of every other State in the Union. We have our splendid institutions, our two great universities, richly endowed; the University of California, by a constitutional enactment in the organic law of our State, and another great university, the Leland Stanford Junior University, endowed by more than $40,000,000, represented to-day by students in that university from every State and Territory in the Union, where they may come and there drink from the fountain of knowledge without money or without price, all by the munificent hand of the donor of that university and by the taxpayers, the people of California, who have so richly endowed our university.

But, better than all that, we are building up a people there from every State in the Union, and our population compares favorably with that of almost any of the New England States or that of the Central States of our Union; and yet this picture drawn by Mr. Dana of a desolate, dreary waste of land, not capable of producing sufficient to feed the people who were living there at the time, was true. It was true, for ten or fifteen years thereafter we imported from Chile, from Oregon, and from the Atlantic States, bringing them around Cape Horn, flour, dairy products, and many manufactured articles, which the people could not then produce for themselves.

Contrast that condition with that which exists to-day. We are the fifth manufacturing State in the Union. Although geologists said that no coal could be found there, that no iron could be found there, that no oil could be found in our State; that it was barren of those products; yet to-day California is producing more crude petroleum than any other State in the Union.

I will not dwell upon California, Mr. President. She stands there a monument to the enterprise of her people. Nature has so richly endowed her that she sings to the western sea the sunset song of the nation. She is a part of this great Union; she is one of the brightest States in the constellation of the Union. I only refer to it now in passing to show that what has occurred in California is possible in the Territory of Arizona; for the Californians are going to Arizona to-day seeking the development of the great resources of that Territory, and I hope to live long enough and I hope my constituents in California will think enough of me to return me here that I may vote for the admission of Arizona as a State in the Union.

One hundred and fourteen thousand square miles are embraced within that Territory to-day, comprising nearly twice the area of the New England States. Why should we not listen to their appeal, "Wait until we are ready to come into this Union and share with you this great boon; force it not upon us against the protest of our people?"

The eminent educator connected with the University of Arizona, from whom I have read, continues:

And such had been the condition of the country from the time that Coronado made his famous expedition into the unknown north and induced the Spaniard to settle there.

These same mission fathers who came up from Mexico into New Mexico and out through Arizona into California and founded the missions of California more than one hundred and twenty-five years ago were the advance guard of Christian civilization. We honor them for their religious zeal; we honor them for their devotion to their religious principles, Mr. President; but it required the energy, the enterprise, the will force of true Americans to go there and develop those great resources of the Golden State. And what is possible to the Golden State of California is possible in the development of Arizona.

To-day their citrus fruit reaches the market two or three months earlier than that of our own State; their dates, cantaloupes, and melons are all brought into the market two or three months earlier than those that come from almost any other State of the Union.

So I might go on; I will not weary you in relation to the great possibilities of Arizona in the future. Nature has placed there a soil life-giving to the whole vegetable kingdom, and it only requires water and the hoe to tickle it to make it yield everything that would grow in the garden of paradise. Those people are developing it. They are storing the water in the mountains; they are sinking wells and elevating the water to the surface by means of electric power that is generated by the waters that flow down the mountain sides turning the little turbine wheels that run the electric motor, and those motors generate a thousand, aye, ten thousand horsepower over that region, distributing that water hundreds of miles from the source of power; that is running the pumps that elevate the water which will make every acre of land in the Territory of Arizona in due time fruitful, because it only requires water to make it yield to the toil of the husbandman.

The fathers of the missions alone had planted a few vines, fig and orange trees, the entire yield of which was not more than sufficient to supply the needs of the churchmen and their immediate followers. Even as late as 1875 the entire region which is now known as "southern California" was in practically the same condition. Flocks and herds were the chief means of support for the scanty population, the few American members of which were anxious to leave a region which was stagnant through the deadening influence of the prevailing spirit of Mexico. At that late date no one would have had the hardihood to predict a hundredth part of the progress which has since been made and which was only rendered possible by the construction of railroads, which brought into the land the spirit of progress with a new population.

May I say in passing, Mr. President, that Arizona has only about 800 miles of railroad, while the State of California has to-day about 6,000 miles of railway? These great modern forces of development are speaking in language more potent than words and giving assurance that the energy and the enterprise of the people shall not go unrewarded.

American energy overcame Mexican sloth only through sheer force of numbers. When the Mexican element was completely and hopelessly submerged, then, and only then, was progress possible. What has been accomplished in this one corner of the State of California in less than thirty years everyone knows. The great city of Los Angeles, with its 150,000 inhabitants, of which my distinguished colleague [Mr. FLINT] is a resident, is simply one manifestation of the result of southern California's emancipation from Mexicanism. Why, then, should we to-day shackle Arizona to this same element which kept back our own State for a generation or more?

With this object lesson before us, do we dare to force back under the deadening influence of Mexicanism a people who have just succeeded in escaping from it? Do we dare to say to those energetic Americans who are building irrigation works, opening mines, laying out fields, developing varied mineral resources, exploiting forests, and preparing a sure basis for future growth, do we dare to say to them that they shall not be permitted to work out their future on the lines that we know are safest and best, but that they must submit themselves to the repressive influences which creep over the Mexican border like the malarial poison from a stagnant marsh?

The ambition of the people of a Territory to become a State is as natural and as laudable as the ambition of a boy to become a man. For Territorial population the attainment of statehood is the attainment of full growth and the possession of the strength and power of maturity.

The States—

Says President Woodrow Wilson—

constitute the ordinary fountains of justice and of legal right, and stand nearest the people in the regulation of all their social and legal relationships. * * * They make up the mass, the body, the constituent tissue, the organic stuff of the Government of the country. * * * To them is intrusted our daily welfare.

The State is the acme of political organization in our great country, the foundation of our power and strength, and the sure bulwark of the people's liberties. Under State laws only can a community develop all its powers and in the direction of the genius of its people.

It is our duty, then, to give to those fitted for it the opportunity to follow the course which nature has marked out for them, and to free them from the trammels of national guardianship.

For that reason, it will afford me great pleasure, Mr. President, to cast my vote to admit Oklahoma as a great State into the Union. I believe her future will be as bright as that of the State that I have the honor, in part, to represent on this floor; and we can ask nothing better for the great State of Oklahoma.

But it is not our duty to endeavor to join two peoples differing in aims, character, blood, and tendencies, and force them into a union which can result in nothing but hostility and the prevention of advancement. Such a course is un-American, and I do not believe that the Senate will permit this crime to be committed. Its sense of justice will, I am sure, at least give the people of the two Territories a chance to separately express their opinion at the ballot box, the sacred urn of the people's liberties; and whatever they may decide upon, their verdict will be acceptable to the American people.

Arizona demands that consideration as a right which I am confident the true spirit of Americanism and fair play here represented will not deny to her.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock. I ask unanimous consent for this purpose: I gave notice about three days ago that, immediately after the conclusion of the morning business on to-morrow morning, I would discuss this question. Since that time I have been informed by the Senators in charge of the bill that two Senators who are on the committee would like to close the debate and take most of the day to-morrow. I have made the request for the meeting to-morrow an hour earlier than the usual time so that if they find by to-morrow morning that they can yield to me that extra hour in the morning I shall speak; but if, on the contrary, they find they will need all of to-morrow, I shall not insist on taking up the time. If I make an address at all on the bill, as I have tried to arrange to do, it will be for an hour or an hour and a half. Senators have already listened to-day to three quite lengthy addresses, all of them demanding very close attention, and I think it might be an imposition to ask them to listen to any further extended remarks to-day. That, Mr. President, is my reason for making the request.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I suggest to the Senator from North Dakota that he move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, instead of asking unanimous consent.

Mr. McCUMBER. I will change the request, then, and put it in the form of a motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota moves that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I am sensitive to the fact that the Senate has already listened to quite an elaborate debate during the day; but as I desire to submit an explanation of my attitude upon amendments that will be offered to this bill, and as I must do so at this time or not at all, I take the floor, promising not at any length to occupy it.

The passage of this bill involves a constitutional function which is of very great importance. It is a function so grave, Mr. President, that politics in decency should have no influence whatever in its determination. The power to admit new States into the Union was for some reason not placed by the framers of the Constitution in the category or list of legislative powers. It occupies in the Constitution a place of isolation. It is to be found in section 3 of Article IV of that instrument:

New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

It is important, Mr. President, not simply as involving the serious discharge of Senatorial duty, but it is important because once done it is perpetual. A State once admitted into the Union is a part of the Union so long as government upon the earth shall last. Therefore a mistake, if made, is one which is irrevocable; it never can be corrected.

And, Mr. President, I have a conviction about it. I do not believe that Arizona is fit, tried by any test, to come into the Union as a State; nor do I believe that New Mexico, tried by any test, is fit to be admitted into the Union as a State. I criticise no other man, but I find no justification for myself, to my own conscience, in voting to force these two Territories, each of which is unfit for statehood, in as a State of the Union which is not, in my judgment, fit.

It was an unhappy thought that ever made of bills for the admission of States into this Union omnibus measures. The cases are utterly different; they have nothing whatever in common. The right of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory to come into the Union as a State no man can gainsay. Tried by the test of population; tried by the test of intelligence; tried by the test of area; tried by the test of sure resources to support for all time statehood, with its responsibilities and duties, the Indian Territory and Oklahoma were entitled two years ago, at least, to come into the Union as a State.

What has that to do with the admission of New Mexico and Arizona? Yet, Mr. President, it is put up to the Senate, to use a phrase which nowadays we hear once in a while and read oftener, that unless it shall pass this bill for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico combined as a State, the people of the Indian Territory and Oklahoma shall stand knocking indefinitely at the door of the Union. That, to me, is a proposition so destitute of justice and statesmanship and patriotism as to be inexplicable.

I will vote with the utmost delight to open the door of the Union to the new State of Oklahoma without a misgiving; but if I should vote against the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], at least—and that is a concession which helps a little bit one's conscience—to leave it to the people of New Mexico and Arizona separately to vote upon the sole question as to whether they will be united and come united into the Union, I should be voting against my conviction of right; I should be voting to violate what, in my judgment, Mr. President, however others may look upon it, is a solemn governmental pledge.

My education on this subject came from the Committee on Territories. I read with the utmost care the report of that committee printed December 10, 1902, upon the question of the fitness of Arizona and New Mexico to come into the Union. Of course, it will be conceded that it would be unjust, although the Indian Territory and Oklahoma could meet the test, to require a unit of population such as, taking our whole population, would be justified. If the rule were adopted that a new State should have a population equal to the average population of the remainder of the States, it would require 1,650,000 people. That would not be fair.

Nor is it fair, save in exceptional circumstances, to admit into the Union a Territory, or two Territories combined, which barely possess the population necessary for one unit of representation in the Congress of the United States, which is about 194,000 people. I do not go back to argue about the ancient units. They have no possible applicability to the question involved here, because the original States made the Government. They were not admitted into the Union, but, going together, they formed the Union. So as to the States which were carved out under the Ordinance of 1787. That was a compact. Those Territories had area, they had wealth, they were to be peopled by our own people; and so it was provided that they should come into the Union. That was a pledge, but it was no stronger, so far as the right of ultimate statehood is concerned, than the pledge to Arizona written by Congress in 1863 on the statute books of this country.

But it takes more than area to make a State; it takes more than people to make a State; it takes more than wealth to make a State. It takes a requisite area, of course; it takes people in sufficient numbers and adequate fitness, of course; and it takes resources which give warrant for the belief that in the long reach of time that people will be able to perform all the functions which are involved in statehood as to governmental institutions, as to the upbuilding of education, and as to all of those things in which the people of real States delight.

Mr. President, how is it as to Arizona? I do not reflect at all upon the people of Arizona in anything I say, or upon the people of New Mexico in anything I say. If there is any reflection upon either, it is in the quotations which I shall make from the report of the committee of 1902.

The population of New Mexico by the census of 1900 was—total, 195,310; of that total 180,207 were white; 13,144 Indians untaxed, to be excluded; 1,610 negroes; 349 Mongolians. This table says 62½ per cent are Mexicans. Probably the more accurate estimate is from 50 to 60 per cent are Mexicans.

Arizona, 1900, population, 122,931; white, 92,903; Indians, 26,480; negroes, 1,848; Mongolians, 1,700.

Now, Mr. President, it is stated in this report that the census of 1900 is substantially accurate. It is also stated as follows:

> The great majority are native New Mexicans of Spanish and mixed Spanish and Indian descent, and of these practically all speak Spanish in the affairs of daily life, and the majority speak nothing but Spanish.

It cites the testimony of the census enumerators, justices of the peace, and the census of 1900. It is stated in this report and the names of the witnesses are given that the—

> Courts are conducted through the medium of an interpreter, and it is impossible to conduct the machinery of justice without this official.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> The interpreter interprets the testimony of witnesses to the jury, the argument of counsel to the jury, and the charge of the court to the jury.

If this report is to be believed, as it undoubtedly was believed in 1902, it shows a condition in the Territory of New Mexico which demonstrates, Mr. President, that that Territory is not entitled at this time, in respect of fitness of population, to be admitted into the Union. It is saying nothing against the Mexican that he does not readily learn the English language; it is saying nothing against him that he is easy-going and that instead of being a leader he is led; it is saying nothing against him that he does not quickly assimilate with the Anglo-Saxon, and that he does not take easily to our theories of government and to our institutions.

But in this day, Mr. President, with a population in the United States of 80,000,000, is it asking too much, when it is proposed to admit a Territory into the Union, to say to them, "Wait; wait until you have a population different from this population in New Mexico," a Territory in which the courts must be conducted in a foreign language? Is that tolerable for a State in the Union? Is it tolerable that in the judicature of a State the proceedings in court are to be conducted through interpreters? Is it tolerable, Mr. President, that in a State a jury shall be informed through an interpreter both of the charge of the court and the testimony of the witnesses? Is it tolerable that in a State a jury sitting in judgment upon a man's property or his life shall not be able to converse each with the other member of the jury in a language they can understand?

How many times have the lawyers in this body seen men who had been summoned for jury duty set aside because they could not understand the language in which the proceedings were to be conducted?

Was this statement of the committee true in 1902, that most of the Mexicans spoke Spanish and not English, and that the proceedings were conducted of necessity in the Spanish language? If it was true then, and if some statements which have been made in the last two weeks are true, it is the most marvelous advance in the study and acquisition of language ever known.

Mr. CARTER. I call the attention of the Senator in that connection to a statement which appeared in the public press some days ago about a man about to be executed.

Mr. SPOONER. I read it.

Mr. CARTER. He was tried by a jury eleven members of which could not understand the language.

Mr. SPOONER. The statement was—and it gave the name of the man and the location—that he was tried and sentenced to be hanged. On the morning of the day he was to be executed he attempted to commit suicide. He was carried in a state of collapse to the scaffold. He died. I do not speak of that, but the statement was that of the jury which tried him, which condemned him—and his defense was self-defense—only one could speak or understand the English language. A community in which that can happen is not ready, Mr. President, to come into the Union as a State. I care not what its wealth, I care not what its population, it is not fit to come into the Union as a State. Am I wrong about it?

The report continues:

> In the majority of cases it is true that some member of the jury is able to speak both languages and can then act as interpreter for the others.

But think how much is involved in that! You have a right that the jury shall be able—each juryman—to understand the language of the witnesses who testify against you and the witnesses who testify for you. You have a right that the jury shall understand the lawyer who defends you. You have a right that the jury shall understand the judge who instructs it, and then each one shall be able to discuss with his fellows the testimony, the arguments, and the charge to the jury. But if there are only two who understand the language it is a trial by two and not by twelve, because the other ten derive their information from the two.

To me it is intolerable. I should like to vote for this bill. It was recommended by a Republican President and passed by a Republican House. But I am discharging here a duty under my oath, and I can shift the responsibility for my action upon no one else. I must speak and vote as I think, not as some other man thinks or votes.

Coming to the courts of the people—

Quoting again from the report—

> Justices of the peace—practically all of them speak Spanish and the proceedings of their courts are conducted in Spanish. The dockets of nearly all justices of the peace are kept almost exclusively in Spanish. The statutes of the Territory in the offices of practically all justices of the peace are printed in Spanish.

Perhaps that is not longer so. Some member of the committee can advise me if it be not still the fact.

The witnesses are named.

> Practically all subpœnas, summonses, and other processes from justices of the peace courts are in Spanish. The same is true in criminal cases in the Federal and Territorial courts.
>
> In political campaigns almost all political speeches are made either in Spanish or in English through an interpreter, and interpreters are used in practically all (it may even be said in all) political conventions.

The names of witnesses are given, including the testimony of a brother of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER].

Is that still true, or in the four years that have speeded since then has some magic wrought change in this respect in New Mexico? In that space of time are the statutes no longer needed to be printed in Spanish? Are the jurors able to understand and speak English? It would be a change impossible in the ordinary course of events.

> An interpreter is used in the legislature, and both council (senate) and house have official interpreters.

Last session, in a short speech upon this subject, I had in my hand a list of the legislators, and the Senator from Illinois asked me to read the names. I replied that I did not understand Spanish. After I left the Chamber, my friend the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] undertook to read them, and he picked out five or six or seven English names which were on the list and read them. I wish I had the list here. I would ask him to read the rest of the names. It is nothing against those people that they are Spanish; far from it; it is nothing against them that they do not understand English; far from it; but that has been a Territory a great many years. Many years ago it came very near being admitted as a State, when our friend the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] was the Delegate from New Mexico in the House of Representatives. It did not come near being admitted because it was entitled to it then, but, I suspect, because the Senator from West Virginia was its Delegate.

Coming to the schools, the report continues:

> Until recently (historically speaking) no English was taught in the common schools. At present both Spanish and English are taught in most of the schools. (Testimony of Miss Francesca Zana, p. 9; Enrique Armijo, p. 10; J. Francisco Chavez, p. 27; Rafael Gallegos, p. 22, and others.)
>
> Spanish is taught through the second reader and no further, because a person who has learned Spanish sufficiently to go through Manella's second Spanish reader can speak and write that language fluently, and no further instruction for practical purposes is necessary. (Testimony of Enrique Armijo, p. 16.)

In some schools, as in those at Santa Fe, no Spanish is taught. (Testimony of J. Francisco Chavez, pp. 27, 28.)

In some schools Spanish is taught exclusively; and history, arithmetic, and geography are translated from American text into Spanish. (Testimony of J. Francisco Chavez, superintendent public instruction for New Mexico, pp. 27, 28.)

In some high schools—

I will not read all of this. Then the evidence is that after they have been graduated from the schools and have been taught the modicum of English required they lapse quickly into the use of Spanish, which also is the human nature of it.

The report continues:

There are towns—

This is the report of the committee—

There are towns (some even when surrounded by heavily predominating American conditions and influences, such as at Las Vegas) where the signs at grocery stores, meat markets, and all the mercantile establishments are printed exclusively in Spanish. (Testimony of Enrique E. Salasar, p. 11.)

The above are the conditions even in the larger towns; and this is intensified, of course, in the little country settlements, where the people are usually bunched together, their occupation being principally that of herding sheep and goats and with little or practically no communication with the outer world. (Testimony of H. S. Wooster, pp. 18-19; Rafael Gallegos, p. 22, and others.)

A portion of the population, even including some justices of the peace, have little understanding of our institutions. (Testimony of Felipe Baca y Garcia, p. 25; Leonardo Duran, p. 43.)

The remainder of the 195,310 people in New Mexico—

Dealing with the census of 1900—

are called in that Territory "Americans," as contradistinguished from the class above spoken of, who are there termed "Mexicans." But the "Americans" are made up from every other nationality except Mexicans. Germans, Italians, French, and all other nationalities are called "Americans." And yet of the entire population of New Mexico 33.2 per cent are illiterates—that is, that portion can neither read nor write Spanish, English, or any other language. (Census of 1900.)

If the test of illiteracy were confined to the English language only, the committee is of opinion that the percentage of illiterates would be much more than doubled.

Do you suppose that has changed much since 1902? Probably some; and it will continue to change, for with the years and the hope of statehood when she shall have fitted herself for it—and if it gives her no ambition to become fit conclusively she is not fit—her educational system will be developed and this ratio of illiteracy will be diminished.

Jurymen sometimes sign by their marks.

The report gives the percentage of illiteracy, etc., but I do not care to take further time with it, although I will.

Mr. President, I am not going into the question of New Mexico's wealth—mineral and agricultural. Considered from the standpoint of to-day neither is adequate. With irrigation the time may come when a good part of New Mexico—the valleys of New Mexico—will be as fertile as the valley of the Nile. In fact, it is impossible to tell what development may not come in the long future to New Mexico, but, Mr. President, in admitting a Territory into the Union as a State we are not to speculate as to whether at some time in the distant future she may not, through irrigation or some other development, have acquired that wealth to fit her for the duties and functions, perpetual as they are, of statehood. What have we a right to expect from the standpoint of to-day? I want her, Mr. President, to develop. She can not become too rich to please me. Her population can not increase too rapidly for me. She can not go upward in every line of civilization too fast to please me. But I am asked to vote her into the Union to-day when I think she is not fit.

How with Arizona? No one here pretends that Arizona alone is entitled to come into the Union.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me to suggest that Arizona is not trying to get in alone?

Mr. SPOONER. I know it.

Mr. TELLER. She is quite willing to stay out.

Mr. SPOONER. I know it; but if Arizona were trying to come in Arizona ought not to be permitted to come in.

Mr. TELLER. They are trying to force her in.

Mr. SPOONER. I will get to that. She ought not to be admitted into the Union. She has not the population. There are splendid people, of course, in both of those Territories, but she has not the population, she has not the resources developed. With all her splendid prospects, from no point of view is she entitled to come into the Union. And, as the Senator from Colorado says, she does not ask it. Why, then, is this question here as to Arizona? How would you answer to the people of Arizona if you passed this bill? Is it so necessary that New Mexico shall come into the Union at this time that Arizona must be forced into her embrace to make it possible, against the protest of her people?

Whence comes any such necessity? There was a time in the history of this country when, in the struggle between freedom and slavery, States came in which were not then fit, and when a free State came in a slave State was sought to be brought in alongside of it. That time has gone by. There is no constraint resting upon the American Congress in these days upon such a question except the constraint of conscience; that is all. When ever before were a people brought into the Union against their protest, as it is sought here to bring Arizona into the Union?

Ah, but it is said that the people of Arizona want to come into the Union. Who says it? Who knows it?

Mr. NELSON. Three years ago——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. NELSON. I wish to reply to the inquiry of the Senator as to who knows it. Three years ago a bill was passed, which the Delegate from Arizona supported, if I am not mistaken, to make four States, of which Arizona was one, and the Senator from Wisconsin knows it.

Mr. SPOONER. Oh, Mr. President, "the Senator from Wisconsin knows it." Of course I know a bill passed the House to admit four States—the Indian Territory as a State, Oklahoma as a State, Arizona as a State, New Mexico as a State.

Mr. NELSON. Did not the Delegate from Arizona support the bill at that time?

Mr. SPOONER. Undoubtedly; and I have no doubt that if Arizona were told that she could be admitted as Arizona into the Union, if the entity which since 1863 has stood upon the map representing the Territory of Arizona could come in, they would be for it; but when it is said that Arizona must become a part of New Mexico in order to come into the Union, when she is told——

Mr. NELSON. But I understood the Senator from Wisconsin to say Arizona had never asked to come into the Union as a State.

Mr. SPOONER. Oh, no. The Senator misunderstood me.

Mr. NELSON. Three years ago through her Delegate she asked it.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator misunderstood me.

Mr. NELSON. I want to tell the Senator from Wisconsin that just as soon as this bill is disposed of, if it is not passed, she will come here asking to be admitted into the Union as a State.

Mr. SPOONER. Yes; I will deal with that, Mr. President. What I said was this: I asked if an instance had been known in the history of the country where a Territory had been forced into the Union against the will of her people; and then I replied to the observation made by the Senator from Colorado to me, that Arizona is not asking now to come into the Union. If she were asking to come into the Union, I for one should fight it with my uttermost strength.

Mr. President, there was a combination in the Senate once in regard to four States. That was when Senator Quay was here. That was the time to which the Senator from Minnesota refers. I will not talk about that. I pass it. I will say this, however, that there never was a time then or since when I for one did not demand that if the two were put together, as a compromise, they should have the right in after years, when the population reached a certain number, by a majority vote of the people residing in either part—the New Mexican part and the Arizona part—to separate and be two States when in population and otherwise they had become fit. I never saw the time, even in those days, in our conferences, when I was willing, nor were there many on this side willing, to force the people of Arizona into the perpetual embrace of New Mexico.

The very concession in name to Arizona is significant. And would New Mexico part willingly with hers, but for the greatly superior voting strength she would have in the new Arizona?

Now, I said there was a pledge. That has been much debated. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. LONG] the other day sneered at it. I asked the distinguished Senator, when he read that language, to tell me, if it did not mean what it said, what it did mean. He referred me politely to the speech delivered a year or two ago by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], which I have read with great pleasure. Having read it, or that portion of it which refers to this matter, with due deference to him, I find myself entirely confirmed in the opinion which I had formed upon an independent examination of my own. I have not gone into the history which dislocated Arizona from New Mexico. I had heard it as tradition—probably there are evidences of it in the reports and the debates—that it grew out of the division between the forces and sentiments of the Union and the Confederacy in New Mexico as a whole, and had its inspiration in the desire to safeguard a part of it in all events to the Union. I have heard it said that there was a governor of New Mexico in the Territory who bore the appointment of Jefferson Davis, and at the same time a governor of New Mexico in the Territory who bore the appointment of Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. TELLER rose.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not know.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SPOONER. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to say to the Senator that if there was any governor of New Mexico with Jefferson Davis's commission he kept very quiet.

Mr. SPOONER. I said I had heard it; that I had read it.

Mr. TELLER. He did not show himself. There never was a more loyal people in the United States than the people of New Mexico.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not doubt that, but they had an element sent up there that made trouble, did it not?

Mr. TELLER. The only people who were sent up there was when General Sibley went up with the army, and the New Mexican and Colorado troops started them out of New Mexico in short order.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not question that, nor do I challenge for a moment the loyalty of the people of New Mexico—Mexicans and all—to this Government. Not at all. But there was trouble in New Mexico, and out of that, I have always supposed, came this legislation. Perhaps out of that came this pledge. It is peculiar to this legislation, so far as I remember. Now, what is it?

That all that part of the present Territory of New Mexico situate west of a line running due south from the point where the southwest corner of the Territory of Colorado joins the northern boundary of the Territory of New Mexico to the southern boundary line of said Territory of New Mexico be, and the same is hereby, erected into a temporary government—

"Temporary government." All Territorial governments are temporary. This was incorporated within the language of the decision of the Supreme Court which I have never fully understood—by the name of the Territory of Arizona: Provided—

No lawyer ever loses sight of the effect of a proviso. It is the last word of the Congress in this section. It qualifies all which precedes it upon the same subject. What is it?—

Provided, That nothing contained in the provisions of this act shall be construed to prohibit the Congress of the United States from dividing said Territory—

That is different from reserving the right to destroy it, to obliterate it, and the Congress which passed this act had that distinction in contemplation—

That nothing contained in the provisions of this act shall be construed to prohibit the Congress of the United States from dividing said Territory or changing its boundaries in such manner and at such time as it may deem proper.

They did afterwards attach a portion of it to Nevada, colored red on that map. This additional proviso followed, and I will revert to that:

Provided further, That said government—

What government? The temporary government constituted and erected by this act—

SHALL BE MAINTAINED AND CONTINUED UNTIL SUCH TIME AS THE PEOPLE RESIDING IN SAID TERRITORY SHALL, WITH THE CONSENT OF CONGRESS, FORM A STATE GOVERNMENT, REPUBLICAN IN FORM, AS PRESCRIBED IN THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, AND APPLY FOR AND OBTAIN ADMISSION INTO THE UNION AS A STATE ON AN EQUAL FOOTING WITH THE ORIGINAL STATES.

Does that mean nothing? As to this language construction has no office to perform. It is too plain for that. No pledge was ever uttered by human speech or penned by human hand clearer than that. It was a pledge that in exercising this power to divide the Territory or change its boundaries it would not destroy the governmental entity, the Territory of Arizona created by this act.

And it was gravely argued by the Senator from Indiana that it was unconstitutional, that the Constitution gave no right to Congress to enter into a contract like that with a Territory. Certainly not. But, Mr. President, the Constitution of the United States did not prevent, nor could it prevent, the Congress of the United States from making a pledge to that people. It is not a contract enforceable in the courts. Specific performance of it can not be compelled in equity. It is like a treaty in one sense. It is binding, binding as the word of a man of honor, binding in foro conscientiae, binding in honor; and if there ever was a pledge which ought to be kept, this pledge made by the Congress of the United States away back in 1863 to all the men and women and children who have gone their way from the South and from the New England States and the Middle Western States to the plains of Arizona is such. That power can least afford to break a pledge which can with least danger repudiate it.

Will somebody tell me what it means if it does not mean what it says? Will somebody tell me that that pledge did not influence some of the splendid men and women who went to Arizona and who have lived there and built up that Territory, of which they are proud? Do you suppose it amounted to nothing? The Territory had been torn from New Mexico. Would people naturally want to go there to settle without some certainty that it would not be set back in after years to New Mexico?

There is many a contract made, Mr. President, not enforceable, which no man of honor ever fails to keep. If I tell you if you will do this or that I will stand by it financially, it may be void under the statute of frauds, but you would despise me if I sought to evade fulfillment by refuge behind that plea.

The Senator says in his speech, "Why was this pledge given to Arizona and not to other Territories?" We are not concerned with that. We are standing here to-day in the place of the men who made that pledge. We made it; our Government made it. It is outstanding, Mr. President, unredeemed, partly violated in a way—no, not at all violated. Congress reserved the right to take a part of the Territory away. Congress exercised the right to attach it to Nevada. But the Congress which did that kept her faith with Arizona and left a more compact Territory, and left intact this government, which it had then erected and pledged itself to maintain and continue.

If it be asked why the same pledge was not made to Idaho or to some of the other Territories, I do not answer. I am not called upon to speculate about that. All I have to do is to ask, "Is it nominated in the bond? Is it a pledge?" If it is, what will we do with it? What will we do with it against the protest of the people who bring it here and lay it before us and say, "You made it; we relied upon it?" We ask—we do not demand—we ask our Government to redeem it, not to let them into the Union now, but not to destroy them, not to send them back after all these years into New Mexico, of which Arizona would be an American province.

I was taught, Mr. President, in my youth as a law student the doctrine that every word of a statute, the voice of the supreme legislative power in the State, construed to mean something. That is elementary. I can not understand upon what theory of logic it is attempted to cut out this pledge and whistle it down the wind as of no greater weight than a feather. I can not bring myself to think that it is an honorable thing for this Government to do.

I have sympathy for the pioneers, the brave, rugged men who have gathered with their families from all sections, after long and wearisome journeys, in a Territory of the far West; who have endured the hardships of the frontier; who have driven back the Indian; who have conquered the desert; who have built towns and cities; who have planted churches and schoolhouses; who have established legislatures, and have carried forward government; who have erected and cherished the institutions of civilization; who have built a real political entity.

These people of Arizona love their Territory as we love the States which sent us here. All of the associations incident to the pioneer life and the development of the region are theirs, as tender as any in the world. They love its name. They love its institutions. They are proud of its fame. They guard its honor. That their revolt against its obliteration, against the destruction of its individuality, which all the years they have been upbuilding, is but human nature, and goes far, Mr. President, to demonstrate, so far as the quality of that citizenship is concerned, fitness for statehood.

And why must this thing be done? Because if we do not combine Arizona with New Mexico and do it now, each will come knocking at the door until we, forgetful of public duty and weary of importunity, will open unto them. It is to rid ourselves of future annoyance or it is to protect ourselves against future weakness. Which is it? Perhaps it is both.

I have faith myself in the people. I have faith in the Congress. I have faith in my colleagues here. I am not at all alarmed, Mr. President, about the future of Arizona and New Mexico in respect of the matter to which I just referred. Let them come and knock. If they ought not to be admitted, the Senators on that side and on this will keep them out. I am not prepared to believe that any consideration of partisanship would lead to neglect or violation of duty. How many years have they been knocking, knocking, at the door, and they are still not States of this Union? Who has kept them out, and why have they been kept out? They have been kept out by both parties because they were not fit to come in.

I am willing to trust those who are to come after us in Congress and in the White House to conserve the public interest with the same fidelity which we ought to bring and which we all try to bring to the discharge of public duty.

Mr. President, I have taken much more time than I intended. I have spoken with earnestness. It involves the interest of the whole people for one thing. That ought to make one earnest. It involves the honor of this Government. That justifies one in being earnest, and I compromise much with myself by voting for the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER]. If I had my way about it, I would strike New Mexico and Arizona from this bill.

Mr. FORAKER. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him? I have offered that kind of an amendment also, and I may offer that first instead of the other to which the Senator refers.

Mr. SPOONER. Then I would admit Oklahoma into the Union as a State.

Mr. President, I have finished.

HENRY E. RHOADES.

Mr. GALLINGER. On behalf of the senior Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT], I ask for the present consideration of the bill (S. 3506) for the relief of Henry E. Rhoades, assistant engineer, United States Navy, retired. A similar bill has passed the Senate several times, and it will take but a moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the bill; and by unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It directs the Secretary of the Navy to transfer Asst. Engineer Henry E. Rhoades, upon the retired list of the United States Navy, from the half-pay list to the 75 per cent pay list of retired officers, under section 1588 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to take effect from the date of his retirement.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KEAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After eight minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, March 8, 1906, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 7, 1906.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

John H. Duncan, of Missouri, to be receiver of public moneys at Springfield, Mo., his term having expired. Reappointment.

INDIAN AGENT.

William L. Belden, of Steele, N. Dak., to be agent for the Indians of the Standing Rock Agency, in North Dakota, vice Isaac N. Steen, resigned.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Commander John B. Collins to be a captain in the Navy from the 28th day of February, 1906, vice Capt. James H. Dayton, promoted.

Lieut. Commander Edward Lloyd, jr., to be a commander in the Navy from the 19th day of February, 1906, vice Commander Hugo Osterhaus, promoted.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Corps of Engineers.

Capt. William V. Judson, Corps of Engineers, to be major from March 2, 1906, vice Gillette, resigned.

First Lieut. George B. Pillsbury, Corps of Engineers, to be captain from March 2, 1906, vice Judson, promoted.

Second Lieut. Ralph T. Ward, Corps of Engineers, to be first lieutenant from March 2, 1906, vice Pillsbury, promoted.

Infantry Arm.

Maj. Robert J. C. Irvine, Ninth Infantry, to be lieutenant-colonel from March 3, 1906, vice Wood (W. T.), unassigned, detailed inspector-general.

Capt. John Cotter, Fifteenth Infantry, to be major from March 3, 1906, vice Irvine, Ninth Infantry, promoted.

POSTMASTERS.

ILLINOIS.

Martin A. L. Olsen to be postmaster at De Kalb, in the county of Dekalb and State of Illinois, in place of Martin A. L. Olsen. Incumbent's commission expires March 14, 1906.

IOWA.

Willis S. Gardner to be postmaster at Clinton, in the county of Clinton and State of Iowa, in place of Willis S. Gardner. Incumbent's commission expires April 10, 1906.

Newton W. Wentz to be postmaster at Oakland, in the county of Pottawattamie and State of Iowa, in place of Newton W. Wentz. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1905.

KENTUCKY.

J. T. Williams to be postmaster at London, in the county of Laurel and State of Kentucky, in place of A. R. Dyche. Incumbent's commission expired January 16, 1905.

MONTANA.

Percy F. Dodds to be postmaster at Whitefish, in the county of Flathead and State of Montana. Office became Presidential January 1, 1906.

NEBRASKA.

Clark K. Brown to be postmaster at Cozad, in the county of Dawson and State of Nebraska, in place of Frank P. Corrick. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1906.

Charles A. Sweet to be postmaster at Creighton, in the county of Knox and State of Nebraska, in place of Charles A. Sweet. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1906.

NEW JERSEY.

William H. Lushear to be postmaster at Short Hills, in the county of Essex and State of New Jersey, in place of William H. Lushear. Incumbent's commission expired January 30, 1906.

NEW YORK.

William A. Boyd to be postmaster at Mamaroneck, in the county of Westchester and State of New York, in place of William A. Boyd. Incumbent's commission expired February 28, 1906.

John J. Roehrig to be postmaster at Rosebank, in the county of Richmond and State of New York, in place of John J. Roehrig. Incumbent's commission expires March 21, 1906.

NORTH CAROLINA.

John W. C. Long to be postmaster at Statesville, in the county of Iredell and State of North Carolina, in place of John W. C. Long. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1906.

OHIO.

William S. Cappeller to be postmaster at Mansfield, in the county of Richland and State of Ohio, in place of William S. Cappeller. Incumbent's commission expires March 20, 1906.

OKLAHOMA.

Margaret J. Ryan to be postmaster at Guymon, in the county of Beaver and State of Oklahoma. Office became Presidential January 1, 1906.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Edward C. Dithrich to be postmaster at Coraopolis, in the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Edward C. Dithrich. Incumbent's commission expires March 10, 1906.

Ernest A. Hempstead to be postmaster at Meadville, in the county of Crawford and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Ernest A. Hempstead. Incumbent's commission expired March 5, 1906.

Isador Sobel to be postmaster at Erie, in the county of Erie and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Isador Sobel. Incumbent's commission expires March 14, 1906.

VIRGINIA.

John N. Davis to be postmaster at Woodstock, in the county of Shenandoah and State of Virginia, in place of John N. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1906.

W. T. Hopkins to be postmaster at Newport News, in the county of Warwick and State of Virginia, in place of Fred Read. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1906.

E. V. Jameson to be postmaster at Pulaski, in the county of Pulaski and State of Virginia in place of Lee S. Calfee, removed.

Hamilton W. Kinzer to be postmaster at Front Royal, in the county of Warren and State of Virginia, in place of Hamilton W. Kinzer. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1906.

Franklin Stearns to be postmaster at Glenallen, in the county of Henrico and State of Virginia, in place of Sydney S. Trevvett. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1906.

WEST VIRGINIA.

James F. McCaskey, to be postmaster at New Martinsville, in the county of Wetzel and State of West Virginia, in place of James F. McCaskey. Incumbent's commission expires March 15, 1906.

WISCONSIN.

James Harris to be postmaster at Prairie du Chien, in the county of Crawford and State of Wisconsin, in place of Ira D. Hurlbut. Incumbent's commission expires April 10, 1906.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate March 6, 1906.

CIRCUIT JUDGE OF HAWAII.

William J. Robinson, of Hawaii, to be third judge of the circuit court, first circuit, of the Territory of Hawaii.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 7, 1906.

CONSUL-GENERAL.

Amos P. Wilder, of Wisconsin, to be consul-general of the United States at Hongkong, China.

MARSHALS.

Claudius Dockery, of North Carolina, to be United States marshal for the eastern district of North Carolina.

Charles B. Hopkins, of the State of Washington, to be United States marshal for the western district of Washington.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Ida O. Tillman to be postmaster at Geneva, in the county of Geneva and State of Alabama.

ARKANSAS.

William L. Jefferies to be postmaster at Clarendon, in the county of Monroe and State of Arkansas.

CALIFORNIA.

Austin Wiley to be postmaster at Arcata, in the county of Humboldt and State of California.

KENTUCKY.

E. S. Moss to be postmaster at Williamsburg, in the county of Whitley and State of Kentucky.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Walter N. Beal to be postmaster at Rockland, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts.

William F. Darby to be postmaster at North Adams, in the county of Berkshire and State of Massachusetts.

Joseph M. Hollywood to be postmaster at Brockton, in the county of Plymouth and State of Massachusetts.

MICHIGAN.

Ramsay Arthur to be postmaster at Schoolcraft, in the county of Kalamazoo and State of Michigan.

Charles Brown to be postmaster at Vicksburg, in the county of Kalamazoo and State of Michigan.

Seymour Foster to be postmaster at Lansing, in the county of Ingham and State of Michigan.

Glover E. Laird to be postmaster at Mendon, in the county of St. Joseph and State of Michigan.

Richard B. Lang to be postmaster at Houghton, in the county of Houghton and State of Michigan.

Albert A. Worthington to be postmaster at Buchanan, in the county of Berrien and State of Michigan.

MINNESOTA.

Joseph Cowin to be postmaster at Adrian, in the county of Nobles and State of Minnesota.

John P. Mattson to be postmaster at Warren, in the county of Marshall and State of Minnesota.

NEW MEXICO.

Robert W. Hopkins to be postmaster at Albuquerque, in the county of Bernalillo and Territory of New Mexico.

NORTH CAROLINA.

W. M. Currie to be postmaster at Maxton, in the county of Robeson and State of North Carolina.

Elizabeth H. Hill to be postmaster at Scotland Neck, in the county of Halifax and State of North Carolina.

RHODE ISLAND.

H. Elmer Freeman to be postmaster at Phillipsdale, in the county of Providence and State of Rhode Island.

TEXAS.

Frank Leahy to be postmaster at Rodgers, in the county of Bell and State of Texas.

Charles McCormack to be postmaster at Plainview, in the county of Hale and State of Texas.

Lola Weand to be postmaster at Fort Sam Houston, in the county of Bexar and State of Texas.

VERMONT.

Julius O. Belknap to be postmaster at South Royalton, in the county of Windsor and State of Vermont.

Mark H. Moody to be postmaster at Waterbury, in the county of Washington and State of Vermont.

WISCONSIN.

David C. Owen to be postmaster at Milwaukee, in the county of Milwaukee and State of Wisconsin.

WASHINGTON.

James N. Scott to be postmaster at Kennewick, in the county of Yakima and State of Washington.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, March 7, 1906.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

COAL TO CITIZENS OF NOME, ALASKA.

Mr. CAPRON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a joint resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Rhode Island asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following joint resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to cause to be sold to the citizens of Nome, Alaska, at its actual cost to the United States at the place of sale, such limited quantities of coal for domestic uses as, in his judgment, can safely be spared from the stock provided for the use of the garrison at Fort Davis, Alaska.

The SPEAKER. This is in the form of a bill:

Be it enacted, etc.—

If there be no objection, the title will be amended. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CAPRON, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

By unanimous consent, the title was amended to make it read: "A bill (H. R. 16305) authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes."

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill; and pending that, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate be concluded to-day, and that the time be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] and myself in equal parts.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that general debate upon the Indian appropriation bill be closed to-day and that the time be controlled half and half by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS]. Is there objection?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I have no objection to that arrangement, Mr. Speaker.

There was no objection.

The motion of Mr. SHERMAN was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 15331—the Indian appropriation bill—with Mr. CURRIER in the chair.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield one hour to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE].

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the committee that reported this bill I desire to submit a few observations on the bill and upon the general subject of Indian legislation. In South Dakota we have a population of something more than 20,000 Indians. I have been a resident of that State about twenty-four years. I have resided in the section of the State adjacent to the Sioux Indian reservations, and therefore in discussing the subject of Indian legislation I am going to speak from the standpoint of one who knows something about the Indians from actual contact and observation.

Mr. Chairman, whenever legislation is suggested in this House for the benefit and advancement of the Indians, or to open for settlement Indian reservations that are not used by the Indians, there are certain people throughout the East that show signs of hysteria and express alarm and fear that the "poor Indian," as they say, is again about to be robbed or outraged. I propose to show, Mr. Chairman, that instead of the Indian being mistreated, that he has been most generously treated, treated better in many respects than our white citizens.

The bill before the committee, as suggested by the chairman, is new in form. The committee considered that the old form, which had been in use many years, was not such a form as presented the different subjects that the bill covers in the most intelligent manner, and therefore they have adopted and presented here a new form of a bill which I am certain, as stated by the chairman yesterday, will meet with the approval of the Members of the House when they become familiar with the changes and the new form.

The bill contains appropriations for absolute gratuities of $585,000. About that amount is appropriated every year as a gratuity. The bill contains an item for the support of schools of $3,558,405, and, as the chairman of the committee stated yesterday, practically that amount is a gratuity. In other words, we expend that amount of money annually for the education of the Indians that is paid out of the Treasury as a gratuity.

I want to call the attention of the House to the Indian allotment law enacted in 1887. That act, recognizing that the Indians had certain rights in the land which they occupy as reservations, provided for alloting to each individual Indian a certain quantity of land, and to each head of a family, to each child over 18 years old, and also to each child, regardless of its age, under 18 years. That provision gives to an Indian with a family of four or five children from a section to a section and a half of land.

In the Sioux Reservation in South Dakota, with which I am familiar, the allotment features of the law opening that portion which was ceded in 1889 increased the area of the allotment by doubling the amount as provided in the original allotment act, so that allotments are made in quantites as follows:

> To each head of a family, 320 acres; to each single person over 18 years of age, one-fourth of a section; to each orphan child under 18 years of age, one-fourth of a section; and to each other person under 18 years now living, or who may be borne prior to the date of the order of the President directing an allotment of the lands embraced in any reservation, one-eighth of a section: Provided, That where the lands on any reservation are mainly valuable for grazing purposes an additional allotment of such grazing lands, in quantities as above provided, shall be made to each individual.

So that an Indian with a family may take 640 acres of grazing land or 320 acres of agricultural land; to each child over 18 years of age, 320 acres of grazing land, and to each child under 18 years of age, 160 acres of grazing land.

Now, in the case of an Indian with five children there is awarded to him and his family something like 1,400 acres if it is grazing land, or one-half that amount of agricultural land. The land is held in trust for a period of twenty-five years. It is not subject to taxation, and it becomes his absolute property at the expiration of twenty-five years, and he has the benefit and use of it in the meantime without paying 1 cent of taxation either for schools, for maintaining the township and county or State government.

This allotment law was, as I stated, enacted about twenty years ago, and it contemplates that after the allotment to the Indians on the reservations has been made, then the surplus land or unused land, land that the Indians do not require, shall be disposed of and sold under the provisions of the homestead law. And it provides further that the proceeds of the sale of these unused lands shall be paid into the Treasury for the support and maintenance and education and civilization of the tribe.

Mr. Chairman, it has become necessary, in order to secure legislation disposing of these surplus lands, that we shall provide that the money, or a large portion of it, received from the sale of the lands shall be paid to the Indians per capita in cash. In the meantime, we are appropriating from three to four million dollars annually from the Treasury for the education of these same Indians that we are paying money to for surplus and unused lands that we are selling, after they have taken their allotments.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I understand the gentleman to state that about twenty years ago Congress passed a bill permitting the Secretary of the Interior to allot lands to the Indians separately, so that the rest of the reservation might be thrown open; that is the law the gentleman refers to?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Does the gentleman know of a single instance where the present Secretary of the Interior has complied with that law and under it allotted lands to the Indians out of their reservations?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I would answer that by saying that this law authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate an agreement with the Indians for a sale of these unused lands, and there have been many such agreements sent to this House that were negotiated under the provision I have referred to in the original allotment law.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman point out one negotiated by the present Secretary, where he has allotted lands to the individual Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I most certainly can. In South Dakota he has sent to this House one referring to the sale of a portion of the Rosebud Reservation, that portion located in Gregory County, and another relating to the Lower Brule Reservation.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. That was not done in response to the act of Congress passed twenty years ago, was it?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It was, Mr. Chairman. It was under authority given to the Secretary under the law to which I have referred.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Can the gentleman state why there is a difference made between his State and New Mexico and Arizona?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I am not familiar with the conditions in the two Territories named by the gentleman.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Or Oklahoma?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Or Oklahoma. My recollection is that we did have a treaty or an agreement pertaining to some portion of the Kiowa and Comanche reservations, with which the gentleman is familiar, that was negotiated under the present Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. That was in 1892, before Mr. Hitchcock's administration.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. That may be true.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, while many agreements have been negotiated, none have been ratified, practically none, in the form in which they were negotiated. And that is what confuses the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS].

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, it is true that since the decision by the Supreme Court in what is known as the "Lone Wolf case" treaties or agreements have not been ratified, but legislation has been enacted along the line of agreements substantially complying therewith. I desire to call attention to a provision of the allotment law to which I have referred substantiating what I have said as to what shall be done with moneys that may be received from the sale of the unused portions of Indian reservations. In section 5 of that law I read this paragraph:

> And the sums agreed to be paid by the United States as purchase money for any portion of any such reservation shall be held in the Treasury of the United States for the sole use of the tribe or tribes of Indians to whom such reservations belong, and the same, with interest thereon at 3 per cent per annum, shall be at all times subject to appropriation by Congress for the education and civilization of such tribe or tribes of Indians or the members thereof.

Mr. Chairman, in the bill dividing the great Sioux Reservation in South Dakota into separate reservations that identical language was incorporated, showing that it was the policy and the intention of Congress when the original allotment law was passed, after giving to an individual Indian a certain tract of land in the form of an allotment, to have the balance of the lands which constituted the reservation sold and disposed of and the proceeds put in the Treasury for the support, education, and civilization of those Indians. I merely refer to this, Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of showing that, instead of mistreating the Indians, we are dealing with them in a manner that is extremely generous. I am not criticising that policy, because there is no question that under the system of education the Indian is making very rapid progress. I believe that in the past ten years, under the policy that has prevailed dealing with the Indians of this country, they have made greater progress than they made in the fifty previous years.

As the chairman of the committee stated yesterday, instead of appropriating money and buying rations and issuing them to Indians regardless of whether they are able to work or not, to-day we are legislating that moneys appropriated for the support of Indians may be commuted instead of giving them a ration by requiring them to work and paying them for their labor. For many years it was thought that the Indian ought not to work; that he was different from a white man, and there was a certain sentiment that controlled legislation relating to him, and he was supposed to be permitted to live in absolute idleness and roam over the country hunting and fishing without having to think once or care where his next meal was coming from, because he knew that he could go to the agency and there he would have issued to him meat and other provisions, as well as clothing. Under the policy that prevails now an Indian who is able-bodied, who is capable of laboring, is given to understand that if he wants to eat he has got to work the same as a white man, and throughout my State, where, as I say, we have a great many Indians, that system has worked with good results. We have Indians employed not only upon the reservations in the construction of roads, in the construction of irrigation works, in hauling freight for the agencies, but in many instances Indians are employed off the reservation the same as any other citizen of the State, and some of them in the western sections of the State are working on the railroad as section hands.

The old Indian—the Indian who has had no opportunity whatever to progress, who is aged and infirm—the Government still cares for, as it formerly did all Indians, by issuing to him rations and providing him with food and clothing. Mr. Chairman, many Members of this House will recollect in the Fifty-seventh Congress that there was passed a bill known as the "Rosebud bill." That bill provided for the disposition and sale of that portion of the Rosebud Reservation in South Dakota located in Gregory County. Before the measure became a law there was a very strenuous opposition, not in this House, but from sources entirely independent of this House and originating at Philadelphia. The Indian Rights' Association, assuming to know the facts and believing that the proposed legislation was unfair to the Indians, protested against the enactment of the bill, claiming that it was going to do a wrong to the Indians, and that it was dishonest for that reason.

Notwithstanding that opposition and after some concessions were made as to the price of the land, the bill became a law. The bill provided that the land should be disposed of to settlers under the provisions of the homestead law, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, and under that authorization the Department applied what is known as the "lottery system." The lottery system has been in use now in the opening of two or three reservations, and the only opposition to the system, the only denunciation of the system, has come from the extreme East and in remote parts of the country from where the law has been applied. The Rosebud measure has been criticised since it was enacted by certain magazine and other writers, and particularly has the feature relative to the lottery system been denounced. Now, Mr. Chairman, the Rosebud bill, as I stated, opened to settlement about 400,000 acres of land. In the tract affected there were something over 500,000 acres. Before the law was applicable the Indians had the right to locate and select allotments in the portion that was affected by the bill. They proceeded to locate and select their allotments and took out of the tract 100,000 acres of land, and I want to say that Indians, in many repects, are like white men and they know good land from bad land, and when they took that hundred thousand acres out of that tract for their allotments they took the very best parts of it, and the parts of it especially that were along the streams and the creeks. That law provides that the balance of the land shall be sold; first, for all lands taken in the first three months the price to be $4 an acre; after the three months and for the next three months the price to be $3 per acre, and after that the price to be $2.50 an acre. Mr. Chairman, notwithstanding the fact that the Indians had taken their allotments as the allotment law provided, that they are to possess this land for twenty-five years without being obliged to pay any taxes whatever, notwithstanding that the value of these lands is to be greatly enhanced by reason of the adjoining lands being settled upon and cultivated by the white settler, notwithstanding the provisions to which I have referred in the general allotment law and which is also in the law which created the Rosebud Reservation, instead of providing that the money should be placed in the Treasury for the education and the civilization and advancement of these Indians the law provides that it shall be paid out to them, one-half of it per capita in cash. Mr. Chairman, I want to state now that in the future, from the standpoint of the best interests of the Indians, to say nothing of following the law which we have on the statute books, I shall protest against moneys being paid to Indians in cash that may be realized from the sale of lands which they do not use and do not occupy.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Certainly.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman object to the policy of paying part of the proceeds of those sales in cash to the Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I most certainly do, Mr. Chairman, and I shall protest against any measure that may come up in this House again containing such a provision.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Under the Rosebud bill provision was made that a very large percentage of the funds derived should be paid in cash to the Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes, sir.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Did the gentleman protest against that feature in that bill?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, it was necessary to have the bill apparently upon its face extremely liberal toward the Indians in order to overcome the opposition represented by my distinguished friend from New York.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The opposition represented by myself, the gentleman said, never urged that large percentage payments be paid to the Indians. If the gentleman recollects, he himself desired that large percentage payments be made in order to allay the fears and stop the protests of the Indians who owned these lands that were to be disposed of.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Let me say to the gentleman that it is another argument against the system of negotiating treaties or agreements with the Indians. That provision was put in the Rosebud bill because it was in the agreement with the Indians. It was put in the agreement with the Indians because they could not make an agreement unless it was in.

Mr. FITZGERALD. But the gentleman knows that he is one of those who have been urging most strenuously that Congress ignore completely the terms of these agreements.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes, and I shall continue to urge that.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And I simply wish to call attention to the fact that in the bill opening a reservation in his own district he desired to have as much put into the bill as was possible in order to prevent the outcry on the part of the Indians.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, my position on the question of disposing of Indian lands is and will hereafter be governed entirely by what I believe to be for the best interests of the Indians.

Mr. FITZGERALD. If it would not interrupt the gentleman's statement, I wish he would give the House this information, namely, the amount of acres disposed of under the Rosebud bill, and the maximum price, and each of the other prices.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. A little further on I will give the gentleman exactly that information. I was about to say, Mr. Chairman, that I am hereafter going to favor legislation that I believe is for the best interests of the Indians from every standpoint. The Indians of this country, in one sense, are mere children, and it is absurd for Congress, that has jurisdiction over them, when it considers some measure is advisable to promote their interests, to have to go to them and ask them to consent that they be dealt with honestly and, as Congress believes, wisely. And it is because of that system that this condition has arisen by which moneys are being squandered that otherwise should be husbanded and expended for the advancement and education of the Indian as the original allotment law contemplated.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Would the gentleman be willing to support a measure that would provide that all the lands in the Indian reservations containing valuable minerals might be thrown open under the United States mining laws, and the proceeds thereof applied to the Indians, as another Indian fund—a general bill of that kind covering all mineral reservations?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Without having opportunity, Mr. Chairman, to give the question any consideration, I am inclined to say no. Perhaps I do not understand the question.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then can the gentleman give any reason why a great many million acres of land containing valuable mineral deposits should be locked up in Indian reservations and indefinitely withheld from the American miner and prospector?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. If that condition prevails, Mr. Chairman, it is not within the section of the country with which I am familiar.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The gentleman is very fortunate in living in the section of the country that he does. I hope the gentleman will remove his place of residence to the great Territories of the Southwest, where these conditions do prevail, namely, New Mexico and Arizona.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I will state to the gentleman that I have the good fortune to live in a section of country that has the richest hundred square miles in the world, known as the Black Hills.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I am glad to know that the gentleman is so fortunately situated, and I hope he will turn his attention outside of his own bailiwick and assist these Territories that have no voting representation on this floor, and that are not entitled to votes here, to secure their rights. They should have separate statehood, and their representatives on this floor and in the Senate, so that these Indian tracts of land may be thrown open and that country may be developed.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It has been asked, Mr. Chairman, what disposition was to be made of the proceeds of the sale of this Rosebud Reservation other than the one-half which is to be paid to them per capita in cash. I wish to say that the law provides that the balance of the money shall be expended for stock cattle, and that cattle shall be issued to the Indians. So that while they do not get all of the money in cash, only getting half of it, the other half is given to them in cattle, or the equivalent of cash. Now, notwithstanding, Mr. Chairman, the provision of the allotment law to which I have referred, that the moneys received from the sale of lands similar to the Rosebud lands shall be placed in the Treasury for the support and education of the Indians, we are paying out the entire amount to the Indians and at the same time we are making appropriations from the Treasury to educate these Indians that are benefited by the sale of the Rosebud lands.

The original agreement with the Rosebud Indians provided that they should be paid for the lands the sum of $2.50 an acre, which would have made an aggregate sum of $1,040,000. When we proposed the measure which finally became a law, which does not obligate the Government to pay for any of it except sections 16 and 36, which are ceded to the State for school purposes, it was claimed that unless there was a price put upon the land, some claiming as high as $10 an acre, that it would be disposed of for a low price and the Indians would not receive anything like as much as they would have received if the agreement had been carried out, viz, a million and forty thousand dollars.

Mr. Chairman, that bill became operative, so far as the opening was concerned, on the 8th day of August, 1904, about a year and a half ago. I have here from the General Land Office a letter signed by the Commissioner, giving a statement of the amount of lands that have been disposed of at the different prices and the amount of money that has been received and placed in the Treasury to the credit of the Indians up to December 31, 1905. This statement shows conclusively that when the matter is finally completed and the land is all disposed of and paid for, instead of the Indians receiving $1,040,000 they will probably receive from $200,000 to $400,000 in excess of that amount. For the benefit of the House I would like, Mr. Chairman, to have the letter read which I send to the Clerk's desk; also a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, showing the amount of money that has been paid into the Treasury by reason of sales of land in the Rosebud Reservation, in Gregory County, to which I have referred.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., February 7, 1906.

Hon. CHARLES H. BURKE,
House of Representatives.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 27, 1906, requesting to be furnished with a statement up to and including December 31, 1905, of the lands disposed of in Gregory County, S. Dak., in what was formerly the Rosebud Reservation, opened to entry under the provisions of the act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stat., 254).

In response to your inquiries I have to state—

First. During the period ending on the date above mentioned there were made 1,881 homestead entries of the $4 class, embracing approximately 300,960 acres.

Second. One hundred and sixty-two homestead entries of the $3 class, embracing 21,898.87 acres.

Third. Three hundred and four homestead entries of the $2.50 class, embracing 38,045.82 acres.

Fourth. Four hundred and twenty homestead entries, all of the $4 class, upon which the first payment of $1 per acre had been made, were relinquished and the land embraced therein reentered. The area covered by these entries was 64,969.47 acres, and the money received therefor, $64,969.47.

Fifth. Twenty-nine thousand five hundred and forty-three and fifty one-hundredth acres were granted to the State under the provisions of section 4 of the act above referred to. In accordance with the terms of said act the Indians received $2.50 per acre for said lands, amounting in the aggregate to $73,858.75, and this amount has been paid into the Treasury for the credit of the Indians on account of said school lands.

Sixth. Homesteads embracing 29,532.19 acres of the $4 grade were commuted, and $118,128.76 was received therefor. One homestead entry of 160 acres, perfected under sections 2292, 2304, and 2305, Revised Statutes, the entryman having four years' military service to his credit and having paid the full price of the lands, is included in the area given.

Seventh. There are approximately 110,080 acres remaining unappropriated, which would make 688 homestead entries of 160 acres each.

Eighth. No contests arose by reason of different parties claiming the same tract during the sixty-day period following the day of opening (August 8, 1904), during which period a preference right of entry was given to parties who had registered, and no such contests could arise for the reason that during this period rights were initiated by entry or filing and not by settlement under the provisions of the President's proclamation.

The order in which entries of this land should be made was determined by registration and drawing, in accordance with a plan which was adopted by President McKinley and first used in opening to entry the Kiowa-Comanche Reservation, in Oklahoma, in 1901. Since that time it has also been used in opening the Rosebud, Devils Lake, and Uintah reservations, embracing in the aggregate three and one-half million acres of land. In these openings there were registered in the aggregate 304,000 people and in none of them were those participating subjected to any great hardship and to but little inconvenience. No complaint of any character has reached this office, either as to the fairness of the method employed, its execution, or the results obtained.

The figures given in the first, second, third, and fourth items are approximately correct, and it is believed will serve your purpose, although some slight changes might be made therein upon a more careful inspection of the records.

Very respectfully,
W. A. RICHARDS,
Commissioner.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, January 30, 1906.

Hon. CHARLES H. BURKE,
House of Representatives.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 27th instant asking for a statement of the amount paid into the Treasury to December 31, 1905, as proceeds of Rosebud Reservation sold under section 5, act of April 23, 1904, I would state that the sum of $434,907.87 has been so received and covered.

By the same act Congress appropriated the sum of $75,000, or so much thereof as might be necessary, to pay for sections 2 and 16, granted to the State of South Dakota. The net amount required to execute this provision of the law is $73,858.75, making a total credit on account of land disposed of, of $508,766.62.

There has been disbursed from this appropriation the sum of $87,280.20, leaving a balance available of $421,486.42.

Respectfully,
L. M. SHAW, Secretary.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, it appears by these letters that more than half a million dollars has already been paid into the Treasury, notwithstanding but very few have yet made final entry and final payment, not having been there long enough to do so and comply with the law. I think it will be seen that there will be nearly, if not quite, another million dollars received from the sales of these lands, making a total of about a million and a half dollars as against the million and forty thousand dollars they would have received under the treaty.

I want to refer further to this letter which has been read from the Commissioner, which states that under this so-called "lottery system" there never has been any complaint from anyone who registered and took advantage of the system in order to get or acquire a claim. One hundred and five thousand people, in round numbers, went to South Dakota and registered in order to have a chance to get a claim in this Rosebud country, and notwithstanding that great number of people, there never has been, so the Commissioner states, one complaint from any person, and not a contest by reason of more than one person claiming the same tract of land.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, I would ask my colleague to state that out of this hundred and five thousand applicants for the privilege of filing upon the lands how many entries, in fact, could have been made and were made?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. About twenty-five hundred in round numbers could have been made, but of those that registered not to exceed about twelve or thirteen hundred made entries.

Mr. MARTIN. So that the number of those people who could, in fact, obtain a piece of this land under homestead filing was very small.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes; very small. Under the system that prevailed before the lottery system was adopted there could not have helped being serious bloodshed and loss of life, and there would have been litigation that would have lasted for the next twenty years between parties in contest claiming the same tract of land. But under this lottery system there has not been any complaint, but general satisfaction expressed and no contest whatever. Yet, Mr. Chairman, when you get down in the extreme East there are those who are ready to make a criticism about what is called the Government indulging in running a lottery. It is the most fair, and the only fair manner I can conceive of in disposing of such lands.

Mr. Chairman, I have endeavored to show generally that the Indians of this country are being treated very generously by the Government. I have cited the case of the Rosebuds to show that that is the fact, and that we have dealt with them in what might almost be termed an extravagant manner. I do not think that any person who knows anything about or is familiar with the Indian would say that it was for his best interest to take the money that might possibly belong to him and pay it out to him to spend as he might see fit. There is no parent, who is possessed of means, that would give any considerable amount to his child to squander. On the contrary, he would husband it and spend it for the advancement, education, and development of the child, and if possible when the child has reached his majority and shown traits of character that demonstrate that he is capable of managing property and having charge of money, that then he would pay the money out to him, or give it to him and allow him to spend it as he might see fit.

Why, Mr. Chairman, I have in mind one instance of an Indian on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota who received several hundred dollars as the result of a claim that he had for a depredation. Having received the money, he spent a considerable part of it—I do not know exactly how much, but several hundred dollars—for a hearse. He had no use whatever for it, but he was attracted by it and thought it would be a nice thing to have, and so he spent his money in purchasing a hearse.

Now, I say, for the good of the Indian, and for his advancement, to say nothing of the law which we have on the subject, these moneys should be placed in the Treasury and reserved and expended only as the best interests of the Indians may seem to require.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, if it will not interrupt the line of thought which my colleague is pursuing, I should like to ask him to make a statement as to whether this plan which the Government has adopted in recent years of encouraging the Indians to work, and in a sense of providing work for them within the reservation, for themselves and their teams, has, in fact, encouraged them in habits of industry.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I can answer that question from personal knowledge, and unhesitatingly answer it in the affirmative. While when the system was first proposed the Indians rebelled, to-day they favor it. The Government, as I believe I have already stated, instead of issuing rations and clothing to the Indians, provides work—improving roads in some instances, construction of irrigation ditches, or the hauling of freight—and the Indian receives his pay the same as any other man who labors, and the Indian finds that under this new system he is independent. Under the old system an Indian drew his rations, as a rule, every two weeks. That meant a feast for the first two or three days and starvation until the next ration day, whereas now he has his daily pay, from which he supplies his needs the same as his white brother, and, as I stated in the outset, under the new policy that prevails for the conduct of Indian affairs I do not hesitate to say that I believe the Indian has made more progress in the last ten years than in the previous fifty years, and I believe if this policy is continued, that the solution of the Indian question is, at least, in sight. How long it will take remains to be seen.

I believe that the tribal relations ought to be broken up, that as they become capable of managing their affairs the individual Indians should be allowed to have a fee simple patent to their lands, and if there are any moneys in the Treasury belonging to the tribe that they should be paid their pro rata share and be let go and in future depend upon their own efforts for their livelihood and their success. Of course I would limit this to such individual Indians as had reached such a stage of advancement as to be capable of managing their own affairs.

Mr. Chairman, the bill under consideration contains a provision authorizing the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to investigate and report to Congress upon the desirability of establishing a sanitarium for the treatment of Indians afflicted with tuberculosis. He is also to report, as far as possible, the extent of the prevalence of tuberculosis among Indians. That subject was referred to by the chairman yesterday, and there was some inquiry concerning it.

I wish to say that this is indeed a very serious proposition. In the beginning of this session I introduced a bill to establish an Indian sanitarium on the Missouri River at or near the city of Pierre, or Fort Pierre, in South Dakota, for the purpose of providing a place where Indians suffering from tuberculosis might be taken and cared for and nursed and, if possible, brought back to health.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will ask the gentleman if he does not think that the best means of preventing the increase of tuberculosis among the Indians would be to educate them on the reservations of the West, where the climate and conditions are of a sort to which they are accustomed, instead of bringing them to the East, to such places as Carlisle and Hampton, having different climates and different conditions?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I want to say that I am in favor of all the different systems of education which we have for the Indians, the reservation school, the agency school, the nonreservation school, and, if you please, the schools mentioned by the gentleman. While perhaps as an original proposition I would not be in favor of sending the Indian to a remote part of the country for his education, I do believe that the institutions the gentleman has referred to are doing and have done a great work for the development and civilization and education of the Indians of this country; and while it is true that many Indians who go away to eastern schools return to their homes affected with tuberculosis, and perhaps live but a short time, I doubt very much if statistics will show that the proportion of Indians who become affected with tuberculosis while attending school—and I do not care where the schools are located—is as great as among the Indians upon the reservations and that have never been away to school.

I am going to briefly show the condition of the Indians in South Dakota as to tuberculosis. South Dakota is known and recognized as a State where among the whites tuberculosis is not at all prevalent. It is rarely that a case of tuberculosis develops in South Dakota, while we have many people coming into the State afflicted with the disease who recover and live for many years as though they never had been affected. Consequently it can not be said that if tuberculosis is prevalent among the Indians that it is due to any climatic conditions. The bill which I have referred to was sent to the Interior Department, and a report was made thereon by the Commissioner, which was approved by the Secretary, and I am going to refer very briefly to that report. I will quote from the Commissioner's letter as follows:

> The prevalence of tuberculosis among the Indians is a matter of grave concern. While investigations made by this Office reveal an alarming situation, it is probably only in particular localities where the scourge is worse among the Indians than among whites under similar conditions. A campaign of education has begun among our own people, and if it is necessary for them it is at least as important for our Indians. In their own camps and cabins they do not have the sanitary conveniences of a modern civilized home, and one consumptive may become, through ignorance, a source of infection to numberless other persons.

To show the extent of the prevalence of this disease among the Sioux Indians I will read from this report of the Commissioner a statement made by the agency physician at the Pine Ridge Agency in South Dakota, showing the extent of the disease among the Pine Ridge Indians:

> In a recent report by Dr. Joseph R. Walker, agency physician at Pine Ridge Agency, S. Dak., a number of statistical tables were given, from which it appears that in 1905 the full-blood Indian population of the reservation was 4,875, among whom there were 561 cases of consumption during the year, of which 172 were new cases, 104 recoveries, and 109 deaths. The mixed-blood population was 1,822. Among these there were 54 cases of tuberculosis, of which 22 were new, 13 recoveries, and 6 deaths.
>
> The statistics for ten years, from 1896 to 1906, give 903 deaths from tuberculosis among the Indians and 70 deaths among the mixed bloods.
>
> The long service of Doctor Walker at Pine Ridge and his interest in this subject have enabled him to prepare tables unavailable at other reservations, but I assume that the ratio shown at Pine Ridge approximately would hold at the other Sioux reservations of North and South Dakota.

Out of a population of less than 5,000 nearly 1,000 died of tuberculosis within a period of ten years.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota has expired.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman fifteen minutes more.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. A prominent physician residing in my home city, Dr. D. W. Robinson, president of the board of health of the State, recently contributed an article on the subject of tuberculosis among the Sioux to the Review of Reviews, and it is published in the March number of that magazine. Doctor Robinson is familiar with the conditions of the Sioux Indians, having resided for many years at Pierre, where I reside, adjacent to the Great Sioux Reservation. He has been for many years the physician at the Pierre Indian school, and he has made a study of this subject. In this article he states that up to about 1878 there was no tuberculosis to any extent among the Sioux Indians; that since their mode of life has been changed, and instead of moving from place to place and living in their tepees, they have been confined in small log huts, as was stated yesterday, without ventilation, without any regard whatever for sanitation, this disease has made progress among these Indians, until to-day, as stated by the Commissioner in the report to which I have referred, it is a matter of grave concern.

He says in that statement:

> It is impossible to reduce the conditions to tables and figures. The experience of several years as health officer and as physician to two Indian schools has convinced me that fully 60 per cent of the younger generation has some form of tubercular infection, and 50 per cent of those of the age of puberty die of some form of the disease.

Then he states that there is a report from the Standing Rock Reservation that 75 per cent of all deaths result from tuberculosis. He also quotes from an Indian living on the Sisseton Reservation, who has lived there for fifty years, that fully 50 per cent of them die with this disease.

Now, to illustrate that it is not necessarily a conclusion that an Indian can only acquire tuberculosis by attending some Indian school, as suggested by the inquiry of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS], I want to call attention to one instance. Doctor Robinson refers to it in this statement. I happen to know the family, and I can say that it was not due to the fact that the children were in school that the condition that is disclosed here resulted. He says:

> One of the striking instances in point is the destruction of a family of a noted worthy chief, John Grass. In 1892 a white friend met him and his seven sons at a convocation of the tribe. These sons were stalwart fellows and apparently well.

In 1902, ten years thereafter, the friend again met the aged chieftain, who at once recognized the white man. He said: "You saw my boys; all gone, all died of the disease. I have no child left."

Commenting on that, he said:

It is peculiarly pathetic and appeals most emphatically to the Government for its amelioration. Most justly do these poor wards deserve some measure of relief. The Indians are not alone interested. The health of the white community is menaced by the plague spot which surrounds the agency.

Mr. Chairman, I have referred to this subject for the purpose of calling to the attention of this House the importance of some action, and some prompt action, being taken to check this disease among the Indians of the country, and to justify the action of the committee in putting in the bill a provision authorizing the Commissioner to investigate the subject and report fully to the next session of Congress.

Mr. Chairman, there is one further question to which I desire to refer before I conclude. That is the provision in the bill for an appropriation to be used in obtaining evidence and in prosecuting parties engaged in the sale of liquor to Indians. The Commissioner urges it very strongly in his report made for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905. He states:

During the last year fresh efforts have been made by persons engaged in the liquor traffic to elude the law forbidding the introduction of liquor into the Indian country.

Up to last April whenever a person was convicted of selling liquor to an Indian it was never considered that there was a distinction as between an Indian who had taken his allotment and an Indian commonly known as a "reservation Indian." The Supreme Court, in a case entitled "The matter of Heff," held that where an Indian had taken his allotment under section 6 of the Indian allotment law he is a citizen of the State or Territory within which he resided, and that he is no longer subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. The effect of that decision has been most demoralizing among the Indians. Liquor is now sold to Indians almost as openly as to white men, and because of that fact largely I introduced at the earlier part of this session a bill which provides for an amendment to section 6 of the Indian allotment law, so that hereafter, when lands are allotted to Indians, citizenship is to be withheld until they receive their fee-simple patent. In other words, during the period of time that the Government elects to withhold the title to the land citizenship is also to be withheld and the United States will continue to exercise jurisdiction over such Indian. I speak of this because I expect to ask unanimous consent of this House within a very few days to have that bill passed. In the measure there is a provision giving to the Secretary of the Interior authority, in his discretion, whenever he believes an Indian has reached the stage of advancement and civilization where he is capable of managing his own affairs, to issue to such Indian a fee-simple patent, and with that will go full citizenship.

This bill now before the committee is filled with provisions authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to convey to Indians their allotments and relieve them from the trust features. The committee, in incorporating these provisions in the appropriation bill, followed in every instance the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior. Our theory is that the Secretary of the Interior and the Indian Department is the Department of the Government that knows what is for the best interests of the Indian; that knows when he has reached a stage capable of managing his own affairs; and, therefore, when it recommends that an Indian be given a fee simple patent for his allotment we put it in the Indian appropriation bill—and I may say that it is subject to a point of order—and in this respect the progress, advancement, and the best interests of the Indian may be very seriously hampered and interfered with unless we have a law such as I have proposed, and such as has been recommended by the Committee on Indian Affairs. It has the very strong recommendation of the Commissioner and is approved by the Secretary of the Interior. I hope that I may be recognized at some near date to call up the bill for consideration, and I trust that every Member of the House will see the necessity and importance for the enactment of such a measure.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman—and I have not said as much as I wanted to on the subject—I desire to again say that the policy of the Government has been most generous toward its Indian wards. There has been little occasion in recent years for criticism of the administration of Indian affairs. There is no committee of this House that gives more careful consideration to its particular business than does the Committee on Indian Affairs, under the able administration of the distinguished gentleman who has been the chairman of that committee for so many years. There is no branch of the Indian service that he is not familiar with, and every measure that comes from that committee—not only the appropriation bill, but any other bill that has to do with Indian affairs—has behind it the belief on the part of the chairman and the committee that the bill is an honest measure and one that will promote the interest of the Indians and be for their best welfare. [Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. KEIFER having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 956) providing for the election of a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the district of Alaska, had asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. NELSON, Mr. DILLINGHAM, and Mr. PATTERSON as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 4860. An act for the relief of Peter Fairley;

S. 4593. An act for the relief of Francis J. Cleary, a midshipman in the United States Navy;

S. 4129. An act to regulate enlistments and punishments in the United States Revenue-Cutter Service; and

S. 3433. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to divide the judicial district of North Dakota," approved April 26, 1890.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 16305. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

Senate concurrent resolution 14.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of the Senate be authorized in the enrollment of the bill (S. 4229) "to authorize the sale and disposition of surplus or unallotted lands of the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes," to change the words "section seven" to "section six" where they occur in line 40, page 3, of the enrolled bill.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4229) to authorize the sale and disposition of surplus or unallotted lands of the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 535. An act to amend and reenact section 1 of chapter 77 of volume 27 of the United States Statutes at Large, being "An act to provide for a term of the United States circuit and district courts at Evanston, Wyo.," approved May 23, 1892.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4128) permitting the building of a dam across the Red Lake River at or near the junction of Black River with said Red Lake River, in Red Lake County, Minn.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] was called from the Hall for a moment, and he requested me to yield in his behalf thirty minutes to the gentleman from Pennslyvania [Mr. KLINE].

Mr. KLINE. Mr. Chairman, since the opening of the first session of the Fifty-ninth Congress, this House has had under discussion and consideration nuemrous questions of a local, national, and a few of an international importance. For more than a week the Philippine tariff bill was discussed from various standpoints, as a general economic policy, with a reference to our duty to the Filipinos and its effect upon local interests in the United States. The bill was passed with one amendment, by a vote of 278 for and 71 against the contemplated legisaltion. The Senate committee has reported the bill unfavorably, and the arduous work and labors of this House may, as it now seems, become a nullity, without any tangible or substantial results.

The statehood bill, bound and riveted by the Rules Committee, with a view to having it passed without amendment and under limited debate, now seems to have met its destiny and fate in the Senate, where, with the Foraker amendment, it is receiving, and will receive a sensible, proper, and statesmanlike consideration, with the result that the people of the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona will not have statehood enforced upon them, either joint or several, except by their consent. [Applause.]

The rate bill was discussed at great length in all its phases, influences, ramifications, and consequences. So extensive and persuasive, indeed, were the discussions that some of us by its diversified treatment were hypnotized with the subject, and others felt as if they had become intimidated to support the bill. The legislation contemplated by the bill, however, is just and fair, both to the transportation companies and the shipper, and to my mind and judgment was subject to only a single criticism, namely, that there was no provision in the bill granting a right of appeal or review from the decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission. By reason of this omission I hesitated to support the bill.

I am, however, much gratified in the hope that this legislative measure will be perfected in the Senate by the insertion of this healthy and much needed provision of right of review or appeal. With this amendment the bill is nigh perfect and fair to all interests.

We have had under consideration many other subjects of a private and public nature, such as the granting of pensions, allowance of claims, authorizing the bridging of rivers, legislation affecting the District of Columbia and our various and remaining Indian tribes, passage of appropriation bills, Federal control of insurance companies, consolidation of custom-houses, rules to regulate the business and deliberations of this honorable body, and discussed numerous topics which from year to year arise and must engage the time and attention of Congress.

I have become interested in a measure not political in its character, in which our national banks are concerned, and in the discussion of which I invite the attention of the House for a few minutes.

At the opening of the present session of Congress I introduced a bill amending section 29 of an act approved June 3, 1864, entitled "An act to provide a national currency secured by a pledge of United States bonds, and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof." By said bill it was contemplated to enact legislation that the total liabilities of any national banking association, of any person, or of any company, corporation, or firm for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a company or firm, the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed one-tenth part of the amount of the capital stock of such association actually paid in and its surplus fund.

Under existing law the loans of a national banking association to any person, firm, or corporation are limited to 10 per cent of its capital stock, and by the bill introduced loans of this character were intended to be limited to 10 per cent of the capital stock paid in and its surplus fund.

I am told that the bill which I fathered, and other bills on the same subject, were considered by the subcommittee on banking and currency, and its provisions received favorable approval, subject to the restriction or amendment that the loans to any person, firm, or corporation by a national bank be limited to 10 per cent of the capital stock actually paid in and 10 per cent of the surplus fund, equivalent only to the extent of the capital stock of such banking institution. In other words, a national bank with $100,000 capital and $300,000 surplus, under such a bill, amended as aforesaid, could only loan to any person, firm, or corporation the sum of $20,000, namely, $10,000 on its capital and $10,000 additional, being 10 per cent on $100,000 of its surplus fund, equivalent to the amount of the capital stock actually paid in.

For some reason unknown to me (as I have observed in the newspapers and am advised) a bill known as the "Shartel bill," introduced December 18, 1905, was substituted for or selected in preference to the bill which I introduced on December 4, 1905, the first day of the present session of Congress.

Mr. GOULDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. KLINE. Certainly.

Mr. GOULDEN. Do you know of any case in which that 10 per cent limitation has worked a hardship or has done any injury to a business or banking interest? I understand you are president of a national bank, and you ought to be able to tell us.

Mr. KLINE. I am not president of a national bank, but interested in banking. Yes; right in my city—Allentown, the queen city of the Lehigh Valley, and probably one of the most prosperous, progressive, thrifty, and beautiful inland cities of the United States—I know of instances where banks were unable to accommodate their customers by reason of the existing limitations on loans. The Allentown National Bank had a capitalization of $500,000 and a surplus of about $200,000. It increased its capitalization to $1,000,000 and now has a surplus of about $600,000. It could not accommodate the great cement interests and other numerous industries which were operating in my locality and the street-railway interests that center in that city. I know of another instance in that city. The Second National Bank, organized forty years ago, with a capitalization of $200,000—it was unable to accommodate its customers as desired. Two years ago it increased its capital stock to $300,000 and increased its surplus to $300,000.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman allow another question? Does not the gentleman from Pennsylvania think this 10 per cent limitation is in the interest of the banks?

Mr. KLINE. I do not, as I shall tell you hereafter. I believe that surplus is part of the capital and should have the same benefits that capital at present enjoys.

Mr. GOULDEN. As I understand, the gentleman thinks that national banks should be authorized to make loans to the extent of 10 per cent of both their capital and surplus actually paid in?

Mr. KLINE. My opinion is that a national bank should be permitted to discount paper of any person, firm, or corporation to the extent of 10 per cent of its capital stock and 10 per cent of the surplus, subject to the limitation which has been put upon this legislation by the Shartel bill as amended by the Committee on Banking and Currency, so that the total liabilities to any bank from any one person, firm, or corporation shall in no event exceed 20 per cent of its capital stock.

Mr. GOULDEN. One more question. It has been suggested by my friend from Maryland, Mr. SMITH. That is to any one single individual, firm, or corporation?

Mr. KLINE. To any single person, firm, or corporation; yes.

Mr. GOULDEN. That is as you understand the law should be?

Mr. KLINE. Yes, sir.

Mr. PRINCE. Will the gentleman yield to a question here? Or if the gentleman prefers to have me ask it later, I will do so.

Mr. KLINE. Ask it now, please.

Mr. PRINCE. As I understand, you said that the bill which the Banking and Currency Committee had reported favorably contained a provision that you could loan only on one-tenth of the surplus paid in.

Mr. KLINE. Capital actually paid in and surplus equivalent to capital stock. That is what I said.

Mr. PRINCE. Perhaps I misunderstood the gentleman.

Mr. KLINE. If the gentleman understood me differently, it was a mistake.

Mr. PRINCE. Now, will you be kind enough to state to the committee what you understand is the nature of the bill that has been favorably reported?

Mr. KLINE. I will come to that a little later and explain just what my opinion is upon that portion of the bill. I know the bill which has been introduced by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHARTEL] and amended by the Committee on Banking and Currency limits the total amount of liabilities to a national bank to 20 per cent of the capital stock.

Mr. PRINCE. Go ahead in your own way.

Mr. KLINE. The provisions of my bill and the original Shartel bill are identical in every respect. It is, however, immaterial whose name the bill on this subject bears. I am in favor of and will support such legislation enlarging the limitation of loans by national banks.

The national bankers' conventions of the United States for years have resolved and appealed for this character of Federal legislation, and the clearing-house associations in our metropolitan cities have favored such an amendment to our national banking laws.

Since the introduction of my bill (H. R. 448) I am in receipt of numerous letters from banking houses doing business in all parts of the United States, recommending and urging the passage of such legislation. Amongst others who have communicated with me on the subject are the following: Penn National Bank, Reading, Pa.; Merchants' National Bank, Allentown, Pa.; First National Bank, Bethlehem, Pa.; Allentown National Bank, Allentown, Pa.; Second National Bank, Allentown, Pa.; Second National Bank, Reading Pa.; Hanover National Bank, New York, N. Y.; Corn Exchange National Bank, Philadelphia, Pa.; Columbia National Bank, Pittsburg, Pa.; First National Bank of Pittsburg, Pittsburg, Pa.; Fourth National Bank, Cincinnati, Ohio; Chemical National Bank, New York, N. Y.; National Union Bank of Reading, Reading, Pa.; The Crocker-Woolworth National Bank, San Francisco, Cal. And I apprehend every Member of Congress has received similar requests from national banks, doing business in their several districts.

The Comptroller of the Currency has recommended in his last report, as well as in his previous reports that national banks be allowed to loan to any person, firm, or corporation not only 10 per cent of their capital, but also 10 per cent of their surplus.

Our national banking system is a great one, but may now be a little antiquated on a few points. It was the creation and formulation of one of the greatest minds this country has ever produced. It was made necessary and operative during the exigencies of the war period. It was successful and in aid of the great prosperity, expansion, and development which the country has been enjoying for many years. When the loan limit was originally fixed in the national banking act, approved June 3, 1864, at 10 per cent of the capital stock of the banks, few banks had any large surplus, and, as the Comptroller says, it was not expected that new banks then organized would pay any surplus with their capital.

Under existing law banks of $25,000 capitalization may be organized, and do business in villages, towns, or municipalities having a population less than 3,000. In towns with less than 6,000 people they may capitalize at $50,000; in cities or municipalities having a population of more than 6,000 and less than 50,000, national banks can not be capitalized at less than $100,000, and in cities having a population in excess of 50,000 the capitalization must be $200,000 at least.

The national banking system has during its operation become very popular, and its uses, conveniences, and benefits are in large demand in all parts of the country. They have multiplied and increased in numbers very largely since the act of 1900 authorizing the incorporation of banks with a capital of $25,000 in communities having a less population than 3,000.

As an evidence of their popularity, strength, and uses the following figures are supplied as to their number, capital stock, and amount of deposits. On or about June 30, 1905, there were in the United States, including the insular possessions, 5,668 national banks, with a capital of $791,567,231, and deposits aggregating $3,783,658,494.

The growth and popularity of national banks is further evidenced by the following statistics, indicating the number of banks, capitalization, surplus, and net earnings during and in five-year periods, from March 1, 1880:

| Date. | Number of banks. | Capital. | Surplus. | Net earnings. | Ratios, dividends to capital. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Mar. 1, 1880 | 2,046 | $454,080,090 | $117,226,501 | $21,152,784 | 3.99 |
| Mar. 1, 1885 | 2,650 | 522,859,715 | 148,771,121 | 21,601,202 | 3.91 |
| Mar. 1, 1890 | 3,294 | 615,405,545 | 204,546,434 | 35,284,539 | 4.27 |
| Mar. 1, 1895 | 3,729 | 693,971,505 | 246,552,149 | 23,397,885 | 3.64 |
| Mar. 1, 1900 | 3,587 | 604,755,505 | 253,475,808 | 40,151,038 | 4.01 |
| Mar. 1, 1903 | 4,596 | 710,281,395 | 343,713,237 | 53,059,990 | 4.43 |
| Sept. 1, 1903 | 4,805 | 735,314,217 | 362,497,812 | 55,921,540 | 4.37 |
| Jan. 29, 1906 | 5,911 | 814,987,743 | 442,590,192 | ---------- | ---------- |

The growth of national banks is also evidenced by the following statement, during periods, commencing September 30, 1892, of the loans and amounts due to depositors:

| Date. | Number of banks. | Loans. | Due to depositors. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Sept. 30, 1892 | 3,773 | $2,171,000,000 | $1,779,300,000 |
| Sept. 22, 1895 | 3,712 | 2,059,400,000 | 1,715,200,000 |
| Sept. 20, 1898 | 3,585 | 2,172,500,000 | 2,106,600,000 |
| Sept. 30, 1901 | 4,221 | 2,051,700,000 | 3,044,600,000 |
| Sept. 9, 1903 | 5,042 | 3,508,600,000 | 3,305,900,000 |
| Jan. 29, 1906 | 5,911 | 4,071,041,164 | 4,088,420,135 |

It is safe to say that the original idea of the present law, limiting loans to 10 per cent of the capital stock actually paid in, was to prevent the directors of a bank from taking all the money in it, and so as to curb them, because deposits in banks in those days were not of any importance, relatively to the capital, compared with what they are now. Since that period the magnitude of business is so much greater and the amounts to be handled so very much larger that the existing law, limiting and restricting the amount of loans, hampers and inconveniences real banking to-day. Then the business was measured and done with thousands and tens of thousands; now the large business, mercantile and industrial, interests are conducted with hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars. It is thus very apparent why the existing limitation of loans should be enlarged, as contemplated by the several bills introduced on this subject. A national bank with, say, $100,000 capital and $300,000 surplus—and there are numerous banks that have a proportionate surplus—is much hampered, and its usefulness largely destroyed by said limitation, in being permitted only to loan to an amount of 10 per cent of its capitalization, to wit, $10,000. Those opposing this class of legislation may say: "If such or these banks are hampered by this restriction on their business, let them enlarge their capitalization in accordance and in proportion with the demands of their trade." But why should that be necessary when the bank has a large surplus? Surplus is practically capital. A large surplus is an evidence of the bank's financial strength and successful continuance of business. Surplus is earned capital, and is largely in aid of the confidence of the public in the bank and its intrinsic ability to pay its obligations. Surplus is and has been treated as capital for purposes of taxation. The late revenue laws enacted during the Spanish war decided this point, when it was expressly stated that for the purposes of taxation, in computing capital, surplus must be included.

In some States trust companies and banking institutions, incorporated under State laws, are required to pay a tax, not only on the capital, but on the surplus and undivided profits as well; and in other States (amongst others Pennsylvania) the tax is based upon the market value of the stock, which is enhanced and usually fixed by the par value of the stock, its surplus and undivided profits. If surplus shall bear the burdens of taxation, it should certainly also, on the contrary, be allowed to enjoy some of the advantages which are by law granted and accorded to capital. May I ask, Which bank has the greater strength, credit, and confidence in the community, the one capitalized at $500,000, with a surplus of $1,000,000, or the one with a capitalization of $1,500,000, without a surplus? It goes without saying, the former with a large surplus.

The exigencies and opportunities of business at this time are such that the restriction of the present law is onerous; and, as I have indicated, frequently harmful to the bank's best interests. It is a restriction which in the past has not always been observed. The Comptroller of the Currency says that a very large number of excess loans have been reported, but that there is no way of punishing a bank which so offends except by taking away its charter. Manifestly this would be a punishment out of all proportion to the offense, and it is no wonder the Comptroller considers its application unadvisable.

At this point I desire to use the language and sentiment of Mr. F. H. Skelding, president of the First National Bank of Pittsburg, with a capital of $1,000,000 and a surplus of $2,400,000, in a communication addressed to me on this subject, and in which he granted me the liberty to make use of his letter in connection with the proposed legislation as my judgment might dictate. He says:

> Bank officers should be the best judges of the amount of credit to extend to their customers, and a strong bank with a large surplus should not be hampered in its operations regarding the amount of money which it may lend to a single borrower by the rule which applies to banks possessing no surplus whatever.
>
> It is far better to have a law which is not onerous, and which can and should be enforced, than the present one, which is constantly being broken or ignored, the punishment for which is so out of proportion to the transgression that the authorities do not attempt to enforce it.

The president of the Fourth National Bank of Cincinnati, Ohio, says:

> By reason of changes in all lines of business a change (referring to limitation of loans) is almost imperative.

It would seem, as the Comptroller said in substance, if it is safe for a bank with $200,000 capital and no surplus to loan $20,000, it should be equally safe for one with $75,000 capital and $125,000 surplus to loan an equal amount of $20,000.

State banks, savings institutions, trust companies, and insurance companies, with their banking methods, have in late years become potent, progressive, and popular rivals or competitors of national banks. The expansion and enlargement of the business of State banks and trust companies has been marvelous, and has increased to unexpected and immense proportions. Their business and number has to a great extent overlapped the business and number of national banks in the United States, as is shown by the following figures:

On or about June 30, 1905, there were in the United States 14,242 State banks and trust companies, with a capitalization of $748,263,149, and deposits aggregating $8,002,662,822.

Mr. GOULDEN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to know, as the gentleman is so very familiar with this subject, whether or not the laws governing and regulating State banks and trust companies are inadequate, and whether or not they have entirely too much authority in the financial world?

Mr. KLINE. To that interrogatory or question, I reply that that is not a matter for Federal legislation. The legislatures of the several States should legislate concerning that subject; and if I was a member of a State legislature and a question of a similar character were to come up, I would put the same limitation upon the rights and powers of trust companies, State banks, and savings institutions, upon this subject, that I am asking for to-day, so far as national banks are concerned.

Mr. GOULDEN. Thank you. Mr. Chairman, I asked the gentleman this question because I wanted his opinion, and because it coincides with mine and is sound.

Mr. KLINE. The following comparatively indicates the deposits of all banks, State and national, at the periods indicated:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1890. | |
| National banks | $1,521,745,665 |
| Savings banks | 1,524,844,506 |
| State banks | 553,054,584 |
| Loan and trust companies | 336,456,492 |
| Private banks | 99,521,667 |
| 1895. | |
| National banks | $1,736,022,007 |
| Savings banks | 1,810,597,023 |
| State banks | 712,410,423 |
| Loan and trust companies | 546,652,657 |
| Private banks | 81,824,932 |
| 1900. | |
| National banks | $2,458,092,758 |
| Savings banks | 2,449,547,885 |
| State banks | 1,266,735,282 |
| Loan and trust companies | 1,028,232,407 |
| Private banks | 96,206,049 |
| 1903. | |
| National banks | $3,200,993,509 |
| Savings banks | 2,935,204,845 |
| State banks | 1,814,570,163 |
| Loan and trust companies | 1,589,398,796 |
| Private banks | 133,217,990 |
| June 30, 1905. | |
| National banks | $3,783,658,494 |
| All State banks, including trust companies | 8,002,662,822 |

State banks and trust companies have numerous advantages and opportunities not possessed by national banks. Trust companies are enabled to engage in almost every class of business, namely, the administration of trust estates; they may become registrars of stock, trustees in corporate mortgages, sureties in nearly all cases where bail is required under State laws; they may become guardians, trustees, executors, and administrators, may make loans on judgments, mortgages, and other securities, and may engage in innumerable other kinds of business which national banks are not permitted to transact; they may make loans unlimited in amount, and are only limited in loans made to the directors or officers of the institution, and therefore, by reason of their extensive powers and facilities, have better opportunities for making profit for the stockholders and accommodating their customers.

The only advantages that national banks now have not possessed by State institutions are that they are enabled to secure circulation and Government deposits upon depositing Government bonds, under the restrictions, limitations, and rules enforcible by the national banking laws. The modes of examination and supervision governing State banks and national banks are almost identical, except that the former make their reports to and are examined by the banking department of the State, and the latter make their reports to and are examined by and through the Comptroller of the Currency. By reason of the superior advantages and opportunities possessed by State banks and trust companies, as heretofore indicated, a large number of national banks have wound up their business and had themselves incorporated under State laws. On January 29, 1906, 5,911 national banks were in operation. In all, 8,050 banks were organized. Of this number, 443 have become insolvent and 1,696 have gone into liquidation.

Inasmuch as there is no limitation of loans made by State institutions, except loans made to its directors and officers, the limitations of loans by national banks should be enlarged, as provided by the legislation proposed, and by the enlargement of this power national banks would have similar opportunities to make loans as those now possessed by banking institutions incorporated under State laws.

It has been suggested, however, by some that the authority to loan to the extent of 10 per cent on the surplus fund should be limited to so much of the surplus fund, equivalent to the amount of the capital stock actually paid in, so that the total liabilities shall in no event exceed 20 per cent of the capital stock. This may be a wise limitation, and the reason suggested for this restriction is that national banks might incorporate with a small capital and create a large surplus fund, much larger than the capital stock, whereby the security of the depositors and creditors of the bank would be impaired, and the interests of that class of people might become jeopardized.

If the legislation contemplated should be enacted into law, national banks should also be compelled strictly to comply with the law. Under existing law, banks making loans beyond the 10 per cent limitation can only be disciplined through the Comptroller of the Currency, through the institution of a suit, or proceedings for the forfeiture of the charter. For a violation of the provisions of the national-banking act on this subject there is now no penalty but death to the corporation if the Comptroller chooses to enforce the remedy. He is not the original violator of the law. It is the board of directors and officers of the bank that violate the law when they transcend their authority and not the Comptroller of the Currency, and an amendment to this contemplated legislation, or existing law, making the directors and officers of the bank offending guilty of a misdemeanor, triable in the district court of the United States and punishable by fine or some other proper penalty, would be a wise provision and a proper safeguard for the protection of both the stockholders and depositors of the institution.

I am heartily in favor of the proposed legislation. Without exception, the national banks of the country favor it. This limitation of loans by national banks should be enlarged in order that they may accommodate their customers. They should have privileges similar to those now possessed by savings banks and trust companies, so that they may no longer be hampered by existing restrictions, and that they may be enabled to compete for business on an equal basis with financial institutions incorporated under State laws. Their surplus is as sacred as their capital stock, and the limitations now existing should be removed and enlarged, as contemplated by the several bills introduced on this subject.

I ask permission that Abstract of Reports of Condition of National Banks, No. 47, made and prepared by the Comptroller of the Currency and issued as of February 24, 1906, be inserted in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[Abstract of reports of condition of national banks—No. 47.]

Abstract of reports of condition of national banks in the United States on March 14, May 29, August 25, November 9, 1905, and January 29, 1906.

| | Mar. 14, 1905—5,587 banks. | May 29, 1905—5,668 banks. | Aug. 25, 1905—5,757 banks. | Nov. 9, 1905—5,833 banks. | Jan. 29, 1906—5,911 banks. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| RESOURCES. | | | | | |
| Loans and discounts | $3,851,858,472.90 | $3,899,170,328.32 | $3,998,509,152.62 | $4,016,735,497.99 | $4,071,041,164.84 |
| Overdrafts | 36,375,221.89 | 30,367,466.35 | 29,905,633.72 | 54,473,855.67 | 47,256,537.93 |
| U. S. bonds to secure circulation | 440,80[illegible],640.00 | 457,502,540.00 | 477,592,630.00 | 493,679,340.00 | 505,723,560.00 |
| U. S. bonds to secure U. S. deposits | 95,855,800.00 | 74,289,450.00 | 61,847,570.00 | 57,559,800.00 | 57,825,380.00 |
| Other bonds to secure U. S. deposits | 4,349,410.00 | 7,526,101.20 | 6,308,131.28 | 7,623,416.01 | 7,172,769.81 |
| U. S. bonds on hand | 17,558,850.00 | 16,108,500.00 | 12,041,410.00 | 10,536,940.00 | 9,352,380.00 |
| Premiums on U. S. bonds | 15,030,722.49 | 14,490,434.62 | 14,375,131.51 | 13,726,692.03 | 12,913,510.59 |
| Bonds, securities, etc | 642,778,943.25 | 669,545,598.84 | 667,177,767.76 | 657,943,673.32 | 652,443,986.45 |
| Banking house, furniture, and fixtures | 128,144,430.56 | 130,006,135.39 | 132,987,384.56 | 136,006,309.64 | 138,564,972.90 |
| Other real estate owned | 20,519,501.27 | 20,154,800.77 | 19,926,274.48 | 20,487,751.57 | 20,661,526.19 |
| Due from national banks | 329,177,405.92 | 332,143,552.94 | 320,743,427.49 | 348,417,657.89 | 342,446,563.53 |
| Due from State banks and bankers, etc | 123,445,301.66 | 112,388,835.07 | 113,466,291.74 | 124,998,489.03 | 123,398,688.23 |
| Due from approved reserve agents | 594,094,119.63 | 562,495,160.15 | 605,464,479.80 | 569,121,818.42 | 598,697,066.12 |
| Checks and other cash items | 25,260,772.64 | 28,111,820.50 | 23,031,600.43 | 28,260,936.52 | 30,035,519.81 |
| Exchanges for clearing house | 287,122,185.75 | 267,856,167.53 | 265,080,927.79 | 340,428,162.01 | 421,600,088.30 |
| Bills of other national banks | 27,515,271.00 | 28,824,161.00 | 29,182,653.00 | 31,183,857.00 | 30,595,424.00 |
| Fractional currency, nickels, and cents | 1,854,387.26 | 1,798,508.32 | 1,859,804.33 | 1,817,487.94 | 2,102,096.56 |
| Specie | 483,249,060.39 | 479,635,070.78 | 495,479,452.93 | 460,934,467.89 | 492,568,374.74 |
| Legal-tender notes | 157,904,573.00 | 169,629,979.00 | 170,073,847.00 | 161,157,612.00 | 175,734,915.00 |
| Five-per-cent redemption fund | 21,460,689.87 | 22,208,658.63 | 23,280,126.70 | 24,047,836.69 | 24,721,911.93 |
| Due from Treasurer of United States | 3,771,926.68 | 3,552,605.27 | 4,017,141.50 | 3,927,131.93 | 4,069,606.59 |
| Total | 7,308,127,686.16 | 7,327,805,874.68 | 7,472,350,878.64 | 7,563,155,823.55 | 7,769,826,583.52 |
| LIABILITIES. | | | | | |
| Capital stock paid in | 782,487,884.67 | 791,567,231.32 | 799,870,229.00 | 808,328,658.00 | 814,987,743.00 |
| Surplus fund | 408,888,534.08 | 413,436,145.71 | 417,757,591.42 | 420,785,055.00 | 442,590,192.69 |
| Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes | 194,667,181.00 | 201,855,091.02 | 202,536,366.23 | 212,371,042.49 | 193,779,046.37 |
| National-bank notes outstanding | 430,955,178.50 | 445,455,717.50 | 468,979,788.50 | 485,521,670.50 | 498,238,538.00 |

Abstract of reports of condition of national banks in the United States on March 14, May 29, August 25, November 9, 1905, and January 29, 1906—Continued.

| | Mar. 14, 1905—5,587 banks. | May 29, 1905—5,668 banks. | Aug. 25, 1905—5,757 banks. | Nov. 9, 1905—5,833 banks. | Jan. 29, 1906—5,912 banks. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| LIABILITIES—continued. | | | | | |
| State-bank notes outstanding | $40,344.50 | $30,973.50 | $30,972.50 | $30,972.50 | $30,973.50 |
| Due to other national banks | 812,378,655.55 | 790,421,572.98 | 832,078,395.74 | 777,165,729.63 | 825,732,807.01 |
| Due to State banks and bankers | 318,788,438.81 | 325,349,412.83 | 354,253,517.22 | 348,631,097.97 | 364,221,046.34 |
| Due to trust companies and savings banks | 386,543,992.20 | 393,825,032.79 | 404,183,168.12 | 339,112,588.75 | 368,223,878.59 |
| Due to approved reserve agents | 37,916,423.26 | 37,572,634.34 | 34,362,500.71 | 39,127,292.53 | 37,316,988.52 |
| Dividends unpaid | 915,406.78 | 1,328,776.08 | 993,490.14 | 1,770,894.60 | 1,861,847.86 |
| Individual deposits | 3,777,474,006.12 | 3,783,658,494.42 | 3,820,681,713.23 | 3,989,522,834.51 | 4,088,420,135.60 |
| U. S. deposits | 84,705,235.83 | 65,570,520.69 | 52,351,688.22 | 51,600,587.23 | 52,207,533.07 |
| Deposits of U. S. disbursing officers | 8,517,157.53 | 9,727,823.57 | 9,738,611.35 | 9,685,067.89 | 9,809,358.44 |
| Bonds borrowed | 34,819,906.69 | 34,886,467.43 | 38,485,468.75 | 36,590,097.50 | 37,396,386.12 |
| Notes and bills rediscounted | 6,092,005.30 | 5,590,563.75 | 6,911,508.71 | 7,369,244.45 | 5,103,174.63 |
| Bills payable | 16,911,531.59 | 21,573,416.52 | 23,181,411.02 | 28,497,673.59 | 21,514,855.84 |
| Reserved for taxes | | | 2,360,697.34 | 2,684,200.47 | 1,382,784.47 |
| Liabilities other than those above | 6,025,803.75 | 5,956,000.23 | 3,593,760.44 | 4,361,115.94 | 7,069,496.47 |
| Total | 7,308,127,686.16 | 7,327,805,874.68 | 7,472,350,878.64 | 7,563,155,823.55 | 7,769,826,583.52 |

Number of national banks organized, insolvent, in voluntary liquidation, and in operation on January 29, 1906.

| States. | Organized. | Insolvent. | In liquidation. | In operation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Maine | 107 | | 25 | 82 |
| New Hampshire | 68 | 4 | 8 | 56 |
| Vermont | 73 | 7 | 16 | 50 |
| Massachusetts | 305 | 11 | 83 | 211 |
| Rhode Island | 65 | | 40 | 25 |
| Connecticut | 104 | 4 | 21 | 79 |
| Total, New England States | 722 | 26 | 193 | 503 |
| New York | 581 | 44 | 155 | 382 |
| New Jersey | 165 | 7 | 16 | 142 |
| Pennsylvania | 804 | 26 | 95 | 683 |
| Delaware | 24 | | | 24 |
| Maryland | 100 | 1 | 9 | 90 |
| District of Columbia | 22 | 3 | 6 | 13 |
| Total, Eastern States | 1,696 | 81 | 281 | 1,334 |
| Virginia | 109 | 6 | 16 | 87 |
| West Virginia | 93 | | 13 | 80 |
| North Carolina | 63 | 4 | 9 | 50 |
| South Carolina | 33 | 1 | 7 | 25 |
| Georgia | 93 | 6 | 14 | 73 |
| Florida | 47 | 8 | 4 | 35 |
| Alabama | 96 | 7 | 15 | 74 |
| Mississippi | 32 | 2 | 6 | 24 |
| Louisiana | 51 | 6 | 10 | 35 |
| Texas | 541 | 28 | 96 | 457 |
| Arkansas | 39 | 4 | 5 | 30 |
| Kentucky | 170 | 5 | 37 | 128 |
| Tennessee | 108 | 7 | 31 | 70 |
| Total, Southern States | 1,515 | 84 | 263 | 1,168 |
| Ohio | 523 | 20 | 154 | 349 |
| Indiana | 291 | 14 | 76 | 201 |
| Illinois | 470 | 20 | 95 | 355 |
| Michigan | 190 | 14 | 88 | 88 |
| Wisconsin | 171 | 5 | 49 | 117 |
| Minnesota | 284 | 8 | 41 | 235 |
| Iowa | 378 | 13 | 79 | 286 |
| Missouri | 180 | 11 | 62 | 107 |
| Total, Middle States | 2,487 | 105 | 644 | 1,738 |
| North Dakota | 128 | 13 | 9 | 106 |
| South Dakota | 104 | 9 | 20 | 75 |
| Nebraska | 241 | 20 | 56 | 165 |
| Kansas | 300 | 35 | 90 | 175 |
| Montana | 54 | 10 | 14 | 30 |
| Wyoming | 25 | 2 | 3 | 20 |
| Colorado | 114 | 9 | 24 | 81 |
| New Mexico | 33 | 4 | 6 | 23 |
| Oklahoma | 118 | 6 | 11 | 101 |
| Indian Territory | 146 | 1 | 5 | 140 |
| Total, Western States | 1,263 | 109 | 238 | 916 |
| Washington | 93 | 23 | 34 | 36 |
| Oregon | 63 | 6 | 12 | 45 |
| California | 125 | 6 | 15 | 104 |
| Idaho | 35 | 1 | 6 | 28 |
| Utah | 24 | 1 | 6 | 17 |
| Nevada | 6 | 1 | 1 | 4 |
| Arizona | 16 | | 3 | 13 |
| Alaska | 2 | | | 2 |
| Total, Pacific States | 364 | 38 | 77 | 249 |
| Hawaii | 2 | | | 2 |
| Porto Rico | 1 | | | 1 |
| Total, island possessions | 3 | | | 3 |
| Total, United States | 8,050 | 443 | 1,696 | 5,911 |

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. BARNES, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On March 5, 1906:

H. R. 13308. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Arkansas River at Pine Bluff; and

H. R. 13365. An act to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Kensington and Eastern Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Calumet River," approved February 7, 1905.

On March 6, 1906:

H. R. 297. An act to authorize the construction of dams and power stations on the Tennessee River at Muscle Shoals, Alabama; and

H. R. 10067. An act authorizing the disposition of surplus and allotted lands on the Yakima Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, which can be irrigated under the act of Congress approved June 17, 1902, known as the "reclamation act," and for other purposes.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield an hour to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BRANTLEY].

Mr. BRANTLEY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to discuss some of the reasons assigned for the passage of the bill (H. R. 5281) to remove discriminations against American sailing vessels in the coasting trade and to urge upon the serious attention of the House some of the many objections against its passage. It presents no new question, because for the past twenty-five or thirty years, or longer, this same bill, or in substance the same, has been regularly presented in each Congress and has as regularly met a just and righteous defeat. There is not very much that is new that can be said either for or against it, for the argument has been thrashed out time and again. The continuous and persistent refusal of Congress, however, for all these years to enact it into law furnishes very strong presumptive evidence in support of the claim now made that it is unwise, unjust, unfair, and productive only of harm, if sanctioned by the Congress.

DISCRIMINATIONS.

That occasional instances of unfairness and of discriminations have sometimes occurred in the administration of some of the State laws on pilotage I will not undertake to deny. The charge has been made that such discriminations have been practiced, and as I know nothing of the facts upon which any specific charge is made I can not discuss them. I submit, however, that such occasional discriminations, if they do occur, furnish no argument in favor of the passage of this bill. They are not germane to the real question Congress has to determine before it can pass this bill. I maintain, in the first place, that the pilotage laws of the several States, as a rule, are fair and just, and if they are violated or improperly executed there is a complete remedy within the State. Some specific complaint has been made as to pilotage charges at Gulfport, Miss., and I see in the newspapers that this week a committee was appointed by the Mississippi legislature to investigate these charges. If overcharges or discriminations exist there, the Mississippi legislature has full power to provide a remedy, and I have no doubt will do so.

I maintain, in the second place, that if any State should undertake to enact or enforce any pilotage law discriminating against the vessels of other States in favor of its own vessels engaged in interstate commerce, such law would be void and would be so held by all the courts of the country. It is a fundamental rule, long since declared by the Supreme Court of the United States, that one State can not discriminate against another State in its own favor in matters of commerce. And more than this, the Congress of the United States, in 1866, passed a law on this very subject, and the same is now found in section 4237 of the Revised Statutes, as follows:

No regulations or provisions shall be adopted by any State which shall make any discrimination in the rate of pilotage, or half pilotage, between vessels sailing between the ports of different States, or any discrimination against vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, or against national vessels of the United States; and all existing regulations or provisions making any such discriminations are annulled and abrogated.

No State can violate this law or enact laws of its own in conflict therewith. It follows, therefore, that if any discriminations are or should be practiced by any State in the matter of its pilotage laws or their enforcement the remedy is ample and complete in the courts of that State and the courts of the United States. It also follows that such discriminations, if they now or shall hereafter exist, furnish no justification or excuse for the passage of the pending bill. Because crimes of all sorts are committed in a State furnishes no argument in favor of taking away from that State all power to punish crimes.

The majority of the committee, in their report favoring the bill, cite as an argument in favor of its passage a law of the State of South Carolina which, it is alleged, discriminates in favor of South Carolina vessels. It is not an open question that a law making such discrimination is unconstitutional. The old pilotage law of Georgia contained such a discrimination, and, upon appeal being made to the courts, the supreme court of Georgia declared it unconstitutional. The case came to the Supreme Court of the United States, and is reported in 118 United States, page 90; and this court likewise held the discriminating law unconstitutional and void. A later case is reported in 195 United States, 332. The Texas pilotage laws discriminated in favor of Texas ships. The courts of Texas held the discriminating clauses in the law to be void, and the Supreme Court concurred in this view. The opinion of the court in this case is quoted from by the majority of the committee in a way to indicate a suggestion from the court that Congress should legislate on this subject. The court expressly refused to make any such suggestion. The court disposed of the argument that the Texas pilotage laws were in violation of the fourteenth amendment and in violation of the antitrust laws, and said there could be no unlawful monopoly in any case where the chosen officers of a State performed a duty imposed upon them by law, and that all such argument was merely argument against national or State regulation of pilots. The court then said:

When the propositions just referred to are considered in their ultimate aspect, they amount simply to the contention, not that the Texas laws are void for want of power, but that they are unwise. If an analysis of these laws justified such a conclusion—which we do not at all imply is the case—the remedy is in Congress, in whom the ultimate authority on the subject is vested, and can not be judicially afforded by denying the power of the State to exercise its authority over a subject concerning which it has plenary power until Congress has seen fit to act in the premises.

The real question to be here considered is whether this bill, under the guise of removing discriminations, does not, in truth and in fact, impose a discrimination far more serious in its effect and consequences than the alleged discriminations sought to be removed. That this is its purpose and will be its effect, is clearly shown by its slightest consideration.

THE PRESENT LAW.

The First Congress, that assembled in 1789, enacted what is now known as section 4235 of the Revised Statutes, to wit:

Until further provision is made by Congress, all pilots in the bays, inlets, rivers, harbors, and ports of the United States shall continue to be regulated in conformity with the existing laws of the States respectively wherein such pilots may be, or with such laws as the States may enact for the purpose.

From the time of the first Congress until the time of the Fifty-ninth Congress, now in session, this has been the law. In the very beginning of our Government, in the wisdom of its founders, it was deemed wise and best, owing to the varying conditions existing in the different States and at the different ports of the country, to leave each State free to enact such pilotage laws as it might deem best suited to build up and maintain and protect its own commerce. It was realized that if Congress undertook to provide a uniform pilotage system for all the States, such a system, while it might be wise and helpful to one State, would be most injurious to another, and that under the operation of a uniform rule the ports of one State would flourish while the ports of another would suffer, and that in this way the operation of a uniform rule would result in Congress directly discriminating in favor of one State as against another, contrary to the fundamental principle upon which the Government was founded.

The wisdom of the policy inaugurated by the fathers of this country has been upheld and sustained time and again by the Supreme Court of the United States, and has further been sustained by every Congress which has met since the Government was founded in the steadfast refusal of each succeeding Congress to change it.

The Supreme Court, in the case of Cooley v. Port Wardens (12 Howard, 399), said:

The act of 1789 contains a clear and authoritative declaration by the first Congress that the nature of this subject (pilotage) is such that until Congress shall find it necessary to exert its power it should be left to the legislatures of the States; that it is local and not national; that it is likely to be best provided for not by one system or plan of regulations, but by as many as the legislative discretion of the several States shall deem applicable to the local peculiarities of the ports within their limits.

Under this policy the various States have adopted and maintained such systems of pilotage as to them have appeared best to meet their needs. Some of the States, and perhaps the most of them, have, in the course of time, found themselves able to maintain a pilotage system without requiring compulsory fees to be paid by coastwise vessels. Many of them have found that in the development of their foreign trade they were able to maintain their pilotage system by compulsory pilotage fees only from all foreign vessels. Some of them, I believe, perhaps a very few, have abolished compulsory pilotage upon all vessels. The important fact to bear in mind, however, is that each State has enacted such laws as it thought best suited to its interest. Each State has been guided by its own judgment as to what was best for the development and maintenance and protection of its commerce. We now have presented the proposition that this free choice of policy so long exercised by all the States shall be denied to such of the States as have not seen proper or have not been able to follow the policy adopted by other States.

This bill can not affect such States as have already abolished, of their own accord, compulsory pilotage upon coastwise sailing vessels. It is aimed solely at those States that have not abolished such compulsory pilotage. It is, therefore, a discrimination of the rankest sort and of the most fundamental character, for it is a discrimination against sovereign States. It compels certain States to do that which other States have voluntarily done. It denies to certain States the free choice of policy that the other States have enjoyed. It requires by compulsion certain States to do away with compulsory pilotage on coastwise sailing vessels, and it does this utterly without inquiry into and without regard to the question as to whether or not these States so discriminated against would be able thereafter to maintain a pilotage system at all.

Mr. GOULDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman from Georgia whether it is not the purpose of those States for which he is now speaking to abolish as rapidly as possible the compulsory pilotage system now there?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Undoubtedly they will do it just as rapidly as they can and maintain and protect their commerce.

Mr. GOULDEN. The gentleman is aware that Wilmington Harbor, Delaware, has been released from compulsory pilotage. And that is the purpose in all the States for which the gentleman is speaking, in regard to the compulsory pilotage system.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Undoubtedly it is the purpose, as it is to the real interest of every State, to do away with compulsory pilotage and to lighten and lift every burden upon its commerce just as quickly as it can do so consistently with the safety and protection of that commerce. If the States against which this bill is aimed, or any of them, have not succeeded in building up sufficient foreign trade to maintain a system of pilotage, it necessarily follows that the system or systems now existing within them will be abolished or become ineffective—if this bill passes—with no means of providing another system by any method heretofore or now known of maintaining a pilotage system. The bill, therefore, whatever may be the purpose or motive behind it, if enacted into law, will impose a most serious and unjust discrimination against certain States of the Union.

STEAMERS.

In 1871 Congress enacted quite a lengthy law in reference to inspection of steamboats, and included within it a provision relieving vessels propelled by steam and engaged in the coasting trade from the operation of the compulsory pilotage laws of the States. From that day until this the contention has been made that sailing vessels engaged in the coasting trade are discriminated against in favor of steamers, and the purpose of this bill, as of all similar bills on the subject, has been ostensibly to remove this alleged discrimination. It has never seemed to occur to the advocates of this bill that the just and proper remedy for the alleged discrimination about which they complain would be to repeal the act of 1871, so as to place steamers and sailing vessels upon the same footing as to pilotage. This method of removing the alleged discrimination would be fair to all the States and to all the interests involved. It would leave each State free to impose such pilotage fees as it thought wise, and would divide the burden of maintaining a pilotage system between the steamers and the sailing vessels, and would, no doubt, result in the diminution of pilotage fees generally. This method of removing the alleged discrimination, however, is not popular with the advocates of the proposed bill, and for the reason that what the advocates of the bill really desire is not the removal of a discrimination, but the saving of pilotage fees.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman allow me an interruption?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. GOULDEN. Is not the gentleman aware that the sailing vessel is an entirely different proposition from the steam vessel; that sailing vessels make few trips yearly to the various ports, and therefore the masters are not familiar with these ports, whereas the steamships are usually regular visitors, and they have aboard of them mates and captains who thoroughly understand the channels? Therefore you can exempt steam vessels where you can not exempt sailing vessels?

Mr. BRANTLEY. I will say to the gentleman that I live in a seaport and have some little familiarity with shipping, and that identical proposition I propose to discuss in my remarks. Certain vessel owners, in order to increase their profits, are willing to take the chance of losing property and imperiling life by doing away with pilots everywhere. They boldly declare before the committee that they do not need them. Only certain vessel owners, however, take this position, and as against their view there appears in the hearings of the committee a multitude of protests from masters of vessels, underwriters, commercial organizations, labor organizations, health officials, and various bodies and persons, all connected with the commercial world, protesting against the passage of this bill.

I can not undertake to say what the purpose of Congress was in relieving steam vessels from the operation of State compulsory pilotage. It may have been to encourage the steamboat industry, or it may have been for some other purpose. The purpose is not revealed in the debate on the act of 1871. The fact that the very lengthy bill at that time enacted contained a provision relieving steam vessels from compulsory pilotage does not appear to have been referred to at all in the debate. Attention does not seem to have been directed to it, so that we are in ignorance as to the purpose that was in the mind of the Congress at the time.

All men know, however, that sailing vessels stand in much greater need of pilots than do steam vessels. Steamers engaged in the coasting trade, as a rule, make regular trips at close intervals from port to port, and their masters become familiar with the entrance into these ports. The speed and direction of a steamer is always under control and it can feel its way cautiously through an unknown channel, while the sailing vessel visits the ports less frequently and is largely at the mercy of the wind and the waves and can not feel its way. But, more than all this, there is no real competition between a sailing vessel and a steamer in the matter of freights. Where certainty as to the time of delivery and promptness as to delivery are required, the steamer is and always will be given the choice, regardless of what the rate of freight may be, but with all freight where promptness of delivery and certainty as to time are not required it is impossible for a steamer to compete with a sailing vessel in the matter of freight charges. The sailing vessel has no fuel to buy or to carry. The space that would be devoted to fuel and to machinery is carrying space. No engineers and firemen are required, and the operating expenses of the sailing vessel are far less than those of the steamer. When people are in a hurry to have their goods delivered the sailing vessel has never and never will be able to compete with the steamer, and the situation in this respect would not be changed in any particular by the abolishment of all pilotage laws in the United States.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman permit a statement right here?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. GOULDEN. The sailing vessels not only require this pilotage system for their own protection, but they require it for the protection of all craft on the river. They are a danger and a menace to steam vessels and all others, because they are not able to go directly in and out of your channels. I would ask the gentleman, living, as he does, at a seaport, if that is not true?

Mr. BRANTLEY. That is true; and I am glad the gentleman made the statement.

PETITIONS FROM SHIPPERS.

It is rather an interesting fact that quite a number of shippers of lumber and other products in some of the States to be affected by the pending bill have telegraphed and written, as appears in the report of the committee favoring the bill, urging that this proposed legislation be enacted. Exactly how it is to benefit them will not appear if consideration is given to the testimony of Mr. Pendleton, a sailing-vessel owner and the chief advocate of the bill. I find on page 57 of the report of the committee his statements as to the earnings of certain vessels. He admits that the low earnings of these vessels is exceptional. He reports the case of a vessel loaded at Norfolk that only netted the owners $90.67 on the voyage. He reports the case of another vessel out of which the owners only received net $312 for the voyage. He reports the case of another vessel, loaded at Charleston, where the owners only received $116.32 as the net earnings of the voyage. His plea is that these vessels ought to earn more money, and that but for compulsory pilotage they would have earned, in addition to the amounts above quoted, in the case of one vessel, $270.40; in the case of another vessel, $173.22, and in the case of the other vessel $179. His purpose in urging the passage of the pending bill is to save pilotage fees to the vessels and thereby increase their earnings. The question naturally arises, If the vessels are to be the beneficiaries of the saving of pilotage fees, how are the shippers to be benefited? He makes no plea for shippers, but pleads always and all the time for vessel owners. The purpose of this bill is not to help shippers. Its purpose is revealed in its title. It is to remove discriminations, not against shippers, but against sailing vessels.

Mr. GOULDEN. Before leaving that, I would like to ask the gentleman now, inasmuch as he is quoting from a large shipowner, whether he has a full list of all of his sailing vessels, and thus is able to strike an average of profit upon each one of them. He has simply given a few of them, as I understand it, and has not given the total list of vessels. He may have made a large profit on many of those vessels, and there should be a just average struck, so that we might know whether or not that trade is a paying one to the owner of the ship.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I have not the full list; but I stated that Mr. Pendleton admitted that the figures given by him were exceptionally low earnings as to the particular vessels. As a matter of fact, his business is profitable, evidenced by the fact of his statement that he is the owner of 100 of these vessels, and it must be evident that he does not own them because they are unprofitable, but because they are profitable.

Mr. GOULDEN. That is what I desired to do—to bring out that point.

Mr. BRANTLEY. There is a more important feature, however, in connection with the shippers that deserves consideration, and that is if the shippers in any State believe the pilotage laws of their State are onerous or burdensome upon commerce the State has full power to grant relief, and they should appeal to the State legislature and not to the Congress. The matter is one that has been within the power of the States to control ever since the Government was founded.

I do not speak against a revision of the pilotage laws in my State or in any other State. I do protest, however, against taking all power in the matter from the States and transferring it to the National Congress. The folly of stripping the States of power in the matter was forcibly stated in a speech delivered upon this floor in the Fifty-fourth Congress by the late Amos J. Cummings, then and always a gallant and eloquent defender not only of the pilots, but of the right of the States to regulate and maintain their own pilotage systems. He called attention to the fact that after over fifty years of compulsory pilotage the State of New York, in 1845, repealed all of its pilotage laws, and for eight years any person desiring to do so could lawfully act as a pilot; that at the expiration of these eight years the ship New Era appeared off the New Jersey coast with a load of immigrants from Antwerp, and that the captain, although hailed by a pilot, refused to take one. A tempest arose that night, and before daylight the ship was a total wreck. Hundreds of lives were lost. Four hundred and eight bodies drifted ashore and were buried in a huge grave on the site of what is now Asbury Park. Following this disaster the State of New York reenacted its pilotage laws.

So any State, under the law as it now stands, may experiment as much as it pleases with its pilotage laws. It may abolish them entirely, but if it finds as a result of that experiment that its commerce has declined, that lives have been lost and property has been destroyed, it will reenact them, so as to protect life and property and commerce. If this bill becomes a law, however, the Southern States, or the most of them, will find their pilotage laws repealed for them, and no matter how great the necessity hereafter, they will be unable to reestablish them or to maintain a pilotage system of any degree of efficiency, for the reason that they have not sufficient foreign shipping with which to maintain them. There is no reason, therefore, why the people in any of these States should ask Congress to tie the hands of their State and make its legislature helpless to protect them in the future, no matter what conditions may arise.

Mr. SHERLEY. In that connection I would like to ask the gentleman if he has the various pilotage laws of the Southern States, and if he will put them into the RECORD in connection with his speech?

Mr. BRANTLEY. I will put into the RECORD the pilotage laws of my State, and I want to discuss those. I have not the pilotage laws of the various States.

Mr. SHERLEY. The reason I am asking the gentleman is that I have had some difficulty, without original examination of the different State laws, to get at their exact provisions, and I thought if he had them it would be of service to the House to put them in the RECORD.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I am sorry I have not got them, but I will put in the laws of my State.

Every State desires to build up its commerce. Every seaport desires to increase the number of ships visiting it. In order to build up commerce and to bring more ships it is necessary to make the burdens on commerce as light as possible. Every State knows this and every seaport knows it. In a sense each State is a competitor of all other States and each port is, in a sense, a competitor of all other ports. Both the States and the ports have every inducement to make pilotage charges and all other port charges as just and as reasonable and as low as they can be made with prudence and safety. It is perfect folly to say that in the State of Georgia 20 pilots in Savannah, 15 pilots in Brunswick, and a few other pilots at Darien and St. Marys can control and dominate the legislature of Georgia and prevent a reduction of pilotage charges, if the charges ought to be reduced or prevent a revision of the pilotage laws of the State if they ought to be revised. The people of Georgia know far better than does this Congress what regulations are necessary and best to build up their commerce and to make their ports flourish and grow. They not only know better what is best for them, but they have a local pride and a local interest that enables them to far more justly and energetically care for their commerce than Congress would or could possibly do. We have the power now in Georgia, in so far as our commerce may be affected by pilotage laws, to regulate and change these laws as our own good judgment may deem best. We have the power to remedy all evils and correct all wrongs and remove all discriminations that may be found to exist, and it seems a pitiful confession of weakness and incapacity for our people to come to Congress in this matter and, pleading our incompetency, ask that our hands be tied and that Congress enact our local legislation for us.

THE GEORGIA LAWS.

I can not discuss the various provisions of the different State pilotage laws, because I am not familiar with them, but I have before me the Georgia law on the subject and I do not think it amiss to call attention to it or, at least, to some of the more important features of it.

Beginning with code section 1651, the Georgia law authorizes the corporate authorities of Savannah, Darien, Brunswick, and St. Marys to appoint commissioners of pilotage. These commissioners license the pilots. They prescribe the fees, make rules for the government of the pilots, and provide penalties, and can deprive a pilot of his license for want of skillfulness or for neglect or carelessness, or for intoxication. Their power is not unlimited, however, in prescribing pilotage fees, for section 1655 provides:

> They shall from time to time hereafter, whenever necessary, revise and grade the existing pilotage fees, both inward and outward, on vessels drawing 17 feet or less, when loaded, so that said fees shall not exceed the average of the fees charged at the ports of Norfolk, Wilmington, Charleston, Port Royal, Beaufort, Fernandina, Pensacola, Appalachicola, Mobile, and New Orleans. They shall exempt vessels from the payment of pilotage fees, either inward or outward, unless services are tendered outside the bar.

The legislature placed this limitiation as to fees for the purpose of safeguarding the commerce of the ports of the State and preventing such excessive fees as would drive commerce from the ports of Georgia to the ports of other States where pilotage fees were less. The legislature also in this limitation provided that these commissioners could not allow fees unless the services of a pilot were tendered outside the bar. This was to compel the pilot to remain on the bar if he wished to earn anything. This same section of the Georgia Code also contains a provision of our law in reference to exempting certain vessels from the payment of pilotage fees by authorizing a license. This license provision is much criticised in the report of the committee favoring the pending bill. The provision is, as to the pilotage commissioners, and says:

> They shall allow vessels running coastwise under United States license to pay, after paying the inward pilotage for that trip, an annual license fee of 25 cents per registered ton, which shall belong to the pilot entitled to the inward pilotage fee, and the payment of said license fee shall exempt at that port said vessel for twelve months thereafter from compulsory employment of a pilot, either inward or outward, or payment therefor unless services of a pilot are accepted; licenses shall be renewed to vessels after having arrived in port, and if they approach the port after the expiration of a former license, the license shall be granted only after they have paid the inward pilotage for that trip, if service has been tendered outside the bar; and any vessel while in a port for which she has had a license, may, within ninety days after the expiration of that license make application for and on payment of the license fee shall receive a new license for twelve months from the date of the expiration of the old license.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. GOULDEN. Does the gentleman regard the charges under the compulsory pilotage laws in the State of Georgia as too high or of moderate degree?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Our laws were enacted a number of years ago. At the time they were enacted all interests consented to them, and they were considered fair and just, and the charges established thereunder reasonable. Of course, it may be now that changed conditions may authorize a change in these laws, though upon the whole I think they are now considered reasonable. In this forum, however, I am not so much concerned about their reasonableness or unreasonableness as I am concerned over the proposition that Congress should undertake to revise them.

It should be observed that this license provision is not compulsory. No vessel has to procure a license. It is a concession to the vessel owner. It was enacted for the purpose of reducing the expense of pilotage. The commercial interests of the State brought it about. While it has the effect of reducing the earnings of the pilots, it does not have the effect of abolishing the pilots. It was not enacted in their interest, but solely in the interest of those who need their services. It is passing strange that this provision of law, directed against the earnings of the pilots, should now be used as an argument in favor of wiping them out altogether.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, if it will not interrupt the gentleman, I would like to ask him about granting licenses. It was stated before our committee that, taking the port of Norfolk, last December the pilots received on an average $980; that during that time they did not render any service whatever to the vessels. It is also further stated that last year the pilots at that same port received between $60,000 and $75,000 from sailing vessels, and that a pilot was never aboard a sailing vessel in fact for eighteen years.

Mr. BRANTLEY. What port is that?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. The port of Norfolk, Va.

Mr. BRANTLEY. The pilots received this amount of money from coastwise sailing vessels?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Yes, sir; and I have never seen that statement disputed. It was made by a member of the committee to our committee, and if that is true, I would like to know what the gentleman's defense is for that condition of affairs.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I would state, in reply, that I know absolutely nothing of the facts in reference to the matter. I do not know whether they are true or not, but of one thing I am sure, and that is that the State of Virginia and no other State is going to tolerate such undue taxation of its commerce as will drive commerce away from it. If the laws of any State have the effect of driving commerce from that State, that State suffers more than any other part of this country suffers. I submit that each State should continue to enjoy the privilege that it has had ever since this Government was founded, to frame such laws in this connection as in its judgment will best build up and maintain its commerce. If the laws of the State are violated, there is ample provision to punish the violation. If indiscriminations exist, there is ample law to prevent discrimination.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, in that connection I might suggest to the gentleman that the Northern States did have pilotage laws and did exercise the privilege of determining for themselves when the proper time had arrived for their abolition.

Mr. BRANTLEY. That is very true. I am very glad to have that statement go in. We simply ask now to be allowed to do what these States have done, and to abolish our compulsory pilotage laws when we think we can do so with safety.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. As I understand, the gentleman's attitude is this: That if these facts exist, he does not deny that they should be remedied, but if the States refuse to do that, then the nation should not interfere.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will permit, I would like to answer the question. The assumption that the gentleman makes is one based upon disputed facts. The gentleman contends that the people of Virginia know more about the facts and are very much better able to determine the wisdom of their laws than people outside of the State of Virginia and that the remedy is with the Virginia legislature.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. The gentleman forgets that I put in my hypothetical question "if the facts were as cited," that the pilots received an average of $980 a month for which they rendered no service, and that they received from sixty to seventy-five thousand dollars last year from sailing vessels for which they rendered no service, and I ask him, If the State would not legislate to correct this evil should not the nation do so?

Mr. SHERLEY. Bad cases make bad laws. Now, the gentleman wants us to take a suppositious statement of facts as being the facts and pass a general law that would punish some other State equally with Virginia.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I thank the gentleman from Kentucky for his statement. I would say further that if a State has pilotage laws that are burdensome upon the commerce of other States, it is one thing to substitute a better system. It is quite another thing for the National Government to abolish the system existing and provide no other in its stead, and at the same time leave the State helpless to do so. That is exactly what the pending bill does. But the Georgia law further provides that all vessels not exempt under the laws of the States or of the United States shall pay full pilotage fees inward and outward to "the first pilot who may have offered his services outside the bar and exhibited his license as a pilot if demanded by the master."

Code section 1664 provides:

> Every pilot boat cruising or standing out to sea must offer the services of a pilot to the vessel closest the bar unless a vessel more distant be in distress, under a penalty of $50 for each and every negligence or refusal either to approach the nearest vessel or to aid her if required, or to aid any vessel in sight showing signals of distress; and the commissioners, or a majority of them, may, for such negligence or refusal, deprive the pilot of his license.

The pilot can not select the vessel of the deepest draft so as to earn the largest fee, but must pilot the nearest vessel, and, regardless of his fees or his earnings, he must ever respond to a signal of distress.

In case a vessel or its cargo of freight is damaged through the negligence or default of a pilot and the damage is less than $100 the board of pilot commissioners have full power to require the payment of the damage. If the damage exceeds $100 the pilot is made specifically liable in the courts of the State for the full amount of the entire damage.

The assertion is made in the report of the majority of the committee that—

> If the State pilot, by reason of incompetency or negligence, causes injury to the vessel or causes her to be lost, he is not liable for the damage caused, and neither owner nor underwriter has any recourse but to accept the loss.

And this is given as an argument in favor of the bill. This statement does not apply to Georgia, for, as I have just stated, our pilots are made specifically liable for any damages caused by their carelessness or default, and, in addition, no man can be a pilot in Georgia without giving a bond in the sum of $2,000 for the faithful performance of his duties.

The pending bill proposes to authorize local inspectors of hulls and boilers of vessels to license local pilots, and proposes to authorize the pilot so licensed to take a vessel into any of the ports of this country, wholly regardless of whether or not he knows anything of the entrance into the port he seeks.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I should like to inquire what bill the gentleman refers to in that remark?

Mr. BRANTLEY. No. 5281, I think, is the number of it.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Will you be kind enough to state again what you say it does?

Mr. BRANTLEY. It authorizes local inspectors to license pilots.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The State inspectors, you mean.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I am talking about the steamboat inspectors. They will license pilots under the bill.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Do you mean the United States inspectors or State inspectors?

Mr. BRANTLEY. The United States inspectors.

In Georgia no man can be a pilot or receive a certificate to act as a pilot until he has served as an apprentice two full years in a decked pilot boat on the bar for which he desires to be a pilot and gives satisfactory evidence of character and skill; and no certified pilot shall be entitled to additional authority until he has served eighteen months. Many years ago the Supreme Court of the United States recognized a fact that the friends of this bill appear to have lost sight of, and that is that there are more kinds of pilots than one. In a case in 2 Wallace, page 459, the court said:

> The term "pilots" is equally applicable to two classes of persons: To those whose employment is to guide vessels in and out of ports and to those who are intrusted with the management of the helm and the direction of the vessel on her voyage. To the first class, for the proper performance of their duties, a thorough knowledge of the port in which they are employed is essential, with its channels, currents, and tides, and its bars, shoals, and rocks, and the various fluctuations and changes to which it is subject. To the second class knowledge of an entirely different character is necessary.

The friends of this measure refuse to recognize this difference in pilots and assume that if a man is found competent to navigate and steer a ship he necessarily has knowledge of the entrance into all harbors in the country, and the bill proposes that inspectors who, perhaps, know nothing of the entrance into a certain harbor or across a certain bar, may license another man likewise knowing nothing of this entrance or bar, and authorize him thereby to pilot a ship across this bar and into this harbor. The people of Georgia have always felt that in order to preserve the fair fame of their ports as safe and protected ports, so as to bring commerce to them, it was absolutely essential to have pilots thoroughly familiar with the entrance into these ports to guide and conduct vessels therein. This bill, if enacted into law, nullifies the wise provisions of the Georgia law, disregards the wisdom of the Georgia lawmakers and the custom and practice of a century, and says, in effect, that knowledge of a bar and knowledge of a harbor are totally unnecessary to qualify a pilot to take a ship across such bar or into such harbor.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Does the gentleman mean that this would eliminate your local system?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Undoubtedly.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. It does not have that effect at all. It simply says that where you do not take the services of the local system, you do not pay. That is all there is in substance to the bill.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I am discussing that question.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I wanted to see if the gentleman correctly apprehended the effect of the legislation.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I think I fully understand the purpose of the bill, and I understand also that unless we can have compulsory pilotage we can not maintain our pilotage system.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Indirectly, then, your proposition would be that it would have the result you state.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Oh, indirectly.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I beg your pardon. I thought you meant directly.

THE EVIL CONSEQUENCES OF THE BILL.

Mr. BRANTLEY. In the State of Georgia from 65 to 70 per cent of the vessels handled by pilots are domestic vessels. It is quite evident, therefore, that if these domestic vessels be relieved from pilotage fees there will not be enough vessels remaining to maintain a pilotage system. The argument is made, however, that no such result followed the exemption of coastwise steamers from compulsory pilotage and that no harm has resulted to the coastwise steamers. This suggestion presents no argument at all, and for the reason that pilotage systems have been continued notwithstanding the exemption granted steamers, and have been continued by reason of the help received from coastwise sailing vessels. Pilots have been on all the bars ready at all times to assist coastwise steamers when those steamers needed assistance, and the steamers have not therefore suffered. If coastwise steamers and coastwise sailing vessels, however, are both to be exempt from compulsory pilotage, what inducement will there be for the pilots to remain on the bar? The pending bill recognizes that pilots are sometimes necessary, and while providing for the exemption of coastwise sailing vessels from compulsory pilotage also provides that the fees charged for the pilotage of any vessel shall not exceed the customary or legally established rates in the State, thus providing for the protection of the coastwise sailing vessels in the matter of fees whenever they actually need a pilot. The question arises, however, if this bill becomes a law will there be a pilot on the bar to give protection when protection is needed?

This bill is very one sided in its provisions. It does not undertake to repeal any provisions of any State law that is compulsory on pilots. If the States insist upon it the pilots will still be required to purchase and maintain at their own expense their pilot boats and to remain at their posts in fair weather and in foul. They will still be required to tender their services outside the bar. All the apprenticeship, all the labor, all the peril, and all the hardships they are now required to undergo will still be required of them, but there will be no compensation, except at the will and the pleasure of the vessel owners. It is inconceivable that the States will require the kind of service pilots are now required to give and not provide compensation for them. It is likewise inconceivable that men can be found to invest their money in pilot boats and expose themselves to the perils of the sea in order to serve as pilots, if they are to receive no compensation therefor. A solemn and responsible duty rests on somebody to protect the commerce of the seas that enters and leaves the ports of this country, and likewise to protect the lives engaged in this commerce. One of the forms of protection that has ever been deemed necessary is in the furnishing of experienced pilots to guide vessels in and out of the ports. The furnishing of these pilots has devolved upon the States ever since our Government was founded, and they have discharged this duty without let or hindrance upon the part of the National Government. The pending bill proposes, in effect, to hinder and handicap the States in the performance of this solemn and responsible duty by imposing unreasonable and unjust regulations upon them. The States will thereby be less able to discharge the solemn duty resting upon them, and the United States will have assumed no part of that duty.

COMPULSORY PILOTAGE.

The majority of the committee concede in their report that pilots are sometimes necessary and should be furnished. They, however, think that if in order for a State to have an adequate system of pilotage, "the pilots must be subsidized for services they do not render;" that the ports or the people should pay the alleged subsidy. It is, therefore, solemnly insisted that where the foreign shipping into any State is not sufficient to maintain a pilotage system, the State or the ports should, by some system of taxation, tax themselves to maintain the system. The error of this argument is revealed in its statement. It must be remembered that pilots are stationed on the outer bars of the several ports for the protection of the vessels that come into those ports. They have no other duty or purpose than to protect these vessels. True, it may be that ofttimes a vessel may come when the sun shines and the wind is fair and will not need a pilot, but this same vessel at another time, when the storm king is abroad, will need, and urgently need, this same pilot. The pilot is there to render service whenever service is needed. If he is to be paid only when his services are actually used, he should not be required to be on hand except when his services are actually needed. No one can tell when a pilot will be needed, and it would be a very absurd law that would require pilots to be on the bar only at those times when their services were in demand. They are required to be there all the time and ought to be so required and this requirement being exacted of them, they should be paid whether they render service or whether they do not. Not only should they be paid, but they should be paid by those in whose interest and for whose protection they remain outside the bar. The principle that justifies this has been maintained in all the countries, practically, of the world and has been repeatedly upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States. In 2 Wallace, 456, the court said:

> The object of the regulations established by the statute was to create a body of hardy and skillful seamen, thoroughly acquainted with the harbor, to pilot vessels seeking to enter or depart from the port and thus give security for life and property exposed to dangers of a difficult navigation. This object would be in a great degree defeated if the selection of the pilots was left to the option of the master of a vessel, or the exertion of a pilot to reach the vessel in order to tender his services were without any remuneration. The experience of all commercial States has shown the necessity in order to create and maintain an efficient class of pilots, of providing compensation not only when the service is tendered or accepted by the master of the vessel, but also when they are declined.

In Cooley v. Port Wardens (12 How., p. 312), the Supreme Court said:

> Compulsory pilotage laws rest upon the propriety of securing lives and property exposed to the perils and dangers of navigation by taking on board a person peculiarly skilled to encounter or avoid them, upon the policy of discouraging the commanders of vessels from refusing to receive such persons on board at the proper times and places and upon the expediency and even intrinsic justice of not suffering those who have incurred labor and expense and danger to place themselves in a position to render important service, generally necessary, to go unrewarded, because the master of a particular vessel either rashly refuses their proffered assistance or, contrary to the general experience, does not need it.

In 13 Wallace, Ex parte McNeil, 238, the Supreme Court said:

> A pilot is as much a part of the commercial marine as the hull of the ship and the helm by which it is guided; and "half pilotage," as it is called, is a necessary and usual part of every system of such provisions. Pilots are a meritorious class and the service in which they are engaged is one of great importance to the public. It is frequently full of hardship, and sometimes of peril; night and day, in winter and in summer, in tempest and calm, they must be present at their proper places and ready to perform the duties of their vocations. They are thus shut out for the time being from more lucrative pursuits and confined to a single field of employment.

The suggestion that a pilot should be required to be on duty at all hours of the day and night on the outer bar, and yet should only be paid when he actually pilots a vessel, is just as absurd a proposition as to say that the members of your city fire department should only be paid for the actual fires they fight or that the members of your city police force should only be paid for the actual arrests they make. The suggestion that pilots should only be paid for actual service is contrary to the rules and customs prevailing and being practiced in almost every walk of life. This Government maintains a great Navy and a standing Army. Both Army and Navy are paid for their time in peace as well as in war; they are paid not for the battles they fight, but for being ready at all times to fight the battles of our country; and so it has ever been that men called upon to prepare themselves for the public service and to engage in the public service are paid for the time that they are on duty, whether their services are always required or not. Lighthouses are erected, buoys are placed, light-ships are stationed, and range lights are displayed—all to help the navigator find his way and as a protection to him against disaster. In the same way the pilot stationed on the outer bar is stationed there as a protection. He is there not to protect the masses of the people, nor the property of the country, but he is there to protect the property of the vessel owners and the lives of the men in their service, and it is but simple justice and common equity that the vessel owners should pay him. This great Government charges these vessel owners nothing for all the protection it affords them. It does not furnish the pilots, however, and vessel owners enjoying so many benefits and so much protection, all free of cost to them, should not hesitate to pay for the protection afforded them by the pilots.

OUR SAILING VESSELS FLEET.

The point is sought to be made that while there has been great increase in recent years in the tonnage of steam vessels, there has been no such increase in the tonnage of sailing vessels, and that the failure of sailing-vessel tonnage to increase is due to compulsory pilotage laws. It is stated that the total tonnage of steam vessels has practically doubled within ten years, while the tonnage of sailing vessels has remained about the same during this period. The Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor fully answers this contention when he says that the natural development of marine architecture favors the increase of steam vessels and the decrease of sailing vessels. The statistics show, however, that while there has been practically no increase in tonnage of schooners and square-rigged vessels, there has been quite a large increase in the tonnage in the past ten years of rigged barges, and as these barges pay pilotage fees it is thus demonstrated that the existence of compulsory pilotage has had nothing to do with steam tonnage outstripping sailing-vessel tonnage. When it is borne in mind that compulsory pilotage only exists in a few of the States, it is unreasonable to contend that this compulsory pilotage in these few States has contributed very materially to any decrease in the tonnage of sailing vessels.

The coastwise commerce of our country, as it has grown and extended from year to year, has demanded quicker and better transportation facilities, and with the natural and inevitable result that steam-going vessels, with their rapid and certain transit and their traffic connection with the railroads, have been built to meet such demands. If sailing vessels could meet the ever-growing demands of this commerce, they would be built just as rapidly and just as extensively as steam-going vessels are being built. The majority of the committee, in their report, refer to the sailing of coastwise vessels as a languishing industry, and all due to compulsory pilotage laws. If languishing now, was it at one time flourishing? That is the assumption; and if so, the industry has both flourished and languished under the very same laws, for throughout the fluctuations of the industry the laws have remained the same. It is rather late in the day to suggest that an industry that has grown and flourished under laws designed for its protection and that were framed before the Government of the United States was formed, is now, under these same laws more than a hundred years later, languishing by reason of these laws. But, is the industry languishing? Notwithstanding the great increase in steam tonnage, sail tonnage has practically held its own. Is it unprofitable? Ask the shipowner who, while before the committee urging the passage of this bill, admitted himself the owner of one hundred sailing vessels, and each one of them acquired and put in commission while compulsory pilotage was in existence. In contrast to the statement that the industry is languishing, we have the statement of those who seek to build up our foreign shipping by subsidies, that our coast and lake shipping is the most prosperous and greatest in the world.

In a recent speech delivered on this floor by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. GILBERT], who has made an exhaustive study of our merchant marine, foreign and coastwise, he declared that—

Our merchant marine collects higher freight rates, the officers and crew live higher and better, and the shipowners clear more money than any merchant marine in the world.

In this connection, it is somewhat remarkable that any part of our coastwise shipping interests should complain of what they call a "pilot monopoly," or of any other monopoly, for not only is there no pilot monopoly, the Supreme Court having said to the contrary, but there is no class of people and no other interest so highly protected and so highly favored by our Government as the coastwise shipping interests of this country.

Gentlemen who favor this bill speak of the many millions of dollars spent by this Government in the improvement of harbors as a reason why pilotage should be done away with and the earnings of the coastwise sailing vessels still further enhanced. They forget that all of these millions have been spent for the direct interests of the coastwise vessels. Not only have these millions been expended in the improvement of harbors, but other millions have been expended in providing light-ships and light-houses and other aids for navigation, all in the interest of the vessel owners. These vessels are not taxed to pay any part of these vast expenditures; and not only do they pay no part of this burden assumed for their benefit, but they are otherwise tremendously favored, for foreign vessels are not allowed to engage in the coastwise trade, so that our coastwise vessels have a complete monopoly of the coastwise business, and having this monopoly no power of Government regulates their charges to the public. Not satisfied with the monopoly they now enjoy and the protection they now have, they have come to Congress and asked in this bill that the States be stripped of any power to safeguard the lives of the people they employ, or to safeguard the property of the shipper intrusted to their keeping, and all in order that their profits may still further be enhanced. The improvement of our harbors has resulted in deeper water and deeper-draft vessels, but in the shifting sand bars that usually prevail at the South and the larger class of vessels that have to be handled, requiring more and more skill and more and more knowledge of entrances into harbors, these improvements, in the opinion of the States, have not yet justified the abandonment of their pilotage systems. These States have no enmity toward the sailing vessels. They welcome their every visit and ask that it be repeated time and time again, but they do insist that so long as they police their harbors and their outer bars for the protection of these vessels, these vessels shall pay for the protection thus afforded them.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia yield to the gentleman from Maine?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Only for a suggestion.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Yes.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Is not the gentleman advised of the fact, inasmuch as he is discussing this question of improving harbors, that the vast amount of the expenditure is rendered necessary by reason of the large draft of the vessels, and that the question of a large draft does not, to any degree of consequence, affect the coastwise fleet; that it is almost altogether for the purpose of accommodating the foreign-going fleets? That is the practical fact. I do not know whether the gentleman is advised of it or not.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I will ask the gentleman from Maine if he is not aware of the fact that these same coastwise sailing vessels are every year being built of deeper draft and of larger size?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Well, to an extent, but not to any great extent.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Every year.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Their draft is nothing compared with the draft of the foreign-going fleet. There is not any question about that, I think the gentleman will be satisfied.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Oh, these improvements affect vessels engaged in the foreign trade the same as they affect vessels in the coastwise trade, but the fact remains that the coastwise vessels have the full benefit of every dollar of improvement, and the further fact remains that in our southern ports they have by far the greater benefit, for there are more of them. It is because we haven't got the foreign vessels that we protest against this bill.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. It is very true that when you dredge for a vessel having a draft of 25 feet it takes care of a vessel drawing 14 feet.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Oh, we have four and five and six masted schooners coming into my port.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I think if the gentleman will look it over he will find that the steam coastwise fleet draw from 6 to 10 feet more than the sail.

Mr. BRANTLEY. Our coastwise steamers draw less water than do some of the large schooners.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That may be your experience, but it is not the experience on the balance of the Atlantic coast.

Mr. BRANTLEY. It applies to the Clyde Line and the Mallory Line steamers that come into my port regularly.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. They go over to Key West.

Mr. BRANTLEY. They do not go over to Key West; they come into my port.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. What port is that?

Mr. BRANTLEY. Brunswick. They draw less water than some of the large schooners.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Bearing also on your suggestion in relation to the earnings of the vessels, does the gentleman question the accuracy of the statement that appears in the majority report, that the sums paid for pilotage over and over again aggregated more than the amount paid to the owners in dividends? Does the gentleman question the accuracy of that statement?

Mr. BRANTLEY. I do not know anything about that.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That is the fact.

Mr. BRANTLEY. The gentleman from Maine can state that in his own time.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I know the gentleman would not intentionally misstate any of these things.

Mr. BRANTLEY. I was not discussing the question whether the earnings of the sailing vessels were greater or less than the total sum of pilotage fees, and could not have made any misstatement about it.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. No; not that particular question, but the gentleman referred to the large earnings of the vessels. I only wanted to call the gentleman's attention to the fact about which there is no question.

Mr. BRANTLEY. It is argued that the tugboats take the place of the pilots and that when a tugboat is employed to pilot a vessel into or out of a port it is wrong to require such vessel to pay a pilot in addition to paying the tugboat. It must be borne in mind, however, that there is no law compelling the use of a tugboat, and neither is there any law requiring the tugboat to remain on the outer bar to render help when help is needed. Not only is there no law requiring the tugboat to remain on the outer bar and no demand for such a law, but the tugboat is not there except when the weather is fair. The time comes, and comes frequently, when the tugboat finds it far more convenient to ride inside the bar, in the harbor. These are the times when the little pilot boat remains outside and is required to remain there, and these are the times when its presence brings gladness and hope to the distressed sailing vessel seeking an entrance into a harbor of refuge which, blinded by storm, it can not find. It may be that sometimes the tugboat is competent to take the place of the pilot, but it does not follow therefrom that it is always competent to do so, nor does it follow therefrom that a pilotage system is unnecessary.

When all the argument has been had in the discussion of this question we must inevitably reach the point where the solution of the question will hinge on the proposition that a pilotage system is either necessary or unnecessary. If the advocates of the pending bill are prepared to insist that a pilotage system is unnecessary and that the day of the pilot has passed, then let them place their support of this bill on that ground, and let the Congress and the country determine whether or not the ground is well taken. If they are not prepared to insist that pilotage systems in the Southern States are unnecessary, then there remains no ground upon which the pending bill can be reasonably and justly defended.

It may be and perhaps is true that the pilotage laws in my State and in some other States should be revised. It may be that the time has come or will shortly come when we should consider the question of reducing the rate of pilotage fees where a tugboat is used, or where the services of a pilot are refused; when we should consider the question of reducing the rate of pilotage fees when a vessel desiring to enter one of our ports not for cargo, but merely to escape the perils of the sea; when we should consider the question of reducing fees where a vessel crosses the bar but to enter quarantine, and then has to again enter for the purpose of receiving cargoes; when we should consider the question of other changes and revisions of our laws; these and all kindred questions I am quite sure that the people of my State and of all the States interested in the maintenance of a pilotage system are thoroughly familiar with and will take just and proper action thereon at the right and proper time.

I am not here to insist that the system of my State or the system of any State is perfect, but I am here to insist that my State be accorded the same privilege that all the States of the East have enjoyed of changing its system whenever it thinks a change ought to be made. I am here to insist that the shipowner in the East has no right to dictate to the State of Georgia the kind of pilotage system the State of Georgia shall enforce. I am here to insist also that our pilots be taken care of. The system that we have builded in my State has been builded upon a policy, as declared by our State supreme court, "to engender among the pilots a laudable rivalry to venture beyond the bar, or its immediate proximity, and thus be ever ready to lend aid to vessels making for the port." Our supreme court has also said that "commercial necessity calls for hardy, energetic, and fearless pilots." There are no more hardy, energetic, and fearless men in any calling than these same pilots. We not only require that a man shall be brave and fearless in order to be a pilot, but we also require that he shall be a man of good character, and have sufficient standing to enable him to give the bond necessary for a pilot to give. We require him as a precedent necessary to becoming a pilot to engage in a long and arduous term of apprenticeship. We require not only that he shall have the courage to perform the duties that shall be imposed upon him, but that he shall know how to perform these duties. We do not allow our pilots to absent themselves from duty. We compel them to be on guard at all times. We charge them with the duty of constantly sounding our channels, so as to detect the slightest change therein. We require them to promptly report any discharge of ballast in our channel by any vessel, and the failure to make such report necessitates dismissal of such pilot from the service. We look to them to aid us in our quarantine regulations. We require them to ascertain from every vessel, before boarding it, the state of health on the vessel, and from them the quarantine officer first learns of any contagion that is approaching. We have found our pilots indispensable to the protection of the vessels visiting us, and indispensable to the maintenance of our commerce and the reputation of our ports. We have found them faithful, reliable, and in all cases fully to be depended upon. We exact onerous and responsible duties from them, and I am not willing to consent here or elsewhere to the passage of any law that will deprive them of fair and just remuneration for the service that they so bravely and efficiently render.

As a part of my remarks I submit a letter from Capt. Charles E. Arnold, for many long years a faithful and efficient pilot on the bar at Brunswick, Ga., and whose views are entitled to all the credit that a life of honest toil, of upright character, and of devotion to all duties, public and private, can give:

BRUNSWICK, GA., February 21, 1906.

MY DEAR SIR: I am a pilot on St. Simons bar. I commenced in March, 1879, to serve my apprenticeship, and on April 1, 1884, received my first certificate. On April 1, 1886, I received my branch as pilot. Have never wasted my earnings through drink, sporting, or riotous living. I have a family, and it takes all I make to support them and educate my children.

We have eleven active pilots on this bar, and none of them have any money of any consequence. There are two old pilots not in active duty. I mention this fact because there has been so much said about pilots making so much money. There has been for the last thirty-odd years, nearly every year, a bill before our National Congress to take away the State right and abolish this system of compulsory pilotage, and it has fallen to my lot for several years past to take some part in asking that Congress allow this law to stand as it is. In doing this I have talked with many masters or captains of vessels, some of whom are part owners and a few sole owners and many who own only small interests, and 75 or 80 per cent of them are opposed to the abolishing of the present system of pilotage in the Southern States. Many others say that they do not want the pilotage taken off, but can not express themselves on account of having to go on vessels owned by such men as Mr. Pendleton and others, who are the prime movers in this fight against the pilotage laws in these States.

There is a license clause in our law, made by those interested in vessels in the year 1886, in the Georgia legislature, and there are several licensed vessels that come to this port regularly and wait, even with fair winds, for tugboats, and will not employ a pilot—I presume because their owners prohibit their taking a pilot. In several instances they have had to lay outside and ride out heavy northeast blows, when, if they had taken a pilot, they would have been in out of the weather and not jeopardized the life and property of the crew and vessel. This happens very often here.

Another argument often mentioned against pilots is that the Government has spent so much money in deepening the channels and making them so plain by buoys, beacons, and lights. A few years ago our bar was only about 250 feet long, and we then had 11½ feet at low water on the bar. To-day we have in our channel 19 feet at low water, and the channel is supposed to be 200 feet wide at the bottom and 400 feet wide from side to side, and our bar is now 4⅝ miles long, with these same 11½-foot shoals at low water on either side of this 19-foot channel, and pilots are therefore a greater necessity to-day than when we had the shoal bar, from the fact that vessels to-day are larger and draw more water.

Another argument is that pilotage is too high. That has been reduced, from the fact that the class of vessels to-day carry in proportion to their draft more than twice the tonnage that the old style vessels did, and all pilotage is charged according to the draft of the vessel.

As the Senate has just passed the ship subsidy bill, this with the fact that no foreign vessel can engage in the coastwise trade, it would seem that the vessel owners want everything.

Another cause for having the present pilotage system is that our shoals extend from 4 to 6 miles outside of land, and the coast is very low and we have lots of thick, smoky weather, and our pilot boats are outside nearly all the time and are a guide to vessels bound up and down the coast, as well as those to the port to which the pilot boat belongs, and I as a pilot have many times put vessels on their course when bound to other ports, both north and south of us.

Yours, very truly,

CHAS. E. ARNOLD,
Pilot, St. Simons Bar.

Hon. WM. G. BRANTLEY,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Chairman, in view of the strenuous efforts put forth here and elsewhere in favor of parcels post, and in view of the misrepresentation and misconception and the vigorous efforts put forth by mail-order houses in districts to secure instructions in favor of parcels post in Congressional conventions to be held, I wish to offer some observations along this line and submit a few facts with a view to disabusing the minds of those who I believe are laboring under a misconception.

Before entering into a discussion as to the merits of the proposition I wish to read from letters received. It deals first with statistics as to the number of people living in the rural districts and in the towns in his county and then closed by saying:

You say you are opposed to the Government going into the freight business. You probably do not call the carrying of parcels weighing 4 pounds freight business, but carrying parcels weighing 5 pounds would be freight business. Please give this matter careful consideration, and remember that the ratio between rural population and those engaged in retail trade is probably about the same in the Fourth district as a whole as it is in ——— County. When the conventions are held in the spring to name delegates to the Congressional convention resolutions will be introduced favoring parcels post.

In another letter he states:

What is there to hinder limiting the weight of parcels carried to 50, 25, or even 10 pounds? Congress seems to have the power to limit the weight at present to 4 pounds. If parcels-post business should take on such dimensions as you anticipate, that is only an argument in favor of its establishment. Parcels post instead of being a drain on the Treasury is the means of making the rural free delivery self-sustaining. It is the logical complement and corollary of rural free delivery.

In another letter he refers to an editorial on page 233 of the Independent as worthy of consideration.

To begin with, the question is not who is entitled to the most consideration—the mail-order houses or the merchants in the small towns. If that were the question I am free to say that I believe that the merchant who pays taxes, who helps to build up the State, county, and town, who helps build and maintain sidewalks, streets, schools, churches, water and light plants, and all good things essential to the welfare, comfort, happiness, and convenience of the people of his community, is entitled to more consideration by that community than he who contributes nothing to that locality (that is Republican doctrine; that is why this wall of protection is built up, giving protection to the American wage-earner, the producer, and home interests), and there can be no question as to the justice of their claims. But this is not the question. Nor is it a question where or from whom goods may or shall be bought by people living in rural districts, or whether the purchaser secures a better bargain one place or the other. This is a question that Congress has nothing to do with. The Constitution provides:

All duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

No capitation, or other direct tax, shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.

No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to, or from, one State be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

It is intended that commerce shall be as free as air between the States, so far as the Constitution or Congress is concerned.

The real question is: Shall the Government go into the freight or express business? Shall the rural free-delivery service and the city delivery be discontinued? Can it be done in justice to all and without injury to anyone? The Post-Office Department is a great business institution, doing business every year aggregating nearly $170,000,000. Viewing it from a business standpoint, is the parcels post a safe businesslike proposition?

What are the contentions? Freight is slow; express charges are high and quicker, and cheaper transportation is desired. I read to you from an editorial on page 233 of the Independent of January 25, 1906, referred to in the letter just read:

The just demands of the American people require a parcels post, not only greatly below express charges, but much below the relative cost of smaller packages now passing through the post-offices. A reduction of rates of at least one-third could be safely and wisely effected. The American rate for parcels—that is, fourth-class matter—is 1 cent for 4 ounces, but the English rate is 6 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for every after pound. In America the weight limit is 4 pounds, but in England it is 11 pounds. The English parcel of 4 pounds requires 12 cents postage, but the American postage requires one-fourth more.

The rate on parcels here is claimed to be 4 cents per pound. The Independent says that a reduction of rate of at least one-third could safely and wisely be effected, or that the rate can be reduced to 2⅞ cents per pound. But I understand that the present rate for merchandise, or fourth-class matter, is 1 cent per ounce, or 16 cents per pound. And if a 2⅞-cent rate is determined on the reduction would be 13¾ cents per pound, or 80 per cent of the present rate on fourth-class matter.

Others say reduce the rate to 2 cents; some say 1 cent, and others say less. Some say the weight limit should be 11 pounds, some 25, some 50, some 100, some 200. Others say why fix a limit at all? Why not include carload lots? If the Government can give this service at exceedingly low rates, why should the manufacturer of heavy articles be denied the same privileges as others? Now, all of this seems nice; and of course if this could be accomplished it might be the right thing to do. It is natural that all would want cheap rates, as it would benefit everybody, and, generally speaking, everybody is pleased to get something for nothing—if not entirely gratis, at as low a price as possible if nobody is injured thereby; but it is also true that generally one would not give his consent to rob others in order to further his own interests. So in this case, if parcels post would create a large deficit, the deficit would have to be made up by all the people, or the gain made by few on account of low rates would have to be paid out of the General Treasury, or, in other words, Mr. Jones would be compelled to contribute toward paying Mr. Smith's freight. If this is so, then can parcels post be made self-sustaining? Can this cheap rate be had with justice to all and without injury to anybody and without loss to the Government?

The general opinion seems to be that the postal rates should be made as low as express charges, and also that parcels post should be made self-sustaining. I have received hundreds of letters on this subject, and I will read to you from one more of them, which is a fair sample, and I believe it expresses the views of most of the people who desire parcels post.

Referring to parcels post, he says:

> I am opposed to making it a burden to the Government, and I am still more opposed to rural free delivery being discontinued. I would rather see postage advance than to lose the rural free-delivery service. Let Congress put the price of postage on parcels so that it will cover the cost of transportation. The farmers here in Iowa do not object to paying what a thing is worth, but we do object to being robbed by the express companies the way we are now. A parcel post with the rural routes would be one of the greatest blessings the Government has done for the farmers, and I see no reason why it can not be made self-sustaining.

This is certainly a dignified and honorable position to take; and so far as I know, that position is taken by all, and the letters, I believe, voice the sentiment of a very large majority of those who desire parcels post. The question, then, is, can this be accomplished? First, we will compare express rates with the cost of carrying parcels or mail by the Government.

I was told by a reliable merchant in my district a few days ago that by prepaying express charges the express companies will meet postal rates to any point where the company has an office, the minimum charge being 15 cents, or if over two roads the minimum charge is 20 cents, or 10 cents to each road for 4 pounds of limited value. The shipment by express insures a safer and prompter delivery. The Government does not insure delivery or reimburse for losses, except when registered, and then only to the extent of $10 or $25 on any one package. He told me that he frequently has goods shipped from New York to California by express at postal rates.

A Post-Office Department report, made in 1900, quotes from Cowles's General Freight and Passenger Post the following:

> Our express companies carry all sorts of parcels, from the domicile in New York to the station, thence by rail a thousand miles to Chicago, and deliver at the domicile in that city, at the rate of $3 a hundred pounds, but the railways tax the Government $2.77 a hundred, $55.50 a ton, for the transportation of its mail bags for an average haul of not over 442 miles.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's report for 1904 shows that the earnings of the railroads for 1903 were as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| From mail and mail cars | $41,709,396 |
| From express | 38,331,964 |
| Excess of mail pay over express earnings | 3,377,432 |

In 1902 the excess of mail pay over express earnings was $5,582,385.

According to this, the express companies charge $3 per hundred from New York to Chicago, a distance of 1,000 miles. The rate from here to Chicago, a distance of 800 miles, is $2.25 per hundred, and the railroads, in 1900, taxed the Government $2.77 per hundred, or $55.50 per ton, for the transportation of mail for an average haul of not over 442 miles. Besides the $2.77, the Government now pays an average of $5,427.62 for each of more than 1,000 cars, and, besides this, pays a subsidy to the various railroad companies aggregating last year $167,175. Then there is the pay of 12,474 officers and employees in the Railway Mail Service. In fact, the total expense is nearly $170,000,000, which makes the average cost of handling the mail about 17 cents per pound. The Postmaster-General estimates the cost of handling all mail matter at from 5 to 8 cents per pound, but it would probably be much in excess of the amount stated by the Postmaster-General, because the parcels post would get all of the long-distance parcels, which would be carried at a loss, while the express companies would get the short-distance parcels, because zone rates would be less than postage rates.

The Postmaster-General states that—

> It would be necessary to adopt rates of postage to meet the rates of express companies and that it is not deemed wise at this time, at least, to ask authorization of Congress for the establishment of separate parcels post in the domestic service.

How are the transportation companies paid? To begin with, the present rates per pound weight were first fixed by the act of March 3, 1873. These were reduced 10 per cent by the act of July 12, 1876, and 5 per cent more by the act of June 17, 1878. First, the pay is based solely on the average weight of the mail carried daily the whole length of the route, but when a full railway post-office car is added to the train the Post-Office Department pays to the railroad a rental for the entire car based upon its length. This rent, then, is added. Mr. Shallenberger stated before the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads:

> The total number of railway post-office cars in service last year was 1,015, and the number in reserve was 215. The Government paid $5,500,044.65 for the cars in service, an average of $5,427.62 a car. The cars cost about $5,500 or $6,000 each, and are maintained and repaired at an annual cost of about $1,200. They are built and owned by the railroad companies and rented to the Post-Office Department. The pay for a line of these cars is $25 a mile for 40-foot cars, $30 for 45-foot cars, $40 for 50-foot cars, and $50 for 55 or 60-foot cars.

What is the cost of the service?

The total number of railroad-mail routes is 3,064, and the total length of these routes is 200,965 miles. The annual travel on these routes is 362,645,731 miles. The annual rate of expenditure for mail transportation by rail—not counting the rental of postal cars—was $41,504,345.

The total number of postal-car routes is 294, the total length of these routes, 53,000 miles, and the appropriation for the current fiscal year was $5,875,000.

The combined expenditure for railroad-mail transportation and railroad postal cars was $44,695,610 in 1904. The combined expenditure in 1905 was $45,576,515.

It is estimated that the railway-postal clerks during the fiscal year 1905 handled 18,000,000,000 pieces of mail matter, exclusive of registered matter, of which 9,050,000,000 pieces were first-class matter and the balance pieces of other classes.

The deficit of the Post-Office Department for 1905 was $14,572,584.13.

Turn to Senate Document No. 174, Fifty-eighth Congress, third session, and you will find the amount paid each year to the railway companies for the purpose of carrying the United States mail since 1873, as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1873 | $7,257,196.00 |
| 1874 | 9,113,190.00 |
| 1875 | 9,216,518.00 |
| 1876 | 9,543,134.00 |
| 1877 | 9,053,936.00 |
| 1878 | 9,566,595.00 |
| 1879 | 9,567,590.00 |
| 1880 | 10,498,986.00 |
| 1881 | 11,613,368.00 |
| 1882 | 13,206,510.70 |
| 1883 | 13,906,956.79 |
| 1884 | 15,629,444.52 |
| 1885 | 17,347,754.39 |
| 1886 | 17,360,172.88 |
| 1887 | 17,849,853.06 |
| 1888 | 19,199,791.85 |
| 1889 | 22,128,850.65 |
| 1890 | 22,286,261.43 |
| 1891 | 25,837,147.30 |
| 1892 | 27,277,617.70 |
| 1893 | 28,516,378.17 |
| 1894 | 30,565,036.56 |
| 1895 | 31,190,230.65 |
| 1896 | 32,442,290.80 |
| 1897 | 33,854,075.32 |
| 1898 | 34,768,904.90 |
| 1899 | 36,001,826.99 |
| 1900 | 37,668,873.35 |
| 1901 | 38,507,809.79 |
| 1902 | 39,830,675.92 |
| 1903 | 41,697,229.02 |
| 1904 | 44,503,987.42 |

Add to the $45,576,515 paid the railway companies in 1905 the subsidy paid the various railroads, amounting to $167,175, and other expenses connected with the Department, and you have a grand total of $167,399,169.23. The Postmaster-General states—

> That the cost to the Government for handling all mail matter is estimated to be from between 5 to 8 cents per pound.

But this, as I understand, simply includes the cost of transporting the mails, and does not include all expenses connected with handling of the mails. It is an easy matter to determine what the average cost is—that is, if you have the number of pounds handled and the amount expended. Let us look into the matter and see. The report does not give the total number of pounds handled, but on page 79 the Postmaster-General states:

According to the estimates heretofore made and published, matter of the second class approximates in weight two-thirds of the bulk of all mail matter, yet produces only about 4 per cent of the postal revenue.

The weight of second-class matter is reported to be 663,000,000 pounds. If 663,000,000 pounds is two-thirds of the bulk of all mail matter, the total weight would be 994,500,000 pounds, or practically 1,000,000,000 pounds.

I understand that this does not include equipment, such as sacks, pouches, twine, etc., which is paid for per pound to railroad companies for carrying same as mail matter. When the weight of the equipment is added the total weight would be about double this amount, as the weight of the equipment is about equal to the weight of the mail. But the weight of equipment has nothing to do with it, as the Government gets pay only for the actual mail matter handled.

If you will turn to the report of the Second Assistant Postmaster-General to the Postmaster-General, showing the results of the special weighing of mail through the United States from October 3 to November 6, 1899, you will find the following statement:

Per cent by classes of mail matter originating in the United States, including mail for local delivery and all mail dispatched from all post-offices of the United States by steam railroads, electric cars, steamboats, and on star routes, or otherwise.

| Class. | Weight for 35 days. | Estimated weight for 365 days. | Per cent of total weight. |
|---|---|---|---|
| | Pounds. | Pounds. | |
| First class | 9,098,882 | 94,888,341 | 6.06 |
| Second class | 37,820,857 | 394,417,505 | 25.19 |
| Second class free | 3,140,464 | 32,750,550 | 2.09 |
| Third and fourth class | 13,987,967 | 145,874,518 | 9.32 |
| Government free | 9,218,203 | 96,132,692 | 6.14 |
| Equipment | 76,866,032 | 801,602,902 | 51.20 |
| Total | 150,132,405 | 1,565,666,508 | 100.00 |
| Weight of mail matter from which a revenue is derived | 60,907,706 | 635,180,362 | 40.57 |
| Weight of mail matter from which no revenue is derived | 89,224,699 | 930,486,146 | 59.43 |
| Total | 150,132,405 | 1,565,666,508 | 100.00 |

Here the total weight is estimated at 1,565,666,508. This includes 801,602,902 pounds equipment, and leaves only 764,063,606 as mail matter. But of course the business has increased, and I believe it is safe to estimate the weight of actual mail matter at 1,000,000,000 pounds, and the total weight, including equipment, at 2,000,000,000 pounds. The estimated cost of handling the mails should not be made on the total weight including equipment, because the Government is paid only for the actual weight of the mail matter. The equipment and cost of carrying equipment is a part of the expense in handling mail matter, as much as is that paid railroad companies or salaries to clerks, and parcels post would require equipment as well as first, second, and third class matter, as these parcels would have to be packed in pouches and handled the same as other mail matter. For instance, if parcels weighing 100 pounds are received they must be sent out in pouches or sacks, and if sent out in pouches weighing 100 pounds, the Government would pay the railroads for 200 pounds and receive pay for only 100. So, if the Government pays a railroad on an average of, say, 5 cents per pound for the total weight, including equipment, it would cost the Government twice that amount, or 10 cents per pound, for actual mail matter, as it pays for 2 pounds for every pound of actual mail carried by the railroads.

So in estimating the cost of handling mail matter and the cost of parcels post, first it is necessary to ascertain the number of pounds of mail matter handled, or the number of pounds on which the Government receives pay; second, the amount paid out. If 1,000,000,000 pounds of mail is handled what is the cost per pound? First, the Government pays the railroad companies $41,000,000 for carrying the mails, or 4.1 cents per pound. It pays $5,427.62 for each of 1,015 cars, and I understand they also pay for 215 cars in reserve, or a total of $5,500,000, which adds another one-half cent. You now have 4.6 cents per pound. The Government employs 12,474 officers and clerks in the Railway Mail Service or for looking after the mail while in transit, at an annual salary of more than $13,000,000, or 1.3 cents per pound. We now have a cost of 5.9, or practically 6 cents per pound. But there are some 200,000,000 pounds of mail not carried by railroads. I find on page 2, Senate Document No. 174, that the Postmaster-General makes this statement:

In order to secure a basis for an accurate estimate of the total weight of mail carried on the various mail routes of the country, the Department ordered an actual weighing of the mails originating in each post-office of the country from October 3 to November 6, 1899. The reports of this weighing were forwarded to the Department and tabulated, and on the basis of this weighing an estimate of the total weight of mail carried and the weight carried on railroad lines for one year was made. The total weight of mail and equipment thus found was 1,565,676,508 pounds. The weight for railroad lines, including equipment, was 1,347,145,180 pounds.

The rate for railroad lines, including equipment, then, was only 1,347,145,180 pounds. Deduct 801,602,902 pounds for equipment and it leaves only 545,542,278 pounds mail carried by the railroads. The Government paid the railroad companies, according to a statement made by the Postmaster-General in 1899, $36,001,926.94, an amount equal to 6.8 cents per pound for that year. If you deduct 200,000,000 from 1,000,000,000 pounds, you have only 800,000,000; and the cost would now be about 7½ cents per pound; but I want to get at the average cost of handling all mail matter in order to ascertain what parcels-post will cost. In addition to the 5.9 cents per pound, the mail must be collected and delivered. You have an expense of $26,000,000 for the rural free delivery service, and $21,000,000 for the city free delivery, or $47,000,000 for the two; or a cost of 4.7 cents per pound. Add this to 5.9 and you have a total of 10.6 cents per pound. In addition to this we have the transportation of mail on star routes, on steamboats, electric and cable-car service, the mail-messenger service, and the transportation of foreign mail, which aggregates more than twelve million. Another expense of 1.2 added to the 10.6, making a total of 11.8. In addition to this you have the rent, light, fuel, and equipment for many of the 68,000 post-offices. The Department employs in all 280,000 people, and the total expense last year was $167,399,169.23, which would make the average cost about 17 cents per pound.

But you may say that this is not a fair comparison, that the parcels handled by the Post-Office Department are less in weight and much greater in number than parcels-post packages would be, or those handled by the express companies, and do require more help to sort and handle. I admit that, and some allowance should be made. But certainly the cost of carrying parcels post by railroad companies would be nearly the same, as the companies are paid so much per pound, and nobody has suggested a reduction. In fact, the Congressional committee recommended that no reduction should be made. And the only reduction would be the reduction in rate per pound, caused by an increased weight carried by railroad companies. More cars would be needed. More railway mail clerks will be required to handle the additional mail matter. Eight hundred and fifty-three were added this last year. More city and rural carriers would be needed, and a much higher salary would be demanded on account of the increased weight to be carried. More clerks would be required and more room needed in all of the 68,000 post-offices, and the cost would increase all along the line; and the average cost for handling these additional parcels would probably not be much below the present average cost of 17 cents per pound.

But, for the sake of argument, let us assume that the cost would only be 10 cents a pound. If the postal charges are fixed at 4 cents a pound, what would be the result? Every $4,000,000 worth of business would incur a loss of $6,000,000, as the service would cost 10 cents a pound, or $10,000,000. If the rate is to be reduced to 2 cents, every $2,000,000 worth of business would incur a loss of $8,000,000. But H. R. 470, the Hearst bill, provides that postal charges on merchandise, etc., shall be: "On parcels over 12 ounces, and not exceeding 1 pound, 5 cents. On parcels over 1 pound, 2 cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof."

The postage then on 10 pounds would be 23 cents, or 2.3 cents per pound. At this rate, for every $2,300,000 worth of business, the cost to the Government would be ten million, or a loss of $7,700,000. But the contention is that the rate should be much lower, and if a compromise is made at 1 cent per pound, every $100,000,000 worth of business would mean a loss to the Government of nine hundred million, an amount about a hundred million dollars in excess of the annual appropriations of Congress, or about equal to our interest-bearing debt, or about equal to one-third of the total money circulation in the United States.

What are the causes of our present deficit? The principal cause given is second-class matter. Turn to page 80. The Postmaster-General states:

During the last fiscal year the total weight carried at 1 cent a pound and free was 663,107,128 pounds. If it costs the Government as much as 5 cents a pound to handle this matter in the mail, it will be seen that the amount paid out was $33,155,356.40. The actual revenue was $6,186,647.54.

Here you have a loss of $27,000,000 on a $6,000,000 business, and the cost to the Government is figured at only 5 cents, which is, of course, much below the actual cost, and if the cost is 10 cents per pound the loss would be $60,000,000.

The Postmaster-General states in his report that the second-class matter—663,000,000 pounds—approximates in weight two-thirds of the bulk of all mail matter, yet produces only $6,186,647.54, or 4 per cent of the present revenue. Now, if, for instance, the rate on all mail matter should be fixed at the same price as second class, which is 1 cent per pound, the revenue would be only 6 per cent of the present revenue, or $9,279,971.31. Deduct the $9,279,971.31 from $167,399,169.23 total expenditures, and you have a deficit of about $158,000,000. If the rate should be fixed at 2 cents, the revenue would be about eighteen and one-half millions, and the deficit about $149,000,000. If the rate should be fixed at 3 cents, the revenue would be about twenty-seven and three-quarter millions, and the deficit $139,500,000. If fixed at 4 cents, the revenue would be about $37,000,000, and the deficit about $130,000,000. If at 5 cents, the revenue would be about forty-six millions, and the deficit about $121,000,000. If the rate is fixed at 6 cents, which is twice as high as anybody has suggested that the rate should be on parcels post, the revenue would be about fifty-five and one-half millions, and the deficit $111,000,000.

Can the cost be reduced? The answer is no.

See page 65, where the Postmaster-General calls attention to the Congressional commission investigation—a commission composed of distinguished men, four members of the Senate and four members of the House. After exhaustive investigation, the Commission submitted its report in 1901. The general conclusion was:

> We are of the opinion that the prices now paid the railroad companies for the transportation of the mails are not excessive, and recommend that no reduction be made thereof at this time.

This report was substantially concurred in by all except Representative Fleming and Senator Chandler. Fleming filed a separate report recommending a reduction of 5 per cent. Senator Chandler did not sign either of the reports.

What do we find? The present prices paid railroad companies are declared to be reasonable, though I am inclined to differ with the Commission and other Members on that subject. Nobody has suggested to reduce the rates paid the railroads or the cost of the service.

If the low rates are given, if the weight limit is extended, and these special privileges granted, it is safe to say that the business of the Post-Office Department will increase extensively. The freight business of this country is over fourteen hundred million. The express business is also large. The appropriation for the Post-Office Department has increased from $35,756,091 in 1875 to $181,022,093.75 for 1905–6, an increase of more than 500 per cent, or $145,266,002.75, in thirty years. It has increased from $49,040,400 in 1885, an increase of more than 350 per cent, or $131,981,693.75, in twenty years; and from $87,236,599.55 in 1895, or over 100 per cent, or $93,785,494.26, in ten years.

Here we have an increase of nearly $100,000,000 in ten years under ordinary conditions without extending any special privileges or inducements in rates or weight limit. What would it be with a large reduction of rates and an extension of the weight limit?

Suppose that the parcels post increases the postal business $100,000,000 on the basis of a 2-cent rate; and the cost of the parcels post is 6 cents per pound, the cost of the Government would be three times the rate charged, or $300,000,000, and the loss would be $200,000,000. If the business increases $100,000,000 on a basis of 3 cents, the cost would be double, or $200,000,000, or a loss of $100,000,000. If $100,000,000, on a basis of 4 cents, the cost would be $150,000,000, or a loss of $50,000,000. But some say the rates should be only 1 cent per pound. In that event the cost would be six times the receipts; the loss would be $500,000,000; and if the cost should prove to be 10 cents per pound, the loss would be $900,000,000. This may be putting it strong, so we will assume that the rate would be fixed at 5 cents, and the increase of business will be $100,000,000, and that the cost is only 10 cents, or $200,000,000, which would mean a loss of $100,000,000 to the Government. How are you going to make up the deficit?

The total expenditure last year for this Department was $167,399,169.23. The total receipts were $152,826,585.10; total excess of expenditure over receipts, $14,572,584.13. Add this $14,000,000 to the $100,000,000 and you would have a deficit of over $114,000,000.

How is this $114,000,000 to be provided for? Are you going to pay it out of the Treasury? No; all are agreed that that can not be done at this time. Besides, as before stated, some doubt the wisdom and propriety of "robbing Peter to pay Paul," or "to compel Mr. Jones to contribute toward paying Mr. Smith's freight." Are you going to increase the rates of postage? No; the proposition is to reduce them. Are you going to reduce the cost of handling mail? No; there seems to be no show to do that. What will you do? Some say discontinue the rural free-delivery service. Why discontinue this service and deprive the people of the rural districts of this valuable and much appreciated service? More than 50 per cent of the people of the United States live in the rural districts. Six million families are engaged in agriculture. This and the $7,000,000 expended by the Agricultural Department is about the only appropriation made directly in their interest. The inauguration and promotion of the rural free-delivery service was a recognition justly due a deserving people—a people where patriotism, loyalty, morality, and virtue prevails. It was with a view to adding to the blessings, advantages, advancement, happiness, comfort, and convenience of a people who have contributed so much to this nation's growth, greatness, dignity, prosperity, stability, and peace—a people always found in the foremost ranks in our days of unpleasantness, marching on to victory in times of peace and war. Nobody has done more to maintain or perpetuate this great and splendid Government of ours; nobody has responded more promptly, freely, or heartily when our Government institutions were in danger than have the people to whom this service is extended. The rural free-delivery service, together with railroads, telegraph, telephones, and the improvements of roads, has brought the people on the farms nearer and in closer communication with the towns and cities, and has added much to their convenience and advantages, and thus encouraged our young men and women to remain on the farms, where they do and may enjoy a greater degree of earthly blessings, true happiness, independence, advantages, and general content than they do in the cities, where they so often encounter difficulties and temptations which are so hard to overcome.

Up to October 2, 1905, 50,389 petitions had been filed, of which 33,486 had been favorably acted on; 12,257 filed with adverse action, leaving 4,655 cases pending. On July 1, 1905, we had 32,121 routes and 32,055 carriers, paying them more than $20,000,000 annually in salaries. There are now 226 routes in operation in my district, giving employment to 226 carriers; nearly all are paid $720 per annum, a total of $13,560 per month, or $162,720 a year. Can we afford to discontinue this whole service in order to accommodate half a dozen mail-order houses that do not contribute a cent to the maintenance of the State, county, or towns, schools, or churches of those localities? But the total amount appropriated last year for the rural free-delivery service was only $25,828,300, and we still have a deficit of $88,000,000. But you say you can also dispense with the city free-delivery service. Of course it will have to go also. But by so doing you have reduced the expenses only $21,000,000, and still you have $67,000,000 to provide for.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly, I will be very glad to answer the gentleman.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to ask the gentleman if he desires to withdraw the support of the Government to the rural free delivery of the country? Are you opposed to the rural free-delivery system?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly not; I am opposed to the parcels post under existing conditions, and am in favor of the rural free-delivery service.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I am glad to learn that.

Mr. HAUGEN. The point I am trying to make is this. With a parcels post the danger is, and the general belief is that you would have to discontinue the rural free delivery. Not only the rural free delivery but also the city delivery.

If you establish a parcels post at the rate of 5 cents a pound and the cost is 10 cents a pound, and the business increases to the extent of $100,000,000 you have a deficit of $100,000,000. I am opposed to discontinuing the rural free-delivery service or the city delivery in order to make up the deficit caused by parcels post to accommodate a few catalogue houses.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes; I will be very glad to have it.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not believe the gentleman said just what he intended to say just a moment ago.

Mr. HAUGEN. I think so.

Mr. NORRIS. You said you were in favor of parcels post to accommodate a few catalogue houses.

Mr. HAUGEN. I said I was against it.

Mr. NORRIS. I thought you meant that.

Mr. HAUGEN. I am in favor of the rural free delivery and city delivery, and against a parcels-post system that will incur such a large deficit. It is generally conceded that parcels post is in the interest of catalogue houses, and will enable them to build up an absolute monopoly in the mercantile business; and I fail to see where such a monopoly would be of sufficient benefit to warrant such action.

I am one of those who believe that we already have more monopolies than is good for this country. We have the beef trust, the harvester trust, and many others. My observation has been that they have been of very little benefit, if any; and I doubt the wisdom of taxing the Government $100,000,000 in order to crowd out the merchants of the smaller towns, and destroy the beautiful towns, villages, and cities throughout the country, and to promote this monopoly.

Mr. NORRIS. I interrupted the gentleman simply to correct him. I thought that in the close of his statement he did not state what he intended.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to ask him this: If the Government should take charge, or, in other words, regulate the amount of charges that could be made by the express companies so as to place it under the railway commission, that would obviate the crying necessity that now exists for a parcels post. In other words, does not the Government come in competition, then, with the express companies in the country, and in that way is not your object to force the express companies to put down the enormous rates they are now charging to the citizens of this country?

Mr. HAUGEN. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that I am in favor of and voted for the amendment to the Hepburn bill, to place express companies under the regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission. My contention is that the postal rates are higher than the express rates. I made the statement that the express companies charge $2.25 a hundred from Washington to Chicago, a distance of 800 miles. They charge $3 from New York to Chicago, a distance of 1,000 miles. The railroad companies tax the Government 5⅝ cents a pound for an average haul of 442 miles.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then why does not the Government exert its power and influence to reduce these enormous rates so that there will be no necessity for the parcel post?

Mr. HAUGEN. You have reference to the rates in the postal service? The express charges, according to Cowel's statement, quoted in the Postmaster-General's report, for 1,000 miles, are less than one-half the cost to the Government for carrying mail by railroad companies, including the railway mail clerks, an average distance of 442 miles.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. If the gentleman will permit, will not you admit that private individuals or private corporations can carry these parcels cheaper even than the Government can carry them?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly they can. There is no question about that.

A great deal has been said about the government ownership of railroads. Here is a fair example of what government ownership means. We are now engaged in a business in competition with private concerns. We pay the railroads for rent on cars and for carrying mail and clerks in the Railway Mail Service an average of 7½ cents per pound for an average haul of 442 miles. The whole postal business aggregates practically $170,000,000 annually, or an average cost of 17 cents per pound for all mail matter handled.

On the other hand, any of the large express companies carry 100 pounds with a limited guaranty from New York to Chicago, a distance of 1,000 miles, for $3, or $2.25 from Washington to Chicago, a distance of 800 miles. These four companies—the American, Wells-Fargo, United States, and Adams—are practically one company, which is an absolute monopoly, no competition existing, all companies having practically the same officers, nearly all railroad lines being divided between them, and but one company doing business on any one road. Their combined capital is $60,000,000, and much of it water. They have 40,000 agencies, employ 50,000 people, handle 100,000,000 packages, 7,000,000 money orders, 20,000,000 other sealed packages, and all pay liberal dividends on stocks and bonds, including watered stocks and bonds; and it is alleged they charge exorbitant prices, and yet the rate on 100 pounds for 1,000 miles is less than one-fifth of the average cost to the Government for handling all mail on an average haul of 442 miles.

The Government also has a printing office, the largest in the world, I believe. The Government printing done by this institution, we have been told here a number of times, costs about 50 per cent more than if done by private contract. The Librarian of the Congressional Library stated to the Committee on Appropriations only the other day that it cost him 60 per cent more to have the binding done by the Government Printing Office than it does other public libraries which have the binding done by private contract. I believe he said 60 per cent.

There can be no question in the mind of anybody but that the public printing and the postal service could be had for one-third less, and I believe it is safe to say one-half of what it costs the Government now if it were let to private concerns. Excessive cost seems to be the result in everything the Government undertakes to do.

In view of these facts I am opposed to the establishment of parcels post, and I am in favor of continuing the 32,121 rural free-delivery routes, which employ 32,055 carriers, and continuing the city delivery, which employs 21,778 carriers, not only to continue these services, but to extend them. We better have this service with $15,000,000 deficit than to dispense with it and establish a limited parcels-post service with $67,000,000 deficit.

The Department is going forward with a mighty speed. Postmaster-General Cortelyou makes this statement:

> What a contrast between the service of his day and that of the present time! From 75 post-offices in 1790, the year of Franklin's death, the number had grown in 1901 to 76,945, and now is 68,131; from receipts of $37,935, and expenditures of $32,140, we have advanced in the same period to receipts of $152,826,585, and expenditures of $167,399,169; from a total force of about 500 to a total force of about 280,000.

Much is said about parcels post in other countries, especially in Germany. Yes, Germany does a parcels-post business on a large scale; but Germany owns its own railroads. The parcels post is a separate business from the post-office business, and is carried in separate cars and on separate trains, stored in separate buildings, and they are separate as much as the post-office and express business are here, except there the two are conducted by the Government, while here only one. But Germany, with her dense population, can not be compared with our sparse population. The German Empire has 208,830 square miles, with a population of 58,500,000, or 280 to the square mile. The United States has 3,000,000 square miles, a population of about 80,000,000, or 27 to the square mile.

Now, we will get back to this public ownership.

Mr. LACEY rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HAUGEN] yield to his colleague?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly.

Mr. LACEY. The gentleman seems to have investigated this matter very thoroughly, and I would like to ask if there is anything in Germany analogous to the mail-order houses in this country?

Mr. HAUGEN. I could not answer that question. I think not.

I am now coming back to this government-ownership proposition.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I have not followed closely the gentleman's argument, but I saw a statement the other day of the comparison between the cost of carrying goods by express and by mail, which stated that the express companies gathered the articles in the city of New York and delivered them at the houses in the city of Chicago——

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes, sir; at $3 a hundred.

Mr. GROSVENOR. At half the cost the Government was paying for carrying the mails halfway to Chicago.

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes, sir; that is absolutely correct. They charge $3 per hundred from New York to Chicago, a distance of a thousand miles, and it costs the Government $7.50 a hundred for the average haul of 442 miles. Besides you have this advantage. The express companies make a guaranty. They guarantee the delivery and they guarantee the shipper against loss. The Government makes no guaranty unless registered, and that in limited amounts of from ten to twenty-five dollars. Of course the express rates are higher on smaller and more valuable packages.

Mr. GROSVENOR. The Government delivers the mail onto the cars and takes it from the cars.

Mr. HAUGEN. That is true.

Mr. NORRIS. In order to do this freely, it seems to me you ought not only to count the weight but take into consideration the number of parcels by express and also the number of articles delivered by mail. That might make some difference.

Mr. HAUGEN. It might make some difference as to the average cost.

Mr. NORRIS. Would it not, as an actual fact, make a great deal of difference?

Mr. HAUGEN. The weight of the parcels has nothing to do with it so far as the railroad companies are concerned. The railroad companies have nothing to do with sorting the mail. They simply carry it and are paid a certain amount for carrying it.

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. I want to ask the gentleman a question. He seems to have investigated this question in a very exhaustive manner. I want to ask him if he is or is not convinced by his examination or investigation that the rates paid to the railroad companies for carrying the mail matter could be very much reduced without doing an injustice to the railroad companies?

Mr. HAUGEN. While I disagree with the Commission's report, I do not wish to put my judgment up against these eight distinguished men. That Commission was made up of four distinguished Senators and four distinguished Members of the House, one of them now a member of the Cabinet, our able Attorney-General; but I intend to investigate that subject carefully and to discuss it at a later date; and all that I care to say at this time is that the Government pays the railroad companies an average of $12\frac{8}{10}$ cents for each of the 362,645,731 miles traveled, or $225 per mile for each of the total 200,965 miles on the 3,064 mail routes; and that it costs the Government an average of 7½ cents per pound for all mail carried by railroad companies, which includes the salary paid the railway mail clerks who look after the mail while in transit.

Mr. SMITH of Kentucky. There is no excuse for that.

Mr. HAUGEN. Another thing, the establishment of parcels post would discriminate against a local merchant. The present law provides that carriers shall not, during their hours of employment, carry any merchandise for hire, except on request of patrons residing on their respective routes, and that only whenever the same shall not interfere with the proper discharge of their official duties, and under such regulations as the Postmaster-General may prescribe. With the establishment of parcels post carriers would be required to deliver merchandise sent from outside merchants even though it came in carload lots, regardless of the condition of roads or interfering with their prompt delivery of other mail; and the only way the local merchant could have his merchandise delivered would be by paying full postage—the same rate as the merchant a thousand miles away, who would be near the factory and would have less freight to pay to his place of business, and, of course, could afford to undersell the local merchant by reason of this discrimination.

How would the parcels post operate in our rural districts with rural free delivery service? Suppose the weight limit is fixed at 50 pounds, and some mail-order house made a special price, say, on sugar, and fifty patrons on one route each ordered 50 pounds, and all would be shipped and delivered on one day. The rural free-delivery carrier would have, besides his ordinary mail, 2,500 pounds of sugar to deliver, which would require from one to three teams, according to the condition of the roads. With this freight service added to the mail business, would you expect the carriers to continue their services at $720 per year? Certainly not. I believe the general opinion is that the carriers are now underpaid. In many instances I believe their salaries should be increased even under present conditions.

We now have a deficit of nearly $15,000,000. Are we now to go headlong into a losing proposition that may incur a deficit of hundreds of millions of dollars? No; before considering that proposition let us first endeavor to reduce the expenses. First, give attention to the prices paid the transportation companies, and if possible rearrange the whole service so as to enable the Government to compete with private enterprises engaged in a like business. When that has been done, then there will be time to talk about going into the freight and express business; but not now, when we are confronted with the cold facts that it means a loss of from 1 to 400 per cent on every dollar's worth of business, and, besides, absolutely the discontinuance of the rural free delivery and city free delivery service.

I submit to you unless the cost of carrying and handling the mail can be greatly reduced the Government can not in justice to all concerned go into the express and freight business, such as is commonly called "parcels post."

In conclusion, I want to enter a protest against the delivery of mail to boxes by number alone. In this connection I want to make myself clear that I have no quarrel with the Post-Office Department or anybody connected therewith. The Department has at its head very excellent, accommodating, affable, pleasing, courteous, and competent gentlemen; men of energy, integrity, judgment, and ability; and the same can be said of all connected therewith so far as I know. The Department can not be held responsible for excessive prices paid the railroad companies or expenditures in general. Congress appropriates the money and in most cases specifies how money shall be expended, and it must shoulder the responsibility.

As to the delivery of mail matter numbered, I understand that mail matter simply numbered is not delivered to boxes with a corresponding number; but I have at various times protested against, and will continue to protest against, any law or rule requiring the delivery of mail simply numbered, leaving off the name of the person for whom it is intended. To illustrate the feeling in this matter I will put it as the proposition was put to me by a farmer who called to enter his protest against this method. He had been ordered to number his box. He said he had no objection to the numbering of the box, but protested against being addressed by number. He said that he believed he was entitled to more civil treatment, and made the point that the code of etiquette and law of decency requires that every gentleman and lady shall be addressed by his or her name, and that only scrub animals are referred to by number. If a registered or fine animal is advertised, offered for sale, or referred to, the name is added to the number; if a pen of scrub animals is offered it is generally by number. It appealed to me that there was much force in his argument, and it is fair to assume that the people of your district and my district are entitled to as much consideration and respect as high-class animals.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the gentleman want any more time?

Mr. HAUGEN. I do not care to deprive other Members of their time.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have ten minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has no control of the time.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is a great misfortune, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. There was an order made this morning dividing the time between the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SHERMAN. May I ask the Chair to inform me how the division of time now stands?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has consumed an hour and forty-three minutes and the gentleman from Texas has consumed an hour and thirty-five minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to yield to the gentleman from Iowa who has just spoken ten minutes out of my time.

Mr. SHERMAN. I had asked the gentleman if he had desired further time, and he said he did not.

Mr. HAUGEN. I am very grateful to the gentlemen, Mr. Chairman, but I understand that the time is limited and that there are others who desire to speak. I have already consumed considerable time; and as there is so much to be said on this subject and it would take hours to cover all that is involved in the question, I do not feel justified in proceeding further at this time, but will ask permission to have printed in the RECORD a communication from the Post-Office Department.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. We are very much interested.

Mr. HAUGEN. I will not ask for any more time.

The communication referred to is as follows:

POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
FOURTH ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL,
Washington, February 20, 1906.

Hon. G. N. HAUGEN,
House of Representatives.

SIR: In compliance with your request of February 13, you will find inclosed list of rural delivery routes in your district, showing total number of routes in operation, number ordered established, and number adversely reported. There are no pending applications.

The list furnished in October last is herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

P. V. DE GRAW,
Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General.

Rural-delivery service in the Fourth Iowa district.

| Post-office. | Number of routes established. | Reported adversely. | Post-office. | Number of routes established. | Reported adversely. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Alta Vista | 1 | 1 | Dorchester | 3 | |
| Arlington | 4 | 2 | Dougherty | 2 | |
| Bassett | 1 | 1 | East Elkport | 2 | |
| Bonair | 1 | | Edgewood | 2 | |
| Burroak | | 1 | Elgin | 5 | 1 |
| Calmer | 3 | 1 | Elkader | 3 | |
| Carpenter | 1 | | Elkport | 1 | 1 |
| Castalia | 1 | | Elma | 4 | 2 |
| Charles City | 6 | 1 | Farmersburg | 1 | |
| Chester | 2 | | Fayette | 4 | |
| Church | 1 | | Floyd | 3 | |
| Clayton | | 1 | Fort Atkinson | 2 | 1 |
| Clear Lake | 6 | | Frankville | | 1 |
| Clermont | 2 | 1 | Fredericksburg | 4 | |
| Cresco | 8 | 1 | Froelich | | 1 |
| Decorah | 8 | | Garnavillo | 1 | |

Rural-delivery service in the Fourth Iowa district—Continued.

| Post-office. | Number of routes established. | Reported adversely. | Post-office. | Number of routes established. | Reported adversely. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Grafton | 1 | | Plymouth | 1 | 1 |
| Guttenburg | 2 | | Postville | 3 | 1 |
| Hanlontown | 2 | | Randalia | | 2 |
| Harpers Ferry | 1 | 1 | Republic | 1 | |
| Hawkeye | 4 | 1 | Riceville | 4 | |
| Ionia | 2 | 1 | Ridgeway | 2 | |
| Joice | 1 | | Rock Falls | 1 | |
| Kensett | 3 | 1 | Rockford | 5 | |
| Lansing | 3 | 2 | Rockwell | 3 | 1 |
| Lawler | 3 | 3 | Rudd | 1 | |
| Lime Springs | 4 | 1 | St. Ansgar | 3 | 2 |
| Little Cedar | 1 | 4 | St. Olaf | 2 | |
| Littleport | | 1 | Staceyville | 1 | 1 |
| Locust | 1 | 1 | Strawberry Point | 3 | 1 |
| Luana | 2 | 1 | Swaledale | 1 | 1 |
| McGregor | 3 | | Thornton | 2 | |
| McIntyre | 2 | 1 | Turkey River | 1 | |
| Manly | 2 | | Ventura | 2 | |
| Marble Rock | 2 | | Volga | | 3 |
| Mason City | 8 | | Wadena | 3 | |
| Maynard | 2 | | Watertown | 1 | |
| Miltonville | | 2 | Waterville | 2 | 1 |
| Meservey | 1 | | Waucoma | 4 | 1 |
| Mitchell | 1 | 1 | Waukon | 5 | 3 |
| Monona | 4 | 1 | Waukon Junction | | 2 |
| Nashua | 3 | | Westgate | 1 | |
| New Albin | 2 | 1 | West Union | 3 | 6 |
| New Hampton | 6 | | | | |
| Nora Springs | 4 | | Total | 226 | 73 |
| Northwood | 5 | | Favorably reported: | | |
| Oelwein | 3 | | Northwood | 1 | |
| Orchard | 1 | | Castalia | 1 | |
| Osage | 6 | 4 | | | |
| Ossian | 3 | 1 | Total | 228 | |
| Osterdock | 1 | | | | |
| Otranto Station | | 2 | | | |

Schedule of rates for railway mail transportation.

| Average weight of mails per day carried over whole length of route. | Pay per mile per annum. Rates allowable under act of Mar. 3, 1873. | Rates allowable under acts of July 12, 1876, and June 17, 1878. | Rates allowable to land-grant railroads, being 80 per cent of allowance to other railroads, under act of July 12, 1876. | Intermediate weight warranting allowance of $1 per mile under the custom of the Department, subject to acts of July 12, 1876, and June 17, 1878. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | | Pounds. |
| 200 pounds | $50.00 | $42.75 | $34.20 | |
| 200 pounds to 500 pounds | | | | 12 |
| 500 pounds | 75.00 | 64.12 | 51.30 | |
| 500 pounds to 1,000 pounds | | | | 20 |
| 1,000 pounds | 100.00 | 85.50 | 68.40 | |
| 1,000 pounds to 1,500 pounds | | | | 20 |
| 1,500 pounds | 125.00 | 106.87 | 85.50 | |
| 1,500 pounds to 2,000 pounds | | | | 20 |
| 2,000 pounds | 150.00 | 128.25 | 102.60 | |
| 2,000 pounds to 3,500 pounds | | | | 60 |
| 3,500 pounds | 175.00 | 149.62 | 119.70 | |
| 3,500 pounds to 5,000 pounds | | | | 60 |
| 5,000 pounds | 200.00 | 171.00 | 136.80 | |
| For every additional 2,000 pounds | 25.00 | 21.37 | 17.10 | |
| Over 5,000 pounds | | | | 80 |

No allowance is made for weights not justifying the addition of $1.

Rates allowable per mile per annum for use of railway post-office cars when authorized.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Railway post-office cars, 40 feet | per daily line | $25.00 |
| Railway post-office cars, 45 feet | do | 30.00 |
| Railway post-office cars, 50 feet | do | 40.00 |
| Railway post-office cars, 55–60 feet | do | 50.00 |

To constitute a "line" of railway post-office cars between given points, sufficient railway post-office cars must be provided and run to make a trip daily each way between those points.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Iowa may continue his remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has that permission under the order adopted yesterday.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that in my opinion the Committee on Immigration will report a substantial measure for the restriction of immigration, it is my desire to get as much time for debate on that question as possible. I know if that bill comes before the House there will be an immense demand for the time allotted to debate, so I take this opportunity to express my views, and shall be glad to be interrupted by any gentleman who wishes to ask a question.

The humanitarian urges us not to restrict immigration, because our forefathers had the advantage of a free country into which to come as pioneers and found for themselves homes in a new world, and because America should ever be a land of refuge for the oppressed and for the ambitious man. But go down to Ellis Island any afternoon when a ship from Genoa is coming in; watch that long line of assisted and semicontract labor passing the inspectors, and then try to pick out one man in five who looks like a hearty self-respecting pioneer, and not like a man brought here under a contract expressed or implied. But, says the practical man, these men are all needed; there is a demand for their labor; if there were no demand, how could they come here and get jobs? Well, there is no question that over 1,000,000 came here last year and got jobs yielding, under present conditions, a very fair living.

But times are very prosperous now. When times are hard what is to become of this vast population which has come into our land? Some of it will go home, perhaps, but the bulk of it will remain to compete with our own people for limited opportunities of employment.

There is an unlimited demand for labor if very low wages are paid. We all could build railroads if the wages were not too high. So, when the practical man says that the restriction of immigration will interfere with new enterprises by restricting the labor supply, is that observation anything more than an expression of fear as to the cheapness of his labor supply? It may be very true that if he can not get cheap labor many valuable enterprises must be stopped because there is not the cheap labor to carry them on. It may be that those enterprises not only would inure to the promoter's benefit, but to the benefit of many other people as well. Still, would not the indicated line of reasoning obtain if you were to cut existing wages in the United States in half? Would not many enterprises at once be undertaken because they could be made profitable with cheaper labor? Undoubtedly so. Undoubtedly many men would profit; and yet no sane man would think it good for this country to reduce wages one-half.

How often we hear the argument that as each new race comes in it lifts up the others. Well, I will admit that in the past there has been that tendency; but we have 80,000,000 people here now, and that is too great a number for a superstructure. Only a small part of 80,000,000 can be employers or shopkeepers or foremen. I do not believe it is any longer true that the incoming races are pushing up all of those already in, but I think, on the contrary, that you are subjecting our workmen striving to maintain their standard of wages to a competition which is unfair.

Our immigration officials lay a great deal of stress on the question of the distribution of immigration. They point to the fact that over half of these aliens settle in New York and Pennsylvania, and yet that throughout the West and the South there is a demand for labor. Immigration, however, does not go there, and they say that there ought to be a remedy.

In my opinion, there can not be any remedy except natural laws. Immigrants do not stop in New York and Philadelphia because they are put there. They stop because there is a demand for them there, and because they can get higher wages and more steady employment than if they went somewhere else. It is foolish to say that these immigrants congest our large centers and become charges upon the community. It is not true. There were 315,000 immigrants settled in New York State last year, one year's importation alone, and yet only 12,000 aliens, all told, are in the penal and charitable institutions of the State. In Pennsylvania less than 6,000 aliens, all told, are in charitable or penal institutions, and yet 210,000 last year alone settled in Pennsylvania. I think that we must accept the fact as demonstrated beyond doubt that those people stay in Pennsylvania and stay in New York on account of economic reasons.

At the immigration conference in New York again and again I heard speakers tell of the demand for labor in the West and in the South. In private conversation with the speakers I generally found that steady jobs were not offered, or else that the rate of wages was lower. Under present conditions in the South, I found that in the cotton mills the rate of wages was fairly high and that the employment was steady. I say to you, Mr. Chairman, that if the rate of wages now obtaining in some of the southern cotton mills continues the question of their labor supply will be solved by migration from Fall River and other northern places.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, is it or is it not true that a majority of the Hugarians and Italians coming into the United States now are peasants and agricultural laborers?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Nearly a majority.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Then does the gentleman know any good reason why these idle men, with agricultural training behind them, should not be directed by immigration laws to the idle lands in the South and in the West?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I can refer the gentleman to the Manufacturers' Record, published in the city of Baltimore, July 20 last. This contains a symposium of views collected all over the South, from all sorts of men, showing what results have obtained when the attempt has been made to connect the jobless man with the manless job. You will find almost invariably——

Mr. WILLIAMS. The gentleman has misunderstood me.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. I think I understood the gentleman.

Mr. WILLIAMS. He is stating his position too broadly. I am not undertaking to connect the jobless man with the manless job. I am undertaking to connect the idle agricultural man with the idle acre.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Continuing with what I was saying, the symposium shows that when these foreign arrivals have been settled in various parts of the South by somewhat artificial means, such as the intervention of State immigration agents, they frequently do not stay. Many proceed at once to the city, where they find permanent employment and conditions existing which, rightly or wrongly, they desire. It is not to be wondered at that they prefer the city. If there was any medicine that I could inject into the Yankee boys in my district to keep them in the country instead of having them flock to the city I should be glad to know it. I do not expect these aliens to have any less predilection for the city than those Yankee boys.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the gentleman allow an interruption?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. GRAHAM. The gentleman states that it is impossible, in his opinion, to so scatter the immigrants that they will not settle in the crowded cities of the United States. In a bill that I had the pleasure of offering, and which rests in the Immigration Committee, I proposed to allow or permit the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to prevent these men from immigrating into this country unless they will scatter throughout the States—in other words, to prevent their settling where there is 30 per cent foreign population now existing; not to allow them to settle in any city or town where there is 30 per cent of foreign population at present.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I have given that proposition no thought, but, as stated by the gentleman, I should say it was all moonshine. To go on, in accordance with suggestions of Commissioner Sargent, after a close examination and full hearing, two bills for the better distribution of immigrants have been introduced, one of them by my colleague on the committee, Mr. HAYES, of California, and the other by myself. In my opinion, neither of them amounts to much as a practical measure for distribution against the current of supply and demand.

Now, in discussing immigration matters, people who have not given study to the subject fail to appreciate the difference between selection of immigration and restriction of immigration. For instance, we have laws which exclude those who are likely to become paupers, those who have certain physical defects, loathsome diseases, and the like. Those are selective laws. Then we have the contract-labor law, which is a restrictive law, tending to cut down the numbers that are coming in, irrespective of whether aliens have certain given mental, moral, or physical qualifications.

Then we have the $2 head tax. That is an excellent thing as a revenue measure, but is not a success either in the direction of selection or of restriction.

The proposed educational test, which I believe to be good as far as it goes, is both a selective and a restrictive measure, but it does not begin to be restrictive enough. I do not believe it would accomplish what I want to see accomplished, which is a horizontal cut right through the center of our immigration. Now, if it is selection that the people of the United States want, pass the Dillingham bill. I understand from immigration authorities that if that had been in operation last year it might have cut down the immigration a few thousand.

Mr. DRISCOLL. Will the gentleman allow me an inquiry?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Certainly.

Mr. DRISCOLL. What does the gentleman mean by a horizontal slash? Does he refer to countries or to the number of immigrants?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Perfectly irrespective of race, religion, or country, as I will show the gentleman if my time does not run out. A head tax would operate alike on one country as on another.

Mr. DRISCOLL. I do not know if the gentleman has considered this proposition; if immigrants from foreign countries should be prohibited from coming here, have we any class of people in this country who, from generation to generation, would do what we ordinarily call the "common work," what some people call the "servants' work?"

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. If we pay enough they will do it, and if we haven't anybody else to do it we have got to do it ourselves.

Mr. DRISCOLL. Is it not true that there never was a country that we know anything about where what we call "society" is so much in a state of unrest from bottom to top as it is in this country? Has it not been the case for many years that people born in one State insist on getting up and moving to another State?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. The gentleman means the tendency to migration?

Mr. DRISCOLL. Not only to migration, but a tendency to elevate one's self in one's work, a constant tendency to elevate one's standing in the community.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. There is no question but that has been the history in time past.

Mr. DRISCOLL. So that there is to be nothing left at the bottom. Is not that the situation?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. I believe we can put the bottom on a higher plane.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to a suggestion and to a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. I want to suggest to the gentleman that one of the troubles seems to be that immigration is forced into this country by virtue of the greed of steamship companies. They undertake to procure immigrants for the money that is to be made out of transporting them.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. I do not think that the principal trouble. I think it is an element in the question. If my time does not run out, I think the gentleman will see later that I give due weight to steamship activity, but that I point out a cause a good deal deeper.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman must not misunderstand me——

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. I quite understand the gentleman's point, but that he will see I am coming to later—the question of what the motive force is which brings an individual in here.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will permit me, I do not want to take up his time unless he desires——

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. I want to discuss this question and I am glad to have any question asked. Now, at the risk of making my speech wrong end foremost, I can explain somewhat to the gentleman my theory as to the basic cause for our gigantic immigration.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will permit me, it might save his time and mine if he will allow me to suggest my inquiry without his undertaking to determine what it is before hearing it, and that is this: That being one of the causes—not the controlling cause—which brings much undesirable immigration, could we not, to some extent, remedy the matter by a law restricting the number of immigrants on each ship? Would we not thereby circumvent the greed of the shipowner, as the allotted number would readily take passage without special inducement, and those only would come who desire to emigrate of their own initiative?

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Well, Mr. Chairman, we have to some extent restricted the number of passengers for a great many years under our navigation laws. Canada has tried it in the case of the Chinese, but she charges Chinamen a $500 head-tax as well.

To go on, if the people want only selection, why we can pass any number of little bills providing that an alien be excluded if he has poor physique, is an imbecile, and the like. There were 279 certified at Ellis Island last year for poor physique. We might have excluded them under the Dillingham bill. There were 47 imbeciles admitted at the same port; but what does all that amount to? We can exclude a few thousand by selective measures, but if we really want restrictive measures and seriously desire to cut down our immigration we have got a fight on our hands, and it is none too soon to begin. We shall be fought at every stage. The steamship companies and the large transportation lines might put up a mock battle against some of these unimportant selective bills, with a view to keeping us as long as possible at the soup before we get at the meat, but if we try to get a real restrictive measure through Congress we shall have every transportation line and every steamship line trying to stop us, and it will not be any sham battle. I for one would rather see a real restrictive bill reported to this House and beaten than pass half a dozen of those little, unimportant selective bills, which merely tend to raise the qualifications of a few thousand people.

You will find plenty of people to allege that the trouble is not with our immigration laws, but with their enforcement. That is a very easy thing to say. Anyone who has not been as much at Ellis Island as has my friend the gentleman from New York [Mr. GOULDEN] and as I have been might suppose that there was something in the statement. There is nothing in it at all, however. I take pleasure in saying that the officers of our Marine-Hospital Service who examine the immigrants physically and the inspectors of our Immigration Bureau who do the rest enforce the laws as well as they can be enforced. Their failure to enforce the law arises from the nature of the case. They fall down not on the physical side, but owing to the impossibility of executing our contract-labor law and our law against the admission of people likely to become a public charge.

Mr. Chairman, how much more time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has five minutes remaining.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Then, Mr. Chairman, I will take up this question of our contract-labor law, without going into the medical end of the question. I should be glad to describe to you the exact system of medical inspection, because I believe it is practically sound, no matter what anybody else may say. That is an individual opinion, however. Our laws against the admission of contract labor break down utterly. Two-thirds of our adult male immigrants, in my opinion, come under contract, express or implied. I heard that statement doubted the other day on the floor of the House. I think two of the Members from New York were amongst those who doubted it, so I desire to read one or two pieces of evidence which may be material:

Mr. GARDNER. Now, as a matter of fact, do you not think a very large proportion of the labor that comes into this country comes under an implied contract?

Mr. SARGENT. I think there is no question about it, Mr. Gardner. (From page 69 of Commissioner Sargent's testimony before the Immigration Committee.)

Now, in the report of Commissioner Williams, of New York, in 1904:

A very large percentage of the present immigration is of the assisted class. (Page 105, Annual Report of Commissioner-General of Immigration for 1904.)

I quote from Inspector Marcus Braun's report of his investigations abroad, page 27:

Furthermore, these immigrants are mostly contract laborers.

He is referring, as the context will show, to immigrants from eastern and southern Europe. I have evidence here of the same tenor from Mr. Campbell, of the Bureau of Immigration. I think any man who goes down to Ellis Island and uses his eyes and hears these people answer the inspectors would be convinced that the contract-labor law is nearly inoperative. But how can the inspector prove it in any individual case? The inspector stands there with the manifest in front of him, the answers stamped or written in. He asks the immigrant a series of questions. The immigrant answers him exactly in the words of the manifest. The inspector asks whether anybody has given him money for his passage and the immigrant says "No." He asks him if he has come there under a contract, and receives the same reply. Then they cross-examine the immigrant, often by another interpreter. Unless that immigrant has been very badly schooled or is very stupid, or unless some suspicious circumstance arises, nobody can say that he ought to be excluded. Perhaps too many aliens are billed to the same address. That is suspicious, and the men are held for a board of special inquiry, sitting the next day. Once in a while, but not often, they are able to show a strong probability that those men are contract laborers. As a matter of fact, I think we sent home 1,164 contract laborers out of an immigration of a million last year. Yet I do not believe that any man who has looked into the question believes that much less than two-thirds of our adult immigrants are indeed contract laborers. Now to come to the question of remedy.

How much time have I, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be permitted to conclude his speech.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has no authority to grant additional time.

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman has authority to print, and I desire to state to the gentleman from Massachusetts that I promised what little time I have remaining.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. I quite understand the situation. If the gentleman will yield me one minute, I desire to make a statement. Whereas, Mr. Chairman, I should be very glad to print the rest of my ideas, I much prefer to take time on another appropriation bill to discuss this matter before the House. I am not making this speech especially for circulation, but because I want to discuss with the House the question of immigration. I shall be glad to ask for more time some other day.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I now yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD].

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the House to the proposition pending before it for methylated or denatured alcohol for use tax free as an industrial agent. In my judgment, the enactment of this measure into law has in it as much of real promise for the public good as any other measure pending before this House. It would create a new industry that in time would place in the pockets of the people millions of dollars and add immeasurably to their comfort and convenience.

While I desire to call your attention briefly to some of the uses to which alcohol can be put, I wish first to offer some observations as to whether it is practical to enact this law.

At the outset let me say that I am not urging this law in the interest of a reduced tax upon alcohol for use in the beverages. That tax is needed and I believe should be retained in preference to taxes that affect the necessaries of life. The proposition that I make is to permit the use of alcohol free of revenue tax after it has been rendered unfit to drink by mixing it with the poisonous wood alcohol or other like ingredients. In the present state of our revenues I do not believe that it would be advisable to attempt to secure free alcohol for use even in drugs or medicines.

The question of whether the character of denatured alcohol can be preserved so as to prevent its use as a beverage in place of the taxed article appears to be the one question of most importance. This is not a new question, but one that has received the most careful consideration in this and other countries. Though the best chemical skill and appliances have been employed in an effort to prove that denatured alcohol can be purified, I believe that it can be said without fear of contradiction that not a single experiment has been made showing that it is practical to entirely remove the peculiar odor and taste from denatured alcohol so that the fraud could not be readily detected if an attempt should be made to dispose of it in place of the taxed article. It is asserted on very high authority that denatured alcohol can not be purchased and restored so as to be suitable for use as a beverage at a price less than the cost of alcohol, including the revenue tax added. It would be necessary not only to pay for the original production of the alcohol, but for a number of distillations requiring extra skill with special appliances, much more difficult than for the original distillation before denatured alcohol could be used for any kind of drink, and even then the telltale smell and taste of the elements used for denaturing would remain to accuse and convict. These investigations have satisfied nearly every civilized country that alcohol can be denatured so that it can be used for industrial purposes free of tax without danger to the revenue from alcohol used for beverages. Of the great industrial and commercial powers the United States alone has refused to be convinced, and is to-day a conspicuous example of a country adhering to an illiberal and unprogressive policy. Substantially the same objections that can be made to tax-free denatured alcohol in this country can be made to it in the European countries. There, as here, alcoholic spirits for use as beverages bear a heavy tax for the support of the Government. The only difference that has been urged is that in Europe the population is more dense and more closely under police surveillance than here. This, in my judgment, is not a material difference. Our thorough system of communication and ever active and aggressive news agencies serve to expose crime, which is all that is necessary, as the personal interest that every citizen in a free country has in enforcing the law renders police surveillance unnecessary. Among those who obey the law there are always those who profit by the enforcement of the law. If police surveillance should be considered necessary, you have in the postmasters and mail carriers an agency that comes in touch with every man, woman, and child in the land almost daily, a means for securing practically without cost information that would surely lead to detection and punishment. In a bill that I have drawn on this subject I have suggested the possibility of this agency. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue does not appear to think that there would be any advantage in a sparsely settled locality for restoring this denatured alcohol. He said in a hearing before the Ways and Means Committee a few days ago, in discussing this subject, that he did not think there would be any more danger of fraud than we have now by reason of illicit practice in distilling, and added:

I suppose the purification of this denatured alcohol would require the very finest type of still and everything of that kind. It would be difficult to find a place where they could operate it. They could not operate it in the mountains; they would have to go up in the tenth story of some building where they could have modern implements.

It is fear of punishment and not the difficulty of committing crime that prevents the criminally inclined from breaking the law. The distillation of alcohol from sweet wines or other substances is much easier than from denatured alcohol, and much safer, as the product would not offer any means for detection. That the danger to the revenues has been exaggerated appears evident from the fact that to-day about three and one-half million gallons of alcohol is used tax free to fortify sweet wines. These wines contain about 25 per cent alcohol; still there has been no complaint that this alcohol has been distilled from the wine, a thing that could easily be done, and, it would seem, at great profit.

But it does not seem necessary to speculate on this question, as the experience of years ought to be considered as having settled it. The European countries have operated under such laws for many years and have found so little trouble with the anticipated fraud on the revenues that instead of increasing they have from time to time relaxed their restrictions, and instead of adding more material to denature it they are adding less. England, which collects a larger revenue per gallon than we do on alcoholic liquors, has just completed an investigation of this whole subject by a commission that has recommended that the material for denaturing be reduced one-half or more, and that the restrictions upon the sale and use of denatured alcohol be relaxed. Germany is still more liberal. Can we afford to confess that our people are so lawless or the Government so incompetent that this measure of so much importance to the people can not be permitted to pass? Why not suppress the silver dollar and the greenback to prevent counterfeiting and forgery? The arguments that would apply to one position would no doubt apply to the other.

The time has come when the necessity for this relief is becoming more and more pressing. With wasteful indifference the supply of fuel is, in many localities, rapidly being exhausted. Fuel, on account of its bulky nature, is difficult to transport to any great distance and, as a consequence, in many localities the price is very high and rapidly increasing. The people are anxiously looking for relief and have, in my locality, given serious consideration to the use of peat as a fuel. Every mail brings letters urging free denatured alcohol as a possible remedy. It is believed that if denatured alcohol is given the same considerate treatment as it is accorded in Germany the day is not very distant when many sections will produce the alcohol needed for light and, to some extent, for heat and power. To do that it would, of course, be necessary to produce alcohol at a much less figure than that at which it is sold to-day. That this is possible seems perfectly evident. The records of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue show that first-class distilleries produce about 5 gallons of proof spirits to every bushel of corn and it is known that the by-products more than pay for the cost of distillation. This would make the cost of alcohol, 90 per cent pure, about 11 cents per gallon if produced from corn at 30 cents per bushel; but call it 15 cents per gallon, or one-half of the price of a bushel of corn. Alcohol has been sold in this country at 20 cents per gallon plus the tax. But it should be borne in mind that though corn is the usual material for the production of alcohol for use as a beverage, it is not likely that it would be used for the production of denatured alcohol, as such alcohol can be produced much more cheaply from other materials. Alcohol produced from potatoes is not so desirable for drinking purposes as that from corn, but is equally serviceable for industrial purposes.

The Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wilson, has lately called attention to the fact that an ordinary crop of potatoes will produce twice as much alcohol as an ordinary crop of corn, and that the amount of alcohol produced from the ordinary potato may be largely increased, if not doubled, by planting potatoes especially suited for this purpose. He said that it would be within bounds to say that 500 gallons of alcohol 95 per cent pure could be produced from one acre of potatoes. He also called attention to the fact that the corn stalks from an acre of ripe corn would produce more alcohol than the corn itself. Without referring to other sources of supply, such as beets, sweet potatoes, yams, and cassavas equally serviceable, it is evident that alcohol can be produced and sold at a cost so small that it would readily compete with the present price of gasoline and kerosene in many localities. This is not a matter of mere guess. What has been done in other countries can be done here. In Germany alcohol has been sold as low as 12 cents per gallon, and is being largely used there for light, heat, and power. The conditions in Cuba are still more favorable, and alcohol there serves the same purposes at a still lower figure. It has been urged that the material for producing alcohol can not be raised as cheaply here as in Germany because of the difference in price of labor. This may be true of the production of beets, but it is certainly not true of potatoes, which can be planted, cultivated, dug, and placed in the wagon box for market by machinery. It is a product of the cheapest kind of land with practically no hand labor. America beats the world in that kind of productions. To get this fuel as cheaply as possible I believe you should allow small distilleries on the cooperation plan, such as they have in some European countries, so that the farm products can be hauled directly from the farms to the distillery, and the alcohol taken from the distillery to be used after being denatured without the addition of too much cost for transportation. In this way you can no doubt have very cheap alcohol. So judging by the experience in Germany this law would afford the farmers a very important market, as it would no doubt soon double the present production of alcoholic spirit. Almost 30,000,000 bushels of grain besides a large amount of sirup is now used annually for the production of alcohol. This means a large market, one that will be constantly expanding and against which no hostile tariff can interfere. The president of the Great Northern Railway Company said a few years ago that the oriental market for some 5,000,000 bushels of wheat had increased the price of wheat here at least 5 cents per bushel. If that was true, what then can be said of the effect of this demand?

People who have not given this matter any consideration may feel that these claims are extravagant, and for fear that some may think that my views need corroboration I wish to call your attention to a statement made a few days ago by the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wilson. He said, in part, before the Ways and Means Committee of this House:

In the future—it may be some time in the future—the time will certainly come when the world will have to look to agriculture for the production of its fuel, its light, and its power. It seems to me that through the medium of alcohol agriculture can furnish in the most convenient form for use of man this absolutely necessary source of supply. I believe, therefore, that the utilization of alcohol in the arts and in the industries, under such restrictions as would safeguard the fiscal right of the United States Government, would prove not only a great stimulus to the manufacturers, but a great benefit to agriculture.

United States Consul-General F. H. Mason, of Berlin, speaking in a special consular report of the use of alcohol in Germany, says:

At its present price of 15 marks per hectoliter (about 13 cents per gallon) it competes economically with steam and all other forms of motive energy in engines of less than 20 horsepower for thrashing, pumping, and all other kinds of farm work, so that a large percentage of the spirit produced in agricultural districts remote from coal fields is consumed in the district where it is grown. The motor for farm use is tightly inclosed and absolutely free from danger of fire.

He also speaks of alcohol engines as having advantages over other engines in that they are immediately ready for operation, clean and free from odors, and possessing greater economy of maintenance. In this he is strongly corroborated by the distinguished scientist, Prof. Elihu Thompson.

The denatured alcohol is especially suited for the production of light. One gallon of this alcohol will produce twice as much light as a gallon of kerosene. The alcohol lamp does not smoke or gum. It is easily cleaned and with a Welsbach burner gives a strong white light closely resembling an electric light. Hundreds of millions of gallons of kerosene are used each year in this country for light, while a much better and cheaper light could be supplied from alcohol. In Germany an alcohol heating stove is made and used. It is said to give very good results and at a very low figure for cost. Such a stove could, no doubt, be used here to great advantage. Of late the internal combustion engine has come rapidly into general use. The demand for it is very great. It is wanted, among other things, for pumping water, grinding feed, sawing wood, elevating grain, turning printing presses, and running machines in small mills, shops, and factories. It is wanted for automobiles. The only fuel available at this time for the operation of this engine is gasoline. The supply of gasoline is limited, as it is a by-product of kerosene. The petroleum of the South and West produces very little gasoline, while the petroleum of the East only produces 5 to 10 per cent. It has become necessary to find a market for immense quantities of kerosene to be able to produce at a profit a sufficient amount of gasoline. The demand for this gasoline has been very great. Some has been imported and the price has risen rapidly, so that in my locality it is sold as high as 20 to 25 cents per gallon. If the demand for these engines is to be met it is necessary to find some other fuel than gasoline. Alcohol answers the purpose and has many advantages over it. It is said to give more power than gasoline, is cleaner, produces no disagreeable odors, is more reliable, and can be handled without danger of explosion and fire.

It is the ideal fuel for the farm engine. Give this alcohol to use free of revenue tax and you will gradually see a cheaper, cleaner, and better lamp replacing the kerosene lamp; the alcohol stove free from the disagreeable odor of gasoline and much safer than the gasoline stove will be used for cooking and to quite an extent for heating. The alcohol engine will be doing duty everywhere; the automobile needs it to make possible and secure its future. Some day it may draw our plows, harvest and thresh our crops, as it is now doing to quite an extent in Germany. Many industries now suffering for lack of this cheap industrial agent will profit immensely. But it is not necessary to enumerate the advantages, as they must be apparent to all.

No doubt alcohol has in the ages past been more of a curse than a blessing, but I believe the day is at hand when the temperance people can work hand in hand with the distillers for the production of alcohol, not for drink, but for industrial uses, not to impoverish and debase, but to enrich and bless with the comforts and conveniences of life. It appears clear to me that there is no justice in retaining this tax which affords but a meager revenue, as the tax is so high that the use of grain alcohol is prohibited for the purposes for which denatured alcohol can be used. The wood alcohol has taken its place. Careful estimates would indicate that only from three to five hundred thousand dollars in revenue would be lost by enacting this law. The added stimulus given business by allowing tax free alcohol would no doubt in a large measure recoup this loss. A small tax upon the alcohol now used free of tax to fortify sweet wines, as recommended by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, would, I believe, more than make up the loss. This tax simply serves to shackle a great industry and to take away from the people a great opportunity.

Those engaged in producing wood alcohol, kerosene, and gasoline are profiting largely by this tax on industrial alcohol, and are of course opposed to this law. In 1896 it appeared in the hearings before the joint committee of Congres investigating this subject of denatured alcohol that the wood-alcohol people were an absolute monopoly, with power to fix prices arbitrarily without reference to the cost of the product. They had for years sold one-fourth of their product in foreign countries at a net price to them of about 27 cents per gallon, while they sold their product in this country for more than double that amount. The claim was made that their sales in foreign countries were at a loss, a thing I doubt very much. The sales were made at the European price to meet competition there, and it would seem to me that with our cheaper material for the production of wood alcohol it could be made as cheaply here as in Europe. I need not argue that this tax should not be retained on industrial alcohol to protect the producer of kerosene and gasoline. If there is anyone interested in the Standard Oil Company, let him make his plea for that company. The wood-alcohol trust and the Standard Oil trust ought not to prevail against a legislation so manifestly in the interest of fair play. They can not reasonably ask or expect that an industry with such vast possibilities for public good shall forever remain shackled for their special benefit. How quickly would they resent and condemn a tax upon their products; how strongly would they not urge its repeal? Let not past injustices be urged as an excuse for further injustices. No man has a vested right to retain the benefits of an unjust law at the expense of the public. The enactment of this law would not, in my judgment, destroy the wood-alcohol factories or send Rockefeller to the poorhouse. The production of wood alcohol and petroleum will continue to be necessary, but this law will tend to keep their prices within some reasonable limit. We are only asking that denatured alcohol shall have the same opportunity as the articles with which it comes in competition, the same opportunity as every other honest industry. We ask that an unfair law behind which monopolies shelter shall be repealed for the public good. [Loud applause.]

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield a minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Chairman, I just simply desire to reply to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] as to his statement that the scheme as proposed in my bill to restrict immigration was all moonshine. I desire to state, if he will take the trouble to read the bill that I have presented in Congress, he will find out whether it is all moonshine or not. He will find that it is the most restrictive and drastic measure that has ever been presented to this House, in my estimation.

Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I apologize to the gentleman for making an impolite statement in the heat of debate.

Mr. GRAHAM. I am very much obliged to the gentleman. I have no doubt he did not mean it in that sense, but I wanted the Members of the House to understand, and therefore I will insert my bill in the RECORD, so that the Members can get at the facts in the case. It is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty of $10 for each and every passenger not a citizen of the United States or of the Dominion of Canada, the Republic of Cuba, or of the Republic of Mexico who shall come by steam, sail, or other vessel from any foreign port to any port within the United States, or by any railway or any other mode of transportation, from foreign contiguous territory to the United States. The said duty shall be paid to the collector of customs of the port or customs district to which said alien passenger shall come, or, if there be no collector at such port or district, then to the collector nearest thereto, by the master, agent, owner, or consignee of every such vessel or transportation line. The money thus collected shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, and shall constitute a permanent appropriation, to be called the "immigrant fund," to be used under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to defray the expense of regulating the immigration of aliens into the United States under this act, including the cost of maintaining a bureau for furnishing aliens at ports of embarkation and domestic ports with information regarding different parts of the country, the needs and demands for labor therein, the resources and climate of the different sections of the country, also including the cost of reports of decisions of the Federal courts and digests thereof for the use of the Commissioner-General of Immigration, the cost of translating and printing certain parts of the immigration laws and regulations, and of printing application blanks and certificates of admission hereinafter provided for, and the salaries and expenses of all officers, clerks, and employees appointed especially for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this act. The duty imposed by this section shall be a lien upon the vessel which shall bring such aliens to ports of the United States, and shall be a debt in favor of the United States against the owner or owners of such vessels, and the payment of such duty may be enforced by any legal or equitable remedy. The head tax herein provided for shall not be levied upon aliens in transit through the United States, nor upon aliens who have once been admitted into the United States and have paid the head tax who later shall go in transit from one part of the United States to another through foreign contiguous territory: Provided, That the Commissioner-General of Immigration, under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, by agreement with transportation lines, as provided in section 32 of this act, may arrange in some other manner for the payment of the duty imposed by this section upon aliens seeking admission overland, either as to all or as to any such aliens.

SEC. 2. That the following classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States: All idiots, insane, or feeble-minded persons, epileptics, and persons who have at any time previously been insane; paupers, persons likely to become public charges; professional beggars; persons afflicted with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease or with tuberculosis; persons who are wholly dependent for their support upon their own physical exertions and who are afflicted with a chronic disease or whose physical or mental condition is such as would incapacitate them for such work; persons who have been convicted of a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude other than a purely political offense; bigamists; anarchists, or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States or of all government or of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials; prostitutes, and persons who procure or attempt to bring in prostitutes or women for the purpose of prostitution; those who have been within one year from the date of the application for admission into the United States deported as being under offers, solicitations, promises, or agreements to perform labor or service of some kind therein; any person over 10 years of age who can not read and write; any person over 60 years of age who will be dependent upon his or her own exertions, unless he or she be one who has been sent for as hereinafter provided; any child under 18 years of age unaccompanied by any parent, grandparent, or lawfully appointed guardian, unless such child has been sent for as hereinafter provided; and also any person whose ticket or passage is paid for with the money of another or who is assisted by others to come; but this section shall not be held to prevent persons who have become citizens of the United States, and who themselves are residing therein, from sending for a grandfather, grandmother, father, mother, brother, sister, child, or grandchild who is not of the foregoing excluded classes: Provided, That skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed can not be found in this country: And provided further, That the provisions of this law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession, or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants: And provided further, That no aliens shall be admitted into the United States without first having obtained from the diplomatic or consular officer of the United States nearest his or her place of residence a certificate of admission as shall be hereinafter provided for. Upon receipt of application for such certificate the diplomatic or consular officer shall furnish the applicant with a copy of the United States immigration laws, as well as of the regulations governing the admission of immigrants under the provisions of this act, which shall be translated in the language of the government to which he is accredited, and he shall require said applicant to fill out and execute under oath a formal application in triplicate, to be prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, setting forth the reason of the applicant's desire to become a citizen of the United States; his or her trade or occupation; date and place of birth; names of his or her grandparents, parents, brothers, or sisters; if married, name of his or her wife or husband and of children and grandchildren, if any; present and previous residence; state of health; his or her intended destination in the United States, and intentions upon reaching there; and whether he or she is the owner of real or personal estate, and if so, of what description and value. With said formal application the diplomatic or consular officer shall also require a certificate, also in triplicate of the chief officer or minister of police where such applicant resides to the effect that the applicant is under no charge of crime or violation of law, and has not been for a period of five years. Upon receipt of such application and certificate the diplomatic officer shall, if same be in proper form, communicate (and the consular officer shall so act through the proper diplomatic representative) with the foreign office of the government to which he is accredited with a view to ascertaining whether for any reason said applicant would not be permitted to emigrate. Upon satisfying himself as to whether or not the applicant is in every particular under the provisions of this act entitled to admission into the United States the diplomatic or consular officer shall forward the original and duplicate (retaining the triplicate for the records of his office) application and certificate, with complete description of the applicant, to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, with his recommendation. In the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall be vested the power to refuse the issuance of certificate of admission to any person not entitled to admission under the provisions of this act, and also, in his discretion, to persons whose intentions are to take up his or her residence in any city or town having a population consisting of over 30 per cent of foreign-born residents: Provided, That such person is not a grandparent, parent, wife or husband, brother or sister, or child or grandchild of a parent already in the United States and shall have come after having been sent for, as herein provided; and any alien who shall take up his or her residence at a place other than that described in his or her application shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, when apprehended, shall be deported in accordance with existing law. If the Secretary of Commerce and Labor decides that the applicant is entitled by law to admission he shall cause to be issued in duplicate a certificate containing a complete and accurate description of the applicant, his or her final destination in the United States, and the names of his or her grandparents, parents, brothers, sisters, wife or husband, and children and grandchildren, if any, granting to the applicant admission into the United States at any time within the period of ninety days after thirty days from the date thereof, provided said applicant shall be found, upon examination by immigration officers at the port of arrival, entitled physically and mentally to admission under the provisions of this act, and these shall be forwarded to the diplomatic or consular officer to whom the application was made. The diplomatic or consular officer shall notify applicant of their receipt, and immediately prior to said applicant's departure, and upon receipt of a fee, to be reported and accounted for by said officer, to be prescribed by the Secretary of State, in the currency of the country of the applicant as nearly equivalent as is possible to $1.50 United States currency, and also of a certificate of good health issued by an officer of the United States Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service at the port of departure, he shall forward the original certificate to the applicant and at the same time the duplicate to the immigration officer at the port of arrival of the immigrant, for his information and guidance. No alien shall be admitted into the United States without a certificate provided for in this act, and any alien arriving without such certificate shall be returned to the country from whence he or she came, at the expense of the steamship or railroad company which brought him or her.

Mr. Chairman, under this bill all that the gentleman from Massachusetts has been contending for is provided. A rigid examination is made on the other side of the water by United States diplomatic or consular officers.

That is where the examination should be made and the restrictions take effect, and then if the applicants for immigration make any false statements, or if they settle in any city or town having a population consisting of over 30 per cent of foreign-born residents they can be deported for making such false statements or settling in places from which they have been restricted. The gentleman states that he was not desirous of simply keeping out a few thousand indesirable aliens, but he wanted to cut this great influx of immigration in two. Let him help me pass this measure, and if it becomes a law I will guarantee that he will see a cut of at least 75 per cent.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES].

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, on yesterday the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] made a statement which I think if allowed to stand in the RECORD as it now reads will not only mislead the living, but will do grave injustice to the memory of the dead. On page 3496 of the RECORD the objectionable statement in question is found in the words of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY], as follows:

He [Andrew Jackson] was almost as good a protectionist as Henry Clay.

To get the connection I will read the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. LACEY. Yes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. In the days of Henry Clay nearly all Congressmen wore homespun, didn't they?

Mr. LACEY. They did not pride themselves upon it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Why didn't they?

Mr. LACEY. Because they did not have the American spirit Henry Clay had.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Was Henry Clay the only man in the United States at that time that had the American spirit?

Mr. LACEY. No; Andrew Jackson declared in favor of protection to American industries. He was almost as good a protectionist in his day as Henry Clay.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I know, but the gentleman undertakes to make the remark on the floor of the House that Henry Clay was a great natural curiosity because he wore homespun clothing, when everybody wore it.

Mr. LACEY. Why, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman who addresses me now has American clothing on. He also stands in American shoes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Certainly I have, and any man who has any sense will buy an American suit if he can get the same quality cheaper than he can a foreign suit.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have no desire in the world to get into a war of words with any gentleman on the floor of this House for the purpose of simply warring with words or otherwise; but I do think that when Members of Congress—and I do not mean to be severe in my criticism—discuss these great questions, knowing the confiding public will read them, they ought not to voice statements that are calculated to mislead the people. I myself may be guilty of that which I may be indirectly accusing others, but I am sure it is not intentional, and am satisfied that with my friend from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] it is the same way; but the fact is that the gentleman is charging, in effect, that Henry Clay was always a protectionist like the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] is now; that Andrew Jackson was practically the same kind of a protectionist. These utterances are misleading, and I shall try and state the facts.

I believe the gentleman makes a limitation by using the words "almost as good a protectionist in his day as Henry Clay."

Now, Mr. Chairman, I deny that Henry Clay either lived or died the kind of protectionist that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] is now living. He was no "stand-patter," and he, in his later years, when, in substance, he saw that the American manufactories were no longer "infants," proceeded to join hands with the Democratic reformers, and finally he got down to where he used language in substance such as this—that he was ready to frame a tariff along the "revenue" lines of his Democratic opponents.

Mind you, now, I am not claiming that Mr. Clay at the beginning, say 1810, and along there when we framed a tariff for the purpose of excluding foreign imports to build up infant manufactures at home, to furnish our people with homemade clothing and other things, but I speak of Mr. Clay's latter-day record. In 1840, Mr. Chairman, he used this language:

No one, Mr. President, in the commencement of the protective policy ever supposed that it was to be perpetual.

The gentleman from Iowa wants it "perpetual." He has associated himself, as he had a right to do, with Henry Clay as his foster father in protection. But Mr. Clay says it was not intended to make perpetual protective tariffs. Mr. Clay continued:

We hoped and believed that temporary protection extended to our infant manufactures would bring them up and enable them to withstand competition with those of Europe. If the protective policy were entirely to cease in 1842 it would have existed twenty-six years from 1816, or eighteen from 1824, quite as long as at either of these periods its friends supposed might be necessary.

That he said sixty-six years ago. Again, in 1842, Mr. Clay said:

Let me not be misunderstood, and let me entreat that I may not be misrepresented. I am not advocating the revival of a high protective tariff. I am abiding by the principles of the compromise act.

No revival of a "high" protective tariff, said he.

Now, Mr. Chairman, in 1833, when Andrew Jackson was President, Mr. Clay in part said this:

Now, give us time—

Now, that sounds a little like the gentleman from Iowa in 1906. "Give us time" until our infant giants come to be major giants to control all the markets of the world, and then we will let down the tariff bars.

Mr. Clay said:

Now, give us time; cease all fluctuation and agitations for nine years, and the manufacturers in every branch will sustain themselves against foreign competition.

That was seventy-three years ago, Mr. Chairman, but still the gentleman from Iowa is a "stand-patter." He would have protective tariff nine hundred and ninety-nine years, and have the tariff wall nine hundred and ninety-nine feet high.

Away back in the early framing of our tariff laws, in 1810, almost at the beginning, Mr. Clay used language that reads thus:

But it is important to diminish our imports, to furnish ourselves with clothing made by our own industry, and to cease to be dependent for the very coats we wear upon foreign and perhaps inimical country. The nation that imports its clothing from abroad is but little less dependent than if it imported its bread.

Mr. Chairman, in 1810 our manufactories were "infants" if they ever were. But compare the tariff rates then with those of 1906—a mouse to a white elephant gives you a fair comparison.

The manufacturers were not to be always on infantile legs, and did not expect them to continue to be so, so that in 1833 Mr. Clay says that nine years of protection is all they need.

Once having had a good taste of protection, the manufacturers contended for more and "perpetual" protection at that, which Mr. Clay says was not contemplated.

Why, you let the manufacturers come in and make a part of one of our tariff bills, I think it was the McKinley bill. Senator MCCREARY told me himself that the manufacturers came into the committee room, and he saw the handwriting of the manufacturers where they wrote into the face of the McKinley bill some of the rates of that measure.

This was charged upon the floor of this House by the lamented and gifted son of West Virginia, Mr. William L. Wilson. It was not denied by anyone. Go read Mr. Wilson's speech and you will find I quote him correctly in substance.

In 1833 Mr. Clay, in urging the "compromise tariff" in lieu of the "tariff of abominations" of 1828—made by the wise men and manufacturers, and with the making of which Mr. Clay had nothing to do, because he was then Secretary of State, Mr. Clay said:

I am anxious to find out some principle of mutual accommodation to satisfy, as far as practicable, both parties; to increase the stability of our legislation; and at some distant day—but not too distant, when we can take into view the magnitude of the interests which are involved—to bring down the rate of duties to that revenue standard for which our opponents have so long contended.

Yes; Jackson was a good revenue reformer; so was Henry Clay. Neither was a "stand-patter;" and I stand here to-day to remind my friend from Iowa and other "stand-patters" that they do violence when they refer to Henry Clay and claim he clung to anything like stand-pat protection or held any tax rate as sacred.

Mr. LACEY. When Henry Clay and the other gentleman figured with him on the immediate effect of the compromise act of 1833, with an annual reduction of the tariff down to the revenue point, which had to run to 1837, does the gentleman remember what happened in 1837?

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Oh, now, you want to go off on the question of finance and State-bank issues and panics. I want to discuss this one thing—tariff and Henry Clay and Andrew Jackson. If you want to discuss panics or finance, I will go back into the miserable time when the McKinley tariff produced a deficit in 1893 or 1894 and after the Harrison Administration had gone out and the Cleveland Administration had come in the Cleveland Administration on account of this deficit which it found had to issue bonds. I have discussed that question here for nine years, until I have grown gray and feel that I have seriously taxed the patience of the House.

Mr. LACEY. I was going to ask the gentleman if it was not true that the fruits of that Clay compromise, which took away protection, resulted in the panic of 1837 and the worst ruin this country ever saw prior to the Democratic panic of 1894?

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Why didn't you go into history yesterday and prove that, instead of simply stating it as you do now in the House? You will notice that on these questions of such importance I do not simply get up—and I say it respectfully to my friend—I do not simply get up and say so and so and leave it with my own unsupported statement, but I go and get the records and read the proof to the House. There are none so deaf as those who will not listen when you are giving them what Paddy gave the drum, to wit, the truth. There is none so blind as an Iowa stand-patter. [Laughter.] They will not see the truth even if neighbor Governor Cummins states and restates it.

Let me go a little further. Here, again, is what Mr. Clay said:

If there is any truth in political economy, it can not be that result will agree with the prediction, for we are instructed by our experience that the consumption of any article is in proportion to the reduction of its price, and that, in general, it may be taken as a rule that the duty upon an article forms a part of its price.

Now, I see my friend from Iowa is not listening again. [Laughter.] Here I find Clay totally disagreeing with my distinguished friend from Iowa. I will read that clause again:

And that, in general, it may be taken as a rule that the duty upon an article forms a part of its price.

Senator Sherman and Mr. Reed, our late Speaker, said the same thing.

Now, in the nine years I have been hearing my distinguished friend from Iowa hold this House spellbound in defending trust-making tariffs he never made any such statement as that, and you might wait nine hundred and ninety-nine years and the gentleman never would agree that the tariff tax became a part of the price of an article.

So, gentlemen, I have read a lot of utterances here from Henry Clay, who, in his early days in the jungles of dear old Kentucky, was glad to wear any kind of clothes that he could get, a condition that, I dare say, my distinguished Iowa friend never found himself in at any time. I dare say he always had whatever he wanted. I hope he always will; but sooner or later Henry Clay saw, and this is the point I make, that manufacturers were not always infants, always needing mammies to put pap in their lips. He saw that manufacturers from 1810 to 1833, about twenty-three years, had risen to a point where they only needed nine years' more protection for the infants to stand alone. And yet here is my dear Iowa friend, who, sooner or later, will be gathered to his fathers, wanting, in 1906, to stand by these giants, to help up the same giants that stood by Henry Clay in their majestic strength sixty years ago.

Now, my friend, who is familiar with these facts, had forgotten them yesterday, and I wanted then to correct him, but I would not interrupt my friend from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], who was making his usual magnificent defense of a revenue tariff, keeping up a good Democratic contribution to the RECORD, to go alongside of the bad reading (from our standpoint) of the gentleman's good speech (from his standpoint), and so I have deferred it until to-day to reply to the gentleman from Iowa.

So now we have Henry Clay coming to where he is almost as good a tariff Democrat as Andrew Jackson. I insist neither was a "stand-patter."

Just a word, in passing, on Jackson getting the Government out of debt. In 1832 he said to Congress:

I can not too cordially congratulate Congress and my fellow-citizens on the near approach of that memorable and happy event—the extinction of the public debt of this great and free nation. Faithful to the wise and patriotic policy marked out by the legislation of the country for this object, the present Administration has devoted to it all the means which a flourishing commerce has supplied and a prudent economy preserved for the public Treasury.

Now, let us see what President Andrew Jackson said in his "farewell address" to his country. After he had gone through the great struggle with Nick Biddle and his corrupting monopoly, and crushed both, what else did he do? He approved a great number of tariff-reform laws. He reduced the tariff. What else? He crushed every thing else that undertook to "run" Congress, defy the law, and outrage the people of this country.

Jackson was a great private citizen, an illustrious soldier, a great, clean, and upright and fearless President, so much so that even the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] alludes to him with pride and pleasure, as we all do. His experience with tariff makers and monopolists for eight years had reimpressed him with the evils that flow from such sources, and when he came to lay down his high trust he wrote a farewell address, among other things commending the Farewell Address of George Washington, which I may say here you did not think enough of the other day—Washington's Birthday—to have read. I was up in Connecticut making a speech to the Sons of the American Revolution that day, and they asked me, having seen in the papers the action of the House, what in the world the House meant by not reading Washington's Farewell Address. I told them I wasn't allowed to know. [Laughter.]

Now, this illustrious President, Andrew Jackson, in his farewell address, speaks of the duties of the citizen and lawmaker thus:

In the legislation of Congress, also, and in every measure of the General Government, justice to every portion of the United States should be faithfully observed.

No free government can stand without virtue in the people and a lofty spirit of patriotism, and if the sordid feelings of mere selfishness shall usurp the place which ought to be filled by public spirit the legislation of Congress will soon be converted into a scramble for personal and sectional advantages.

Under our free institutions the citizens of every quarter of our country are capable of attaining a high degree of prosperity and happiness without seeking to profit themselves at the expense of others; and every such attempt must in the end fail to succeed, for the people in every part of the United States are too enlightened not to understand their own rights and interests and to detect and defeat every effort to gain undue advantages over them; and when such designs are discovered it naturally provokes resentments which can not always be easily allayed.

Justice—full and ample justice—to every portion of the United States should be the ruling principle of every freeman, and should guide the deliberations of every public body, whether it be State or national.

Mr. Chairman, these are wise and lofty sentiments that we should live up to to-day.

Again, he spoke of unjust tariffs in part thus:

There is perhaps no one of the powers conferred on the Federal Government so liable to abuse as the taxing power.

The most productive and convenient sources of revenue were necessarily given to it, that it might be able to perform the important duties imposed upon it; and the taxes which it lays upon commerce being concealed from the real payer in the price of the article, they do not so readily attract the attention of the people as smaller sums demanded from them directly by the taxgatherer—

He says the tariff tax is "concealed" from the "real payer." How? "In the price of the article." But the gentleman from Iowa will deny that; yet Clay also admitted, in effect, this as a fact—

But the tax imposed on goods enhances by so much the price of the commodity to the consumer—

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman will dispute that—and as many of these duties are imposed on articles of necessity which are daily used by the great body of the people, the money raised by these imposts is drawn from their pockets.

Congress has no right under the Constitution to take money from the people unless it is required to execute some one of the specific powers intrusted to the Government; and if they raise more than is necessary for such purposes, it is an abuse of the power of taxation, and unjust and oppressive.

It may indeed happen that the revenue will sometimes exceed the amount anticipated when the taxes were laid.

When, however, this is ascertained, it is easy to reduce them, and in such a case it is unquestionably the duty of the Government to reduce them, for no circumstances can justify it in assuming a power not given to it by the Constitution nor in taking away the money of the people when it is not needed for the legitimate wants of the Government.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Iowa says: "Touch not, handle not, 'reduce' not a single tariff rate. Stand pat; these rates are sacred." Neither Jackson nor Clay ever uttered a "stand-pat" sentiment.

Continuing, Andrew Jackson further said:

The result of this decision has been felt in the rapid extinguishment of the public debt and the large accumulation of a surplus in the Treasury, notwithstanding the tariff was reduced and is now very far below the amount originally contemplated by its advocates.

But, rely upon it, the design to collect an extravagant revenue and to burden you with taxes beyond the economical wants of the Government is not yet abandoned. The various interests which have combined together to impose a heavy tariff and to produce an overflowing Treasury are too strong and have too much at stake to surrender the contest.

The corporations and wealthy individuals who are engaged in large manufacturing establishments desire a high tariff to increase their gains.

Designing politicians will support it to conciliate their favor and to obtain the means of profuse expenditure for the purpose of purchasing influence in other quarters; and since the people have decided that the Federal Government can not be permitted to employ its income in internal improvements, efforts will be made to seduce and mislead the citizens of the several States by holding out to them the deceitful prospect of benefits to be derived from a surplus revenue collected by the General Government and annually divided among the States; and if, encouraged by these fallacious hopes, the States should disregard the principles of economy which ought to characterize every republican government, and should indulge in lavish expenditures exceeding their resources, they will before long find themselves oppressed with debts they are unable to pay, and the temptation will become irresistible to support a high tariff in order to obtain a surplus for distribution.

[Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, Jackson warned his countrymen against "corporations and wealthy individuals engaged in large manufacturing establishments" and "high tariffs and designing politicians." Was he a false prophet?

I continue to read Jackson's address:

Do not allow yourself, my fellow-citizens, to be misled on this subject. The Federal Government can not collect a surplus for such purposes without violating the principles of the Constitution and assuming powers which have not been granted.

It is, moreover, a system of injustice, and if persisted in will inevitably lead to corruption, and must end in ruin.

The surplus revenue will be drawn from the pockets of the people—from the farmer, the mechanic, and the laboring classes of society; but who will receive it when distributed among the States, where it is to be disposed of by leading State politicians, who have friends to favor and political partisans to gratify?

It will certainly not be returned to those who paid it and who have most need of it, and are honestly entitled to it—

He speaks, Mr. Chairman, of the "safe rule"—

There is but one safe rule, and that is to confine the General Government rigidly within the sphere of its appropriate duties. It has no power to raise a revenue or impose taxes except for purposes enumerated in the Constitution, and if its income is found to exceed these wants it should be forthwith reduced and the burden of the people so far lightened.

In concluding his address Jackson said:

In presenting to you, my fellow-citizens, these parting counsels, I have brought before you the leading principles upon which I endeavored to administer the Government in the high office with which you twice honored me.

Knowing that the path of freedom is continually beset by enemies who often assume the disguise of friends, I have devoted the last hours of my public life to warn you of the dangers.

The progress of the United States under our free and happy institutions has surpassed the most sanguine hopes of the founders of the Republic.

Our growth has been rapid beyond all former examples in numbers, in wealth, in knowledge, and all the useful arts which contribute to the comforts and convenience of man, and from the earliest ages of history to the present day there never have been 13,000,000 of people associated in one political body who enjoyed so much freedom and happiness as the people of these United States.

You have no longer any cause to fear danger from abroad; your strength and power are well known throughout the civilized world, as well as the high and gallant bearing of your sons.

It is from within, among yourselves—from cupidity, from corruption, from disappointed ambition and inordinate thirst for power—that factions will be formed and liberty endangered.

It is against such designs, whatever disguise the actors may assume, that you have especially to guard yourselves.

You have the highest of human trusts committed to your care. Providence has showered on this favored land blessings without number, and has chosen you as the guardians of freedom to preserve it for the benefit of the human race.

May He who holds in His hands the destinies of nations make you worthy of the favors he has bestowed and enable you with pure hearts and pure hands and sleepless vigilance to guard and defend to the end of time the great charge He has committed to your keeping.

My own race is nearly run; advanced age and failing health warn me that before long I must pass beyond the reach of human events and cease to feel the vicissitudes of human affairs.

I thank God that my life has been spent in a land of liberty and that He has given me a heart to love my country with the affection of a son. And filled with gratitude for your constant and unwavering kindness, I bid you a last and affectionate farewell.

ANDREW JACKSON.

[Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. CURRIER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 15331—the Indian appropriation bill—and had come to no resolution thereon.

THE LATE BENJAMIN F. MARSH AND JOHN M. PINCKNEY.

Mr. McKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of an order fixing a day for memorial addresses on the life, character, and services of the late Hon. BENJAMIN F. MARSH, of Illinois.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would like to add the name of the late Hon. JOHN M. PINCKNEY, of Texas, to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Illinois. It will be perfectly satisfactory to have the addresses follow those on the late Representative MARSH.

The SPEAKER. That can be added to the order, if there be no objection.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That a session of the House be held on Sunday, April 15, 1906, and that the day be set apart for addresses on the lives, characters, and public services of Hon. BENJAMIN F. MARSH, late a Member of the House of Representatives from the State of Illinois, and Hon. JOHN M. PINCKNEY, late a Representative from the State of Texas.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the order which the Clerk has just reported? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the order.

The question was taken; and the order was agreed to.

PURE-FOOD BILL.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I filed to-day from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce a report on the bill (S. 88), known as the pure-food bill. I ask unanimous consent that the minority have until a week from to-morrow to file its views.

Mr. BARTLETT. That is to include to-morrow week, the whole of the day?

Mr. MANN. A week from to-morrow. Of course that would include the whole of the day.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT ON BILL FOR RELIEF OF P. S. CORBETT.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent as chairman of the Committee on Claims to make a supplemental report in connection with the bill S. 1894. There was left out of the report as originally made by the committee some important matter which should have gone in the report for the information of the House.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To what bill does this apply?

Mr. MILLER. To a bill for the relief of P. S. Corbett. It is a Senate bill which has passed the Senate.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have no objection.

There was no objection.

DAM ACROSS CHOCTAWHATCHEE RIVER.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 14808.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14808) authorizing the Choctawhatchee Power Company to erect a dam in Dale County, Ala.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Choctawhatchee Power Company, its successors and assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to erect, build, have, and maintain a steel and concrete dam, or dam of other material, on the Choctawhatchee River at a point above the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad bridge near Newton, on said river and in Dale County, Ala.: Provided, That the plans of said dam shall be submitted to and be approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War before construction is commenced; and the Secretary of War may at any time require and enforce, at the expense of the owners, such modifications in the construction of said dam as he may deem advisable in the interests of navigation: Provided further, That there shall be placed and maintained in connection with said dam a sluiceway so arranged as to permit logs, timber, and lumber to pass around, through, or over said dam without unreasonable delay or hindrance and without toll or charges; and suitable fishways, to be approved by the United States Fish Commission, shall be constructed and maintained on said dam.

SEC. 2. That this act shall be null and void unless the dam herein authorized is commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date hereof.

SEC. 3. That the right to amend or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I desire to inquire if the gentleman will inform the House how the word "steel" and how the word "dam" is spelled in the bill?

Mr. CLAYTON. They are spelled in the usual proper way. When a bill is as clean as this the word "steel" is spelled correctly, and when the bill is so honestly and clearly drawn the word "dam" is spelled properly.

Mr. SHERMAN. What is proper under those circumstances?

Mr. CLAYTON. The spelling is in accordance with the rules of good English. "Dam" is spelled without an "n."

Mr. SHERMAN. I wanted to know what was the rule for good English in the gentleman's country.

Mr. CLAYTON. The word "steel" is always spelled with the double "e" in a clean bill like this.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I have not any interest in the orthography of the bill, but I would like to inquire whether the Government has spent any money on this river where this dam is located?

Mr. CLAYTON. Not one cent. This dam is to be constructed on this river at a point where it is not navigable. It is above a railroad bridge and never will be navigable at the point where it is proposed to erect this dam, and the War Department has approved the bill. I hold here in my hand the report approving it and it is the desire of the citizens of that neighborhood to utilize this power that is now going to waste.

Mr. PAYNE. On the statement of the gentleman I think I am in favor of the bill.

Mr. CLAYTON. I am glad the gentleman is. It is on the Choctaw-hatchee River and not the Chocta-whatchee, as the Clerk insists on calling it. If he was acquainted with Indian nomenclature I suppose he would know the difference between Choctaw-hatchee and Chocta-whatchee.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be put upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CLAYTON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 648. An act granting a pension to Charles Falbisaner;
H. R. 2108. An act granting a pension to Mattie Settlemire;
H. R. 3250. An act granting a pension to Harrison White;
H. R. 3502. An act granting a pension to Morris Osborn;
H. R. 3983. An act granting a pension to Blanche Douglass;
H. R. 4826. An act granting a pension to Leola V. Franks;
H. R. 5711. An act granting a pension to Richard H. Kelly;
H. R. 6076. An act granting a pension to Anna M. Case;
H. R. 6400. An act granting a pension to Harry W. Omo;
H. R. 6489. An act granting a pension to Mary E. Scott;
H. R. 6613. An act granting a pension to Thomas J. Stevens;
H. R. 6859. An act granting a pension to Eva B. Koch;
H. R. 7240. An act granting a pension to Glawvina A. Pinnell;
H. R. 7636. An act granting a pension to John J. Meeler;
H. R. 9253. An act granting a pension to Vollie A. McMillen;
H. R. 9530. An act granting a pension to Catherine B. Casey;
H. R. 10457. An act granting a pension to Lizzie Bremmer;
H. R. 10459. An act granting a pension to Alta M. Westenhaver;
H. R. 10476. An act granting a pension to Charles T. Hesler;
H. R. 10483. An act granting a pension to James Galit;
H. R. 10611. An act granting a pension to John J. Brewer;
H. R. 10967. An act granting a pension to George Larson;
H. R. 11051. An act granting a pension to Henry T. McDowell;
H. R. 11630. An act granting a pension to Harriet E. St. John;
H. R. 11846. An act granting a pension to Clara M. Thompson;
H. R. 12285. An act granting a pension to Mary C. Kirkland;
H. R. 12297. An act granting a pension to Estelle Kuhn;
H. R. 524. An act granting an increase of pension to Sylvenus A. Fay;
H. R. 650. An act granting an increase of pension to Felix G. Stidger;
H. R. 1032. An act granting an increase of pension to Seth Phillips;
H. R. 1043. An act granting an increase of pension to Horace Hounsom;
H. R. 1200. An act granting an increase of pension to John G. Parker;
H. R. 1287. An act granting an increase of pension to John D. Moore;
H. R. 1359. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry M. Robinson;
H. R. 1483. An act granting an increase of pension to Josephine E. Quentin;
H. R. 1484. An act granting an increase of pension to John L. Lovell;
H. R. 1485. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan J. Williams;
H. R. 1585. An act granting an increase of pension to George N. Dutcher;
H. R. 1658. An act granting an increase of pension to George M. Drake;
H. R. 1859. An act granting an increase of pension to George T. B. Carr;
H. R. 1889. An act granting an increase of pension to William M. Shultz;
H. R. 1902. An act granting an increase of pension to Gilbert Ford;
H. R. 1909. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander Miller;
H. R. 1975. An act granting an increase of pension to William House;
H. R. 1978. An act granting an increase of pension to Harry C. Thorne;
H. R. 1979. An act granting an increase of pension to Amanda L. Hill;
H. R. 2048. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Cooper;
H. R. 2054. An act granting an increase of pension to Ralph A. Adams;
H. R. 2059. An act granting an increase of pension to Jerome Washburn;
H. R. 2114. An act granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Bibb;
H. R. 2116. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel Hays;
H. R. 2156. An act granting an increase of pension to Rachel E. Ware;
H. R. 2174. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel Buchanan;
H. R. 2204. An act granting an increase of pension to Dexter E. W. Stone;
H. R. 2306. An act granting an increase of pension to James W. Stell;
H. R. 2307. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Jones Martin;
H. R. 2478. An act granting an increase of pension to Asa M. Foote;
H. R. 2595. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter D. Sutton;
H. R. 2703. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen Weeks;
H. R. 2709. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius D. Rogers;
H. R. 2762. An act granting an increase of pension to William Chandler;
H. R. 2823. An act granting an increase of pension to Orton D. Ford;
H. R. 2849. An act granting an increase of pension to Jesse Harrison;
H. R. 2949. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Adamson;
H. R. 2954. An act granting an increase of pension to Chauncey P. Dean;
H. R. 3193. An act granting an increase of pension to James R. Todd;
H. R. 3220. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Johnson;
H. R. 3230. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Beulen;
H. R. 3315. An act granting an increase of pension to Lewis L. Daugherty;
H. R. 3342. An act granting an increase of pension to Albin L. Ingram;
H. R. 3403. An act granting an increase of pension to George A Baker;
H. R. 3425. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren A. Blye;
H. R. 3483. An act granting an increase of pension to Lemuel P. Williams;
H. R. 3500. An act granting an increase of pension to William M. Martin;

H. R. 3544. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah M. Grier;
H. R. 3552. An act granting an increase of pension to David F. McDonald;
H. R. 3570. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan Whorton;
H. R. 3571. An act granting an increase of pension to Eber Watson;
H. R. 3679. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert M. Hunter;
H. R. 3966. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Jester;
H. R. 3973. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac P. Knight;
H. R. 4179. An act granting an increase of pension to Owen Donohoe;
H. R. 4192. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Cavanaugh, alias John Carpenter;
H. R. 4202. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Umstead;
H. R. 4206. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac Henry Ober;
H. R. 4221. An act granting an increase of pension to William Foat;
H. R. 4246. An act granting an increase of pension to George D. Street;
H. R. 4685. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Rich;
H. R. 4741. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen Dickerson;
H. R. 4751. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Sparling;
H. R. 4764. An act granting an increase of pension to Ahijah Brown;
H. R. 4878. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac H. Witherwax;
H. R. 4886. An act granting an increase of pension to Marquis De Lafayette Burket;
H. R. 4957. An act granting an increase of pension to Elijah J. Snodgrass;
H. R. 4962. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Sturgis;
H. R. 5028. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel P. Carll;
H. R. 5163. An act granting an increase of pension to William U. Mallorie;
H. R. 5186. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Fulton;
H. R. 5212. An act granting an increase of pension to Giles Q. Slocum;
H. R. 5605. An act granting an increase of pension to James S. Pelley;
H. R. 5640. An act granting an increase of pension to Abraham Mathews;
H. R. 5647. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter Wetterich;
H. R. 5656. An act granting an increase of pension to Darius H. Randall;
H. R. 5658. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Nichols;
H. R. 5692. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry G. Gardner;
H. R. 5708. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas T. Fallon;
H. R. 5753. An act granting an increase of pension to Sallie H. Murphy;
H. R. 5830. An act granting an increase of pension to Sylvenus Hardy;
H. R. 5855. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis L. Brown;
H. R. 5909. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Bynon;
H. R. 5938. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward J. McClaskey;
H. R. 5957. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Steck;
H. R. 6063. An act granting an increase of pension to Maria Dyer;
H. R. 6065. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Crowe;
H. R. 6085. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob C. Rardin;
H. R. 6098. An act granting an increase of pension to Sadie A. Walker;
H. R. 6109. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Ackert;
H. R. 6115. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward Sarlls;
H. R. 6117. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Dill;
H. R. 6133. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Bagley;
H. R. 6137. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Stowell;
H. R. 6178. An act granting an increase of pension to Carl W. Block;
H. R. 6226. An act granting an increase of pension to George Bruner;
H. R. 6340. An act granting an increase of pension to William D. Hatch;
H. R. 6398. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Henry;
H. R. 6399. An act granting an increase of pension to David Hanna;
H. R. 6408. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaiah Queman;
H. R. 6494. An act granting an increase of pension to William Hughes;
H. R. 6516. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Bailey;
H. R. 6538. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Rice;
H. R. 6565. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Hatter;
H. R. 6813. An act granting an increase of pension to Emsley Kinsauls;
H. R. 6873. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Phillips;
H. R. 6913. An act granting an increase of pension to John Gibbons;
H. R. 6941. An act granting an increase of pension to Alice Gearkee;
H. R. 6947. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Washburn;
H. R. 6962. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Phillips, jr.;
H. R. 6977. An act granting an increase of pension to Alfred S. Isaacs;
H. R. 6992. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Duffy;
H. R. 6993. An act granting an increase of pension to John Sarvis;
H. R. 7001. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew M. Dunham;
H. R. 7213. An act granting an increase of pension to Loucette E. Glavis;
H. R. 7222. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi J. Walton;
H. R. 7224. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles R. Ellis;
H. R. 7231. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel O'Tool;
H. R. 7238. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Campbell;
H. R. 7241. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Allhands;
H. R. 7525. An act granting an increase of pension to William K. Spencer;
H. R. 7576. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Brummett;
H. R. 7599. An act granting an increase of pension to William Holland;
H. R. 7600. An act granting an increase of pension to John Welch;
H. R. 7607. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie M. Smith;
H. R. 7628. An act granting an increase of pension to Lorenzo D. Stoker;
H. R. 7649. An act granting an increase of pension to William Leipnitz;
H. R. 7665. An act granting an increase of pension to Wesley J. Banks;
H. R. 7680. An act granting an increase of pension to William Shannon;
H. R. 7711. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Dunnan;
H. R. 7721. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel V. Lowary;

H. R. 7750. An act granting an increase of pension to Anton Reidmuller;
H. R. 7838. An act granting an increase of pension to S. Harriet Morris;
H. R. 7941. An act granting an increase of pension to Carlon B. Osborn;
H. R. 7948. An act granting an increase of pension to James W. Reynolds, alias William Reynolds;
H. R. 7955. An act granting an increase of pension to Newton E. Terrill;
H. R. 7982. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Kellogg;
H. R. 8043. An act granting an increase of pension to Lafayette Dodds;
H. R. 8044. An act granting an increase of pension to Angel Hausker;
H. R. 8061. An act granting an increase of pension to Heart Echard;
H. R. 8156. An act granting an increase of pension to Loren H. Howard;
H. R. 8169. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza C. Jones;
H. R. 8187. An act granting an increase of pension to Silas G. Elliott;
H. R. 8213. An act granting an increase of pension to William Monteith;
H. R. 8216. An act granting an increase of pension to Philipp Cline, alias Francis Klein;
H. R. 8233. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Power;
H. R. 8242. An act granting an increase of pension to John Alves;
H. R. 8251. An act granting an increase of pension to Abel S. Thompson;
H. R. 8253. An act granting an increase of pension to John Dolan;
H. R. 8288. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonathan Carr;
H. R. 8302. An act granting an increase of pension to Maurice Hayes;
H. R. 8317. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza Thompson;
H. R. 8406. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan W. Selfridge;
H. R. 8494. An act granting an increase of pension to David A. Jones;
H. R. 8520. An act granting an increase of pension to Alfred F. White;
H. R. 8541. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward H. Pinney;
H. R. 8556. An act granting an increase of pension to Ethan Blodgett;
H. R. 8562. An act granting an increase of pension to William Ostermann;
H. R. 8596. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Messerschmidt;
H. R. 8649. An act granting an increase of pension to William Bode;
H. R. 8663. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick A. Amende;
H. R. 8664. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Wascher;
H. R. 8714. An act granting an increase of pension to George Gibson;
H. R. 8794. An act granting an increase of pension to Stout Shearer;
H. R. 8846. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Todd;
H. R. 8847. An act granting an increase of pension to Philip B. Thompson;
H. R. 8918. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Hull, alias Spencer J. Hull;
H. R. 8926. An act granting an increase of pension to John Keller;
H. R. 8939. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Chauncey;
H. R. 8944. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Lorance;
H. R. 8949. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert Richard Clark;
H. R. 9051. An act granting an increase of pension to Asher S. Bouden;
H. R. 9052. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonathan Wood;
H. R. 9059. An act granting an increase of pension to Ebenezer S. Edgerton;
H. R. 9065. An act granting an increase of pension to George G. Brail;
H. R. 9077. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Engle;
H. R. 9104. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Brown;
H. R. 9122. An act granting an increase of pension to Philander Bennett;
H. R. 9142. An act granting an increase of pension to Herman A. Kimball;
H. R. 9146. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis A. Jones;
H. R. 9209. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen D. Cohen;
H. R. 9234. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. McDonald;
H. R. 9237. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Dachrodt;
H. R. 9279. An act granting an increase of pension to Patrick Curley;
H. R. 9351. An act granting an increase of pension to Marie G. Bondham;
H. R. 9405. An act granting an increase of pension to John Burns;
H. R. 9416. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob M. Longsworth;
H. R. 9567. An act granting an increase of pension to Henderson Rose;
H. R. 9579. An act granting an increase of pension to John G. Harris;
H. R. 9651. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles S. Word;
H. R. 9789. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah Nicholson;
H. R. 9795. An act granting an increase of pension to Emory Edward Patch;
H. R. 9851. An act granting an increase of pension to William G. Richardson;
H. R. 9906. An act granting an increase of pension to Hinman Rhodes;
H. R. 9929. An act granting an increase of pension to Orlean De Witt;
H. R. 10007. An act granting an increase of pension to Appleton Gibson;
H. R. 10175. An act granting an increase of pension to Matthew A. Knight;
H. R. 10216. An act granting an increase of pension to Hugh Longstaff;
H. R. 10256. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel D. Diehl;
H. R. 10258. An act granting an increase of pension to Elias Smith;
H. R. 10266. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Morris;
H. R. 10269. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Ricketts;
H. R. 10297. An act granting an increase of pension to Nicholas Hercherberger;
H. R. 10307. An act granting an increase of pension to Milton A. Saeger;
H. R. 10308. An act granting an increase of pension to Dillon F. Acker;
H. R. 10323. An act granting an increase of pension to Patrick J. Donahue;
H. R. 10362. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Chenoweth;
H. R. 10437. An act granting an increase of pension to Casper Yost;
H. R. 10439. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Ann Gaunt;
H. R. 10477. An act granting an increase of pension to James B. Babcock;
H. R. 10521. An act granting an increase of pension to John F. Cluley;
H. R. 10522. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Everitt;
H. R. 10551. An act granting an increase of pension to Ezekial Polk;
H. R. 10552. An act granting an increase of pension to James Wilkinson;
H. R. 10564. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi N. Bodley;

H. R. 10582. An act granting an increase of pension to Oscar B. Caswell;
H. R. 10588. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Parker;
H. R. 10623. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph L. Bostwick;
H. R. 10637. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi I. Shipman;
H. R. 10720. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph F. Caldwell;
H. R. 10722. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Flint;
H. R. 10741. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Clark;
H. R. 10807. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob J. Long;
H. R. 10872. An act granting an increase of pension to Abram J. Hill;
H. R. 10883. An act granting an increase of pension to William Lee;
H. R. 10918. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathan W. Josselyn;
H. R. 10925. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac C. Dennis;
H. R. 10954. An act granting an increase of pension to Letitia D. Watkins;
H. R. 10969. An act granting an increase of pension to Calaway G. Tucker;
H. R. 11061. An act granting an increase of pension to Reanna Pile;
H. R. 11096. An act granting an increase of pension to Sion B. Glazner;
H. R. 11101. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Baker;
H. R. 11105. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael Comer;
H. R. 11132. An act gratning an increase of pension to Horace E. Lydy;
H. R. 11144. An act granting an increase of pension to Lewis Pratt;
H. R. 11145. An act granting an increase of pension to Melvin J. Lee;
H. R. 11160. An act granting an increase of pension to Lemuel Herbert;
H. R. 11205. An act granting an increase of pension to Jeremiah Spice;
H. R. 11302. An act granting an increase of pension to John R. Cotton;
H. R. 11320. An act granting an increase of pension to Adam Cook;
H. R. 11343. An act granting an increase of pension to Enoch Bolen;
H. R. 11561. An act granting an increase of pension to Egbert P. Shetter;
H. R. 11620. An act granting an increase of pension to John J. Quimby;
H. R. 11653. An act granting an increase of pension to James R. Jordan;
H. R. 11658. An act granting an increase of pension to Gould E. Utter;
H. R. 11672. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin J. Fellows;
H. R. 11724. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Conley;
H. R. 11777. An act granting an increase of pension to Manson B. Scott;
H. R. 11808. An act granting an increase of pension to Webster Thomas;
H. R. 11842. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Noble;
H. R. 11908. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen V. Sturtevant;
H. R. 11916. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward L. Kimball;
H. R. 12008. An act granting an increase of pension to James D. Blanding;
H. R. 12016. An act granting an increase of pension to James Cassady;
H. R. 12027. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathan C. Bradley;
H. R. 12038. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Burleigh;
H. R. 12054. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha E. Hallowell;
H. R. 12102. An act granting an increase of pension to Wilhelmina Healey;
H. R. 12156. An act granting an increase of pension to Edwin Billing;
H. R. 12290. An act granting an increase of pension to David L. Kretsinger;
H. R. 12384. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Dunning;
H. R. 12388. An act granting an increase of pension to Harvey T. Dunn;
H. R. 12506. An act granting an increase of pension to John T. Howell;
H. R. 12507. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Collier;
H. R. 12510. An act granting an increase of pension to John McWhorter;
H. R. 12583. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth L. H. Labatt;
H. R. 12640. An act granting an increase of pension to Augustus Walker;
H. R. 12713. An act granting an increase of pension to Augustus F. Bradbury;
H. R. 12754. An act granting an increase of pension to William B. Eversole;
H. R. 12837. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha Miller;
H. R. 12839. An act granting an increase of pension to Kathryn G. Hayt;
H. R. 12937. An act granting an increase of pension to James Hoover;
H. R. 13037. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Jane Kearney;
H. R. 13050. An act granting an increase of pension to William G. Crockett;
H. R. 13078. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth F. Partin;
H. R. 13084. An act granting an increase of pension to William Dixon;
H. R. 13129. An act granting an increase of pension to Pinkney W. H. Lee;
H. R. 13141. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. Southworth;
H. R. 13457. An act granting an increase of pension to William M. McCay;
H. R. 13536. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter Cline;
H. R. 13579. An act granting an increase of pension to Amon Miller;
H. R. 13582. An act granting an increase of pension to James Sutherland;
H. R. 7961. An act for the relief of G. F. Tarbell;
H. R. 14344. An act for the relief of Col. Medad C. Martin;
H. R. 8493. An act granting an increase of pension to Sallie F. Sheffield;
H. R. 10080. An act to provide for sittings of the United States circuit and district courts in the southern district of Florida at the city of Miami, in said district;
H. R. 10697. An act providing for the issuance of patents for lands allotted to Indians under the Moses agreement of July 7, 1883;
H. R. 13542. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to lease land in Stanley County, S. Dak., for a buffalo pasture;
H. R. 13673. An act to extend the provisions of the homestead laws to certain lands in the Yellowstone Forest Reserve;
H. R. 13674. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to supplement existing laws relating to the disposition of lands, etc., approved March 3, 1901,' approved June 30, 1902;"
H. R. 14590. An act to authorize the Cairo and Tennessee River Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Cumberland River; and
H. R. 14589. An act to authorize the Cairo and Tennessee River Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 4094. An act to amend section 4426 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, regulation of motor boats—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

S. 4348. An act for the relief of Augustus Trabing—to the Committee on War Claims.

S. 4129. An act to regulate enlistments and punishments in the United States Revenue-Cutter Service—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 3433. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to divide the judicial district of North Dakota," approved April 26, 1890—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 4860. An act for the relief of Peter Fairley—to the Committee on Claims.

S. 4593. An act for the relief of Francis J. Cleary, a midshipman in the United States Navy—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

BRIDGE ACROSS TUG FORK.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill H. R. 15263.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. HOPKINS] asks unanimous consent for present consideration of a bill, of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 15263) to authorize William Smith and associates to bridge the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River, near Williamson, W. Va., where the same forms the boundary line between the States of West Virginia and Kentucky.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill and committee amendment were read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the bill as amended?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, this bill is in the usual form.

Mr. HOPKINS. And is unanimously reported by the committee and indorsed by the War Department.

There was no objection.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HOPKINS, the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

VIEWS OF MINORITY.

Mr. GILLESPIE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask unanimous consent to file views of minority of the Committee on Banking and Currency on the bill (H. R. 8973) to amend section 5200, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to national banks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RAILROAD DISCRIMINATION.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a message from the President of the United States relative to joint resolution instructing the Interstate Commerce Commission to examine into the subject of railroad discrimination and monopolies in coal and oil and report on the same from time to time; which was read, and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

[For message see Senate proceedings of March 7, 1906.]

REPRINT OF BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for reprint of the bill H. R. 15331, known as the "Indian appropriation bill."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Attorney-General submitting an estimate of appropriation for pay of regular assistant attorneys, United States courts—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination and survey of Duwamish River, Washington—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examinations of westerly side of Arthur Kill, New York and New Jersey—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. MANN, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 88) for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2118); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. NEVIN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15434) to regulate appeals in criminal prosecutions, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2119); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ESCH, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14591) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Cumberland River in or near the city of Clarksville, State of Tennessee, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2120); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MONDELL, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 12323) to permit the State of Utah to select lands in any abandoned military reservation in Utah, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2123); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TIRRELL, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11029) to authorize the holding of a regular court of the district and circuit courts of the United States for the western district of Virginia in the city of Big Stone Gap, Va., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2106); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. MEYER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5651) for the relief of William H. Beall, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2121); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1889) granting an increase of pension to Arthur Thompson, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2122); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Kentucky, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 1895) granting a pension to H. Edward Goetz, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2124); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. AMES, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2202) granting a pension to Ellen Harriman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2125); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. MACON, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 2697) granting an increase of pension to R. G. Childress, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2126); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 4593) granting a pension to William C. Short, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2127); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. LONGWORTH, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5252) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Howard, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2128); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5485) granting a pension to Horace D. Mann, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2129); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5936) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Neilson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2130); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. LONGWORTH, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7495) granting a pension to Susie M. Gerth, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2131); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7588) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Dowling, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2132); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 9061) granting a pension to Charles R. Hill, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2133); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. MACON, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10448) granting an increase of pension to George M. Frazer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2134); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DICKSON of Illinois, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 10900) granting an increase of pension to Arthur R. Dreppard, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2135); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. HOGG, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11691) granting an increase of pension to John Clark, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2136); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DICKSON of Illinois, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 12651) granting a pension to Louis Grossman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2137); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. AIKEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13079) granting an increase of pension to James H. Griffin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2138); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13255) granting an increase of pension to W. J. Hayes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2139); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. LONGWORTH, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14472) granting a pension to Thomas Cheek, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2140); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14532) granting a pension to Augusta N. Manson, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2141); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. AIKEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14547) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Chapman, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2142); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14655) granting a pension to Henry Gilham, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2143); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. AIKEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14718) granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Jones, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2144); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14875) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Witt, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2145); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14951) granting an increase of pension to James Nunan, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2146); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DRAPER, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15110) granting an increase of pension to John Green, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2147); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DICKSON of Illinois, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15192) granting a pension to John J. Meredith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2148); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. AIKEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15198) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth J. Martin, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2149); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15276) granting an increase of pension to Wesley Smith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2150); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. MACON, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15347) granting an increase of pension to John M. Love, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2151); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. AIKEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15382) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Moore, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2152); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DICKSON of Illinois, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15870) granting a pension to Mary Palmer, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2153); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15893) granting an increase of pension to Volney P. Ludlow, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2154); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15940) granting a pension to James M. Carley, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2155); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15941) granting an increase of pension to Lydia A. Keller, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2156); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1273) granting an increase of pension to Eleanora A. Keeler, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2157); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2096) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel R. Kent, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2158); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2142) granting an increase of pension to Adelle D. Irwin, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2159); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2735) granting a pension to Marcelina S. Groff, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2160); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2968) granting a pension to George W. Hale, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2161); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3029) granting an increase of pension to Delia A. Hooker, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2162); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 3888) granting an increase of pension to Susan E. Israel, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2163); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4227) granting a pension to John H. McKenzie, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2164); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4595) granting an increase of pension to Amos McManus, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2165); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. GROSVENOR: A bill (H. R. 16306) to amend the act approved March 6, 1896, relating to the anchorage and movements of vessels in St. Marys River—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WATKINS: A bill (H. R. 16307) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to have a survey made of unsurveyed public lands in the State of Louisiana—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. HAMILTON: A bill (H. R. 16308) for a reconnoissance and preliminary survey of a land route for a mail and pack trail, and to determine the feasibility of a railroad from the navigable waters of the Tanana River to the Seward Peninsula, in Alaska, and for other purposes—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. GREGG: A bill (H. R. 16309) to establish a fish-hatching and fish-culture station in the county of Houston, State of Texas—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 16310) to regulate the retirement of certain veterans of the civil war—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 16211) to incorporate the Industrial Educational League of the South—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. COOPER of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 16312) providing for the administration of the operations of the act of Congress approved June 17, 1902, known as the reclamation act—to the Committee on Irrigation or Arid Lands.

By Mr. PEARRE: A bill (H. R. 16313) to amend section 54 of chapter 106 of the act of the Thirty-eighth Congress entitled "An act to provide a national currency secured by pledge of United States bonds, and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof," approved June 3, 1864—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 16314) providing that the State of Wyoming be permitted to relinquish to the United States certain lands heretofore selected and to select other lands from the public domain in lieu thereof—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. WEBB: A resolution (H. Res. 358) referring to the Court of Claims the bill H. R. 16303—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a resolution (H. Res. 359) referring to the Court of Claims the bill H. R. 16302—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. AIKEN: A resolution (H. Res. 360) providing for the printing of 10,000 copies of the Report on Trade with China and the Orient—to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. BIRDSALL: A memorial of the legislature of the State of Iowa, recommending the enactment of the pure-food law—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McCARTHY: A memorial from the legislature of Iowa, recommending the enactment of the pure-food law—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 16315) to correct the military record of William R. Walsh—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BELL of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 16316) for the relief of the heirs of John B. Graham—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 16317) granting an increase of pension to Newton Moore—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CALDER: A bill (H. R. 16318) for the relief of the heirs of those killed by the explosion at Fort Lafayette February 19, 1903—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CALDERHEAD: A bill (H. R. 16319) granting an increase of pension to Orrin D. Nichols—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COCKRAN: A bill (H. R. 16320) granting a pension to Esther M. Noah—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CONNER: A bill (H. R. 16321) granting an increase of pension to Alem B. Shipman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: A bill (H. R. 16322) granting an increase of pension to George C. Limpert—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CURTIS: A bill (H. R. 16323) granting a pension to Mary C. Finlay—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16324) granting a pension to Jacob Goehring—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16325) granting a pension to Desemer Mawdsley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16326) granting an increase of pension to James M. Flynn—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16327) granting an increase of pension to John Kuhn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16328) granting an increase of pension to Monroe J. Cook—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOVENER: A bill (H. R. 16329) for the relief of Elias E. Barnes—to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 16330) granting a pension to Martin J. Helmick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16331) for the relief of the heirs of Samuel B. McClung—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 16332) granting a pension to Kate F. Hoffman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOLLIDAY: A bill (H. R. 16333) granting a pension to Joseph H. Glover—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16334) granting an increase of pension to Enos Day—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16335) granting an increase of pension to John A. Bryan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16336) granting an increase of pension to Willis W. Dawson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 16337) granting a pension to Henry Richey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMB: A bill (H. R. 16338) for the relief of the estate of William B. Todd, deceased—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16339) granting an increase of pension to Mack Harris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LITTAUER: A bill (H. R. 16340) granting an increase of pension to William M. Harris—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LLOYD: A bill (H. R. 16341) granting a pension to Sarah J. Ridgeway—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McKINLEY of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 16342) granting a pension to Matilda Foster—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16343) granting an increase of pension to Francis D. Matheny—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McGUIRE: A bill (H. R. 16344) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Meek—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16345) granting a pension to A. F. Bunton—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16346) granting an increase of pension to Amos W. Polly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16347) granting a pension to Jacob Bowersmith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16348) granting a pension to Forest McBride—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16349) granting an increase of pension to James Demick—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16350) granting a pension to Day Wheeler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16351) granting a pension to Jeremiah Dotter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16352) granting an increase of pension to C. W. Bugbee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16353) granting a pension to Thomas B. Asher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16354) granting a pension to George G. Sherlock—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16355) granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Pool—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16356) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Wyant—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16357) granting an increase of pension to Harrison Clark—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16358) granting an increase of pension to Martin V. B. Barron—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16359) granting an increase of pension to Wyatt Botts—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16360) granting an increase of pension to William Faulkner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16361) granting an increase of pension to Lewis W. Dennen—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16362) granting an increase of pension to Green B. Hill—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16363) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Fickle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16364) to correct the military record of James E. Neely—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16365) to correct the military record of John Bailey—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MAYNARD: A bill (H. R. 16366) for the relief of Mary Cornick—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PARSONS: A bill (H. R. 16367) providing for the adjudication of the claim of Walston H. Brown, sole surviving partner of the firm of Brown, Howard & Co., by the Court of Claims—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PAYNE: A bill (H. R. 16368) for the relief of Edward W. Clark, of Penn Yan, N. Y.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. REEDER: A bill (H. R. 16369) granting a pension to Joseph A. McElroy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16370) granting an increase of pension to W. B. Fleming—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCHNEEBELI: A bill (H. R. 16371) granting an increase of pension to Peter Eberts—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHERMAN: A bill (H. R. 16372) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Dorn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SIBLEY: A bill (H. R. 16373) granting pensions to honorably discharged soldiers who served in Captain Kemp's or Captain Brown's company, Department Troops of Monongahela Infantry—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 16374) for the relief of the estate of T. H. Goodloe, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16375) granting a pension to Julien D. Bond—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. VAN WINKLE: A bill (H. R. 16376) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Muncher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16377) to correct the military record of George W. Spencer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WILEY of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 16378) to authorize John A. Ockerson to accept decorations tendered him by the Government of the French Republic, the King of Italy, the King of Sweden, the King of Belgium, the Emperor of Germany, and the Emperor of China—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of bills of the following titles; which were thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9909) granting an increase of pension to John A. Lennon—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 13258) granting a pension to Nicodemo De Salle—Committee on Invalid Pension discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 15675) granting an increase of pension to Harley Mowrey—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 15907) granting an increase of pension to Louis De Laittre—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 3474) for the relief of J. B. Chandler and D. B. Cox—Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDREWS: Petition of the Oragrande Times, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Japanese and Korean Exclusion League of San Francisco, Cal., against the Foster bill—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. BARCHFELD: Petition of George C. Henry, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Mrs. C. F. Scott, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BENNET of New York: Petitions of the New York A. C. Journal, the Seventh Regiment Gazette, the Building Trades Employment Association Bulletin, and the Nautical Gazette, et al., against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BIRDSALL: Petition of citizens of Iowa, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Press, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BROWN: Petition of Der Gefluegel-Zuechter, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania: Petition of George C. Henry and Mrs. C. F. Scott, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BURKE of South Dakota: Petition of citizens of South Dakota, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CALDER: Petition of the New York Lumber Trade Journal, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Ohio: Petition of the National Association of Cement Users, for an appropriation for experiments by the United States Government—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. CURTIS: Petition of the Horton Headlight, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Kansas, against bill H. R. 3022—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of citizens of Kansas, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DE ARMOND: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Sarah E. Hopkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of citizens of Ellenburg Center, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DRESSER: Petition of the Daily Journal, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DRISCOLL: Petition of Frank H. Hale and the National Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of citizens of Wisconsin, against bill H. R. 7076—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of citizens of Wisconsin, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. FLACK: Petition of residents of Ellenburg Center and Colton, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FLETCHER: Petition of the United Travelers of America, for amendment to the bankruptcy bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FOSTER of Indiana: Petition of the Star-Messenger, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of citizens of Morris, Ill., for the Hepburn-Dolliver bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Chicago Medical Society, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Japanese and Korean Exclusion League, for present Chinese law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Commercial Law League of America, for consular reform—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts: Petition of James S. Steele et al., of Gloucester, Mass., and William H. Jordan, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GILBERT of Indiana: Petition of the Journal-Gazette, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRAFF: Petition of Council No. 112, of the Commercial Travelers of America, for amendment to the bankruptcy law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of merchants of Armington, Ill., against the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Petition of the Protective Tariff League, against any change in the tariff schedules—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Builders' Exchange League of Pittsburg, against the Gilbert anti-injunction law—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of citizens of Pittsburg, Pa., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, for forest reservation—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Thompson & Co., of Mount Jewett, Pa., against a parcels post—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, for the Morris law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, for preservation of Niagara Falls—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GRANGER: Petition of Division No. 18, Ancient Order of Hibernians, of Providence, R. I., for a statue to Commodore Barry—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. HASKINS: Petition of Ottaquechee Grange, of Taftsville, Vt., and D. G. Spaulding et al., of Woodstock, Vt., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAUGEN: Petition of the Rockford Register, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of citizens of San Francisco, Cal., against passage of bill H. R. 12973—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of San Jose, Cal., for relief for certain Indians in Alaska—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HEPBURN: Petitions of citizens of Clarinda, Page County, and Decatur, Iowa, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of citizens of Osceola, Iowa, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: Petition of Frank C. Wright, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. HOWELL of Utah: Petition of Parley P. Jensen, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HUBBARD: Petition of citizens of Iowa, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HUFF: Petition of George C. Henry, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Loyalty Council, No. 314, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of the Association of Mexican War Veterans of the State of Missouri, for increase of pensions—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KAHN: Petition of the Equal Suffrage League, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Fort Sutter National Bank, of Sacramento, Cal., for bill H. R. 8973—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of F. N. Longer, for a White Mountain forest reserve—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of the Fort Sutter National Bank, of Sacramento, Cal., against certain provisions of the bill for postal savings banks—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Alexander Hamilton Council, No. 35, of San Francisco, Cal., Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of George D. Cooper, of San Francisco, Cal., for the ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of the Wilmerding-Loewe Company, for amendment of the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Division No. 115, Order of Railway Conductors, for the Bates-Penrose bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Union Company, of San Francisco, Cal., against certain provisions of the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of J. A. Parry, of San Francisco, Cal., relative to legislation for the tobacco interest—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John P. Wishart—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Louise Lindley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KNAPP: Petition of citizens of Colton, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KNOWLAND: Petition of the Industrial News, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of S. Demorritah, of New York, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Edward J. Wheeler, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Ellenburg Center, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LONGWORTH: Petition of the Catholic Knights of America Journal and the Pythian Monitor, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McCALL: Petition of citizens of Malden, Mass, for forest reservation in the White Mountains—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of citizens of Massachusetts, against free distribution of seeds by the Government—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MADDEN: Petition of the Farm Implement News, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MINOR: Petition of citizens of Sturgeon Bay and Seymour, Wis., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. MOUSER: Petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NEEDHAM: Petition of the Cypress (morning and daily), against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. NORRIS: Petition of citizens of Cambridge, Nebr., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. OLCOTT: Petition of the Nautical Gazette, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Glasco, N. Y., and Jacob Van Vechten, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of New York, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. PALMER: Petition of the Hazleton Sentinel, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PARSONS: Petition of the New York A. C. Journal, the Seventh Regiment Gazette, the Nautical Gazette, and the Building Trades Bulletin, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RAINEY: Petition of citizens of Illinois, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Observer, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REEDER: Petition of the News, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REYNOLDS: Petition of the Deutsche Wacht, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RIVES: Petition of citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RUPPERT: Petition of citizens of New York State, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the New York Athletic Club Journal, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHARTEL: Petition of the Neosho Times, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHERMAN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Andrew Dorn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SIBLEY: Petition of the Citizen, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Warren County, Pa., against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of ladies of Franklin, Pa., for a forest reserve—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. SIBLEY: Petition of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, to preserve Niagara Falls—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: Petitions of the Exponent and the Fulton County Tribune, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SPERRY: Petition concerning allowance for clerk hire to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: Petition of members of the Creek Indian tribe, against allotment of lands and dissolution of their tribal government—to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: Petition of Scammel Grange, of Durham, N. H., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Scammel Grange, of Durham, N. H., for bill H. R. 180—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Scammel Grange, of Durham, N. H., for retention of the tax of 10 cents per pound on imitation butter—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Scammel Grange, of Durham, N. H., for bill H. R. 10099—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Scammel Grange, of Durham, N. H., for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Scammel Grange, of Durham, N. H., for bills H. R. 285 and 286—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Stephen J. Wentworth Camp, No. 14, Sons of Veterans, against bill H. R. 8131—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of North Carolina: Petition of the North Carolina Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, for an appropriation to preserve the monument and grounds at Moores Creek battlefield—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. TIRRELL: Petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TOWNSEND: Petition of the Tyler Publishing Company, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: Petition of the Beardsley News, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WEBB: Paper to accompany bill for relief of estate of John K. Wells—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of estate of J. R. Crouse—to the Committee on War Claims.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, March 8, 1906.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

MILEAGE TO ARMY OFFICERS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting an amendment to the provisions of the mileage law as embodied in the Army appropriation bill, providing that hereafter annual expenses only not to exceed $4.50 per day and the cost of transportation when not furnished by the Quartermaster's Department shall be paid to the officers of the Army, etc.; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

DISPOSITION OF USELESS PAPERS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, schedules of papers, documents, etc., on the files of the Treasury Department which are not needed in the transaction of the public business and have no permanent value or historical interest; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Useless Papers in the Executive Departments, and ordered to be printed.

PETITION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Oklahoma City, Okla., praying for the enactment of legislation granting joint statehood to the Indian and Oklahoma Territories without restrictions as to capital location beyond 1908; which was ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. GEARIN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4704) granting a pension to Alice Rourk, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. GEARIN (for Mr. CARMACK), from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 2150) granting an increase of pension to William E. Smith;

A bill (H. R. 2151) granting an increase of pension to Lydia C. Wood;

A bill (H. R. 1888) granting a pension to William T. Scandlyn; and

A bill (H. R. 13976) granting an increase of pension to John R. Stalcup.

Mr. GALLINGER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4886) to simplify the issue of enrollments and licenses of vessels of the United States, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. ALGER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4925) to amend the act approved March 6, 1896, relating to the anchorage and movements of vessels in St. Marys River, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

PUBLICATION OF COAL AND ISTHMIAN CANAL STATISTICS.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I move that the papers which I hold in my hand, and of which I will prepare a memorandum, be referred to the Committee on Printing, with instructions that the committee report a resolution for their printing for the use of the Senate. I make this motion under the instruction of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals. I will explain it in just a moment, so the Committee on Printing will understand what the Committee on Interoceanic Canals is trying to do.

In certain reports made to the Secretary of the Navy or the Chief of the Bureau of Equipment there have been, commencing back in 1886, as I now remember, and continuing down to date, chemical analyses and examinations of all the steaming coals in the world, their location, and their availability to commerce, and the ports that may be opened up toward the different coal mines. The committee thinks it is very important to lay before the Senate and Congress and before the coal miners in the United States these analyses, that they may see the value of their coal in respect of the commerce that is expected to be created by the opening of the isthmian canal.

In the same connection, and as a further part of the resolution, I will ask for the printing of a table showing the expenditures which have been made between certain dates in the construction of the canal for the purchase of material of every kind. Those dates are between February 1, 1905, and October 31, 1905, inclusive. This paper was handed in by Mr. Ross, who is the general purchasing agent for the canal. It contains a classified statement of every purchase that has been made after the time of advertising, the amount paid, and the contract and the lowest bidder in accordance with the specifications. It is an important paper, and I ask to refer it to the Committee on Printing, with the memorandum which I will furnish, which I have not at this moment time to do without delaying the Senate too long, for their guidance in coming to a conclusion as to whether these papers ought to be printed.

I now present the papers and ask their reference to the Committee on Printing, with a memorandum to be prepared under the instructions of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals when it is ready.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Alabama? The Chair hears none. Without objection, the order will be made.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. DUBOIS introduced a bill (S. 4945) to enable the Department of Agriculture to conduct demonstration experiments for the purpose of eradicating pear blight in Idaho; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. ALGER introduced a bill (S. 4946) for the relief of certain naval officers and their legal representatives; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4947) for the relief of Franklin L. Van Auken; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. OVERMAN introduced a bill (S. 4948) for the relief of W. A. McLean; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4949) for the relief of Rufus Avery; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. FORAKER introduced a bill (S. 4950) to grant an honorable discharge to Harvey Williams; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4951) for the relief of Erskine R. K. Hayes; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. OVERMAN submitted an amendment authorizing and empowering the Court of Claims, upon final determination of the case or cases involving the claim of the intermarried white persons in the Cherokee Nation to share in the common property of the Cherokee people and to be enrolled for such purpose, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SUTHERLAND submitted an amendment granting the right of way for the construction and maintenance of canals and ditches for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, and other purposes over the Indian grazing lands upon the former Uintah Indian Reservation in Utah, intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FORAKER submitted an amendment, proposing to appropriate $375,000 for the construction of a hospital at the Columbus Barracks, Ohio, intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO STATEHOOD BILL.

Mr. McCUMBER. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the statehood bill. I ask that it may be printed and lie on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. TELLER. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to House bill 12707, the statehood bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. PATTERSON. I should like to have the title of both amendments stated, so as to indicate what they are.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There are no titles to the amendments.

Mr. PATTERSON. As the amendments do not state in brief what the object is, will the Senator from North Dakota state the object of his amendment?

Mr. McCUMBER. I will state that the object of the amendment which I have introduced is to amend the bill so as to make Indian Territory a separate State.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado also offers a proposed amendment.

Mr. TELLER. I propose to amend the clause providing that the capital of Oklahoma shall be at Guthrie and shall not be changed previous to 1915, by striking out "fifteen" and inserting "eight." My amendment modifies the suggestion of the bill that the legislature shall not establish a capital before 1915.

Mr. BAILEY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of New Mexico and of Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

Mr. DOLLIVER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of New Mexico and of Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

FISH-CULTURAL STATION AT BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE.

Mr. FRYE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 for the purchase or construction of a steam launch for use at the fish-cultural station at Boothbay Harbor, Maine, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THE STATEHOOD BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of New Mexico and Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, yesterday I asked that the Senate might meet this morning at 11 o'clock so that if the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], who are to close the debate on the statehood question, should desire the entire day I for one would not be in the way. I am informed by the Senator from Colorado, who is to follow me, that he prefers to take up the subject a little later on, and for that reason I will take an hour probably in making a few remarks on this subject.

Mr. President, I myself can conceive of no legislation which should be approached with greater or more earnest care or patriotic and unselfish purpose than that designed to create and establish a new State in the Union. I know of no subject which should be more free from partisanship, which all unconsciously seems to affect much of our labors here.

In our ordinary legislative work we may be partially excused if we take some chances on what the future effect of our legislation may be. We may be partially excused if we are forced now and then to gamble somewhat upon the results of any legislation which we may enact, for in that case if we do make an error we can correct that error in the next Congress, or even the very next year. But our legislation in admitting a new State into the Union is one which becomes final in all respects. It not only binds our own hands for all future time, but it ties the hand of all future legislation on the subject, and binds the people of those States for all time to come. We therefore become responsible not only for the evil result that may follow during all of the years from an ill consideration of the subject, but also become responsible for the better result that might have followed to the people of any particular State or to the country at large had our work been more wise and just.

I regret, Mr. President, that we have been unable to raise this great subject, so potent for good or evil, above political partisanship. I regret it because it seems to me that it unjustly affects a great measure of this kind. Political parties, in themselves transient, are only for the hour. It is probable that in less than another century both of our present great political parties will cease to exist. If the same parties continue they will simply be parties of the old name, but with new policies to meet new conditions of the country as those new conditions shall arise.

But, Mr. President, while the political party may cease to exist, the States which we create will still exist; the Government, which is made up of those States, will still exist. The representation which we shall make to-day will continue as we have made it; but whether that representation in all the days of the future shall be just and fair according to resources, according to population, according to industries or territory, or whether it shall be unequal or unjust depends very much upon our legislation here to-day.

It seems, therefore, to me to be as short sighted and as pernicious for us to allow our partisanship, our fealty to any political party, to dominate or influence our judgment in the slightest degree in legislation which is to determine what amount of territory shall be made into a State or how many States shall be carved out of a given territory as it would be for us to perpetuate, were it possible to do so, our own political ideas and creeds for all time upon the people of any State which we shall make.

That we are, as a rule, influenced more or less by party ties on this measure it would be folly for us to deny. The close division of party lines whenever the subject has been before us heretofore presents an insurmountable proof of that fact. The crack of the party whip, lashed more furiously on this subject than I have ever known before, still echoes through this southern corridor. I am not claiming for a moment that I myself would be wholly free from this influence under any possible condition. If I believed that political conditions would remain indefinitely as they now are, requiring, as I believe they do require, the continuance of that political power in which I believe, and I further believed that adding a new State might overturn that policy, it is possible that I might postpone the consideration of the admission of a new State which might threaten the continuance of our present Republican policies. But there could be no possible justification that should be admitted with a view to keep this or that political party in power. I think we have a right to trust to the people of a State themselves that they will know what will be for their best interest. If we can not trust them, we can not trust self-government whatever.

Mr. President, if taxation without representation is pernicious, it follows that taxation without equal representation must be pernicious to the extent of its inequality. But taxes are for the most part levied upon industries, either directly or indirectly. They become vicious to the extent that they may be unequally levied upon such industry. It therefore follows that industries should have equality of representation in proportion to their importance; and as they would be important in proportion to the number of people subsisting upon them, this would practically mean equality of representation according to population.

In the other House to-day we have substantially equality of representation upon the basis of population. In this body there is gross inequality. This inequality is due to conditions over which neither we nor our forefathers who adopted the Constitution can or could have controlled. They did the best they could with the conditions they had to deal with. They were compelled to accept inequalities of representation in order to secure consent to form a compact and enduring government. But, Mr. President, while we have inherited those conditions of inequality, we are not confronted in legislating for the future with any such restrictions. We can not change the old relations, but we can legislate for the future with a view to correct these inequalities, not just for to-day. It follows, therefore, that we by our legislation should seek not to aggravate this inequality by making it more so in the future, but our legislation should be directed toward minimizing it as much as it is possible for us to do.

Everyone will admit that the ideal United States might consist of fifty separate States, each of practically the same size, the same population, the same future prospects. But as that can not be done, then our duty is to approximate that ideal just as near as it is possible for us to do.

There are but two great questions of prime importance to be considered in relation to this subject. First, would four new States created out of the four Territories still left west of the Mississippi River be for the best interest of the country itself and secure a more just and equitable representation of all the industries and all the people in the United States as they shall exist not to-day, but in fifty years or a hundred years? Second, would it be for the best interest of those several Territories to be admitted as four separate States into the Union?

If both of these propositions are answered in the affirmative, then there is but one clear road to duty; we should admit them.

What do we mean by "best interest of the United States?" As long as the Territory is a part of the United States, part of the body politic, adding to the wealth and prowess of the country, it would make little difference whether such Territory had two Representatives or eight Representatives, if this were all that was to be considered. The Government would have the same assets in either case, the population to make its wealth, the soldiery to fight its battles.

But there is that in the case which does primarily affect the interest of the United States as a nation. The country is vitally interested in the highest development of its citizenship. Well, how are you going to secure this highest development? The answer is: By a State government that will best govern its people. But, again, what are the essentials of such a State government? They are, first, territory that is sufficient in wealth, population, resources and future prospects to support a respectable State government without overburdening the people with taxation; second, a State which is sufficiently limited in territorial area and in population to insure that close touch and relationship and understanding between the government and the governed and between all sections of the State necessary for proper legislation.

The government and governed should always be in such close proximity that each understands the other fully, and each section of a State should know the wants and necessities of every other section. The lack of this proximity is the curse of colonial government. We have an example right in this country in the government of the Indian Territory by Congress, the worst governed Territory in the United States. Immense distances, impassable mountain ranges, may separate people from the seat of government, or separate one section from the other and isolate them as surely as oceans and seas. The governing power should be so close to every township within its borders that it will not miss a single heart throb of its people.

I think, Mr. President, I do not err when I say that the States of Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, in their past at least, more nearly approximate the ideal than any other set of States in the United States. I do not believe that I err when I say that those States have been governed, and governed well, with the least burden to their people of any of the great States of the Union. I believe I am equally correct when I say that those little States have been more free from political scandal than any other States in the Union. They are all of them small States, but I believe they have supported all necessary government institutions with as little burden to the people as any section of the United States.

Mr. President, if one were to pick up a school map of to-day and compare it with a geography of thirty or more years ago, he would find a metamorphosis that has kept exact pace with the change of sentiment of the American people. Our earlier maps represented the United States with its clear-cut State lines. We saw and were impressed with the form, size, and location of each State and each Territory. They were marked with various colors to clearly distinguish the one from the other. This was in the days when the State was a much more important factor than to-day; when State attachment was more keen. That attachment and patriotism have been, to a certain extent, swallowed up or merged into the greater national attachment and patriotism. Our school geographies of to-day, while showing the border lines of each State, are so constructed and colored to manifest the great industrial sections whereby State lines become obliterated, and we see only the great belts represented by different colors, standing for commerce, for manufacturing, for cotton raising, for wheat raising, for coal mining, for iron industries, for cattle raising, for gold and silver and copper mining, and for lumbering, so that at one glance at our up-to-date map, with its deeper and its lighter colorings, we get a comprehensive view of the nation and the country as a whole—an industrial view of the United States—and we lose the State in the industrial section. As we trace the map from ocean to ocean, our gaze first falls upon the textile manufactures, the great cotton spinning and weaving mills, the manufacture of boots and shoes, the great commercial sections of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. As we press westward we cross the coal-mining section and, with it and beyond it, the great iron-manufacturing sections of the country. Still westward we are brought in contact with diversified agriculture and fruit raising, with the lumber industries of both the North and South. Then comes the great corn belt and, to the Northwest, the great wheat-raising sections. Beyond this the cattle ranges, and beyond that the mining regions, and on the western coast the great lumber, agricultural, and fruit-raising sections again.

People are living upon these great industries of the country, and they are great just to the extent of the number of people who subsist by them; and a just and proper and equal representation must necessarily be one which would give each industry and the population supported by it that voice in national affairs in both branches of Congress which would be its just proportion according to its prominence. If one-tenth of the people of the United States were engaged in coal mining, as distinct and separate from all other business, then that industry should have one-tenth of the representation in both branches of Congress. That would be equally true of the cotton industry or of the iron industry. If one-tenth of the population of the United States were engaged in stock raising, then the stock-raising industry of the country would be entitled, under a just representation, to a voice equal in voting power to one-tenth of the entire voting power of Congress. And if the agricultural interest were equivalent to one-half of all other interests, then that industry should be so represented.

I know, Mr. President, it has been said heretofore, and may be said again, that each Representative and each Senator represents the whole United States. This is true of the Representatives; it is partially true under our theory of government of the Senate. The two Senators, however, were supposed primarily to represent a sovereign State, and though that distinction has become to a considerable extent obliterated, still the proposition remains true that, whether Senator or Representative, that man best represents the industry with which he is best acquainted, and that means the industry which has surrounded his whole life. So that while some of our most populous States might complain that in proportion to population they have not equal representation in this body, it can be well answered that their industries are represented by Senators of other States having like industries. For instance, the iron and coal regions of West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Virginia are represented by Senators from all of those States; so the manufacturing industries of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New Jersey.

I do not claim to be a fair representative of either the iron or coal or the shipping industries of the United States. If I want information on the former, I go to the Senators of Pennsylvania or West Virginia or Virginia. If I want accurate knowledge concerning shipbuilding, its cost, the many things which hinder its development, I would not turn my attention to Wyoming or Colorado, but would go directly to the representatives of Maine and New Hampshire and Massachusetts. But if I want to know what legislation is for the best interest of the wheat-growing sections of the United States, I would first consult my own judgment and information and then those who come from States producing the same cereal.

Again, it may be answered that the Senators represent the State in its sovereignty and the Representative represents his district; but, while all together represent the United States, we only get the equality of representation by having each industry represented by those who are best acquainted with that industry.

There are at present twenty-six States east of the Mississippi River, constituting about one-third of continental United States. There are nineteen States and four Territories west of the Mississippi River, constituting about two-thirds of the United States. That section west of the Mississippi River in the future will be the great agriculture and stock-raising section of the United States. It should have a representation in the future equivalent to what its importance in the future will be. No one will deny, I think, that if one-half of the population of the United States in less than one hundred years will be west of the Mississippi that that section should have one-half of the representation, at least; in other words, if it has one-half the population and two-thirds of the territory to represent, it should have one-half of the representation in both branches of Congress. But, Mr. President, if every Territory west of the Mississippi should be created into a State it would still have but twenty-three States, and no matter how great its population, its representation would be in the Senate in the ratio of forty-six to fifty-two. Therefore, though our population may be double that of the East, we will never secure, no matter what we may do, an equal and just representation. And yet there seems to be an effort here to curtail that representation and make it even less than it is to-day.

Now, Mr. President, will this west two-thirds of the United States ever have a population equal to that portion east of the Mississippi River? You must remember that if we eliminate the arid regions, which you say can not be irrigated, we will still have left more acres of land which can be cultivated and cropped than there are east of the Mississippi. You must also remember that while our soil, and especially upon the level plains, which is not washed away by floods, is practically inexhaustible, on account of denudation of the forests of your mountains and for other reasons your Eastern and Middle States are becoming more and more worthless as agricultural States. Large areas of once valuable farm lands in the States of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut, and part of Massachusetts are being bought up for summer homes by the wealthy residents of the great cities. We have bills before us asking the Government to take possession of the Appalachian chain of mountains and create a park out of it for the conservation of the waters which pour unrestrained down the mountain sides in their terrific rush, which have taken away the soils of what were once fertile fields. He who travels from Chicago to Washington can not but observe the vast tracts of abandoned agricultural lands in the Virginias and in Maryland. As I go southward I am impressed with the numberless spots of red clay on every little mound or knoll protruding above the soil and manifesting the bald-headedness of agricultural senility. If I go still farther westward, I find the amount of fertilizer necessary to raise a crop almost equalizes the value and profits of raising the crop.

Mr. President, let us go a step further. I find by looking at the statistics—and I believe I am correct in my figures—that in the last ten years the population of the States east of the Mississippi has increased about 17 per cent—that is, from 1890 to 1900. The population west of the Mississippi River in the same time has, I think, increased about 50 per cent. At the same ratio the population west of the Mississippi in from forty-five to forty-eight years will be greater than the population east of that same river.

I find also, Mr. President, that, according to our last census report, the estimation of the population of the United States I believe is now about 87,000,000—almost 90,000,000—nearly 300 per cent more than it was in 1860. Whether we follow this ratio or not, it is absolutely certain that in less than another century we shall have more than 200,000,000 people in the United States.

What are you going to do with those people? Where are they going? Where will they make their homes? Where will their future life be spent? Mr. President, so long as there is a foot of earth that will produce an ear of corn there will be agriculturists, and so the great farms of the Dakotas and of Minnesota will necessarily be divided and redivided again; the millions of acres of land upon the western coast which are producing only timber to-day will necessarily be replanted with orchards, raising fruits and vegetables. Our great plains will be covered with the immense herds of cattle and sheep which will be necessary to support this mighty population of over 200,000,000. The greater proportion of this excess of population, Mr. President, will settle west of the Mississippi River.

Therefore, I again insist that, other things being equal, instead of cutting down the representation of that section of the country, we should make it greater, if possible, than it is to-day, and that certainly we should not combine any two of those Territories into one State which are capable of making great States of the Union.

Mr. President, I want to call attention to a few matters in reference to the statistics of this statehood bill. I admit that I am at a loss just how to meet the arguments of the single statehood statesmen on account of their new and unique maxims, which govern them in their conclusions, and which they say must also govern us. Let me give a few of these maxims, taken from their own addresses upon this subject of statehood. I invite your attention, Mr. President, to this rather curious fact, that throughout their entire arguments they stand firmly by these two simple propositions: First, like produces like; second, like produces unlike. You will find that they always land on the same side, sometimes upon their feet, sometimes the reverse, but they always land on the same side of the fence.

Now, let me give you by couplets a few of their theorems, and I take them either literally or by conclusion from their own remarks upon this subject. Here they are:

1. New Mexico and Arizona will not have sufficient population for two States. Conclusion: New Mexico and Arizona should be joined.

2. Oklahoma and Indian Territory will have a sufficient population for two States. Conclusion: Oklahoma and Indian Territory should be joined.

1. New Mexico and Arizona have the same character of productions and industries. Conclusion: They should be joined.

2. Oklahoma and Indian Territory have different characters of productions and industries. Conclusion: They should be joined.

Again, 1. Oklahoma and Indian Territory together would be the size of the average Western State. Conclusion: They should be joined.

2. New Mexico and Arizona will be twice the size of the average Western State. Conclusion: They should be joined.

Again, 1. Each of the Territories, Indian Territory and Oklahoma, is now the size of the average State east of the Mississippi. Conclusion: They should be joined.

2. New Mexico and Arizona would be at least four times the size of the average State east of the Mississippi. Conclusion: They should be joined.

I do not know how to meet arguments which always mean "heads I win, tails you lose."

There is another one of those axioms that is fathered by the Senator from the State of Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS]. He says in effect:

1. Neither New Mexico nor Arizona nor both together are fit for statehood or ever will be fit for statehood. Conclusion: They should be joined and immediately admitted.

2. But succeeding Congresses may not measure up in intelligence and patriotism with the present Congress. Conclusion: They should be admitted before the next Congress can get hold of them.

Let me see, Mr. President, if there is any warrant for this last assertion. The object of the argument of the Senator from Illinois was to belittle the future prospects of either the Territory of Arizona or New Mexico. At this point of his argument the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], who has the smoothest way of boring right to the center and getting to the meat of a proposition of any Senator upon this floor, immediately rose, and I want to quote a portion of the dialogue which ensued:

Mr. HALE. Has it occurred to the Senator in what he is saying and what, I think, impressed other Senators, as has the speech of the Senator from Illinois and the very lucid and admirable speech of the Senator from Ohio yesterday, that the logical conclusion is that we ought not to admit these two Territories at all? We are going very far, and I am afraid too far, considering all the conditions, that of admitting these two Territories as one State. I think the wiser thing would be to let them remain where they are.

He has good support in the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. President, there is some force in the position suggested by the Senator from Maine, but we do know that one of the political parties of this country stands now for the admission of these two Territories as separate States.

Mr. HALE. I do not mean to say that I will not vote for this proposition at all, for it may be the best in the emergency, but the logic, the figures, the conditions are all against admitting these two sparse, stray Territories as States.

Mr. HOPKINS. Yet, Mr. President, for fifty years these Territories have been seeking admission as a State, and I think it is the consensus of opinion that it would be wiser to end that by admitting them as one State than to defer action.

Mr. President, why is it better not to defer action? The Senator admits that neither New Mexico nor Arizona is fit for statehood. That suggestion is concurred in by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], as shown by his address of a year ago, and it is concurred in by every Senator who has spoken against the admission of these two Territories as separate States.

Now, if the contention of these leading supporters of joint statehood is correct, if neither New Mexico nor Arizona has future prospects, if neither of them can ever measure up to the standard which they lay down as necessary for the admission of a new State, if their prosperity is limited by the lines they have drawn, then certainly they are not fit for statehood, are they? Not only that, but they never will be fitted for statehood, will they? Then, Mr. President, why not adopt the suggestion of the Senator from Maine and eliminate both of those Territories? The answer has meaning in it. "It would be wiser to end that by admitting them as one State than to defer action." In that sentence is sounded the fear that some future Congress, taking this subject up again, may not be sufficiently qualified to deal with it, or that some future Congress, looking at the same facts, will come to the conclusion that an enormous injustice is being done to those States west of the Mississippi River, and especially to those two particular Territories.

To me there is also another matter of significance. If they are not fit for statehood to-day, then why should we admit them at all? There is not a Senator, Mr. President, who has spoken upon this subject who has not, either by direct words or by the logic of his entire argument, admitted and proved conclusively that Oklahoma will make not only a State that will average up with the other States of the Union, but that it will make a State that will be greater than the average State of the United States. Every one of them has, either by direct words or by conclusive result from their argument, established the fact that the Indian Territory will not only make a State that will average up with the average State in the United States, but that it will make a better State than the average State of the Union.

So, Mr. President, after their arguments, it is incomprehensible to me how they can oppose separate statehood for these two Territories.

The conclusion seems obvious that there is a determined effort that that section west of the Mississippi River shall never have its equal representation in the Senate of the United States.

But, they say, the policy has been to make greater and larger and more important States out of this western country. Why has that been the policy? What is the spirit that has been back of that policy? Why should the Western State by necessity be a larger or more important State than the average Eastern State? Mr. President, from a child I have read the utterances of the great statesmen of the East, and until a few years ago the consensus of opinion of the entire East seemed to support the proposition that they regarded the western representation with some distrust; as not being sufficiently conservative; as being dangerous to the settled financial and industrial policies of the country. To what extent they have been justified in that assumption in the past I will not say.

It is possible that the conditions in every new State where the population is pouring in from all other sections of the country, and sometimes from foreign countries, may be a little chaotic. Its representatives may, to a certain extent, while that condition lasts, represent those chaotic conditions in the Congress of the United States, but I do not think that condiion exists to-day. I want to say now, and I say it with all earnestness and with a sincere conviction, that, unless all political and industrial and sociological signs fail, in less than a quarter of a century the East will wish to Heaven that they had the western votes in the Senate of the United States to save them from themselves.

I have been watching for a few years past to see what effect the immigration of these millions of inhabitants of southern Europe—Slavonians, Roumanians, Italians, Sicilians, Silesians—that are pouring into this country at the rate of 1,000,000 a year and making up our population, especially in the great cities, will have upon the future of the great States in which those cities are situated. I have not been blind to the fact that only last spring the great city of Chicago voted to take the first step toward paternalism in government by an almost overwhelming vote. I am not blind to the fact that in the last election in the city of New York there was a serious doubt if that great city did not elect a Socialist for mayor. I want to say to-day that the population and the conditions are changing. New York City is becoming more and more the dominant factor in the politics of the State of New York.

That is true of all the great cities. The city of New York is becoming more and more Italian and Slav. The city of Boston is a conglomeration of all the foreign elements. The city of Chicago is much the same way. Baltimore is becoming Slav and Russian Jew, and even in the staid old State of New Hampshire the population is fast giving away to the "Canuck" from the North; and the old stock, descended from our Revolutionary fathers and from the Pilgrim fathers, are leaving their native State, and, if you will glance at a report that is made as to the nationality of the people in the Territory of Arizona, you will find where they are going.

In that Territory only about 1 per cent of the population is of foreign birth. Only about 2 per cent is of foreign birth and the children of foreign birth. The other 98 per cent is of the old American stock that have gone there.

I want to say another thing. The time is coming, and it is nearly at hand, when we will need, unless we are going pell-mell into paternalism and socialism, the agricultural vote of the West to sustain this Government. I want to tell you further, Mr. President, that so long as a man owns his little flock of a hundred sheep and he herds them upon the plains of New Mexico and Arizona, that man will never become a socialist, an anarchist, or paternalist; that man will love the right of property; he will guard his sacred rights. So long as he owns one acre of land that is entirely his own, and tills it and cultivates it, that man will never vote for Government ownership in any of the great properties of the country. That is the character of representation and the character of the citizenship that we need in this country, and will need badly in the next quarter of a century.

There ought to be some standard on which we are to rely in admitting new States into the Union. Those who support single statehood have so many different standards and have to have so many different and adverse premises in order to arrive at a conclusion that they leave us no guide. What should be the guide? I think that I can not be charged with an inconsistency. I make five simple propositions, and am willing to stand or fall by those propositions: First, Oklahoma has sufficient territory; it has sufficient resources and sufficient population to insure a good stable State government that will be equal to or exceed the average State government of the United States; second, the Indian Territory will measure up about the same; third, that New Mexico, while it may not have the resources and future prospects to make it measure up with the greatest States in the United States, will have sufficient population, sufficient resources, and sufficient prospects to make it one of the great States of the Union; and fourth, what may be said of New Mexico can be equally said of Arizona; and fifth, that the Government of the United States, in order to properly represent all of its industries equitably and justly, should, in less than one hundred years, have a greater representation west of the Mississippi River, and that section itself will be entitled to a greater representation than would be given by the bill which is supported by a majority of the members of the Committee on Territories.

Now, Mr. President, I want to refer briefly to some statistics. I know generally they are boring, but I am going to make them interesting, if I can. I will have them so few and to the point that I believe I can make them interesting. We have loaded our records up with all of the statistics that we could get and we have got to separate what is good and what is unimportant.

It is said that New Mexico is incapable and will be incapable in the future of sustaining a good State government. Let us see how that is. New Mexico to-day is supporting a splendid Territorial government. It has a capitol costing $400,000; it has a penitentiary costing $500,000. If we are to take the arguments of some, the people of that Territory are too sleepy to get into the penitentiary, and they have no need for it, and there is no need for a capitol for those people who are not wide enough awake to become citizens of the United States. They have an agricultural and mechanical arts college, which cost $98,000; they have an asylum for the insane, which cost $79,000; they have a school of mines, which cost $65,000; they have a university, which cost $65,000; they have a normal university, which cost $58,570; they have a military institute, which cost $53,000; a normal training school, which cost $28,000, and an asylum for the deaf and dumb, which cost $6,000.

Every one of those institutions was built by those Mexicans. Every one of those institutions is supported by those Mexicans, of whom we have heard to much, and while they were being built there must have been something in the mind of the denizens of that Territory that they would be utilized, and, Mr. President, they are utilized to-day.

The indebtedness that was created for those institutions was about $1,180,000 in 1901. In two years they had reduced that indebtedness $82,000 and had laid away $243,000 in addition.

What are those institutions for if they are not for the people? But we had considerable talk yesterday upon the matter of the lack of education of these people. I want to call your attention to the matter of schools. The school population of New Mexico in 1901 was 53,000; in 1903, two years later, it was 68,000; in 1901 the school enrollment was 21,000; in 1903, two years later, it was 37,000, and it has been increasing right along at that ratio. In 1901 there were 599 schools; in 1903, only two years later, there were 665 schools. It will thus be observed that in two years there was an increase in all of these matters of nearly 50 per cent. Is there a State in the Union that can measure up to that? Can any of your older States do it?

I want to call attention to another thing, and that is the area of coal lands. You say they can not sustain a population there. Let me ask the Senator who says that they can not sustain a population in that country sufficient to support a great State to tell me what will be done with 1,493,480 acres of coal lands already in sight and which have been prospected? Here is a table which I will insert:

Coal lands of New Mexico.

[H. R. Report 496.]

| | |
|---|---|
| Area of prospected coal lands—acres | 1,493,480 |
| Amount of coal in sight—tons | 8,813,840,000 |
| Value of coal | $10,000,000,000 |
| Coal produced from June 30, 1900, to June 30, 1903—tons | 3,710,000 |
| Valued at | $5,000,000 |
| Coke—tons | 94,000 |
| Valued at | $250,000 |

What will be done with 8,813,840,000 tons of the best coal in the country already in sight and prospected? What will be done with the value of that coal in sight, amounting to more than $10,000,000,000? When our population reaches one hundred and fifty or two hundred million every foot of that coal land will be utilized, and it will support an immense population.

I will submit these statistics, because they are short, and merely run over them very rapidly.

Statistics of New Mexico.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Capitol | $400,000 |
| Penitentiary | 500,000 |
| College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts | 98,000 |
| Asylum for insane | 79,000 |
| School of mines | 65,000 |
| University | 65,000 |
| Normal university | 58,570 |
| Military institute | 53,460 |
| Normal training school | 28,000 |
| Asylum for deaf and dumb | 6,000 |

INDEBTEDNESS.

The indebtedness of New Mexico in 1901 for these buildings and otherwise was $1,180,800; in 1903 the indebtedness was $109,800—a decrease in two years of $82,000, besides increasing a sinking fund of $234,590.

SCHOOLS.

| | |
|---|---|
| The school population of New Mexico was— | |
| In 1901 | 53,000 |
| In 1903 (two years later) | 68,000 |
| In 1901 the school enrollment was | 21,000 |
| In 1903 the school enrollment was | 37,000 |
| In 1901 the number of schools was | 599 |
| In 1903 the number of schools was | 665 |

RAILROADS IN NEW MEXICO.

| | |
|---|---|
| June 30, 1900—miles | 1,679 |
| June 30, 1902—do | 2,520 |
| Increase in two years—per cent | 41 |

STOCK, 1905.

| | |
|---|---|
| Cattle—head | 1,123,000 |
| Sheep—do | 5,674,000 |
| Horses—do | 97,500 |

SHIPPED OUT IN 1905.

| | |
|---|---|
| Cattle | 184,602 |
| Horses | 5,295 |
| Hides | 17,275 |
| Sheep | 422,252 |

WOOL CROP, 1902.

| | |
|---|---|
| The wool crop for 1902 was—pounds | 22,000,000 |

NEWSPAPERS.

On September 15, 1903, there were seventy newspapers published in the Territory.

I wish to speak of the railroads. On June 30, 1900, there were 1,679 miles of railway in the one Territory of New Mexico. On June 30, 1902, there were 2,520 miles. There was a 41 per cent increase in two years. What are these railroads being built for? To run into a Territory that will produce nothing and can not support anything? The very fact of the increase of 41 per cent in the mileage of the railways is indisputable evidence that there is a demand, a commercial and an industrial demand for these railways, and that means that there will be a population in that section of the country to produce the things which are to be hauled by the railways.

Again, in 1905, there were 1,123,000 head of horned cattle, 5,674,000 head of sheep, 97,500 head of horses. It takes men and property to care for that many head of stock. How many of the older States can make a showing that is equal to it? I have here a statement of the wool crop. In 1902 there was shipped out 22,000,000 pounds of wool from New Mexico.

A little on the newspapers. On September 15, 1903, there were seventy newspapers in that little Territory.

I have the advance sheets from the Census Department, bringing the statistics of manufactures right down to date. I do not think they are published yet. They show a wonderful advancement in the last five years in both Arizona and New Mexico. I will ask to insert them here:

| | |
|---|---|
| Capital employed in manufacturing establishments: | |
| In 1900 | $2,160,000 |
| In 1905 | $4,638,000 |
| Increase—per cent | 114 |
| Salaried officials, clerks, etc.: | |
| 1900 | 88 |
| 1905 | 224 |
| Increase—per cent | 154 |
| Salaries: | |
| 1900 | $90,000 |
| 1905 | $263,000 |
| Increase—per cent | 190 |
| Total wages paid: | |
| 1900 | $1,199,000 |
| 1905 | $2,153,000 |
| Increase—per cent | 79 |

Statistics of Arizona.

[Senate Document No. 216]

SCHOOLS.

| | |
|---|---|
| 1895 | 219 |
| 1905 | 523 |
| Increase—per cent | 139 |

TEACHERS.

| | |
|---|---|
| 1895 | 314 |
| 1905 | 538 |
| Increase—per cent | 121 |

SCHOOL PROPERTY.

| | |
|---|---|
| 1895 | $414,000 |
| 1905 | $925,000 |
| Increase—per cent | 123 |

COPPER PRODUCTION.

| | |
|---|---|
| 1894—pounds | 44,514,894 |
| 1905—do | 241,400,000 |
| Increase (nearly)—per cent | 600 |

VALUE OF PRODUCTION.

| | |
|---|---|
| 1895 | $40,000,000 |
| Total mineral production for 1905 (exclusive of lead, zinc, and precious stones) | $45,000,000 |

LIVE STOCK, 1905.

| | |
|---|---|
| Cattle—head | 750,000 |
| Valued at | $12,000,000 |
| Horses—head | 25,000 |
| Valued at | $1,000,000 |
| Sheep—head | 1,000,000 |
| Valued at | $3,000,000 |
| Goats—head | 200,000 |
| Valued at | $200,000 |

Statistics table No. 2.

| | |
|---|---|
| Capital employed: | |
| 1900 | $9,517,000 |
| 1905 | $14,395,000 |
| Increase—per cent | 51 |
| Total wages paid: | |
| 1900 | $2,287,000 |
| 1905 | $3,969,000 |
| Increase—per cent | 73 |

IRRIGATION PROJECTS IN ARIZONA.

| | |
|---|---|
| Salt River project will increase area in Salt River Valley—acres | 100,000 |
| Colorado River project—do | 300,000 |
| Little Colorado River project—do | 80,000 |
| Upper Gila project—do | 40,000 |
| San Pedro project—do | 20,000 |
| Total amount which can be irrigated—do | 887,000 |

Let us take the capital employed in manufacturing establishments in 1900, taking it from the two censuses, 1900 and 1905. The amount invested in those establishments in New Mexico was $2,160,000 in 1900; in 1905, $4,638,000—an increase of a hundred and fourteen per cent. The salaried officers were increased a hundred and fifty-four per cent. The wages paid increased from $1,199,000 in 1900 to $2,153,000 in 1905, making an increase of 79 per cent. I can give the same figures with reference to the schools. In Arizona there has been an increase of a hundred and thirty-nine per cent in the school population in five years. There has been an increase of a hundred and twenty-three per cent in school property. There has been an increase in the copper production of 600 per cent in the last ten years. In 1894 it was 44,514,894 pounds. In 1905 it was 241,400,000 pounds.

The value of the minerals produced, exclusive of lead and precious stones, in 1905 was $45,000,000, in round numbers. Is not that pretty good for a Territory? Will not that sustain a population?

In estimating the population which will be supported by irrigation, we must take into consideration the difference between a population supported by land when it is irrigated and in the usual method in which it is used. It is safe to say that when it is planted to fruits, as most of it is, and other things of like character, 1 acre will support one individual, and support him well. It is said there are 887,000 acres of land in New Mexico which can be irrigated. That means nearly a million of population, without taking into consideration at all these vast coal lands and without taking into consideration the vast acres which can be used for the purpose of stock raising.

When the United States, by its Congress, advances to that position where it will give the same consideration to the beet-sugar manufacturing industry of the country that it has given to the other manufacturing industries of the United States, it will develop an immense area which will support a large population in all of these Western States.

Mr. President, the saccharine matter in the average sugar beet raised in Colorado, Arizona, or New Mexico is from 20 to 25 per cent. In Germany, from which we get most of our sugar, it is only 14 per cent. The land there which produces this sugar, which sugar pays the price that is necessary to bring it to the United States, is worth $300 an acre. Here we can raise twice as much per acre, and with proper protection the lands in the near future ought to be worth, at the same rate, nearly $600 per acre.

Let us look a moment at this matter. In 1903 there were imported into the United States 4,216,116,000 pounds of sugar. We produced but 687,209,700 pounds. We produced, therefore, but 22 per cent of all the sugar that we used. The world's product is 22,000,000,000 pounds, in round numbers. Now, we use 20 per cent of all the sugar that is raised in the world, and we can produce in this country every pound of sugar that we need, and when the industry has the proper protection we will find use for all of the wild lands in that section of the country that can possibly be irrigated.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] spoke rather disparagingly of the citizens of New Mexico. I do not mean to say that in speaking disparagingly of them he spoke in terms of unkindly feeling. But he gave the facts as he understood them. He states that they are unfitted for statehood; but notwithstanding the fact that he insists that they are unfitted for statehood he comes to the conclusion that they ought to be admitted to statehood together with the people of Arizona.

The Senator from Ohio differed with him, because in speaking of this same population—and I want to show again how they arrive at the same conclusion by absolutely different methods and different premises. Will the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] kindly give me his attention while I read just that part of the remarks of the Senator from Ohio? I want to show how he differs with the Senator from Ohio on the character of the Mexican people. The Senator from Ohio said——

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator refers to the Senator from Ohio. I should like to know to which Senator from Ohio he refers?

Mr. MCCUMBER. The junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. DICK]. He said:

> New Mexico is taking on new life and is becoming as aggressive and up-to-date as the rest of the United States. The larger towns have electric-light plants. There are electric street railway systems. All the larger towns have waterworks. Three cities have mail delivery. There are three rural mail routes, and roads are being built. Beautiful homes are being constructed. On every hand is evidence of prosperity, of civic spirit, and public and private progress.
>
> Every person who has appeared before either committee of Congress investigating this subject and who has testified on this particular point, bears testimony to the high character and sterling worth of this element in the population of New Mexico. They are beyond question as good citizens as can be found elsewhere in the United States.

That is the tribute which was paid by the Senator from Ohio, who says that these people ought to be joined with Arizona, and he diametrically opposes the proposition of the Senator from Wisconsin and the Senator from Minnesota and others, who say they are disqualified for statehood.

Then, it seems, there are some evidences of prosperity and of public and private progress in this so-called "God-forsaken country." We find the Senator from Ohio declaring that these people are progressive, wide-awake, and wise; the Senator from Minnesota declaring that they are nonprogressive, sleepy, and otherwise, and yet both of them arrive at the same conclusion, that they should be joined and admitted—one because they do measure up to the standard of the average American citizen, and the other because they do not measure up to the average American citizen.

Mr. President, personally I believe they are making great progress. When I examine their schools and their school systems, when I learn that they are now forcing education in the English language in all their schools, when I find that their schools and school-children are increasing at the rate of over 50 per cent in every five years, I think the time is not far distant when every one of these people will speak the English language, and we will not again have a case such as that cited by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], where a man was convicted of murder, as he says, by a jury only one of whom understood the English language.

There are sections, even in the State of Wisconsin and in many portions of our large cities, where a foreign language is spoken, as I understand. I do not mean that no other languages are spoken, but where a foreign language is used by the average citizen. I know it is true in some counties in my own State. The people nearly all speak a language which is foreign to us. But where we can not secure a jury by reason of their not understanding the language there can always be a transfer to some other section of the country where the language is understood.

Now, Mr. President, to little advantage has been the accumulated knowledge of the past hundred years if it has not given us greater power to estimate the future prospects and development of any State or Territory, if it has not given added power and clearness to our perspective vision.

Discovery of steam has increased our power of locomotion fiftyfold, the power of production a hundredfold. The discovery and use of electric power as a means of transmission of thought and information has given us added knowledge of the world on which we live that is akin to the added knowledge obtained through the powerful telescope of the starry heavens. And just in proportion as the telescope has added to our scientific knowledge of the universe, whereby we can foretell every eclipse and every comet—can follow its path without the variation of an inch through billions of miles of space—so has this added knowledge of the last hundred years, obtained through these agencies unknown to our forefathers, given us a just right to speak somewhat definitely and with greater assurance and optimism of the future of any section of this United States.

Our forefathers, before the dawn of these great possibilities, of these great aids to human knowledge and progress, might well be excused if they judged the future by their narrow environments. They may be excused if they saw no use of any territory outside of what could be reached by a few days' travel in a stagecoach. But we who are held in by no such narrow surroundings, we who can look as from a mountain top, have no right to close our eyes to future possibilities, and much less have we any right to assume that we have reached the apex of science in discovering means to make every portion of the earth yield fruits for the support of humanity.

Mr. President, as we look back over a hundred and twenty-five years of national history it truly does seem as though the Almighty had looked after this country and made us his chosen people, and that in our blindness we laid the foundation of a great national structure. Our greatness is due to our expansion, but our expansion was not due to our foresight and calm deliberation as to what our inherent needs might be in the future. We have never acquired one foot of territory, unless Texas may be an exception, since we became a nation simply because we believed that our people would need it, but because we did not want anyone else to have it. That has been true down to this very day. We made the great Louisiana purchase not because we thought or claimed that we would need the country ourselves, but because we wanted the undisputed control of the great Mississippi River. We did not want France to have it, or England or Spain. That was true of the purchase of Alaska. We are holding to-day islands in the Pacific and islands in the Caribbean Sea, not because we wanted them for homes for our own people, but because we wanted them for strategic or commercial purposes.

So we come now to the question, What are the possibilities of these great future States? In estimating their possibilities we have a right to assume that many things which are unknown to-day will be known in the future; that many things that are necessary to develop this country, which are undreamed of to-day, will be thought out and will be found to be useful in the next hundred years, when there will be a demand for them.

In estimating the future population of a State I claim that we have a right to assume, and in the light of past history and experience it is our duty to assume, that many things will be accomplished in the future which have not been accomplished in the past; that means mechanical and scientific will be found in the future to produce results which we may not even have dreamed of at the present time.

Before any man dare utter the word "impossible," or even doubt the feasibility of any contemplated project in irrigation in bringing the waters from the mountains to irrigate the surface or bringing the waters from the bosom of the earth for the same purpose, let him consider a moment what are the possibilities which he sees all around him to-day which were absolutely impossible yesterday. Let him consider, for instance, how long the great potent forces which now enter into all the commerce and industries of the world lay unknown and unused.

How many thousands of years did our ancestors look upon the outcroppings of the coal deposits of the world as so much useless black bowlder? It is only to-day in the world's life that we have learned the use of coal. The story of Aladdin and his wonderful lamp, the wildest imagination of the fanciful mind of the Orient, has been more than reproduced in the last fifty years. The magic touch of the hand of intelligence on the lamp of inventive genius has brought the black demon out of the earth, the giant with breath of fire and strength invincible, who, obedient to the command of the world, has given humanity a wealth undreamed of in all the days of oriental splendor. In the light of actual results, the tales of the Arabian Nights are tame and commonplace. In that black stone—coal—is concentrated enough latent energy when transformed into steam or electric power to reverse the very rotation of the earth. One hundredth part of the coal in sight in New Mexico applied properly would raise all of the waters out of all of the streams that pour from the mountain sides and hurry their course to the sea and spread them upon the surface of our broad lands. The coal is there, the rivers are there.

Let us look for a moment at the matter of irrigation. Think how much the world has advanced in the last few years in the matter of irrigation. It took centuries of time from the first simple irrigation, from the carrying of water in buckets from the Nile, then by inundation, then by diverting a portion of mountain streams, and, finally, by creating vast reservoirs to hold the flow of waters in abeyance until needed. And here we have rested—stopped at the very simplest stage of irrigation, the storing and diverting of waters from mountain streams.

But, Mr. President, this has required no great engineering feat or skill. It has required no extraordinary intelligence. Everyone knows that water will run down hill. Civil engineering can only lay claim to science in irrigation when it succeeds by some method, not too expensive, in bringing the water uphill, raising it from a lower to a higher level, where it may be discharged upon adjacent lands. Is this not possible? Is it not feasible? Because it is in advance of present methods is nothing either against its feasibility or possibility. Is it less impossible than what we are achieving every day? If one could take a bird's-eye view of this whole United States, even as he can look over a railway map, he would see a network of shining rails of steel traversing the country in all directions, and over them running at terrific speed hundreds of thousands of loaded trains. Now, every train that moves across this continent is, by every rotation of its engine wheels, overcoming the law of gravitation, and so successful and so inexpensive that they have become almost the sole instrument of internal traffic. Every steamboat that plies our great rivers, by every stroke of its wheel in its course against the stream, is overcoming the law of gravitation. The force that carries a single train over these Territories has power enough to pull a mighty stream 200 feet over hills and plains. Is the project, therefore, for lifting rivers bodily out of their channels and scattering the waters over the earth less feasible or conceivable than that our very thoughts can be carried across the world in the flash of a second?

Nor are steam and electric power, generated by the use of coal, the only instruments at your command.

Five hundred years ago windmills pumped the sea out of Holland, and yet over those arid regions for centuries the breezes have sung the song of its immense productive wealth when water and soil should be combined and have incessantly sighed for work to do.

Could we measure the pressure of the current of the Colorado or some of these great rivers we would find the power which needs but the proper harness to become one of the greatest benefactors. This river annually deposits billions of tons of soil in the ocean. In the moving and flowing waters is a perpetual motion. Countless millions of tons of pressure annually flowing over those lands and over those streams, and none of it utilized.

And until one or all of these simple energies which I have mentioned are converted into their most apparent use—that of lifting the waters out of their beds and carrying them over the surface for irrigation—there is food for thought on the part of our engineers. There are immense chains of mountains, nearly one-third of the entire area, congealing the moisture to snow through summer and winter. There are mighty streams that are pouring down and flowing wasted to the sea. Who is it that dare utter in this age of science the word "impossible" as applied to the theory that we will succeed in time in controlling every foot of this water?

The Senator from Ohio, speaking of the Gila River, says there are times when 300,000 cubic feet per second are poured down toward the ocean. What right has he to deny the proposition that the time will come when we can conserve all of that water?

Mr. President, there are two great forces that are limiting the so-called "arid belt." The Reclamation Service, working from the mountain, taking the snows that are melted and go down in mountain streams and conserve them to discharge upon the land, are moving that arid belt eastward. On the other hand, we have our agricultural colleges instructing how to raise cereals, and where it was thought a few years ago there was not sufficient precipitation to raise anything producing splendid crops in that semiarid section. These two forces are pressing these two lines closer and closer together, and the time is not far distant, in my candid opinion, when they will meet.

In closing I wish to say one word for the cattle industry upon the great plains. It has been stated that you can not range cattle for a distance of more than 5 miles from water. Admitting that to be true, still you leave out of consideration the fact that there are little pools of water, little oases, over all the arid and semiarid region; sparse to be sure, but which answer that purpose. The great majority of our cattle are watered without running streams.

You are assuming that we must have the same kind of irrigation for cattle that we will have for land. In the near future we will need all of this land. When we do, the mountain streams can be brought hundreds of miles from their source. They will not have to overcome the topographical barrier that would be necessary for irrigation. The land can not go down into the valley to water itself, but the steer can, and the amount that is necessary to water a single thousand acres will water a million head of stock. So the possibilities of stock raising in that vast section are beyond comprehension.

Mr. President, I merely wish to say in closing that I have dealt with the future possibilities of these Territories from at least a semiscientific standpoint, because it is from the scientific standpoint that we are to develop a great portion of them. But I believe, and candidly believe, that the result will be that we will have great States in the two Territories of Arizona and New Mexico. If that is true they are entitled to be admitted as separate States, if at all.

I am not combating the theory of the Senator from Wisconsin or any of those that claim that they should not be admitted at this time. If we have fear for their future progress and development, then in Heaven's name let us let them alone. Let them stay out if they are not fit to come in; but I for one want to protest against that kind of an argument which says, "You are absolutely unfit, either separately or together, for statehood, but notwithstanding that unfitness we will force you into the Union jointly." It is a wrong to the country; it is a wrong to them. It has been the purpose of my argument simply to elucidate as much as I could the fact that if we admit them at all we have a right to admit them as two great separate States, depending upon the future, and with an absolute assurance that the future will justify our action.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I desire to propose an amendment to the statehood bill. I move, beginning with the word "and," in the first line on page 6, to strike out all down to and including the word "legislature," in line 4 on page 6. At the suggestion of a Senator who sits beside me I will read what I move to strike out. Perhaps it would be clearer to read the two lines before the part I propose to strike out, which are as follows:

The capital of said State shall temporarily be at the city of Guthrie, in the present Territory of Oklahoma.

I propose to strike out the words following:

And shall not be changed therefrom previous to A. D. 1915, but said capital may, after said year, be located permanently by the electors of said State at an election to be provided for by the legislature.

The effect of my amendment, if it prevails, will be to strike out that portion of the bill which locates the capital until 1915 permanently by the bill, and leaving the people of that State to locate it according to their own desire.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas will be printed and lie on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 14808. An act authorizing the Choctawhatchee Power Company to erect a dam in Dale County, Ala.; and

H. R. 15263. An act to authorize William Smith and associates to bridge the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River, near Williamson, W. Va., where the same forms the boundary line between the States of West Virginia and Kentucky.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 16305) authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes, and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

RAILROAD DISCRIMINATIONS AND MONOPOLIES.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I was not present yesterday when the message of the President was sent to us and read in this body, commenting upon Senate joint resolution 32. That message is a very remarkable document and will need some discussion, but as the statehood bill is under discussion and Senators are waiting to speak on it, I merely give notice that I shall feel called upon, as soon as the opportunity offers, to explain my views in regard to the scope of the joint resolution upon which the President commented, and to say something about those comments.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 14808. An act authorizing the Choctawhatchee Power Company to erect a dam in Dale County, Ala.; and

H. R. 15263. An act to authorize William Smith and associates to bridge the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River, near Williamson, W. Va., where the same forms the boundary line between the States of West Virginia and Kentucky.

THE STATEHOOD BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of New Mexico and Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I would not address the Senate on the statehood bill were it not that no member of the minority of the Committee on Territories has as yet addressed the Senate in opposition to the measure. The minority members have insisted that some one shall represent them, and have urged that I do so.

I will speak chiefly upon one phase of the bill—that which involves what I believe to be the unquestioned and the unqualified right of the people of Arizona to have separate statehood, with the consent of Congress. This is a right fixed by all the traditions and uniform practice of Congress and by the express letter of the law under which the Territory of Arizona was organized.

The bill that is under discussion provides for the joinder of Oklahoma and Indian Territory into one State and New Mexico and Arizona into another. So far as the uniting of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory is concerned, I do not agree with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER]. I have no question but that it was the expectation and intention of Congress, when the Territory of Oklahoma was organized, that Oklahoma and the Indian Territory should at some time become one State. Oklahoma was carved out of the Indian Territory in 1890, with the consent of the Indian tribes to whom the entire Territory belonged; and the act organizing Oklahoma seems very clearly to anticipate that ultimately the Indian Territory and Oklahoma would be permanently united. I call the attention of the Sentae to the language of the act organizing Oklahoma, upon which I base that conclusion. It reads as follows:

Any other lands within the Indian Territory not embraced within these boundaries—

Meaning the boundaries of the Territory of Oklahoma before set forth in the bill—

not embraced within these boundaries shall hereafter become a part of the Territory of Oklahoma whenever the Indian nation or tribe owning such lands shall signify to the President of the United States in legal manner its assent that such lands shall so become a part of said Territory of Oklahoma, and the President shall thereupon make proclamation to that effect.

No one can read the act and consider in that connection the clause to which I have just called attention without reaching the conclusion that when Oklahoma was carved out of the Indian Territory it was the intent and expectation of Congress that they would both at some future time be reunited.

Then, again, Mr. President, by reason of the area of the united Territories being less than the area of any State that has been admitted for the past twenty-five years, and by reason of the identical character of their industries, productions, language, and customs, I was induced in the Fifty-seventh Congress to offer a bill for their joinder in statehood.

The bill I introduced was, I believe, the only bill which has ever been introduced into the Senate to accomplish that end. Whenever either branch of Congress has acted with reference to Oklahoma and the Indian Territory it has been in that direction.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER], I think, was mistaken in some remarks he made yesterday about the bill of the Fifty-seventh Congress for the organization of new States. He spoke of that measure as providing for four States. My recollection is that it provided for but three, for Oklahoma, Arizona, and New Mexico; but it did provide that the President might at any time in the future, by proclamation, annex the Indian Territory to Oklahoma, so that both Territories would, in the end, be a single State.

So, Mr. President, under those circumstances, I have no hesitation and no reluctance in saying that I will vote for so much of the measure as I can that favors the union of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory. If I can not vote for so much of the measure as thus provides by itself, then I will be compelled to vote against the entire measure. But I believe the end intended by Congress from the time it commenced to deal with the Indian Territory——

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, I ask leave to interrupt the Senator from Colorado.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. PETTUS. I would be very much obliged to the Senator if he would explain by what contract or agreement the United States acquired the right to put the Indian nations into a State with Oklahoma. Being on the Committee on Territories, I suppose the Senator knows that the United States contracted that it would not do it.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I am simply dealing with results, not with reasons. I know that Congress assumes the right to deal with the Indian Territory; that it was dealing with it at a time when the tribal relations that have held the Indians together were being abolished, and the Indians were being made citizens of the United States. When those things are accomplished, from the very necessity of the case it becomes territory of the United States, to be organized by Congress.

I will not spend any more time upon Oklahoma and the Indian Territory. I simply wanted to say enough to give the reasons that moved me to support the union of those two Territories in a single State. That both are in every way qualified by population, by wealth, by the character of their people to be a State in the Union is conceded; and as to those two Territories, to admit them is simply the performance of a duty by Congress that the people of the country have a right to expect.

There is a claim made—and I will discuss that a little later on—that the act of one Congress can not bind another Congress in dealing with the territory of the United States. I do not agree with that proposition altogether. If it is simply a question of power, then perhaps one Congress can not control a subsequent Congress, but if it is a question of right or duty, or of action from a sense of obligation, one Congress may by law pledge the country and then depend upon subsequent Congresses to observe in good faith the pledges given. Especially is that the case, Mr. President, when for a great number of years the people of the country have acted upon the faith of such a pledge as that given to Arizona, and upon the faith of which Arizona has acted for forty-three years, depending upon Congress recognizing that obligation when the proper time arrived.

It is said, Mr. President, that those who oppose the union of Arizona and New Mexico are inconsistent in advocating the union of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory. On the contrary, consistency requires, if respect is to be paid to acts of Congress, that the union of Arizona to New Mexico should be prevented, while the union of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory should be secured.

The Territory of Arizona was created by act of Congress in 1863. Those who have opposed the admission of Arizona into the Union as a State have insisted, by inference at least, that that legislation was hasty and ill advised, and that the unusual provision found in that law was incorporated into it by some trick or subterfuge; in other words, that Congress never intended that such a provision with reference to the subsequent statehood of Arizona should be incorporated into the law.

Mr. President, an examination of the history of the bill organizing Arizona into a Territory discloses that the measure had been in both branches of Congress for a very considerable time. It was a House bill. It was introduced in the first session of the Thirty-seventh Congress; reported back from the Committee on Territories at the first session with a favorable recommendation; certain amendments were also recommended, and as thus amended the House passed the bill. During the second session of the same Congress the Senate debated the bill very extensively. In the third session, after a very considerable debate, after amendments of various kinds had been discussed, after amendments had been added to the bill and then by unanimous consent reconsidered, after the need of a separate Territorial government for Arizona had been fully and thoroughly discussed, the act passed the Senate and was approved by the President.

So it will not do, as the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] did at the last session, to urge that action upon the bill for the organization of Arizona was hasty or ill advised, or that it was the outgrowth of an oyster supper or of a combination between mere adventurers from the Territory of Arizona by which some ill-advised and unmerited and unwarranted action was taken by Congress. The truth is, Mr. President, the creation of the Territory of Arizona had been before Congress in various forms for nearly ten years, and, as I suggested, it was as thoroughly and intelligently discussed as any such measure had ever been discussed, so far as is shown by the annals of Congress. During the discussion Senator Wade, of Ohio, who was chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories, said:

> The question has been under consideration before the Committee on Territories ever since I have been a member of the committee. The committee agreed in 1853 or 1854, when Mr. Douglas was at its head, that it ought to be organized. For some reason or other it was not done.

Upon the authority of such an eminent statesman and Senator as Benjamin F. Wade, of Ohio, the proposition to divide the then Territory of New Mexico into two, the western half to be the Territory of Arizona, had been before Congress for a period of ten years and had received the most thorough consideration by the Senate and the committee.

Mr. President, if there were any doubt as to the thoroughness with which the law for the organization of Arizona was considered, the personnel of the House and the Senate committees should have a most conclusive effect. The chairman of the House committee was James M. Ashley, of Ohio, than whom no more distinguished Member had ever had in charge the future of our Territories. James H. Cravens, of Indiana, with whose history and qualifications the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] should be well acquainted; Owen Lovejoy, of Illinois, who earned a world-wide reputation for integrity and the zeal with which he combatted the institution of slavery; William A. Wheeler, of New York, who subsequently became Vice-President of the United States, and Aaron Harding, of Kentucky.

Of the members of the Senate committee, there were at that time Benjamin Wade, of Ohio; John P. Hale, of New Hampshire; Reverdy Johnson, of Maryland, and Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts—a quartette of as brilliant statesmen as ever guided the nation. Henry Wilson subsequently became Vice-President of the United States.

When the names of those great and conscientious statesmen are mentioned, and it is known that this measure for the organization of Arizona received in committee their most careful scrutiny, it will not do to say that any single provision found in that bill was there by inadvertence, by overreaching, or as the result of a trick of any kind. It follows, Mr. President, when we find in the bill organizing the Territory of Arizona a provision that had never before been incorporated in any bill for the organization of any Territory the proposition "that the said government [Arizona] shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall, with the consent of Congress, form a State government, republican in form, as prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, and apply for and obtain admission into the Union as a State on an equal footing with the original States," that there was a reason for it. There was a reason, which appealed to the patriotism and sense of duty of those eminent statesmen. It was a reason, Mr. President, that was never questioned in the House of Representatives, so far as can be discovered; it was not questioned on the floor of the Senate. While many amendments were offered and discussed, the provision in mind was not questioned, and the necessity for it and its propriety was never denied. With all the evidences we have of the careful scrutiny given to the measure, we must conclude that there was some strong and overpowering reason that induced the committees of both branches of Congress and the President of the United States to approve the clause in question.

Mr. President, time and again the question has been asked, What was the reason for incorporating in the Arizona bill this provision as to the future statehood of the Territory? It has not been answered except in a somewhat tentative way. If we go to the debates of Congress, while there is no clear statement of the reason, a reason may be inferred from the nature of the debate that occurred. I will first suggest the reasons that may be extracted from the debates, and then reasons that we may deduce from the history of those times.

It was shown in the debate, Mr. President, that the inhabited portion of Arizona Territory was more than 700 miles away from the seat of government in New Mexico; that there was a wild, barren, and uninhabited waste between; that the cost of travel between the two points was something enormous for those who sought to reach the seat of government. In that section of New Mexico, Mr. President, there were between 15,000 and 20,000 warlike, savage Indians, with whom those who lived in the Arizona section were in almost constant conflict.

As to the population of the New Mexican portion of the Territory in those early days, it was almost entirely Mexican. They spoke the Spanish language. Their customs and their institutions differed very seriously from those that were in process of development by the American settlers in the Arizona section of the Territory. Upon the testimony of Mr. Trumbull, so strong was the opposition of the people of what was to be the Territory of Arizona to their New Mexican association, that they positively refused to send members of the legislature to the New Mexican assembly. They must have realized the extraordinary position they would be in in a legislature consisting almost exclusively of Spanish-speaking members, ignorant of their needs and of what in justice they required.

It was under those circumstances that the law for the organization of Arizona was passed by Congress.

Then there is another reason which there is ample room to believe was controlling. Reference has been made to the fact that Arizona was organized at a time when this country was in the throes of civil war. That is true, Mr. President, and New Mexico was the theater, for a sparsely settled section of the country, and a far distant portion of it, of no mean part of the thrilling deeds of that great tragedy. For a long time it was a question of uncertainty as to whether New Mexico would in the end cast its fortunes with the Southern Confederacy or not. We know that in the spring of 1862 General Sibley invaded New Mexico from Texas, his objective point being Denver. His purpose was to control those two great Territories, New Mexico and Colorado, so that if those who were struggling for the Confederacy were successful those two Territories might be made a part of its possessions. We know that Sibley marched with a force of Texans up the Rio Grande River. In New Mexico he captured Forts Bliss and Fillmore. Two battles were fought, one the battle of Apache Canyon, in which a considerable number of combatants on both sides fell. The Union forces were comprised of the First Colorado Regiment and a battery of artillery, and the Confederate forces consisted of between 600 and 800 men under General Sibley himself. As the result of that battle fought after Sibley's forces had taken possession of Albuquerque and of Santa Fe, when he was marching on Fort Union, farther north, in the expectation of invading from that point the then Territory of Colorado, the battle of Apache Canyon was fought. The Confederate forces were defeated, and they started on a retreat to Texas.

But that did not end the danger, Mr. President, of New Mexico becoming a part of the Southern Confederacy should the efforts of those who were fighting its battles be successful. We have no reason to believe, from the discussion in the Senate at that time, that the outcome of the war was considered certain. We have the right to conclude that Congress, in incorporating into the bill organizing Arizona a provision that would save at least one-half of the Territory to the North should the war end adversely to the northern cause, had that end in view. By organizing Arizona there was a central government provided for the one half of New Mexico organized into Arizona, the seat of government of which was far removed from the other half of what was left of New Mexico. If New Mexico should ultimately be carried with the South, then the western half (Arizona) would be saved to the Union.

Mr. President, when we consider the time, the historical events, the dangers that were constantly menacing the Union cause in that section and the evils that such a course might avoid, we can understand why it was that Congress inserted in the bill organizing Arizona the provision about which there is so much controversy.

But it is said, Mr. President, that Congress had no right to insert a clause of that kind in a bill organizing a Territory; that it had no right to attempt in any way to bind subsequent Congresses in dealing with the territory of the United States. On the contrary, I maintain that it had the right, and, while it is within the power of subsequent Congresses to ignore the express will and pledge of the Thirty-seventh Congress in that and in other respects, that the Thirty-seventh Congress had the right to do what it did, and that it is the bounden moral duty of this and of other Congresses to respect it, I have no earthly doubt.

Mr. President, it might as well be said that the confederacy of the States in 1787 had no right to declare that the Northwestern Territory should be organized into at least three States and into not more than five. That was but the Congress of the United States. There was no party with which that Congress was dealing except as you find it recited in the ordinance. All that we have on record is the discussion upon the subject and the fact that, by an act of Congress or in the terms of the ordinance, the great Northwest Territory was set apart and dedicated forever to freedom and that not less than three nor more than five States should be created from it.

Does anybody contend that a subsequent Congress might not, if it would, have disregarded the ordinance of 1787? True, the moral sense of the country would have revolted at the act; true it was that there was no reasonable right to expect that; but we do find, Mr. President, that a subsequent Congress for a considerable length of time refused to be bound by the ordinance, and that fact is established in the history of the State of Michigan and its admission into the Union.

We find, Mr. President, that after Michigan had 60,000 inhabitants its people, as they had a right to do, met in constitutional convention, formed and adopted a constitution, and elected a legislature, which appointed two Senators for admission to the Senate of the United States, and that for three years Congress refused to recognize the obligation that was imposed upon Congress by the ordinance of 1787. During those three years Michigan was almost in a state of rebellion. It refused to recognize the right of the President to appoint a governor for it. It refused to receive or to permit the other officers appointed by the Administration to assume control and direct the affairs of Michigan. It claimed that its right was absolute, under the terms of the ordinance of 1787, to be a State in the Union, since it had more than 60,000 inhabitants, and that Congress, under the express language of the ordinance, had neither right, power, nor authority to refuse them participation as a State in the affairs of the Union.

Here I may call attention to the language of the ordinance of 1787 that states the population that would be sufficient to constitute a State. It has been charged over and over again that Congress fixed 60,000 as the population that must exist before any of the States carved out of the Northwestern Territory might be admitted into the Union. Such is not the fact. Under the language of the ordinance of 1787 any one of the States named or for which it provided, when it had a population of 60,000, could not be excluded from participation as a State, but the ordinance further provided that Congress might admit as States parts of that Northwestern Territory with a less population than 60,000 if, in its opinion, the welfare and interests of the country would be subserved by it. I call the attention of the Senate to this language, which bears out precisely what I say. Reading from Article V of the ordinance, we find the following:

> And whenever any of the said States shall have 60,000 free inhabitants therein such States shall be admitted, by its delegates, into the Congress of the United States on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatever, and shall be at liberty to form a permanent constitution and State government: Provided, The constitution and government so to be formed shall be republican and in conformity to the principles contained in these articles; and so far as it can be consistent with the general interest of the confederacy, such admission shall be allowed at an earlier period, and when there may be a less number of free inhabitants in the State than 60,000.

So that, under the Ordinance of 1787, the Congress of the Confederacy declared that when any one of the States provided for had 60,000 inhabitants its right was absolute; it should be admitted into the Union; its Delegates should take their seats in the Congress of the Confederacy, but that the Congress might, when the interests of the country seemed to require it, admit them as States with a less population than the number named.

Commencing with the Ordinance of 1787 and carefully scanning every act of Congress by which a Territory has been organized since, we learn that no Territory has ever been divided except to create a greater number of States. We also find when Congress has been silent in the matter of division that the act organizing a Territory has been accepted as a pledge by Congress that that particular Territory should in the end become a State, and that by the act such a Territory is clothed with the inchoate rights of statehood. This has been declared to be the fact by the Supreme Court of the United States.

I also find that no Territory has ever been merged into another Territory and that no two Territories have ever been united for the purpose of forming a single State. Under those circumstances, Mr. President, and in view of the traditions and the uniform practice of Congress as determined by its acts and in the language of the act organizing the Territory of Arizona, what room is there to say that the right exists in this Congress to annul the act of 1863 and to coerce the people of Arizona into a disagreeable, distasteful, and abhorrent union with the people of any other Territory?

It is not because the union is to be with New Mexico that complaint is made, nor because the union might be with any other Territory, if there were some other contiguous Territory, but because the people of Arizona have developed that Territory under a pledge from Congress that they should form a State out of that Territory and be admitted, and because they are unwilling to share either the memory of their sufferings or the glory of their achievements with any other Territory. Realizing that no such effort has ever before been made and that the provisions that are found in the several acts creating Territories do not contemplate the annihilation of a Territory, but their permanent preservation for statehood, how this or any subsequent Congress can vote affirmatively for this coerced union is more than I can understand.

The Ordinance of 1787 marked out the policy of the country for all future time as to its course in dealing with the territory of the United States. The territory was received for the purpose of creating it into States, not to hold it as provinces or colonies, but to give its people at the earliest practicable moment, under Territorial government, a certain amount of self-government and control, and ultimately to allow them to become inhabitants of a State upon an equality with the other States of the Union.

I find that following the ordinance of 1787 was the ordinance with reference to the territory south of the Ohio River. That ordinance was exceedingly short. It simply established that territory into a district and provided in terms that it should be governed by the same system that was provided for the territory northwest of the Ohio.

Then we have an act of Congress in 1798, organizing what was known as the Territory of Mississippi. That act expressly provided that Mississippi might at some future time be divided into two Territories, and we find that, following the authority conferred later, in 1817, Alabama was carved out of the Territory of Mississippi. Then there existed two Territories, Mississippi and Alabama, and they were subsequently brought into the Union as States.

Following the ordinance of 1787 the Northwest Territory was at first divided into two Territories—what we may call the Territory of Ohio, which really remained the Northwest Territory, governed under the system the ordinance of 1787 created, and that west of the Ohio, which became the Indiana Territory.

In 1804, after the purchase of Louisiana and its cession under the terms of the purchase to the United States, the Louisiana Territory was divided into two Territories. One was the Territory of Orleans, the other the Territory of Louisiana. The Territory of Orleans subsequently become the State of Louisiana. The Territory of Orleans, as it was defined by the ordinance, was reserved for a State without interfering in any degree with the boundaries of the Territory, as the act of Congress defined them. Subsequently what was known as the Territory of Louisiana became the Territory of Missouri. I suppose that change in name was by reason of the admission of the Territory of Orleans into the Union as the State of Louisiana, which necessitated the change of name.

The Territory of Louisiana, transformed from the Territory of Missouri, was subsequently divided as it might be under the act creating it, and the Territory of Arkansas was carved out of the Territory of Missouri.

Then we find that the Territory of Michigan was carved out of the Indiana Territory and became one of the five States for which the Ordinance of 1787 provided. The Illinois Territory was also carved out of the Indiana Territory, and it became one of the five States the ordinance provided for.

Florida was organized into a Territory after its cession to the United States by Spain. No mention was made in that ordinance of the division or curtailment of its boundaries in any degree. Florida, therefore, was admitted into the Union as a State.

Next in order we have the Territory of Wisconsin. Wisconsin was the fifth State carved out of the Northwest Territory. When it was organized into a Territory its Territorial limits extended beyond the Mississippi River and included what subsequently became the Territory of Iowa.

After the organization of Wisconsin Territory, embracing both Iowa and Wisconsin, Iowa was set apart as a separate Territory. Then Wisconsin became a State and Iowa became a State a few years thereafter. The boundaries of Iowa as a State were identical with its boundaries as a Territory.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I think the Senator is unintentionally in error on that point. The State of Iowa was made out of the Territory of Iowa, and that Territory, in its turn, was carved out of a larger territory after it was a Territory, had full Territorial organization, without any reference whatever to the people who were living in the portions that were left out, and without submitting it to the people of the Territory itself. The State of Iowa—I think the Senator from Iowa will verify that—was made by carving it out of a larger Territory, it then existing as a Territory, without submitting the question at all to the people.

Mr. PATTERSON. What Territory was Iowa a part of at the time it was incorporated with Wisconsin?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. There was a great deal more of the Territory of Iowa than there is of the State of Iowa.

The point I make, if the Senator will pardon me a little further, is that the portions left out of the organized Territory of Iowa, when it was made a State, were left out without submitting that question in any way possible to the people who were thus left out or to the people who were left in.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will come to that after a while. What I assert is, that when the Territory of Wisconsin was organized it embraced the same territory of which the State of Wisconsin is now comprised and the territory of which the State of Iowa is comprised, and the territory west of the Mississippi, lying between the Mississippi and the Missouri, that was associated with Wisconsin as a Territory was a part of the Louisiana Purchase, which up to that time had been left practically unorganized, and what was subsequently the Territory of Iowa originally existed as a part of the Territory of Wisconsin. What became Iowa was taken from the unorganized territory of the Louisiana Purchase and united with part of the Northwest Territory as the Territory of Wisconsin. Subsequently Iowa was severed from Wisconsin and organized into a Territory by itself, and Wisconsin became a State in the Union. It would have been impossible, under the provisions of the Ordinance of 1787, to associate Iowa with Wisconsin as a State, because the Northwest Territory was to be created into not more than five States, and no additional territory could have been added to it for purposes of statehood without violating its express terms.

Minnesota was organized as a Territory in 1849. Minnesota came into the Union with its Territorial limits unimpaired. New Mexico was organized in 1850. At the time of its organization it did not embrace all of the territory that is now within the boundaries of New Mexico and Arizona. It was in 1853 that we acquired that part of Arizona known as the "Gadsden Purchase." Following that we had the organization of the Territory of Utah, of Dakota, of Nevada, of Colorado, of Kansas, of Idaho, of Montana, of Wyoming, of Oklahoma, and Hawaii.

In every one of the acts creating these and other Territories, after the act creating the Territory of Wisconsin, we find this provision:

> That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the Government of the United States from dividing the Territory hereby established into one or more other Territories, in such manner, and at such times, as Congress shall, in its discretion, deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said Territory to any other State or Territory of the United States.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] very properly said in his address yesterday that these provisos recognized the right of Congress to divide a Territory, thereby creating two States out of what otherwise might be one. But there is no provision in a single one of those statutes which contemplates the possibility of the destruction of a Territory, the destruction of its government, its abolition, and the merging of one Territorial government into another existing Territorial government.

I call upon the Senator from Indiana to point to a single instance—a single instance—in which one Territory has been united with another Territory; a single instance in which, in the creation of a State, two Territories have been united to form a single State. The history of this country will not afford an instance of that kind; and therefore we have the uniform and unquestioned practice of Congress to guide and support us in the position we take with reference to the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senate to the language of the ordinance of 1787, which states the purpose for which the territory was set apart:

> And for extending the fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty, which form the basis whereon these republics, their laws and constitutions are erected; to fix and establish those principles as the basis of all laws, constitutions, and governments, which forever hereafter shall be formed in the said territory; to provide also for the establishment of States, and permanent government therein, and for their admission to a share in the Federal councils on an aqual footing with the original States, at as early periods as may be consistent with the general interests:
>
> It is hereby ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, etc.—

This first act of Congress was for the purpose of creating States, of defining their boundaries, by first organizing what is termed a Territory, authorizing the division of a Territory thus organized for the creation of more States, and for no other purpose.

I wish to call attention to, and to analyze, the language of that part of the act that guarantees statehood to Arizona. The first section, in its first paragraph, sets apart the territory that is called the Territory of Arizona. It is that part of New Mexico that lies west of a line drawn from the northwest corner of the Territory of Colorado down to the border line of Mexico. Everything west of that was to be the Territory of Arizona. It then provides:

> And the same is hereby erected into a temporary government by the name of the Territory of Arizona.

All Territories by the very terms of their acts were creations of temporary governments. Then follows the first proviso:

> Provided, That nothing contained in the provisions of this act shall be construed to prohibit the Congress of the United States from dividing said Territory—

As Territories had been divided theretofore—

> from dividing said Territory or changing its boundaries in such manner and at such time as it may deem proper.

Nothing was to prevent Congress from dividing the Territory of Arizona. Nothing was to prevent Congress from changing its boundaries. But then follows the second and the controlling proviso, which limits everything that preceded it:

> Provided further, That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time—

Until what time?—

> until such time as the people residing in said Territory—

Not Territory spelled with a lower case "t," but with a capital "T," the Territory for which the government was created, the Territory that remained after its boundaries might be changed, after a part might be taken off for another Territory, the remaining part of Arizona. I will reread the whole of this proviso:

> Provided further, That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall, with the consent of Congress, form a State government, republican in form, as prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, and apply for and obtain admission into the Union as a State, on an equal footing with the original States.

What is the difference between a pledge of Congress to the country and its people and to Arizona and its people and the pledge contained in the ordinance of 1787? I have no question that any subsequent Congress possessed the "power" to repeal or modify the ordinance of 1787. So any subsequent Congress possesses the "power" to change or modify this pledge by Congress to the country and to Arizona. What is the material difference between the two pledges? It would have been considered sacrilege to have laid a vandal hand upon any part of the ordinance of 1787, and it is sacrilege now to lay a vandal hand upon a pledge made by Congress forty-three years ago to the people of the United States, to the United States, and to the people of the Territory of Arizona, that their government should continue and be maintained until they formed a State constitution and applied for admission into the Union as a State.

To be sure, Mr. President, Arizona has not as yet formed a constitution, but the equivalent of this language is that under no circumstances will the government of Arizona be taken from those people until they are admitted as a State with their own consent.

"You shall continue a Territory; your borders may be changed; another Territory may be carved out of it; but the government that was created in 1863 shall continue over the Territory that remains, and it shall so continue until you voluntarily appear at the doors of Congress either with a constitution already framed or to apply for permission to meet and form a State government." And the wrong that is being done, the outrage almost unspeakable, Mr. President, is that after Arizona for forty-three years has existed with this pledge solemnly made by Congress, it, relying upon this pledge, after tens of thousands of American citizens have moved into Arizona, relying upon the good faith of Congress to carry out this pledge, have taken with them their families, have invested their means, have helped to build up the institutions of that Territory—the unspeakable outrage is to declare to them, "We will take your government from you and force you into statehood with the people of another Territory, no matter how abhorrent that association may be."

Mr. President, when you analyze this section you find there is a distinction between "territory" and the "government." They are not altogether synonymous terms. I mean territory as an area of land. I do not mean the Territory as a government. A certain area of land was set apart and, with the government, was to constitute the Territory of Arizona. The territory might be divided into two parts or three if Congress so desired. The territory or the land might have its boundary changed. But that which is to continue and to be maintained is the government and so much of the land as should be left after Congress had exercised, in its discretion, the power reserved to it.

Let me illustrate by Arizona what is meant by the power to change its boundaries. There is in the northwest part of Arizona a section of land lying to the north and west of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. It is claimed by those who live in Utah that it is a place of refuge for thieves and other felons; that when Utah officers pursue them, after their having committed depredations in Utah, the outlaws cross the line and the Utah officials have no authority to pursue them. They can not reach them in Arizona without a long detour, and it is almost impossible, except at one or two points, to cross the Grand Canyon to reach them.

Now, if, under those circumstances, Congress should see fit, Utah remaining a Territory, to pass an act segregating the northwest corner of Arizona and attaching it to Utah, for the reasons I have stated—for the better government of Utah, for the better government of Arizona—it would be perfectly within the power of Congress to do so. But when you attempt to uproot the government; when you attempt to destroy it, root and branch; when it is proposed in the face of the solemn pledge by Congress to merge Arizona into another entire Territory and bind them together forever as a State, you violate the solemn pledge of Congress and do violence to the American sense of right and justice.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not know whether I understood the Senator aright. I will ask him to state whether I did. He maintains that it is within the power and right of Congress, if it deems it wise for the reasons given by the Senator, to detach the northwest corner of Arizona, the portion of land north of the Grand Canyon, and attach it to Utah. Am I correct about that?

Mr. PATTERSON. If Utah were yet a Territory.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Oh, certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. Then it would be within the power of Congress, in my judgment, under the clause of the first proviso——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. So far as Arizona is concerned.

Mr. PATTERSON. So far as Arizona is concerned, to attach it to Utah.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Now I desire to ask the Senator the question. If we have the power to detach that area and attach it to Utah, would we not have the power, as a matter of power, to detach the entire northern plateau of Arizona?

Mr. PATTERSON. Go ahead and finish your question.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is the question. Then, the next one.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have not denied the "power" of Congress to destroy the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Ah! Then the Senator admits that so far as the legal force of this matter is concerned it is nil, a nudum pactum. What then does the Senator argue with reference to that? If we have the power and the right, for reasons which appear sound to Congress, representing the nation and the whole American people, to detach a portion of Arizona, without saying anything to the people of Arizona, either those in the portion detached or those in the portion left, why have we not the power also to detach, for good and sufficient reasons, a third of it, two-thirds of it, all of it? It comes down to the question as to whether the reasons are sufficient, does it not?

Mr. PATTERSON. No; it comes down to the question whether the honor of the nation is involved——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Then, Mr. President——

Mr. PATTERSON. Whether the obligations solemnly undertaken by the Congress of the United States forty-three years ago are to be repudiated. I raise no question about the "power." I present the question of the moral obligation——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Ah, Mr. President——

Mr. PATTERSON. The moral duty, the rights that the people of Arizona acquired to insist that the compact shall be carried into effect.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Then how far was the honor of the country impaired when after it was an organized Territory over 11,000 square miles were detached? The Senator says we have a right to detach all of the northwestern corner north of the Colorado Canyon. He now says we can not detach two-thirds, one-third, or any other portion—not as a matter of law, but as a matter of national honor. If, then, we were to do what the Senator says we may do, detach that portion north of the Colorado Canyon, how much of our honor would be impaired?

Mr. PATTERSON. I will attempt to show the Senate and the Senator from Indiana, if the Senator from Indiana is open to reason.

The first proviso of the first section of the act organizing the Territory is as follows:

Provided, That nothing contained in the provisions of this act shall be construed to prohibit the Congress of the United States from dividing said Territory or changing its boundaries in such manner and at such time as it may deem proper.

There is the authority retained in the act in which the other pledge was made, reserved to Congress, to divide the Territory into two Territories or to change its boundaries, not to annihilate it, not to destroy it.

Mr. President, there is a second proviso that controls the first.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question before he takes up the second proviso?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Under the proviso he has just read, does he concede the power of Congress, if Congress deems it wise and right to do it, to split Arizona in the middle, at Phoenix, and unite all the eastern half of it to New Mexico?

Mr. PATTERSON. All such provisions must receive reasonable construction. The act can not be so enlarged or so construed as to destroy its clear intent. I suppose, under the language of the act, that if Congress saw fit it might, in the exercise of the "power" it possesses, cut Arizona in two. It might annex the eastern half to New Mexico, but whether that would not be in violation of the compact or its pledge would be a question that might well be discussed.

Under the uniform rule that Congress has followed, Territories have been divided only to make additional States. Territories have not been diveded to enlarge existing Territories, and under a fair construction, as we would measure the words of Congress by all the previous history of its legislation, when it reserved the power to divide the Territory the power was reserved to divide it so that two States might be created and not that one-half of it might be returned to the Territory from which it had been previously detached or added to some other Territory.

But, Mr. President, let us admit for the sake of argument that that extreme use might be made of the power that is lodged in Congress—to divide the Territory of Arizona in two and attach one-half of it to the Territory of New Mexico. The government of Arizona would still remain over the remaining half, and that remaining half could not be forced into an unwilling alliance with any other Territory or with any State, having in mind the clear and solemn pledge of Congress,

Legislation of this kind must always receive a reasonable construction, and if, in the exercise of the power to divide Arizona or to change its boundaries Congress should destroy Arizona, Congress would break faith with the people of the country and with the people of Arizona.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him for a moment?

Mr. PATTERSON. With pleasure.

Mr. SPOONER. I desire to call his attention to the fact, as a matter of history, that the bill for the organization of Arizona originated in the House of Representatives with this proviso incorporated in it, and it clearly appears from the debate that one controlling motive which led the Senate to concur in that measure, as evidenced by the debates, was the necessity for the legislation in order to enable this Government to redeem pro tanto the pledge made to Mexico in the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

It is stated in the debates that there were 2,000 American citizens; that there were 4,000 pueblos, Mexicans, who were civilized, and who, under the constitution of Mexico, were citizens of Mexico at the time of the cession, and that there were from 15,000 to 20,000 wild Indians. Under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo the 4,000 pueblo citizens had become citizens of the United States, with the treaty pledge that we would give them the protection of our laws. And it is recited in this debate that they lived 700 miles away from the capital of New Mexico, that almost impassable mountains intervened, that they were in danger of constant attack from the Indians, and that in no other way could the pledge made by this Government to Mexico in the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo be carried out except to give them the protection which could be given only by enacting and creating this Territorial form of government. So the record shows, and the truth is, and the history is, that this pledge was made in part redemption of the treaty.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I had referred to all of the reasons suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin, except the fact that the act organizing Arizona was in part influenced by the obligation resting upon the Government to carry out the obligations of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. But there were other reasons. Those I attempted to give, and whether they are sound or unsound must be left to the Senate.

Mr. President, I will not consume any more time in discussing the obligations of the act of 1863. I desire briefly now to refer to the claims that are made that neither Arizona nor New Mexico is fit for statehood. While I oppose the enforced union of these Territories, I have no question but that each is entitled to statehood, and that if Congress should do its duty it will with as little delay as possible pass an act admitting both Arizona and New Mexico into the Union.

But I am reminded by the denunciation of these two Territories by the able and eloquent Senators who oppose their admission as States of the wonderful similarity between the views taken of the western country in the year 1906 and the views entertained of all the country west of the Mississippi River in 1838. In that year Congress attempted to make an appropriation to establish a mail route between Independence, Mo., and the mouth of the Columbia River, on the Pacific coast. That attempt naturally led to a discussion as to the character of the country which the mail route must traverse. Daniel Webster, then in the Senate and at the zenith of his glory, crystallized the opinion entertained by most eastern people at that time of the character of the country that has since developed into a vast and valuable empire. Webster, in discussing the proposed mail route, thus described the country as he conceived it:

> What do we want with this vast, worthless area; this region of savages and wild beasts, of deserts, shifting sands and whirlwinds of dust, of cactus and prarie dogs? To what use could we ever hope to put these great deserts or those endless mountain ranges, impregnable and covered to their very base with eternal snow? What can we ever hope to do with the western coast—a coast of 3,000 miles, cheerless, rockbound, uninviting, and not a harbor on it? What use have we for such a country? Mr. President, I will never vote one cent from the Public Treasury to place the Pacific coast one inch nearer to Boston than it now is.

Those are practically the views, Mr. President, entertained by the Senators who now oppose the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to statehood. They decry their population. They demean and belittle their productions. They regard them as great wildernesses, not yet even partially reclaimed and never possible of full reclamation from the state of wildness and worthlessness that Senator Webster consigned all the Louisiana Purchase to.

But, Mr. President, they are as much mistaken now as to Arizona and New Mexico as were Webster and the rest who decried all the country secured through the Louisiana purchase more than one hundred years ago. I have insisted for years that both New Mexico and Arizona are fitted for statehood and should be admitted as States. I recollect when Colorado was admitted by the Forty-third Congress, of which the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS] was a member as a Delegate from the Territory of New Mexico, that by the sheerest accident New Mexico was not at that time admitted. I am inclined for the sake of history and to relieve myself from a charge that has been made to give that history a most interesting chapter and one that should teach a valuable lesson.

It is claimed, and has been claimed very industriously since 1876, that had it not been for me Mr. Tilden would have been inaugurated President of the United States; that because in 1873 I had been elected Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Colorado, I repaired to Washington at the close of the Forty-third Congress, in 1874, and had Colorado admitted as a State in time for the election of 1876; that I had represented that Colorado was certainly Democratic, but when the Presidential election was held Colorado went Republican, casting its vote for Hayes and Wheeler; that had it not been that Colorado was thus admitted Hayes would not have received Colorado's three votes and Tilden must have been declared elected.

Mr. President, these are the facts of Colorado's admission, and in that connection is the tragedy of New Mexico. It was in 1873 that bills for the admission of Colorado and New Mexico were introduced into the Forty-third Congress. To a certain extent they were political measures. The fortunes of the two bills were tied together. The bills for the admission of Colorado and New Mexico passed the House at the same time and by practically the same vote. The bills then went to the Senate together. There was a decided opposition in the Senate then, as there is now, to the admission of new Western States.

It was the plan to amend them in the Senate and trust to the House, under the rules then existing, to prevent them from being brought to a final vote. They passed the Senate together, were amended in identical particulars and passed the Senate by the same vote.

The two bills as amended were sent back to the House. The last day of the Forty-third Congress was approaching. Both bills went to the Speaker's table, instead of being referred to the committee, and by arrangement they remained there to be called from the table and passed when the propitious moment arrived. But it required a two-thirds vote to secure that result.

About a week before the close of Congress, while the force bill of that session was under discussion, the now Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS], then a Member of the House, made a speech that for eloquence and arousing partisanship has rarely been excelled. I was standing behind the rows of seats while that speech was being delivered. So powerful and overwhelming was the eloquence of the now Senator from Michigan that when he concluded there was a universal burst of applause from the Republican side of the Chamber, in which the galleries strongly united. My friend from West Virginia, the then Delegate from New Mexico, was standing close to the speaker when he concluded. He was then as now intensely Republican, more emotional then than now, and, carried away by his feelings, he was among the first to rush to the Representative and seize his hand and congratulate him upon the power and splendor of his address.

Mr. President, on the other side of the Chamber were numbers of Democrats aroused to high resentment as the Member from Michigan proceeded with his speech. While it aroused the enthusiasm of the Republican side of the House, it deeply angered the other side. When some of the Democrats, who had stood by New Mexico and Colorado for their admission into the Union, witnessed the then Delegate, Mr. ELKINS, rush to and congratulate Mr. BURROWS, they clenched their teeth and mentally said, "Wait until your bill comes up, and we will pay you for this demonstration."

Mr. President, the scene shifts to the last night of the session. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Blaine was Speaker. It had been prearranged with the Speaker that at the proper time a motion would be made to take the bill for the admission of Colorado and then the bill for the admission of New Mexico from the Speaker's table, to concur in the Senate amendments, and put the bills on their final passage. At the time agreed upon a Member rose. He was recognized by the Speaker, Mr. Blaine, and moved that the bill for the admission of Colorado be taken from the Speaker's table, the amendments concurred in, and the bill put upon its final passage. A roll call was ordered; the two-thirds vote necessary was given, with five or six additional votes; and Colorado became a State in the Union, awaiting only the signature of the President to the bill.

Immediately the same Member rose and moved that the bill for the admission of New Mexico be taken from the Speaker's table and the amendments concurred in and the bill passed. A roll call was ordered, but enough of the Democrats whom the Senator from West Virginia, then a Delegate, had so incensed voted against New Mexico, and it lacked a few votes of the necessary two-thirds. Had it not been for Mr. ELKINS's impulsive congratulation of Mr. BURROWS New Mexico would have received every vote that had been cast for Colorado.

So from that day to this New Mexico has been a Territory, while Colorado has been enjoying all of the benefits of statehood; and the Senator from West Virginia, realizing that New Mexico had lost the fight he had struggled for years to win and that it could not be successfully renewed for many years, changed his domicile, and has been honorably representing the State of West Virginia in this body almost ever since.

I mention this historical fact, Mr. President, for the purpose of showing that thirty-three years ago, had it not been for so trifling a matter as congratulating another on a fine speech, New Mexico would have been a State now for more than thirty-three years. On what a slender thread hangs the fate of States!

If New Mexico was fitted for statehood thirty-three years ago, in the opinion of the House of Representatives and of the Senate of the United States—and it must be believed that both Senators and Representatives acted conscientiously at that time—why is not New Mexico fitted for statehood at this time? Why should it be thrown in the teeth of the people of New Mexico that they are so lacking in intelligence, in industry, in morals, in education, and material prosperity that in the year 1906, notwithstanding statehood was practically pledged in the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848, they are not yet fitted for statehood?

But, Mr. President, why does Arizona now object to a union with New Mexico in statehood? As I suggested, it has its own history and its own achievements. The Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], in a speech he made in the last Congress, called the attention of the Senate to the State of Texas, a great imperial State that had a right to be divided into five States and be represented on this floor by ten Senators, and yet it declined to accept that privilege. He referred to California and the other great States, and because those great States would not be divided, he insists that Arizona and New Mexico should not object to being united.

Suppose some one should suggest to the Senator from Indiana that Indiana and Illinois were too small and should be united as one State, or that Ohio and Pennsylvania should be united as one State; suppose some one should suggest to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. LONG] that Kansas and Colorado should be united as one State; if there were serious danger of the accomplishment of either the one proposition or the other, the people of every one of those States would be up in arms ready to resist it with force, if necessary.

Mr. President, when a people have lived together for many years, when they have built up the institutions of their State or Territory, when they have shared the common dangers and have earned the common glories, there are feelings that will unite them and prevent them from being disunited. Such is the case with Texas, such is the case with California and other great States. But how different is that from taking two Commonwealths, let us say, for illustration, two great Territories, with a half century of history behind each, each entitled to separate statehood, each having fought and suffered and endured the dangers and privations of building up their country for half a century in expectation of ultimate separate statehood, then seek to unite them as one State by force! You would arouse precisely the same resentment, the same feeling of abhorrence that would exist should the attempt be made to unite two States that had been free and independent for a half century.

So, Mr. President, there are reasons quite independently of the act of 1863, quite independently of the uniform practice of Congress in the creation of Territories and the admission of such Territories as States, why Arizona objects to being united with New Mexico in statehood. The Senator from Indiana gave reasons strong, eloquent, comprehensive, and overwhelming. Let me call the attention of the Senate to the report made by the majority of the Committee on Territories to the Fifty-seventh Congress, of which the Senator from Indiana is chairman, in which report the conditions in New Mexico and Arizona were dealt with most exhaustively. First, let me read what the report says about the population of Arizona, and then what it says of the population of New Mexico. It says:

> Arizona has a population of 122,931 (census 1900). Of these the considerable majority are Americans, as distinguished from the native or "Mexican" population, although nearly 30,000 (28,931) are "Mexicans."

That is, there are about four Americans to one Mexican in Arizona according to the census.

> Schools are conducted in English with few or practically no exceptions, and, while interpreters are used in the courts, it is to a limited extent, compared with New Mexico.

Then the report says as to educational progress of the Territory of Arizona:

> As to the educational progress of the people of the Territory, taken as a whole, it may be considered fair. Of course, in towns like Prescott (population, 3,559), or Phoenix (population, 5,554), or Tucson (population, 7,531) the schools are altogether admirable. School buildings in these three towns compare favorably with much larger towns even in the best portions of the entire country. It is also true that nowhere in the Republic are to be found men and women of higher quality in all that makes good citizenship than the people in these localities.

Such was the testimony not only of the Senator from Indiana in the last Congress, but of the entire Republican membership of the Committee on Territories.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PATTERSON. With pleasure.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will italicize the force of what the Senator is saying when he reads from and comments upon that portion of the report by pointing out that in the last session, when I was closing the debate upon this question, I again affirmed my high regard and exalted esteem for the people living in those two towns in the Territory of Arizona and living elsewhere throughout those Territories. I am particularly glad to do it, Mr. President, in view of the fact that because a man has taken a position upon a question of statesmanship it has been represented in private conversation and elsewhere that he has slandered the people of those Territories.

I am very glad indeed to italicize what the Senator is saying, and every word he reads, and to tell him that I said it not only there, but that I have said it elsewhere at other points and in the debates upon this floor; but, Mr. President, that is no reason for statehood. There must be quantity as well as quality.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I knew the Senator from Indiana would italicize what he had said two years ago about the people of Arizona, for I doubt if there is a more intelligent, a more patriotic, a more industrious, or a more ambitious people to be found upon the face of this continent than is the population of Arizona, and that population, according to his own figures and the census reports, stands about four to one—four parts being what is denominated "American population" and the one being "Mexican."

Now, Mr. President, we will go to his statements about the people of New Mexico. You will discover that there is a vast difference in the quality of the people of the two Territories, according to his report. It says:

> The great majority are native New Mexicans of Spanish and mixed Spanish and Indian descent, and of these practically all speak Spanish in the affairs of daily life, and the majority speak nothing but Spanish.

That of itself would be almost enough to compel the people of Arizona to refuse voluntarily to be added to New Mexico as a State; but, he continues:

> Courts are conducted through the medium of an interpreter, and it is impossible to conduct the machinery of justice without this official.

Then he continues:

> The interpreter interprets the testimony of witnesses to the jury, the argument of counsel to the jury, and the charge of the court to the jury.

That is the way justice is administered in the Territory of New Mexico—foreign-speaking juries and lawyers compelled to address juries through interpreters. You will find a little further on that the court is often compelled to send some person who speaks both Spanish and English to the jury room to let the jury know what the testimony was. According to the testimony of the Senator from Indiana and the other members of the committee:

> Occasionally the interpreter must be sent by the judge to the jury room in order to enable the jury to reach a verdict, since it sometimes happens that some of the members of the jury are English speaking, some Spanish speaking, and no member of the jury can speak both languages.

A little further on he says:

> In the majority of cases it is true that some member of the jury is able to speak both languages and can then act as interpreter for the others.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PATTERSON. Of course.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will not ask the Senator any further questions, because I do not wish to take up the Senator's time, but I will ask this one: Did the Senator from Colorado indorse that report when it was made to the Senate upon the bill then pending?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, from my observance I think the Senator from Indiana, through want of information or for some other reason, exaggerated the condition.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator, then, did not——

Mr. PATTERSON. I am simply attempting, now, to give the reason why the people of Arizona declined to be annexed in statehood to the people of New Mexico as stated under the solemn obligations of a Senator of the United States by the Senator from Indiana, the six members comprising the majority of the committee uniting with him.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, the Senator evades the question. I ask him again, Did he then indorse the report from which he now reads?

Mr. PATTERSON. I have answered that question, and I do not have to answer it again.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No; I do not think the Senator in fairness has answered it.

Mr. PATTERSON. Then I will answer it again. I believed and felt from my personal knowledge that there was a grave exaggeration at that time by the majority of the committee in dealing with the people of New Mexico.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Then the Senator did not at that time indorse the report?

Mr. PATTERSON. Well, the Senator ought to be content with what I have said.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Has the Senator changed his belief from that time until now?

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator is now quoting the Senator from Indiana. Let me ask the Senator from Indiana——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator can not quote the Senator from Indiana with approval one day and with disapproval another day, when on both days he quotes exactly the same words.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I am simply quoting the Senator from Indiana without approval or disapproval. I credit the Senator from Indiana with stating in this report and elsewhere what he honestly believes were the conditions, and I am not now affirming my own views. But will the Senator from Indiana answer this question: Did he believe, when he made these statements, that the statements were true?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I suppose the Senator will hardly put that question to me or to any other Senator.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will answer the Senator from Colorado, though, of course, Mr. President, such a question requires no answer. We all know that every member who signed that report believes what it says.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. What I want to know is not whether the Senator from Indiana believed at the time he wrote that report what he said. We all know he did, or otherwise he would not have written it. But does he believe it now?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes, Mr. President, I believe it now concerning the conditions when it was written. I believe it now as modified by the conditions that have since occurred. I do not want, Mr. President, to take up any more of the Senator's time, but I will say this: I think the Senator is using the time very well in reading from the report which I had the honor to draw, but when he reads certain statements concerning certain things and then applies them to an entire Territory as though that were all the committee had said concerning that Territory, and then takes up something else which is derogatory concerning portions of any Territory and applies that to the rest of the Territory without reading the whole thing, he hardly informs the Senate or does himself full justice. I am not going to suggest to the Senator that he shall read all of the report, since it is somewhat extensive, and as he is to close the debate on that side this afternoon I will apologize for asking him a question concerning his consistency on this subject.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will now read what the Senator says about the character of the people, both Mexicans and white, or I will do so if I am given the time.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not want the Senator to occupy too much time.

Mr. PATTERSON. Now I will continue. The Senator further says in the report:

> In political campaigns almost all political speeches are made either in Spanish or in English through an interpreter, and interpreters are used in practically all (it may even be said in all) political conventions.
>
> An interpreter was used in the last Republican Territorial convention, which nominated the present Delegate to Congress, and nominating speeches were made through that medium.
>
> An interpreter is used in the legislature, and both council (senate) and house have official interpreters.
>
> Until recently (historically speaking) no English was taught in the common schools. At present both Spanish and English are taught in most of the schools.
>
> Spanish is taught through the second reader and no further, because a person who has learned Spanish sufficiently to go through Manella's Second Spanish Reader can speak and write that language fluently, and no further instruction for practical purposes is necessary.
>
> In some schools Spanish is taught exclusively; and history, arithmetic, and geography are translated from American text into Spanish.
>
> In some high schools, such as the high school at East Las Vegas, the "American" town, as distinguished from Las Vegas proper, the so-called "Mexican" town, Spanish is taught only in the last two years of the course, and the reason it is taught in these higher grades is because the graduates must understand that language for the active affairs of daily life.

So that when you annex Arizona and New Mexico the first thing you must do is to establish schools to teach the Arizonians the Spanish language, in order that they may engage with the rest of the population in the active affairs of life. The Senator says further:

> Of all schools (save, probably, the high schools at Albuquerque and East Las Vegas and the purely "American" towns of Carlsbad, Roswell, and Rowan) the children at play during the recess or going home from school speak Spanish instead of English.

I might read many other things, but I will skip some. But to quote the Senator on the subject of illiteracy in New Mexico:

> The remainder of the 195,310 people in New Mexico are called in that Territory "Americans," as contradistinguished from the class above spoken of, who are there termed "Mexicans." But the "Americans" are made up from every other nationality except Mexicans. Germans, Italians, French, and all other nationalities are called "Americans." And yet of the entire population of New Mexico 33.2 per cent are illiterates—that is, that portion can neither read nor write Spanish, English, or any other language. (Census of 1900.)
>
> If the test of illiteracy were confined to the English language only, the committee is of opinion that the percentage of illiterates would be much more than doubled.

So that, according to the testimony, if the test of illiteracy is to be confined to the English language, 66.4 per cent of the population of New Mexico are illiterate.

Now, Mr. President, I want to read what the Senator says about the Americans. I want to read, as I said, all that he said about the Mexican and the American population. This is his estimate of the American population:

> As to the remaining, or "Americans," some of them are not as good citizens as the Mexican element. (Testimony of Judge Mills, p. 2.) Such are the "riffraff," to use the expression of United States Judge Mills (testimony, p. 1), who first follow the introduction of railroads, and certain other elements always seen on any country's extending frontier, but these are, of course, disappearing. The majority of "Americans," however, are good material for citizenship, and of a large number of them absolutely too much can not be said.
>
> Aside from these towns, practically all development is Mexican. For example, the Mexican population universally live in adobe or mud houses, just as they did a hundred years ago. Even in the capital city of Santa Fe practically all the residences and most of the schools are in these earth structures. These houses are built of mud (sometimes plastered), of bricks of sod (this is not the true adobe house, however). These to-day resemble to a striking extent the common and usual homes of the Chinese people, both in city and country.

That does not require any comment. It is with people such as he describes that the Senator from Indiana proposes to force the people of Arizona into an unwilling alliance.

Now, let me read his estimate of the moral caliber of the New Mexican, of his indifference, his ignorance, and gullibility. This is an interesting description:

> It is the further belief of the committee that a large portion of the people are indifferent to and ignorant of the question—

That is, statehood. Now, think of it, Mr. President. Here is the all-absorbing question of statehood—statehood for a Territory with a population of somewhere between 200,000 and 300,000; statehood for a Territory that has been seeking statehood now for more than sixty years. If there is a question upon which a people, however ignorant, should be informed, it is that of statehood when they had been seeking it for sixty years. But I continue reading from the Senator's report:

> It is the further belief of the committee that a large portion of the people are indifferent to and ignorant of the question. (Testimony of Martinez Amador, p. 105.) If it be said that they voted in favor of it, the answer is that nothing is easier than to appeal to a people like the native New Mexican with a statement that there is something which he has not (and which will be of value to him) in order to make him desire it, without understanding in the least just what it is that he is deprived of.

This, Mr. President, is the character of the people of New Mexico as outlined, painted in, and described by the Senator from Indiana and the majority of that committee; and these are the people with whom they are seeking to force the people of Arizona into an alliance with. Will the Senator say that the people of Arizona are not justified, taking what the Senator from Indiana says to be true, in saying, "No; we would rather remain outside of the Union for a half century than be forced into the Union as a State with such a population as this to overwhelm ours with the mere weight of numbers."

Why, Mr. President, here is a population of 250,000, a majority of them Mexican and Spanish people, and here is a population of 125,000 or of 150,000, three out of four speaking the English language. What show would the people of one section have in contest with the people of the other? Sending their representatives to a general assembly in which, according to the report, two-thirds of those from New Mexico would be Mexicans, how would such divergent peoples get together in establishing schools and other institutions, institutions to fit a live, wide-awake, progressive, aggressive, and ambitious American population?

But, Mr. President, the people of New Mexico no more want joint statehood than do the people of Arizona. I will send to the Secretary's desk and have read resolutions that were adopted by the Republican central committee of the Territory of New Mexico upon this subject.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I have no purpose to hasten the Senator at all, but I desire to call his attention to the understanding that the Senator was to go on after the morning business, and that at 2 o'clock, or as near that time as possible, I should be allowed to take the floor.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will soon be through.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not want to cut the Senator off, but

I suggest that if the paper will consume much time in being read, it may be printed in the RECORD without reading.

Mr. PATTERSON. There was some interference with the understanding and arrangement, as the Senator from Indiana knows.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

[Republican central committee of New Mexico.]

At a regularly called meeting of the Republican central committee of the Territory of New Mexico, held at Santa Fe, November 10, 1905, at 3 o'clock p. m., the folowing resolution was passed by a vote of 29 ayes to 6 nays:

"This committee, representing the sentiment of the Republican party of this Territory, renews its declaration in favor of single statehood. The proposition of joint statehood never emanated from the people of either this Territory or the Territory of Arizona, and the majority sentiment of the people of both Territories is decidedly against it.

"We look upon the joint statehood measure, so far as it affects this Territory, as an attempt at legislative coercion. We again invite the attention of the National Congress to the repeatedly expressed sentiment in our national and Territorial conventions of the two great political parties in favor of single statehood for this Territory, and express the hope that our Territory will get a square deal, and be honored with an early admission as a State within its present boundaries."

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of a resolution passed by the Republican central committee on the date above given, and that the vote on the same was 29 for and 6 against its adoption.

H. O. BURSUM,
Chairman Republican Central Committee,
Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I have here an interview, clipped from the Washington Post of this morning, with Francis G. Tracy, of Carlsbad, N. Mex., at the Riggs House, in which, in the most unmeasured terms, he denounces joint statehood in behalf of the people of New Mexico. I will not take up time by reading it, but ask that it may be inserted in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so inserted.

The article referred to is as follows:

"As a citizen of New Mexico, I'd like to say a word on this statehood question," said Francis G. Tracy, of Carlsbad, N. Mex., at the Riggs House.

"It has been repeatedly stated in Washington that the people of New Mexico are clamoring for joint statehood. I know this to be untrue. With our people there is the serious question of the great size of the proposed State, the inaccessibility of large portions of it, the difficulty of communication, and the lack of homogeneousness of the population.

"I live in southeastern New Mexico, and I can reach Chicago easier and only a few hours later than I can get to Santa Fe. The cost is about the same.

"We of eastern New Mexico know nothing of the people of Arizona and they know as little of us. My home is in the Pecos Valley, the great American settlement of the Territory, where the population has been doubling annually for several years. This is the part of the Territory that Senator BEVERIDGE and his colleagues passed through in the night. Here are more than 100 miles of irrigated farms, orchards, vineyards, the greatest flowing artesian wells in America, if not in the world; two big Government irrigation projects, and the promise of a population as dense as that of southern California. Mr. BEVERIDGE would not stop to look at this lest his argument for the future growth of our Territory could not be based on the census of 1900, in face of the facts that he and his colleagues would have to admit.

"There is scarcely an unprejudiced or fair-minded man in America who will not agree that the English-speaking people of New Mexico and Arizona ought to have the right to vote separately whether they want statehood at all upon such terms as the Hamilton bill proposes. It is the vote in New Mexico which is expected to bring in Arizona against her will, and it is the enormous land grants—20,000,000 acres—which are expected to influence the New Mexican politicians who control the native vote. Afterwards the Anglo-Saxon is supposed to look out for himself."

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, a statement contained in the resolutions of the Republican Territorial central committee is pregnant with suggestion. It is that the idea of joint statehood did not originate with either the New Mexican people or with those who reside in Arizona. Joint statehood for New Mexico was not even thought of in the Fifty-seventh Congress. The House of Representatives passed the act admitting Arizona and New Mexico as separate States. That bill came to the Senate, and, even in opposing that measure, no suggestion was made that Arizona and New Mexico should be united into a single State. The measure was fought during the entire session upon the theory that neither one Territory nor the other was fitted for admission into the Union. Then will the Senator from Indiana tell the Senate where this proposition for joint statehood originated? Is it his child, or was it born of some Member at the other end of the Capitol? Will he kindly tell when it originated, what was its purpose, and what was sought to be accomplished? Did those who first gave it life and have since adopted it realize at the time that in insisting upon joint statehood for those two Territories they were flying in the face of a solemn compact existing between Congress and the people for more than sixty-three years, that such a thing as that should not be done, but that the government of Arizona should continue until the people applied for admission as a State into the Union? Are either sectional or political emergencies or exigencies so great that this solemn pledge must be disregarded and a thing done in the creation of a State that has never before been done by Congress in all the history of the Union?

Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I protest against the commission of this grave moral crime by the Senate of the United States. I insist that the pledge made to the country by a solemn act of Congress shall be kept by all succeeding Congresses, unless some stronger reason than in this case is shown, unless there is a preponderating reason existing, one that affects the life of the nation itself; otherwise the compact must be kept. Unless the people of Arizona are permitted to say at a free and untrammeled election whether or not they are willing to be joined in statehood with New Mexico, or whether they will insist upon the pledge given by Congress being carried out, then it is the duty of every Senator to vote against the measure. If the people of Arizona are permitted to vote, and will say: "Yes; we are so anxious for statehood that we will unite with New Mexico," then I ought to be content; but even then I feel that a gross wrong would be done to the minority of the people of Arizona and also to the people of New Mexico. The adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] is a proper solution of the controversy. Before a constitutional convention is called the question shall be submitted to the voters of each Territory as to whether they favor the joint-statehood proposition. That will be in strict accordance with the act of 1863. The good faith of Congress and the good faith of the Senate require that that pledge shall be religiously kept, either in the way proposed by the Senator from Ohio or in some way that is its full equivalent.

I apologize to the Senate for occupying so much of its time, but feel that the importance of this question has justified me in doing so.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado says, as though it were a noteworthy fact, that the idea of joint statehood did not originate with the people of either Territory. Why should it? Statehood is not a question to be settled by the people of the Territories alone; it is a question for the nation to settle. It is not a local matter; it is a national matter. It is not a temporary arrangement for the benefit alone of the people living in these Territories; it is a permanent arrangement, which fixes their relation and that of their posterity with all the multiplying millions who shall live in this Republic till the end of time.

STATEHOOD A NATIONAL QUESTION.

So, Mr. President, we can not deal with this matter as though it were an affair of district or state politics or the interests of friends whom we should like to accommodate, or even the temporary views of the people of the territories. We, as Senators of the United States, can look upon this question only from the view point of the Nation, whose Government is forever affected by it, and of all the American people, whose interests now and for all time to come are vitally concerned.

Mr. President, when Congress creates new states out of "territory belonging to the United States," to use the exact language of the Constitution, the people living within those boundaries cease to be local communities and become national commonwealths. They begin not only to completely govern themselves, which is important; but they also begin, and forever continue, to aid in the government of the remainder of the Republic, which is more important. When a new state is created, it is instantly endowed with indestructible power over every citizen that anywhere dwells beneath the shadow of our flag. Therefore, because a state helps to govern the remainder of the Nation forever, the question of its creation should be left to Congress.

LOCAL SENTIMENT NOT A TRUE GUIDE.

Congress acts, or is supposed to act, from the view point of the Nation; the people living within the territory naturally and necessarily act from local and temporary considerations. Congress represents, or ought to represent, the settled views of the whole people of the Republic. The people in the territories necessarily, naturally, and unavoidably represent local, personal, selfish, and changing opinions. For example, three years and a half ago, when the Committee on Territories reported the bill to admit Oklahoma and the Indian Territory as one state, it was then met with a bitter hostility, as the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], who reported it, can testify. But it has since won the approval of nearly every thoughtful and patriotic man. When that bill was proposed, the people of those two territories were almost unanimously against it. To-day the people of those two territories are almost unanimously for it; a change in view on the part of a million and a half intelligent American citizens in three years as to what was best for them in that locality.

And so we see there, Mr. President, from an illustration immediately before us, that the opinion of the people living within a territory as to statehood—as to that unchangeable condition which must last forever—is necessarily too temporary, too local, too interested, and therefore too changeable to be any sort of a guide in telling the Congress of the United States what it should do in such vast business.

POWER OF CONGRESS TO CREATE STATES UNLIMITED.

Mr. President, it was for these reasons that the Constitution gave Congress absolutely unlimited power over the creation of new states. The Constitution does not contemplate that the people living within the boundaries of the proposed new state shall be consulted at all. If the Constitution had considered this a local matter and not a national matter, it could have added seven words which would have settled the whole controversy. The Constitution now reads:

New states may be admitted by the Congress into this Union.

If the fathers who drafted that instrument had meant that the people living within the territory should be consulted about it, they would have added seven words and made the Constitution read:

New states may be admitted by the Congress into this Union with the consent of the people thereof.

But the fathers refused to write those seven words into the Constitution and left Congress the sole and absolute arbiter of the destiny of "territory belonging to the United States."

CUSTOM OF CONSULTING PEOPLE WISE AND AMERICAN.

But, Mr. President, while this is true, there has grown up a custom of consulting the people living in the territory within the boundaries of the proposed new state upon the question as to whether or not they will accept the invitation of the Nation into full membership in the republic. It is a wise custom, an American custom, and one which meets my hearty approval, as I have no doubt it meets the hearty assent of every American citizen.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I am very glad to.

Mr. PATTERSON. I do not intend to interrupt the Senator very much, but the clause of the Constitution to which he makes reference is an interesting one—that Congress may admit new states into the Union. Does not that imply upon the application or with the consent of the people of the territory?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Not at all; quite the reverse.

Mr. PATTERSON. One word more. Congress may admit new states. Suppose Congress insists that there shall be a state in the Union against the will of the people; who is going to coerce the people of the state into operating and acting as citizens of a state? There is no coercive power; therefore there must be consent.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. There is absolutely no question whatever of the power of Congress to create a state out of territory belonging to the United States, and to admit it, no matter what the people may say. A custom has grown up to consult the people, but it is a custom which is so American, which is so in accord with the genius of our institutions, that everybody accepts it. But the Constitution did not so put it. The Constitution left it in the hands of Congress for undoubtedly wise and far-seeing reasons, which it is not necessary now to take time to discuss, though I will cite one.

It is conceivable that a community of people might be living within "territory belonging to the United States," living under peculiar institutions, enjoying the protection of our flag, and yet who did not want to come into the full membership of the Union. There is no question whatever that Congress would have power to make that a state. But the discussion on this point is more or less academic, and was brought out by the remark of the Senator from Colorado. Since the Constitution can almost always be said, except in extraordinary cases, to be interpreted by a long continuous custom——

Mr. PATTERSON. I wish to interrupt the Senator simply to elucidate the constitutional proposition that Congress may, whether the people of a territory desire it or not, make the territory a state. Suppose Congress should, as in this case it does, declare that a certain area of the territory of the United States shall be a state and should order an election for members of a constitutional convention to form a constitution. What power is there in the Federal Government to coerce the people into electing delegates to form a constitution?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It would be quite within the power of Congress, under the power given—to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory belonging to the United States—to provide all laws that might be necessary. But no person could compel the people to elect Senators or Representatives under it. If all the people united in not doing it, it could not be done. It would be a state de jure, but not de facto.

But the Senator's hypothesis is unthinkable. It is unthinkable that there will be in any community large enough to be a state an absolute unanimity of opinion upon that subject. There would always be somebody to vote for the Senators and the Representatives which Congress, in creating the new state, provided for. While this academic discussion is interesting, time flies, and, as I said, it perhaps is not greatly pertinent, except to show that, in the opinion of the fathers, the question of creating a state is a question for Congress to settle and not for the people of the territories to settle. Let me reiterate for the third time that the custom has been unbroken since the Ordnance of 1787 until now to consult the people about it. And that is just what the bill does as it comes to us from the House.

BILL SUBMITS QUESTION OF STATEHOOD TO VOTE OF THE PEOPLE.

What does this bill provide for, Mr. President? First, it describes the boundaries of the proposed new state. Second, it describes the limitations of the constitution of the proposed new state. Third, it provides certain conditions, certain limitations, certain benefits that will be conferred upon the people of the new state. And then finally it submits to a majority of all the people living within the boundaries of the proposed new state the question whether or not they will accept the provisions of the bill.

But, Mr. President, those who oppose this measure are not content that a majority of all the people living within the limits of the proposed new state shall say whether or not they will come into the Union. They insist that a majority of a small minority living in a portion of the proposed new state shall control the opinion of all those living within its borders. Those who oppose this bill are not willing that all American citizens living within the boundaries of the proposed new state shall vote at one common general election, as though they were all common American fellow-citizens, but they insist that they shall vote at separate elections, as though they were citizens of foreign countries.

SHALL THE MAJORITY OR THE MINORITY SETTLE THE QUESTION OF STATEHOOD.

Those who oppose this measure take the position, and it was voiced in the argument of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON], that the people who live within Arizona and the people who live within New Mexico shall vote as though those territories were already states. I have heard and read in times past and recently something about states rights. I know in common with everybody else of the great history that clusters around that idea and has so limited and modified it that but a fragment of the original idea now remains. But this is the first time I ever heard of territorial rights.

Now, let us bring this down to a question of figures, Mr. President, and see where it leads us. There are in New Mexico and Arizona, to take a low estimate, something like 300,000 white people. Of these, 200,000 are in New Mexico and 100,000 are in Arizona. Both New Mexico and Arizona are within the limits of the proposed new state whose boundaries Congress in this bill fixes. The opponents of this measure insist that these 300,000 American fellow-citizens shall not vote together in a common or general election, but that they shall vote separately.

Now, if all these people voted, fifty thousand and one in Arizona would control the remainder of the entire 300,000 if it went the other way. But 50,000 is one-sixth of 300,000. So that, as the Senator from Kansas so lucidly pointed out the other day, we have the proposition, novel in American history, that in the proposed new state one-sixth of its people shall control the destiny of five-sixths of its people as though they were foreigners. Yet just that is what the enemies of this bill propose.

SHALL 10,000 VOTES FIX THE DESTINY OF 300,000 PEOPLE?

Let us reduce this to a question of votes, Mr. President, because to a question of votes at one time or another this great business comes at last. There was at the last election in Arizona, I think, something like 21,000 votes cast. A little over 10,000 votes is a majority of these. So if in the election which is advocated by the opponents of this bill 10,000 voters can be persuaded or purchased or cajoled or coerced, or in anywise, properly or improperly, influenced, they put an absolute veto not only upon the will of the other 350,000 people and the destiny of their descendants for all time to come, but they negative also the will of the Congress that represents the entire American people.

Very well! There is one mining company in Arizona alone that employs 10,000 men, and it employs in all of its enterprises almost 10 per cent of the entire population of Arizona.

So, Mr. President, we see the nature of the proposition to "let the people of the territories vote separately," which upon its face seems so fair, so much like a "square deal," so much like common justice, but which is, after all, the very gravest of injustices to the people of the Nation and to the people of the territories as well. Mr. President, such a proposition was never heard of before in all the history of American state making, and I intend, before I am through with this argument, to examine it critically and extensively. But before we go to the question as to how the people should vote upon this measure let us examine some of the large questions of statesmanship for and against the measure itself.

I.

AFFIRMATIVE REASONS FOR THE BILL.

What are the reasons why we should create these two states out of this remaining contiguous "territory belonging to the United States" so that from ocean to ocean there shall hereafter be nowhere a single American citizen unrepresented on the floor of this Congress? Ah, Mr. President, there is a thought worth the attention of every Senator—from ocean to ocean let there be no longer an American citizen unrepresented in the Congress that governs him.

What, then, are the reasons for this measure? The committee does not come before the Senate with the bill passed by the direct representatives of the American people in the House of Representatives as an idle proposition or without reasons. Let us first take up Oklahoma and the Indian Territory. Very little need be said about that proposed state.

Mr. PATTERSON. Will the Senator from Indiana state what company in Arizona employs 10,000 men?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes, sir; I will. I have it right here. It is in the House hearings. There is a statement from James Douglas, who is manager of the Copper Queen Consolidated Mining Company, which was presented to the House committee by one of the most earnest opponents of this bill, Mr. B. A. Fowler, one of the most honorable gentlemen I know. I disagree with him heartily upon this question, but I admit his high character and great intelligence. And the statement is made by Mr. Douglas himself that they (Phelps, Dodge & Co., owners of "The Copper Queen") "employ fully 10,000 men, about three-fourths of that number in Arizona and the balance on the railroads and in the coal mines in New Mexico; and," he goes on to say, "since more than 10 per cent of the population of Arizona is either employed in or dependent upon our various enterprises," he thinks they have a right to say what should be done down there on the question of state making, which affects every citizen of this Nation and the prosperity of all the citizens of this Nation to the end of time.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly; go ahead.

Mr. PATTERSON. Without raising any question of veracity as to anybody I only want to say that I am informed by one whose opportunities for knowing are of the best that the company employs about a thousand men in its mines and about fifteen hundred otherwise.

Mr. CLARK of Montana. Fifteen hundred in the mines.

Mr. PATTERSON. About fifteen hundred in the mines and about a thousand otherwise, making a total of about twenty-five hundred. I put that statement against the other.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. In answer to that I will merely say that this appears in the testimony of Mr. Fowler before the House committee at a public hearing, and is given upon authority and by one of the men of greatest weight and character in the entire Southwest. I do not know whether it is true or not, but I do know this, and shall discuss it a little later on, that considerable numbers of men are employed by the mining companies.

GROWTH OF AN IDEA.

Now, a word about Oklahoma and Indian Territory. Very little need be said. Three years and a half ago the Committee on Territories proposed that idea. But it was then resisted with a fierceness and an unreasoning vigor which astonished every member of the committee. It has won its way since that time, and now is receiving the hearty applause of those who at one time attempted to defeat it.

This new state composed of Oklahoma and Indian Territory will make a state 11,000 square miles smaller than the state of Kansas, a state smaller than Missouri, smaller than Nebraska, smaller than South Dakota, equal about to the state of North Dakota. It is a parallelogram, like Colorado. It is an economic unit, balancing its waving fields of grain and its timber with its inexhaustible mines of coal, zinc, lead, and marble, and its wells of natural gas and oil.

This great economic unit and industrial unit was once a political unit. The present unnatural, absurd, zigzag, and bizarre boundary line is the result of accident, as I shall show before I get through with this argument, when I come to the question of territorial boundaries. This bill proposes to destroy that absurdity, that anomaly, and to inclose this noble dominion in the original boundaries which it once had.

When thus reunited Oklahoma will have a million and a half people, a people drawn from the best and bravest citizenship of this country in every section of the Republic, a people who in Oklahoma have grown rich and great, even under a territorial government; who in the Indian Territory have grown rich and great without any government at all, and who in both territories have surpassed in material and moral upbuilding every portion of this Nation in the same space of time.

THE GREATER OKLAHOMA.

That is a broad statement, I know, Mr. President, but I make it knowing how broad it is. For it is an inspiring fact that civilization reached the climax of its effort in civic affairs in the making of the Greater Oklahoma of this bill. The American's capacity for self-government, his instinct for the building of a state erected there his noblest monument to free institutions. On wind-swept prairies, in savage forests, the sons and daughters of the Republic have created in the Greater Oklahoma of this bill a matchless commonwealth in a shorter space of time than was ever done before in all the history of this world before.

When they went there they had no habitations, these settlers of this great new land. They built them in a day—built them of the prairie's sod and of the forest's logs. They were rude huts to be sure. But the magic of the American woman, who always has helped the American pioneer carry American civilization into the Nation's waste places and wildernesses—the magic of this queen of the Republic transformed these rude huts in a moment, aye, in an instant, into American homes.

They had no food. Almost with the passing of a single sun they won it from the soil, and with the succession of the seasons, by systematic and untiring labor, they sent from their fertile fields food for the feeding of the Nation.

THE BUILDERS OF GREATER OKLAHOMA.

They had no schools. Where the law permitted they built hundreds of schools at the common charge almost as quickly as they raised the rooftrees of their homes, and where the law did not permit they provided by private subscription for the education of their children.

They had no capital, no railroads. They compelled capital to look their way, seek their friendship, and pour its golden treasures at their feet. Capital, looking ever for those regions where multitudes of people must finally abide and great resources are to be transported, built railroads all over this splendid land; and these railroads were built not out of subsidies voted by the people, but out of the money of legitimate investors; not leaving behind a burden for coming generations to carry, as was the case in Kansas and Nebraska, but bringing an asset second only to the fertility of the land and the energy and intelligence of the people who developed it.

This great, splendid million and a half of American citizens have earned the right to statehood, and it should be given to them, not only as a matter of justice to them, but as a matter of justice to the Republic as well. For, Mr. President, when Oklahoma rises in the councils of the Nation her voice will be strong and commanding with the numerical equality of her sisters. Her interests are so varied, her industries are so numerous, that when her representatives address the American Congress or give advice in its committees or speak anywhere they will speak for a miniature United States itself, and that is the condition which Senators ought to represent upon the floor of this Senate instead of the condition which the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] spoke of this morning.

So, Mr. President, we find a practical unanimity in favor of the Oklahoma of this bill, although three years ago it could not have mustered 15 votes on this floor and hardly any in the House, and the people of the two territories were unanimously and vigorously against it. All were against it then; all are for it now.

ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO AN ECONOMIC UNIT.

What about New Mexico and Arizona? What are the reasons why these territories should be reunited and their original boundaries restored? In the first place they are an economic unit, an industrial unit, a unit as Oklahoma and the Indian territory are a unit. They are a unit in their productions—one supplying what the other does not have. For example, Arizona has copper, Arizona has gold, Arizona has silver. New Mexico has very little copper and very little gold and silver. But Arizona has no coke or coal to smelt her copper; no coke or coal to work her mines. New Mexico has some of the best coal fields in the world. New Mexico has splendid material for coke. They raise in New Mexico the products of the Temperate Zone; in the southern portion of Arizona they raise the products of the Semitropical Zone. And so the people of those two territories when united—no, not united, but when reunited—will supply each what the other lacks and make an industrial unity as it will be a political unity.

VARIED INDUSTRIES FOUNDATION OF A PROSPEROUS STATE.

Second, they have when combined numerous industries. It has become a truism that no people can become prosperous and great whose resources are not varied, whose interests are not numerous. I should not want any state to be exclusively agricultural, any state to be exclusively mining, any state to be exclusively anything. The fundamental doctrine of the party to which I am proud to belong—and it has now become the faith of the entire country, so much so that there is no dispute about it any more—that if a people or a community are to be prosperous they must be diverse in their industries and make more numerous their resourses.

Very well. Arizona is chiefly a mining country. New Mexico has mining, too, in some respects, but she has grazing also; she has agriculture. But if you put the two together, you have a great state made up of a large number of industries instead of having two small states each largely made up of one industry, and in each of which one industry controls. It is not good for any commonwealth to be dominated by manufacturing industry. It is not good for any commonwealth to be dominated by the mining industry, or any other industry. But all industries ought to be so interwoven and interdependent that they will always be checks and safeguards upon each other and contribute to each other's strength and welfare.

So the second material reason for reuniting these territories, which once were one and which got along for twelve years as one and got along splendidly, considering their frontier condition, is that the new state will have varied industries and varied interests.

SHOULD NEVER BE TWO STATES; NOW PREPARED TO BE ONE STATE.

I think it is now conceded by most that these two territories should not at present be two states, and that they should never be two states as long as present conditions continue. There must be more people.

Mr. President, the question is whether we are going to have two states or one state permanently out of these territories. Speeches have been made here during the last three years, and repeated here recently—and we would have been very glad three years ago to have had all the help on that proposition that we could get—to show that these two territories ought not to come in as two states, because they lack the necessary number of people to make their admission a matter of justice to the rest of the Nation.

Three years ago we of the committee, supported gallantly by the Republican majority, fought for that proposition to a finish. But we get no help from some who urged us on to combat when there was immediate danger of the admission of these territories as separate states and who now grow impassioned against separate statehood for these territories separately when there is no immediate danger. But let the inexplicable conduct of individuals pass. This is a national matter.

I propose to show a little later on in my analysis of the population of Arizona and New Mexico just what that population is. But I will now state the total number and then refer to the fact that so far as science now sees it can not be greater, as the comparative population of other parts of the Nation has grown greater.

LIMIT OF ALL POSSIBLE FUTURE POPULATION IN NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA COMBINED.

By the last census and the governor's report there are in Arizona a hundred and twenty-three thousand people, of whom about 92,000 are white. In New Mexico, by the Governor's report, over 300,000 people, of whom the very greater percentage are white. These people are engaged in grazing or mining or agriculture.

We have heard beautiful dreams described concerning irrigation and the possibilities of the future. I took occasion last year to have made the most generous estimate which the wisest and best-informed scientist could give upon that subject, and I have found that in the territories of Arizona and New Mexico there is not now irrigated—and there never can be irrigated, so far as science, giving the most generous estimate, can tell—more than a million and a half acres. To show what this means I have had a diagram made, by which, in comparison with the whole area of both territories you can see just what that means. There, for instance [indicating], is the amount irrigated in the little black space, and here [indicating] is the amount that is irrigable in the territory of Arizona. Here [exhibiting] is a similar condition in New Mexico. Here [indicating] is the amount as to both.

POSSIBILITIES OF IRRIGATION.

It must not be thought that irrigation can be spread beyond the estimated amount here given. It must not be thought that this is a region of country where, by some sort of magic, rainfall can be made to increase; where the streams can be made to swell and flow steadily. They have had observations upon that subject for a good many decades, and the rain has not come in greater abundance nor have the streams permanently risen. It is the statement of the Geological Survey (and there are not a more friendly set of men in the world to irrigation) that—

As shown by the approximate estimate, it may be possible within the next decade or generation to bring under irrigation in these two territories 750,000 acres, or about one and one-half times as much land as is now irrigated.

Again:

There are in the more densely settled irrigated countries localities where the irrigated lands support a person to the acre, and with a million acres under irrigation in the future in these two territories it is only reasonable to expect that there will be opportunities to furnish homes for a million white inhabitants, a population as large as that now living in the state of Nebraska.

In other words, Mr. President, there are in these two territories now, if you grant the largest claims of those who are entitled to speak, perhaps, at the outside and extreme estimate, 400,000 people. There are in Arizona 92,000 white people. That is not enough to send one Representative to Congress. Very well, if the most extreme claims for all the plans of the Reclamation Service are carried out, if every spot that has been surveyed (and every spot in the territories has been carefully surveyed) should be irrigated and all the plans should be a success which now are problematical, nevertheless the amount of land that will be brought in under irrigation in the two territories will some future day support not more than 1,000,000 people at the outside. Such is the testimony of science.

Is that too many, Mr. President? If not, we must not admit them as two states, because they have too few people; nor should we wait, because the time never will come when there will be too many people.

LET NO AMERICAN CITIZEN BE UNREPRESENTED.

There is another reason why we should not wait. While I have resisted the coming into the Union of these territories as two states, I nevertheless profoundly sympathize with the view that where it is possible to do so in justice to the rest of the Republic there should not remain any large number of unrepresented American citizens in this Republic.

Mr. President, it is a pretty serious thing to keep 400,000 American citizens out of this Union. It is a pretty serious thing to tell them that because some absurd words were fraudulently introduced into the organic act away back fifty years ago (and I am going into that quite fully later on) they can not come into the Union as one state. It is a pretty serious thing not only to them but much more to the Republic itself to deny representation to the 400,000 American citizens living in these territories when for sixty years they and their ancestors have thus been living.

NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA MIGHT LONG AGO HAVE BEEN ADMITTED AS ONE STATE.

Mr. President, there has not been in the history of this Republic a tutelage that long, nor would it have been that long if the two territories had not been separated. If they had remained in one terrtiory as they were up to 1863, when they were divided, that territory would long since have been a state, because no person could have resisted the appeal of 400,000 Americans or of 300,000 Americans to full citizenship in this Republic.

So first of all they must not be brought in as two states. Even the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] indorses that view, because he read with very great approval the report of the Committee on Territories upon that subject. It is approval on his part now, but it was disapproval then. However, I do not blame men for changing their minds.

MINING NECESSARILY TEMPORARY; STATEHOOD ETERNAL.

Mr. President, I have shown that irrigation is not a basis for a very greatly increased population. Neither is mining. The Senator from Montana [Mr. CLARK] appeared before a committee of the House and testified that a mine might give out at any moment, no matter how flattering its prospects. The statement of the governor of Arizona in one of the best reports that I have ever read is that whether a mine is short or long lived its continuous operation will sooner or later result in its exhaustion. Then he goes on to a considerable extent to show that mining does not develop the resources of a territory or a state. Mining exhausts the resources of any region where it is practiced. One day there may be a great population. The next day that mine's life may be exhausted and the population leave. Population goes where work is.

Some three years ago, with a friend, I went to a deserted city. One year before it had been eager with the thronging life of 5,000 human souls, who were dependent upon a mine hard by. But when we went through it twelve months later the grass was growing in the streets, the windows were broken, and through them swept the howling wind. The doors hung upon rusty hinges and the homes of men had become the habitation of beasts. In one twelvemonth a population of 5,000 people had ceased to be, so far as that locality is concerned.

WHEN MINES GIVE OUT THE PEOPLE THEY SUPPORT DISAPPEAR.

The other day I read that the mountain which is opposite the hotel in Bisbee and which belongs to one of the mines, the Copper Queen—and there are those here who ought to know about that—had been exhausted. They had followed the veins of ore to their last extremity, so that the mountain which once teemed with richness and supported thousands of people was now only a network of empty tunnels of exhausted wealth. It was honeycombed with galleries from which all the ore had been extracted. And when that ore is gone the people go, if mining is the only industry. So, Mr. President, mining can not be said to be a basis of population.

After all, we have got in the end to come back to the soil and to the manufacturing of the articles which the soil produces. So these two territories should not come in as separate states. On the contrary, not only as a matter of justice to them, but, as I repeat for the third time, as a matter of greater justice to the Republic, they should be brought in because it is not good for any country to have within its borders nearly half a million citizens not participating in its government. I think there is not a Senator here, aye, or a spectator here, who has lived in a territory, who has stood without the gates of that city of civic Paradise called the American Republic and knocked for admission, who will not agree with me in the statement that it is an injustice longer to keep as large a number of people as that out of the Union.

So, on the one hand, it is clear we ought not to admit them as separate states, since that would be an injustice to the people of the remainder of the Republic; and, on the other hand, it is clear we ought to admit them as one state, because to do otherwise would be an injustice to the people of that state.

THIS BILL GIVES GREAT BENEFITS TO THE PEOPLE.

Mr. President, what is the next reason for bringing these two territories in as one state? First of all is the benefit to the people in the bill itself. This bill, during the progress of its development—for the bill is a development—has been perfected until it is one of the most generous measures of statesmanship ever proposed for any people. It proposes to give them $5,000,000 of school funds in cash. We are giving them four sections of land—poor land, it is true; but we endow the proposed state with an educational fund in keeping with the advancing educational ideas of the American people and in keeping with their generosity. That is one of the benefits to the people.

Under this bill the entire state debt, which is composed of the territorial debt of the two territories, can be funded, and the bonds can be bought by the board of education so that the debt of the state will be owned by the people of the state, and they will school their children out of the proceeds upon the interest of the debt which they themselves have purchased.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do.

Mr. TELLER. While the Senator is discussing that point, I wish he would tell us why it is thought necessary to give these people the great bounty that was never given to any other State.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I shall be very glad to do so. In the first place, Mr. President——

Mr. TELLER. Let me call the Senator's attention to the fact that no other state has ever been treated as the Senator says they propose to treat this state. I should like to know why this state is to have the benefit of provisions that have been denied to every other state that has been admitted.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. In the first place, the Indian Territory—don't interrupt me, please—I know that is not the one the Senator is talking about; he is talking about New Mexico——

Mr. TELLER. I am not talking about Oklahoma territory. I am talking about New Mexico and Arizona.

THE SCHOOL FUND PROVIDED BY THE BILL FOR THE NEW STATE.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I understand that; but I am beginning with the other to answer the question fully. Indian Territory was without any school lands whatever. Oklahoma had been given a most generous school grant. Indian Territory was given $5,000,000 flat as an endowment to balance. When we came to examine the educational situation in New Mexico and Arizona, the quantity of land which was taken up for forest reserves, the quantity liable to withdrawal under the Reclamation Service, we found that even if we gave this new state as much land as was given to Utah, to wit, four sections, we would be giving it a very uncertain school equipment indeed, because no human being can say, with any approximation to the truth, what is the value of these four sections.

It is not as if we were creating a state that has not been settled for a long time. It is not as if we were creating a state where the lands were still open to settlement. As the facts show, valuable land has been taken by private land grants and that land which may be made valuable can be withdrawn under the irrigation act, which I think the Senator approves of, and other valuable land is in the forest reserves.

So, Mr. President, even giving four sections, as was given to Utah, we still endow this new state with a much more limited school fund than we endowed Utah with. So we made it up by making a cash appropriation, such as we made to the people of the Indian Territory. To have done anything else for those people would have been one of the greatest pieces of injustice we could have perpetrated upon them, because——

Mr. TELLER. May I interrupt the Senator?

REASONS FOR LARGE EDUCATIONAL GRANT.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. In just one moment. Because by and large the educational situation there is not only one of difficulty, but of very great importance. They can not depend upon the problematical value of acres and acres of sand, which some day may be valuable, but which to-day no human being could assess for taxation at anything like a fair approximation. That is why this money was given.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. TELLER. The Senator from Indiana must know that since 1863 in Arizona there have been reserved the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections. For fifty-five years there have been reserved in New Mexico the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections. That is all that was ever reserved for any State heretofore. The Senator knows that fact.

He also knows the fact that the Reclamation Service does not withdrew the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections from the territory when it becomes a state. He knows the Reclamation Service does not withdraw land and has no right to do it, and can not do it. The title is in the state or territory, for the territory takes just as well as the state to the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections. Mr. President, the Senator has not yet told us—and I will venture to say he will not give us a satisfactory reason—why New Mexico gets 20,000,000 acres of land when other States when admitted to the Union got comparatively nothing.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I am sorry that my reason is not satisfactory to the Senator. I have stated to the Senator the facts in the case, and the reason inheres in the facts.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I should like to say that I think I know the reason, but the proprieties of this place prevent me from stating them.

AMERICAN POLICY OF EDUCATING AMERICAN CHILDREN.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not know what the Senator means, Mr. President. I am stating the reasons that appealed to the committee. Every provision of this bill has been drawn with an eye single to the interests of the people of that territory and of the people of the United States, of which they are a part. One of the most beneficent provisions of the bill is that provision which endows them generously, I wish I might say richly, for the education of their children for all time to come.

I do not think the American people, the most generous in the world in educational matters, have been too generous. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that from the very beginning of the history of this country as a Republic until now we have grown in our dealings with the question of education more generous every year. It has been the policy of increasing liberality. I think, perhaps, this is the first time that a voice has ever been raised in the American Congress against generously providing for the education of the children of a proposed new state.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I think I am entitled to say that I find no objection to a proper appropriation of the public lands for school purposes, but I believe the interests of the schools were not paramount when that policy was entered upon.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Well, Mr. President, the Senator's reference is not understood or, if understood, it is not approved, to put it mildly. I trust the Senator will permit me to answer him courteously. You could not sell these lands immediately. If you sold the lands immediately you would sell them at a shameful loss, which would amount to a robbery of the people of that state. Nor can you lease these lands. They are mostly what are called "desert lands."

HOW COULD THE NEW STATE GET MONEY FOR ITS SCHOOLS EXCEPT AS PROVIDED IN THE BILL.

Where, then, Mr. President, I will ask the Senator, was this new state to have gotten its immediate cash available for the immediate necessities of its schools? They are not lands such as there were in Colorado and the Indian Territory, not lands such as there were in the state of the Senator from Ohio or my own, but they are lands which I have taken up a good deal of time in describing and in correctly describing, which can not be immediately sold without an injustice to the people, which amounts to robbery on the one hand, and which can not be leased on the other hand. Those are the reasons.

Mr. TELLER. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly I will.

Mr. TELLER. I will admit that these lands can not be sold now. Neither could the lands be sold in Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, or the Dakotas, and yet there were not such donations made to those states when they came in.

Mr. President, I deny that there is any necessity for any immediate donation of land to this state any more than to any other, because the territories of New Mexico and Arizona are able to maintain, and do maintain, schools suitable, proper, and necessary for the education of their children, just as all the western states have done in the very beginning of their existence as territories, not waiting for statehood for that purpose.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, as I have stated two or three times, the policy with reference to education in this country has been a policy of increasing generosity. It began originally with one section, then two sections. Utah got four sections of much more valuable land than this. The condition of Spanish land grants in New Mexico, to which the Senator from Ohio referred three or four years ago; the condition of the Reclamation Service, which is problematical, giving to these lands their full value—I say we are not dealing too generously. Speaking personally to the Senator, I will say that I believe in the most rigid economy. I think whenever a public representative is guilty of negligence on the question of economy, he is dealing dishonestly by his people. But believing as rigidly as I do in economy, I say, personally speaking, I would vote to give $5,000,000 to every new state that may be created. I do not think that you can too richly endow the educational equipment of a new member of the sisterhood of the American Republic.

GREAT STATE AND LOW TAXES; SMALL STATE AND HIGH TAXES.

Now, Mr. President, I want to go on to another reason, a substantial reason, for the creation of this new state. It has been said that it will be a large state. Well, Mr. President, it will. It must ultimately be either one state or two. All will concede that. We must take into consideration the welfare of the people themselves now and in the future as well as the views inspired by the interests of some ambitious men who live among them. If you create a great new state, you have saved the people to-day and for all the future a large part of the expense of their state government. You have reduced the burden of taxation which rests upon the people of the proposed new state if you make it a large state instead of a small one.

I have had prepared by the statistical department a list of the taxes, total and per capita state tax levied for 1902. I find a singular fact, that wherever a state has large numbers of people, and especially if it has a large area, its taxes, with one or two exceptions, are low. Wherever the reverse is true, its taxes are high. For example, Arizona per capita pays of territorial taxes $3.615; Minnesota pays 53 cents; New Mexico pays $3.57; New York pays 9.9 cents. Rhode Islands pays $1.454, and Pennsylvania pays 65.6. This last comparison shows that this great difference in taxation applies to old as well as new.

JOINT STATEHOOD MEANS ONLY HALF TAXATION.

So if two states are made you double the taxes of the people. If one state is made you divide the taxes of the people—you put upon their shoulders in the future just one-half of the burden if you make these two territories one state that you put upon them if you divide it into two states, which the opponents of this bill wish to do.

For example, Mr. President, the state of Texas has as its expenses for state government about $2,850,000. If Texas were divided into the five states, which it has a right to divide into, these expenses would be something like eight or ten million dollars. The people would have to pay per capita, as I have shown by this list—and I shall ask to include the whole list in my remarks—not one time, not two times, but three times, sometimes five times as much as they would have to pay if the state were as it is a consolidated Commonwealth.

The table is as follows:

Per capita State tax levies for 1902.

| State. | Estimated population, June 1, 1902. | State tax levy per capita. |
|---|---|---|
| Alabama | 1,831,757 | $0.827 / .861 |
| Arizona | [a] 122,931 | 3.615 |
| Arkansas | 1,348,242 | .375 |
| California | 1,181,641 | 4.171 |
| Colorado | 555,282 | 2.621 |
| Connecticut | 940,852 | .165 |
| Delaware [b] | | |
| District of Columbia | 288,384 | 10.487 |
| Florida | 556,966 | .875 / .925 |
| Georgia | 2,292,127 | .983 |
| Hawaii | [a] 154,001 | 7.550 |
| Idaho | 170,550 | 1.436 |
| Illinois | 5,020,550 | .896 |
| Indiana | 2,581,274 | 1.661 |
| Indian Territory [b] | | |
| Iowa | 2,295,845 | .955 |
| Kansas | 1,464,623 | 1.363 |
| Kentucky | 2,204,882 | 1.358 |
| Louisiana | 1,434,233 | 1.157 |
| Maine | 701,142 | 1.323 |
| Maryland | 1,217,174 | .899 |
| Massachusetts | 2,918,636 | .514 |
| Michigan | 2,475,448 | 1.079 |
| Minnesota | 1,813,814 | .530 |
| Mississippi | 1,603,604 | .908 |
| Missouri | 2,592,230 | .985 / 1.017 |
| Montana | 250,245 | 1.748 |
| Nebraska | 1,067,778 | 1.059 |
| Nevada | 42,335 | 5.541 |
| New Hampshire | 418,000 | 1.015 |
| New Jersey | 1,971,417 | .779 |
| New Mexico | 250,000 | 3.570 |
| New York | 7,525,042 | .099 |
| North Carolina | 1,948,982 | .373 |
| North Dakota | 337,930 | 2.434 |
| Ohio | 4,254,591 | 1.336 / .632 |
| Oklahoma | 401,134 | 1.413 |
| Oregon | 430,618 | 2.113 |
| Pennsylvania | 5,167,892 | .656 |
| Rhode Island | 445,166 | 1.454 |
| South Carolina | 1,366,718 | .704 |
| South Dakota | 396,871 | 1.344 |
| Tennessee | 2,071,226 | .552 |
| Texas | 3,210,312 | .517 / .494 |
| Utah | 290,307 | 3.172 |
| Vermont | 345,885 | .776 |
| Virginia | 1,893,824 | 1.171 |
| Washington | 548,081 | 3.618 |
| West Virginia | 998,002 | .791 |
| Wisconsin | 2,142,304 | 1.086 |
| Wyoming | 97,100 | 2.511 |

[a] Population in 1900. [b] No general state tax levy.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. This is the experience of the entire American Republic. So as a matter of economy it is wise for the people of those territories to be made into one state. Arizona the Great, and low taxes; Arizona and New Mexico separate states and high taxes.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. McCUMBER. Right upon that subject I should like to ask the Senator if the taxation—not per capita, but the taxation per dollar—is less in New York than it is in Maine or New Hampshire or Vermont?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The taxation per dollar?

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes, sir; of property.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Decidedly, Mr. President.

Mr. McCUMBER. Higher?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The state taxes are decidedly higher where the population is small.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am not speaking of per capita, but upon the value of property.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is what I am speaking of.

Mr. McCUMBER. Are the state taxes less in the state of New York than in the state of New Hampshire?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. They are.

Mr. McCUMBER. How much less?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will give you the exact figures.

Mr. FORAKER. You mean per capita?

Mr. McCUMBER. No; I do not mean per capita; I mean on the dollar.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Those are all the figures I have, but the same thing would undoubtedly be true.

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, no; not necessarily.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I think it would be true.

Mr. McCUMBER. Let me call the Senator's attention to the fact that in most of the Western states and in the mining sections, for instance, the value of property——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I am going to come to that.

Mr. McCUMBER. Compared to the number of inhabitants is very much more; but what I want the Senator to state is whether the taxation that is paid upon property in New Hampshire and Maine and Vermont is greater than it is in the state of New York or any of the large states.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Right in this connection, I should like to ask the Senator if it is not the universal rule to compute the taxation upon the assessed value instead of per capita?

ONE STATE HALF THE OFFICIALS AND HALF THE SALARIES; TWO STATES DOUBLE THE OFFICIALS AND SALARIES.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No matter, this is a fair illustration. Note this further fact, which is the argument I am now making, that two state governments cost more than one. For example, there are in the state of Ohio about 500 state officers and employees, all told. For that matter offices are multiplying everywhere. The whole country is running to commissions. There is not a legislature that meets in a single state of this Union that does not create a lot of commissions, and all of them have salaries. These commissions are increasing every day. We are in an age where we have a craze for commissions. It is not a government any more by governors or legislatures; it is a government by commissions. All over the land there is a very great increase in the number of state officers and therefore in the expense of the state governments. And if you divide Arizona the Great into two states you load upon the people TWICE as many officeholders and make the people pay TWICE as many salaries.

II.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BILL CONSIDERED.

RACIAL DIFFERENCES.

Now, Mr. President, what are some of the reasons given against this bill? In the first place it is said that there is a difference in population. I have heard that more in the last two years than anything else. The cry which, perhaps, has had most influence has been, "It is unjust to load upon the Americans of Arizona the 'greasers' of New Mexico." "Greasers of New Mexico" is a title which is as offensive as it is unjust and untrue.

I propose to show by referring to the report of the governor of Arizona that the people of Arizona, though her people are excellent, are not "unmixed Americans" so called, but a percentage in Arizona are foreigners almost as large in proportion as the number of those in New Mexico who are of foreign birth or even of Spanish descent. In the first place the governor says on one page of his report:

Of the 92,903 white persons returned by the census of 1900, 38,137 were of foreign birth or of foreign parentage.

Now, mark that! There were 92,000 white people in the territory and of these 38,137 were of foreign birth or of foreign parentage—of these more than 14,000 are Mexican immigrants; more than 14,000 of the total of 92,000 were Mexican immigrants.

"MEXICANS" IN BOTH ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO.

Not people of Mexican descent, Mr. President, of which also a large number of the people of Arizona consist, because when the division was made in 1863—the unnatural and, as I shall show later on, the inexcusable division—between New Mexico and Arizona the 6,500 of her people were practically all "Mexicans," and a fair percentage of the people of that territory are the descendants of people of Spanish blood.

So, in Arizona, according to Governor Kibbey's report, there are 14,172 Mexican immigrants. I hold in my hand here a notice, which was posted in Phoenix, and it is printed in the Spanish language. Any Senator may see it. There is in Phoenix a Spanish newspaper and there is in Tucson a Spanish newspaper. Here are four of the "great registers" of the voters of various counties in Arizona [exhibiting]; and I wish I had time—I wish it were not so late in the afternoon—for I should like to read to the Senate the register of the voters of these various counties in Arizona, showing what the names of the voters are—the Spanish names indicating their Spanish blood. In Arizona they are, while not as numerous as they are in New Mexico, very nearly so in some places, and I want to say for the American citizens of Spanish extraction in both New Mexico and Arizona, that they are as good, as true, and as loyal and make as good citizens as those of any other blood in our citizenship.

Here [exhibiting] are the "great registers" of the voters of the counties of Apache, Pima, Yuma, and Santa Cruz. If it were earlier in the day, I should read the names of the voters in these and various other counties, and names which occur in various letters, to show the truth of the governor's report that there is almost as large a percentage of Spanish population in Arizona as there is in New Mexico.

"SPANISH AMERICANS" NOT UNDESIRABLE CITIZENS.

I do not think that that is anything against Arizona; but it proves that it is not true, as has been said time and again in public speeches, in reported interviews, and in private conversations, that 95 per cent of the people of Arizona are "Americans" and that it is an outrage to force on them the "Mexicans" of New Mexico.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. Is the statement of the total population of New Mexico and Arizona, which the Senator has read, true at this time?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes, sir. I am quoting from the last report of the governor of Arizona and the last report of the governor of New Mexico.

Mr. SPOONER. It is from those reports the Senator takes his figures?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes. Those figures are given in the last report, that of 1905. The governor says he thinks the number of people is greater. It is a very able report, from a man violently opposed to this bill. The governor of New Mexico estimates that there are in New Mexico, at a conservative estimate, 350,000 people. And that is too many; but still there has been an increase. The increase is due to immigration largely into the Pecos Valley. The governor says that 158,000 people came to New Mexico from other states and territories; probably 125,000 are of Spanish descent.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator pardon me a moment?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. SPOONER. I did not understand the Senator's statement as to the present population of Arizona.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I read that from the governor's report.

Mr. SPOONER. The last report?

ANALYSIS OF POPULATION OF ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes. The population of Arizona by the last census, given in the governor's report—he uses the census tables; so it is the same thing—was 92,903 white people.

Mr. SPOONER. Can the Senator state the number of immigrants?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. According to the last census there were 38,000.

Mr. SPOONER. Does the Senator mean by the last census, the census of 1900?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes. The governor says there is immigration, and the governor's report shows where some of the immigration came from.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Indiana allow me to interrupt him?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. I wish to inquire whether the statement which I shall now read in a pamphlet, which I have before me, is correct, as the Senator understands it? It is as follows:

The report of the governor of New Mexico to the Secretary of the Interior for 1902 (page 4) shows eight Spanish-Americans to five of all other races. A roster of the legislature of New Mexico also proves the predominance of Spanish-Americans in New Mexico, while Arizona, on the other hand, shows but one.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I have no doubt that that statement was true at that time as to the legislatures of those respective territories—not otherwise.

Mr. FORAKER. I read this from a document which has just been printed.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Well, I think I recognize the document which the Senator has in his hand. It is a document issued by what is called the "Anti-Joint Statehood League of Arizona." While I admire the vigor and energy of those gentlemen, I do not rely upon the entire accuracy of their statement.

Mr. FORAKER. The inquiry I make is to ascertain whether the Senator can give us any information as to this statement, which shows that where there is one Spanish-American in Arizona there are eight in New Mexico, as I understand.

"MEXICANS" IN BOTH TERRITORIES.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No; that must have been a mistake, undoubtedly. I answer no. I can only give the Senator my opinion; but I think if he will read it again he will find that the document states that where there is one Mexican in Arizona there are eight Mexicans in New Mexico; and their proportion to the entire population is given—and that is inaccurate. The question is as to the proportion. I think the Senator will find that there is only one Mexican in the legislature of Arizona, and that Mexican, I think, comes there from Tucson regularly.

Mr. FORAKER. That is true; there is but one Mexican in that legislature.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, I think there has been some immigration into both territories, not a great immigration, such as poured over Oklahoma and Indian Territory, but as many people as the water there will permit. It is a question of water, not of railway fare. People are not going to live, even under a model government, if they have not got water to drink or suitable land on which they can raise their food.

It is shown by the report of the governor of Arizona and by these "great registers" of the voters of Arizona counties, which are official, and which I hold in my hand, that there is a considerable percentage of Spanish-speaking people in Arizona itself. I call the Senator's attention to this distinction, that whereas the descendants of Spanish people—of people of Spanish blood—in New Mexico are the descendants of people who have lived there for generations, the 14,000 and more "Mexicans" to which the governor of Arizona in his report calls attention are Mexican immigrants who have come there within the last few years.

To these you must add Arizona's percentage of Spanish descendants as found in these registers. Here, for instance, is one for Apache County [exhibiting], one of the counties where Mexican immigrants do not go. Yet it shows a heavy proportion of Spanish names. And there are heavier proportions in other counties.

PEOPLE SIMILAR IN BOTH TERRITORIES.

So, Mr. President, we find that the people of Arizona and New Mexico are not unlike in racial characteristics. We find it is not true that you are loading upon a pure American strain of Arizona the Spanish stock of New Mexico.

Do not Senators know that if New Mexico had not been called "New Mexico" people would not have been imbued with the idea that all the people of New Mexico were Mexicans? Suppose for the last sixty years the territory had been called "Lincoln," or, as one Senator upon the other side suggested to me, that we should call it "Hamilton," no one would believe that the people there are "greasers," "Mexicans," any more than the people of Arizona are "greasers" and "Mexicans."

We know perfectly well that the word "greaser" and "Mexican" has largely adhered to the people of New Mexico because of the name of that territory, when something of the same condition is true in Arizona; but because it is called Arizona, and because the mistake has been made, and because the evidence is not inquired into, everybody takes it for granted that everyone in Arizona is an "American" and nearly everybody in New Mexico is a "Mexican," when, as a matter of fact, there are more Americans in New Mexico than there are Americans in Arizona.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. I have been absent from the Chamber for a short time, and did not quite understand what the statement of the Senator from Indiana was about the relative population of Americans, so called, and Mexicans in the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I have cited the last reports of the governor of Arizona and the governor of New Mexico. It is stated that 92,300 white people live in Arizona; but of those 24,233 are people of foreign birth; out of these, 14,172 are immigrants from Mexico. Now, if you add to these 14,172 immigrants from Mexico the percentage of people in Arizona who have descended from Spanish stock and whose names occur all through the "great registers," the voting registers, you have, in my judgment, a population of Spanish stock in Arizona which approaches, but does not equal, the amount of the same stock in New Mexico with this difference, that in New Mexico there are scarcely any Mexican immigrants.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN "MEXICANS" AND SPANISH AMERICANS.

Most of the people who are called "Mexicans" in New Mexico, and who are not Mexicans at all, by the way, are descendants of the purest strains of Castilian and Andalusian blood. There are perhaps 20,000 people who are "Mexicans." But the remainder of the 125,000, who are contemptuously called "greasers," are men and women who draw their blood for four hundred years from the very proudest Nation on this globe. That is the difference between Mexican immigrants and Spanish-Americans.

Mr. PATTERSON. I want to call the attention of the Senator to this report as to the population of Arizona, made two years ago, which states that Arizona has a population of 122,931, and that, of course, a considerable majority are American as distinguished from the native or Mexican population.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I say that now.

Mr. PATTERSON. Then I should like to call the Senator's attention——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator must go further than that. That is three years ago, and the world moves if the Senator does not. [Laughter.]

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes; it is true that the world moves. I will call the attention of the Senator to a statement made by the House Committee on Territories three years ago, by a majority of the committee, which included the chairman and the Republican members of the committee.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Of course it would be a majority if it was a Republican committee.

Mr. PATTERSON (reading):

Population.—By the national census of 1900 the population of Arizona is placed in round numbers at 125,000, but the census was confessedly badly taken.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Do not read it all.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will only read a little—only enough to give the figures in it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Let us get to the point.

Mr. PATTERSON. I would have been through if the Senator had not interrupted me.

The wide range of territory over which the enumerators were compelled to go to take a proper census, and the low price paid for taking the census, prevented the possibility of accuracy. The population of Arizona, from the best obtainable statistics, school census, number of school children, etc., is 175,000. This population has a greater proportion of native-born inhabitants than probably any other subdivision of the United States. Arizona maintains a splendid common school system, as well as normal schools, and a splendid territorial university.

Then, one other sentence—

The inhabitants in the territory are as well educated, if not better, than in any other Congressional district in the United States.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Now, will the Senator tell me, without going into these ancient tapestry details, when was that report made—three years ago?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That was a report made by the House committee four years ago, when they attempted to do what the Senate prevented by availing itself of the rules of the Senate at a time when we would have been glad to have had help from certain sources to have prevented the making of four states out of these four territories. Mr. President, that report of 1902 might just as well have been a Democratic report. It is quite as bad as that. [Laughter.]

I am giving my figures from the latest possible sources, and, what is more, I am going to the original sources. Here they are. [Exhibiting.] Any Senator who wishes may see them. It is a list of the voters in the various counties in the territory of Arizona.

NEVER A RACIAL DISTURBANCE IN NEW MEXICO OR ARIZONA.

Suppose there are what are called "Mexicans" there; suppose there are what are called "Americans" there. Nobody will doubt, since the governor of Arizona states it, that there are 14,000 Mexicans—immigrants—in Arizona. Nobody will doubt, since everybody knows it as an historical fact, that quite a percentage of its population is of Spanish descent. Nobody doubts, because we all assert it, that the majority are Americans. There are about 60,000 Americans, according to the governor's figures, in Arizona—a fewer number of people than there are in some of the wards of our cities—and these include the descendants of the old Spanish settlers.

But now, Mr. President, suppose that is true; has there been any difficulty in Arizona between men of Spanish blood and men of what we call American blood—not Anglo-Saxon blood, because American blood is not Anglo-Saxon blood? The basis of it is Teutonic blood, to be sure; but there is the Celtic and there is the Latin and there is every blood mingled in this great, splendid people that inhabit these United States. Burbank says that, on account of the mingling of these bloods, we will produce the highest type of men and women the world has ever seen.

"MEXICANS" AND "AMERICANS" HARMONIZE.

But, Mr President, down in Arizona or down in New Mexico has anybody heard of anyone being burned at the stake? Down in New Mexico or in Arizona has anybody heard of any racial wars between the "Americans" and the "Mexicans?" Has anybody heard of any of the difficulties, of which so much has been said but of which no one instance has been produced, about the inability of the "Americans" and the "Mexicans," so called, to get along? Do not the "Mexicans" and the "Americans" of Arizona harmonize in all the walks of life? Is not the same thing true of New Mexico? Mr. President, if they got along well when they were together in the first place, why can not they get along well now?

There has never been a disturbance of a racial kind in either Arizona or in New Mexico. That being true, what becomes of the argument that these people can not live together in harmony? I shall be glad to have some Senator rise in his place and answer that. Since the argument has been put insiduously and incessantly through the press, by conversation, and in public speech that it was impossible for these people to get along because of their racial differences, I should like to have some Senator explain why, if that is so, there has not been a single instance of a racial war or of racial disharmony between what are called the "Americans" of New Mexico and the "Mexicans" of New Mexico and between what are called the "Americans" of Arizona and the "Mexicans" of Arizona.

AMERICAN AND SPANISH AMALGAMATION.

It is a peculiar fact that men of American blood and men of Spanish blood get along together better than men of any other blood. Americans, when we were regenerating Cuba under General Wood, got along better with the Cubans than the Cubans are getting along with themselves. The people of New Mexico get along together; the people of Arizona get along together. When California was made a State a large portion of its population were descendants of the Spaniards—not "Mexicans," but Spaniards. Their descendants and the descendants of the Forty-niners and the other American immigrants who have gone there have amalgamated into a stock that honors the state of California to-day. They have amalgamated also in Texas, as they have wherever they have mingled.

I want to point out a singular fact. I want to dwell somewhat upon this argument, because whatever excuse any Senator may give, the argument most insistently urged is that it is an "outrage" to mingle these racial elements, which are so absolutely antagonistic and dissimilar. It is said there are Americans in Arizona, and there are very excellent ones there, too. I will use this map, because it can be seen better, I think. They live here [indicating], from Phoenix, in the valley of the Salt River. It is said that we must not burden them by uniting them with the "Mexicans" just across the imaginary line which divides the two territories.

IF WRONG TO REUNITE ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO EQUALLY WRONG TO KEEP PECOS VALLEY IN NEW MEXICO.

Very well! The total population of the valley of the Pecos River, in the eastern portion of New Mexico, are Americans. If, then, it is an outrage to unite the "Americans" who live in the valley of the Salt River with the "Mexicans" who live in the valley of the Rio Grande, why is it not also an outrage to keep united the "Americans" who live in the valley of the Pecos in the same territory with the "Mexicans" who live in the valley of the Rio Grande? If you are not going to unite these for the reason that it is an outrage to unite "Americans" who live in one river valley with "Mexicans" who live in another, then why do you not introduce a bill to split off the valley of the Pecos River and add it to Texas?

I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that all this country west of the Pecos River, which is shown upon the map and then east for hundreds of miles into Texas, is the same kind of country, populated by the same kind of people, an absolutely pure and unmixed American breed coming from the same source. If this bill is bad because it unites Americans who live in one river valley in Arizona with Mexicans who live in New Mexico, why is it not equally wrong to keep Americans who live in the Pecos Valley, in the Territory of New Mexico, united with Mexicans who live in the Territory of New Mexico?

AMERICANS OF NEW MEXICO SATISFIED WITH SPANISH ELEMENT.

Why do we not split them off and add them to Texas? If it is an outrage in one case, it is an outrage in the other case. I will tell you one reason why we do not. One reason why we do not is because we have heard no complaint from the Americans who live in the Pecos Valley; we have heard no complaint from Roswell, which is the equal of Phoenix, and more numerous in its population; we have heard no complaint from Carlsbad, or from any of the American cities or from any of the American population in New Mexico. Yet, although they are burdened with what is incorrectly and offensively called this "greaser government," there are in that part of New Mexico as happy, thrifty, and prosperous people as live beneath the Stars and Stripes. If you are wrong in one case, you are wrong in the other. If you are right in the case of Arizona, then why, I ask, shall we longer keep the people of the Pecos Valley in the territory of New Mexico, and why does not some Senator rise here and propose to join the Pecos Valley to Texas on the east, where the land and people are absolutely the same?

IF NEVER DIVIDED NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA WOULD NOW RESIST DISMEMBERMENT.

To show how shallow, as well as untrue, this argument is, I may cite the fact, which every Senator will admit, that if this unnatural division of this territory had never taken place, and if they were the same people who now inhabit that great dominion, and if they should come knocking at the door for statehood and some person representing them were to propose that it should be divided into two lesser and comparatively insignificant commonwealths, that man would not be permitted to go home again. They would fight before they would permit division. So we see it is a question of temporary sentiment.

Suppose it is true; suppose all the absurd assertions of the opposition are true. What a splendid thing it is sometimes to puncture an assertion with a fact, Mr. President. I think that possibly nearly every Senator here in his heart thought that really this bill did propose to pour a flood of so-called "Mexicans" upon a lot of charming American gentlemen and ladies down in Arizona until he found the truth from their own reports. But, suppose it is true; suppose there had been racial antagonisms in New Mexico, where we hear that this condition exists; suppose that the two peoples are unlike in race, in ideals, and in laws, as one of the bombastic phrases in one of the untrue publications that I have seen states; suppose that is so; will not the proposed new state be able to deal with that condition?

"AMERICANS" GREATLY OUTNUMBER "MEXICANS" IN NEW STATE.

The Americans would outvote the Mexicans two to one. Upon the basis of population, there would be in the constitutional convention more than two Americans to every Mexican. Where, then, would the interests of this more numerous, as well as this dominant American majority suffer at the hands of a Mexican minority? I have never before heard of such an insult to American manhood as to suggest the possibility that twice as many Americans would be abused, outraged, and overridden by half the number of "Mexicans." I have always understood that, man for man, the American citizen was the equal of any human being who ever lived or ever will live. But the arguments of the Senators upon the other side is that these more numerous Americans are absolutely going to be subdued by half their number of "greasers." But to a desperate cause any argument is good.

If these things be true, where will the Mexicans hurt? Under the new state government will not the various counties of the new state elect their county officers? Will they not elect their local judges? Will they not send their members to the legislature? The New Mexican part of the new state can not elect the county officers of the Arizona part of the state, or the reverse. So the people will absolutely control their own destiny after all. Not only that, but Arizona has a Congressman in this new proposed state. So has New Mexico. Each will have one Senator. Each will have half of the state officers.

EACH HALF OF NEW STATE WILL HAVE HALF THE STATE AND FEDERAL OFFICERS.

The absurd argument has been advanced to me seriously—advanced to me, as I have no doubt it has been advanced to each Senator—that in this proposed new state New Mexico would take all the offices from Arizona. Mr. President, that is based upon the assumption that politics has ceased to be run on common sense and politicians have lost their cunning. Do you suppose the Republican party or the Democratic party in a close election would be willing to risk the loss of all the votes in Arizona by nominating all the state officers from the other portion of the state? Such a party or such politics would not endure very long. They would have in their own folly a cure for that condition.

Mr. President, if the two territories are made into one state, political parties are not going to quit business. The argument that New Mexico will take all the offices from Arizona is based upon the assumption that while all over this country you find parties with their candidates, with their platforms, appealing to the people for their votes, upon principles and policies, in this new state political parties are to be abolished—that there is to be just one party consisting of Americans and "Mexicans" on one side of the line and another party made up of the people on the other side of the line; and that there will not be a Republican and Democratic party in the new state, but only an Arizona party and a New Mexico party. That is reductio ad absurdum. It is plain, old-fashioned buncombe. Political parties will continue in this new state and will continue to appeal to the people on the stump, and they will give half the nominees to each half of the state, in order not to offend the people of the other half.

Would it not be suicide for a political party to gather in convention and nominate its officers from one portion of any state because they had most of the votes? Would not the politicians know that they would lose to the other party all the votes of the other half of the state? The people would say: "This is not a square deal. We will show you. We will vote for the other party this time." Therefore, does not every Senator know, to use the mildest phraseology, that it is utter nonsense that the people of New Mexico can take all the offices away from Arizona? And yet that argument has been advanced repeatedly and seriously.

NO "MEXICAN" OR OTHER FOREIGN STATE IN THIS REPUBLIC.

Mr. President, I come to a far graver reason. I think that the gravest reason, assuming what has been said against this bill to be true, why it ought to become a law, a reason which in all that makes statesmanship, so far transcends every other reason that they are not to be mentioned is this: It is said there are a lot of "Mexicans" in New Mexico and some Americans in Arizona whom we ought not to join, but that we should finally bring them in as an "American" state and a "Mexican" state. This Nation can not tolerate the existence of that theory for a moment. We can not admit that ever there will be in this country a Mexican state or a German state or a Norwegian state or a French state or any other state except an American state; and if conditions exist where, either now or in the future, there is likely to be a state dominated by a foreign element, then we had better put aside all our rate bills and all our other measures of the day and look toward curing that profound and fatal defect.

THIS BILL AMERICANIZES THE WHOLE NEW STATE.

I have here [exhibiting] a map. The Mexicans who are referred to—they are not Mexicans, as I have told you; they are people of Spanish descent—live along the valley here. I have had this made scientifically. These portions [indicating] are where the so-called American element is. Of course they are not as thick in some portions as in others. But, generally speaking, they are in these portions [indicating]. Thus we see that if this new state be created, and if it be true that there are many people of Spanish descent down in this valley [indicating] (and there is where they all are, such as they are), you have them surrounded by this greater mass of Americans upon the east and the south and the west, who will shoot the filaments of their social activities, of their commercial and business activities backward and forward until the whole Mexican mass, of which so much complaint has been made, is Americanized. And when we have accomplished that we shall have done a thing of profound National benefit to the American Republic if the arguments of the opposition be true.

It can not be tolerated for a moment that there is such a thing as a racial division in this country, and I am amazed to hear the proposition advanced to an American Senator or by an American Senator that we shall make an eternal piece of legislation or defeat it, because there are racial considerations which defeating it will tend to continue, when if we enact the measure we will overcome them.

Mr. President, I think I have fully answered every point in this connection, and if I have not I shall be glad to have any Senator ask me, because I have been speaking in order to present facts to Senators, so that when they make up their minds on this matter they shall have as much information as I have. Doubtless some Senators have more, but such as I have I wish to give it.

So much for the racial difficulty and objection. We find, in the first place, it is not true; and we find, in the second place, that if this serious condition does exist, then the greatest duty we can perform to the American people is to eliminate it; and there is nothing that will be done in the next ten years which will be an act of statesmanship so far reaching as to wipe out, eradicate forever, the possibility of having a Mexican state, so called; and that is what this bill does.

NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA NOT SEPARATED BY NATURE.

What are the other objections? It is said that these two territories are separated by nature. It was declared by the Senator from Georgia in a speech last year—I do not see him here at present—that the Continental Divide separated these territories. I had this map made and exploded that. It has been contended by some that these territories were naturally divided; that the hand of God had marked them as separate and independent territories; and yet we find the Continental Divide is way to the east of the boundary line [indicating]; and I presented a letter from the Director of the Geological Survey, who said that the dividing line—this arbitrary line—runs chiefly through a sandy plain.

But it is said that between the "settled portions" of Arizona and New Mexico there is a range of very difficult mountains. That is true—between some of the settled portions of New Mexico and Arizona there are some mountains. But I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that it is more difficult to get from the eastern counties of Arizona to Phoenix, its capital, than it is to go to Santa Fe, the capital of New Mexico. It is more difficult for the man who is grazing or mining in the western portion of Arizona to get to Phoenix, its capital, than it is for the people of the eastern portion to get to Santa Fe.

SETTLED PORTIONS OF ARIZONA NEARER SANTA FE THAN ARE PORTIONS OF NEW MEXICO.

It is as difficult for the people of the Pecos Valley, who live in the eastern part of New Mexico, to get to Santa Fe as it is for the people of Phoenix to get to Santa Fe. The people of the Pecos Valley here in eastern New Mexico, in order to get to the capital of their territory, must go around 900 miles through Colorado and come down or else go below 900 miles. The truth is that there are four ranges of mountains in these territories, two of them in New Mexico, two of them in Arizona. But the territories are quite as compact physically as most mountainous states. So far as concerns these territories being divided, it is more convenient to get from Arizona to New Mexico than it was until a late day to get from one portion of Colorado to the other.

I think I shall stop at this point upon the question of there being a dividing line, because I am going to show that these gentlemen, Mr. Poston and the other gentlemen who drew the line in 1863, did not draw it because of any question of nature. The natural line between New Mexico and Arizona is not a north and south line at all. It is an east and west line. It is a line that runs across the parallel that Jefferson Davis had in his bill when he first proposed a division of these two territories.

ORIGINAL AND NATURAL BOUNDARY LINE EAST AND WEST.

Here [exhibiting] is a map made in 1860. It is said by Sylvester Mowry, who signs his name here, to be the best map of that country ever drawn, and he knew more about this territory than any other man. This was for a proposed new state, and here [indicating] is New Mexico and down here Arizona, and that is a natural and scientific division, because the upper portion is a great plateau, with the temperature, the climate, and the products of the temperate zone; the southern portion is lower, nearer the level of the sea, and has the same physical configuration and the products of the climate of the semitropical zone. So that the natural, the scientific division, considering means of communication, is a line not north and south, where it is now arbitrarily, but east and west.

NATURAL OBSTACLES DIVIDE OTHER STATES.

Mr. President, these are the answers to the physical difficulties. You can go from Phoenix to Santa Fe much more easily than you can get from some of the eastern counties of Arizona to Phoenix. But is this the only state which is thus divided? I wish to call the attention of the Senate to Colorado. We have heard a good deal about a state being divided by a mountain range, about one portion being of one kind of land and one kind of country and another portion of another kind. Here is Colorado [indicating on map]. Here are the Rocky Mountains, constituting the Great Divide. There are mountains clear up here to the west [indicating]. But in the east, as the Senators from Colorado will tell you, there are no mountains. We have all been more or less over the eastern portion of Colorado, a splendid plain, rising up to the mountains almost without hills, a great grazing and agricultural country. And then it comes to this great mass of the Rocky Mountains.

COLORADO SPLIT IN THE MIDDLE.

Until recently, until within a very, very short time, a very few years, years so few that they are hardly worth mentioning, there was no pass in the Rocky Mountains by which the people could conveniently go from that portion of the state [indicating] to this portion [indicating]; but, as is the case in New Mexico and Arizona to-day, the people had to go to Pueblo. If they came down from this side east [indicating] or from this side west, still they went down to Pueblo. I believe that now the Moffatt road is digging a great tunnel through these mountains by which there will soon be direct means of communication. But until recent times it took longer to go from Routt County in this portion of Colorado [indicating] to Denver than it now takes to go from Yuma, in the extreme southwestern part of Arizona, to Santa Fe, in New Mexico.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do.

Mr. TELLER. I dislike to correct the Senator, but Routt County had two good wagon roads across the range (I have traveled them both on a great many occasions and know) at least thirty-five years ago. One of them was built in 1865.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Will the Senator tell me how long it took by wagon road to go from Routt County to Denver?

Mr. TELLER. It took just as long as it takes now.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. How long does it take now? [Laughter.] How long does it take to go from Routt County to Denver?

Mr. TELLER. I want to say to the Senator there is no railroad running into Routt County now.

DISTANCES IN COLORADO.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. How long does it take by wagon road?

Mr. TELLER. A railroad has been built a hundred and ten miles from Denver within the last two years, which will probably enter Routt County some time next summer.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Not next summer, but now. [Laughter.] How long has it taken, during all the history of the state, to go from Routt County to Denver?

Mr. TELLER. That would depend upon where in Routt County——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I can enlighten the Senator on that. I am delighted to give the Senator a lesson in the geography of his own state. There [indicating on map] it is, in the northwestern corner of the Senator's state. How long has it taken, since the Senator has been here, to go from Routt County to Denver?

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will give me a chance, I will answer the question. Routt County is a great big county. It is bigger than the state of Massachusetts.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Then why not make it a state by itself?

Mr. TELLER. I know that for many years a stage line ran across into Routt County. I presume it ran there last summer, although I was not there and do not know. But it did for many years. Now, I suppose it would take the stage line to go from the western part of Routt County a couple of days, perhaps three, if it ran day and night.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. To go by stage from here [indicating on map] to Denver? I am asking about how long it takes to go from Routt County to the capital of the state.

Mr. TELLER. The top of the range is about 45 or 50 miles from Denver. There has been a road there, in fact, there have been two, 10 miles apart, and another road was built at least thirty-five years ago. There is no 25 miles of backbone of that Continental Divide which does not have a road, which you can go across in a wagon; and there has not been for thirty-five years. We built the roads across there before there was a railroad within 600 miles of the state.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I am interested, of course, in this lecture on the geography of Colorado, but taking the railroads and the wagon roads and horseback and every other conveyance, how long would it take to go from Routt County to Denver?

Mr. TELLER. That would depend entirely. [Laughter.] I do not want the Senator to ask me any such conundrums. If a man rode a mule he would go 50 to 60 miles a day. If he drove a team, he would not drive quite so fast. If he went in a stage he would go a little faster. He can now leave Denver in the evening and the next day at 2 o'clock be to the western line of Colorado, 470 miles west of Denver.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is on the line of the railroad. But how about Routt County? I hope the Senator will not get away from Routt County. [Laughter.]

Mr. TELLER. I can not tell the Senator any better than to say——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I think that is so. [Laughter.]

Mr. TELLER. That if a man took a team and drove, I think he would be probably two or three days going from Denver to Routt County.

But the Senator said we had not any passes across. That is a mistake. That is what I wanted to rectify. We have plenty of roads across the range.

ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO AS ACCESSIBLE AS EASTERN AND WESTERN COLORADO.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. If that is so, why is Mr. Moffatt boring one of the most expensive tunnels in the world in order to pierce that range? If that is true, why, until the building of the Colorado Midland, was it that no passes existed except by way of Pueblo? If that is true, why is it that during the Senator's life, since there has been a railroad in Colorado, he has had to go from Denver to the western portion of the state by the southern route, around Pueblo?

Mr. TELLER. The Senator does not know anything about the geography of Colorado.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not think the Senator knows much about it.

Mr. TELLER. I may not, but if any man has seen more acres of Colorado than I have I should like to hunt him up.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Still there is Routt County. [Laughter.] Seriously, Mr. President, I will tell the Senator——

Mr. TELLER. I just want to say that there never has been any complaint that we could not get across the Continental Divide. It is unlike the divide between New Mexico and Arizona, where to-day there are not over three places where a man can drive across in the whole 350 miles.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will say to the Senator, and then I must go on, that to-day in this new state of Arizona—I say that because New Mexico and Arizona is a state which, I think, will ultimately be created—there are already three railroads right across that divide and one is extending. I call the attention of Senators to the fact that there is one here [indicating on map], one across there [indicating]; then there is the one here [indicating], and then there is the one building by the Santa Fe—I have forgotten the name of the town—over to Phoenix.

Mr. TELLER. By the side of each of those roads there is a wagon road, and unless they have built some in the last year they are all the wagon roads there were across that divide—375 miles long.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish to take up one or two more illustrations, and then I propose to conclude my argument upon this point.

I will say to the Senator before going further that I do not think it makes very much difference how far Routt County is from Denver in point of time, or how impracticable it is to get to it, because in these modern days——

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator did not think it was worth the while, he need not have put the question.

NATURAL DIVISIONS UNIMPORTANT UNDER MODERN CONDITIONS.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. But the conclusion is worth while, because while the Senator seems to think, and rightly, that the question of getting from one portion of the state of Colorado to another, through mountain passes and over plains, is not a large matter, neither is it a great matter to-day to do the same thing in the proposed new state of Arizona. It takes a good while to go from Routt County to Denver and a good while to go from Yuma to Santa Fe, but neither in modern conditions amounts to anything.

I wish to use one or two illustrations to show that the argument that the territories are physically divided and that it is a matter of great inconvenience to go from one to another is not sound, as compared with other states. I have used Colorado, and I have done so probably to the satisfaction of the Senate and the Senators from Colorado themselves. Here [indicating Colorado on map] is a state that is more completely divided than is the new state of Arizona. Not only that, but the eastern half of it is agricultural and the western half of it is mountainous and mining.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN A NATURAL PART OF WISCONSIN.

Let us take the states of Michigan and Wisconsin. The state of Michigan is actually split in twain by one of the world's greatest lakes, and what is called "the Peninsula of Michigan," and what ought naturally to belong to Wisconsin, is now a part of Michigan. I cite this not to show that this is any very great matter of difficulty, but simply to show that this argument that states are divided by mountain ranges or by a great inland sea is, in these days of steamboats and rail transportation, of electricity, of the telephone, and the telegraph, a matter of no consequence at all. But I shall show in a moment that it is as difficult to get from Houghton, Mich., to Lansing, the capital of the state of Michigan, as it is to get from any portion of the territory of Arizona to Santa Fe.

Yet pages have been written and hours of talking and argument have been used to show the physical difficulties that were said to be insurmountable in the making of this new state. I do not know why it was that this peninsula was taken away from Wisconsin, to which geographically it belongs, and made a part of Michigan. To be sure, there are some copper mines up there. [Laughter.] That is the portion of the great northwestern country where copper mines exist, and I believe their existence was known away back there when the state was created.

NATURAL DIVISIONS IN MONTANA.

Mr. President, the next state I will use to illustrate this point is Montana. Montana is also split by one of the worst crests of the Rocky Mountains. I have some figures here which show that it is as hard to go from one portion of Montana to the other and takes as long as it does in this proposed new state of Arizona about the physical difficulties of which we have heard until really some of us began to believe them.

It was stated last year that the waterflow was in the territory of Arizona toward the Pacific and in the territory of New Mexico toward the Gulf. As I pointed out a moment ago, in the state of Wisconsin I was on the watershed last summer, and a portion of its streams with their muscallonge flowed into Lake Superior and a portion of its streams with their bass flowed into the Mississippi. For that reason let us make two states of Wisconsin.

Mr. SPOONER. A muscallonge state and a bass state?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes; a muscallonge state and a bass state. There would be just as much statesmanship in it, Mr. President as to say that we shall make two states of these territories, and that is what the defeat of this bill means. It means the making of two states of these two territories. In the state of Ohio a part of its waters flow into the Ohio and a part into the Lakes.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator from Indiana knew that if this bill were defeated there would be no application from either New Mexico or Arizona during the next ten years for admission to the Union, would he be in favor of combining the territories and admitting them now as one state?

WE CAN NOT BURDEN THE FUTURE WITH THE DUTY OF TO-DAY.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes; with all my heart I would be in favor of this bill. Ten years! What is a decade in the life of a Nation? What are ten years as history runs? I have shown the Senator by scientific proof, the truth and accuracy of which can not be denied, that not in ten years nor in a hundred years will either of these territories be developed so much more than it is now that it will be entitled to separate statehood.

Ten years, says the Senator. Oh, no; I can not excuse my conscience and my duty to the American people by postponing to a later day the trouble which it is my duty to help settle now. Because I hold that a Senator is not an ambassador of a state, as we have recently heard; but he is a Senator of the United States, from a state, representing the whole American people.

There is another reason, Mr. President. I do not want to go into the intimate history of this bill and tell how it came about, how it grew up—there are Senators here who know—but after I accepted the idea of the joint statehood of New Mexico and Arizona I, with every member of the majority of the Committee on territories, became convinced, after careful study, that this measure ought to be passed on its own merits, and not to prevent some catastrophe which the Senator intimates is ten years off. If it is a catastrophe, it was pretty close to us three years ago, and I remember that this committee and the majority on this side, fighting day by day and week by week and month by month, tried to the extent of our own strength to defeat that catastrophe, if catastrophe there be. At that time we were praying and begging for aid from every source to prevent that catastrophe.

BILL RIGHT ON ITS MERITS.

Answering again, I say yes; I should be in favor of the bill with all my heart if the question of the admission of the two territories as separate states was not involved at all, because as a matter of statesmanship that is the thing to do. I have shown that these two territories as one state will never have more than a million people, so far as science with the most favorable forecast can tell, no matter how long in the future you project your imagination.

Mr. FLINT. Mr. President——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Pardon me a minute. I have shown that there is a mass of Mexicans there, it is the larger question of statesmanship before the American people to surround them with Americans and Americanize the whole mass. That is the larger public question. Now, I will hear the Senator.

Mr. FLINT. The Senator from Indiana has shown that the lands, when irrigated, will support a population of 1,000,000 people, and that does not include the cattle industry and the mining industry of Arizona. Would it not be reasonable to suppose that if this land could be irrigated within a period of ten years and have a million of people, there would be at least another million engaged in the mining industry and the cattle business?

MINING NO BASIS FOR STATEHOOD.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, there again is one charming section of those beautiful rainbow dreams upon which during every year since I have been a member of this body certain Senators have been attempting to erect an immortal structure of statehood. No; I will say to the Senator. I was not honored by the Senator's presence when at considerable length I analyzed the irrigation possibilities of that country and showed also the inadequacy of mining as a basis of statehood, when I showed it from examples and called attention to Tombstone. Not many years ago Tombstone had a population of 20,000, and in the last census it had a population of 600. To-day they try to pump water out of it. It may be it has got a thousand. The former Senator from Nevada, Mr. Stewart, who for so long a time added luster to this body by his eloquence and industry, made a speech last year, I think, in which he said that Carson once had a population of 40,000, and to-day it has 3,000. Why? Because the surroundings of these towns were not as pleasant as before? No; but because the mines had given out.

I read, during the Senator's absence, from the report of the governor of Arizona, in which he stated the truth very lucidly, a statement made with almost scientific accuracy, that mining does not develop but exhausts the resources of a state. It is no measure upon which you can build statehood which is to stand when the mines shall have been exhausted.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does not the Senator from Indiana know that in every mining state of the West, although they have been operating mines for over forty years, the output to-day is greater than it ever was?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly I do.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. And while individual mines may end and while individual mining camps may be abandoned the great industry itself has gone on increasing year after year?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Why, certainly. Who says otherwise?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. For instance, if the Senator will permit me, take Colorado, which is to-day producing over $30,000,000. Ten years ago Colorado was not producing half that sum. Does not the Senator know that all the indications are in those states that the mining industry is going to last not only for ten years or twenty-five years, but perhaps for the next hundred years?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I hope it will last even longer, much longer, I will say to the Senator. I cheerfully agree to all that the Senator says. But what I am saying is that mining alone is not a basis for population. I will read to the Senator from the report of the governor of Arizona upon this very point. He says:

> I entertain no doubt that the mines of Arizona will, as they have heretofore done, go on increasing their production in even an accelerated ratio, but notwithstanding that they will some time become exhausted. It is to be hoped, and reasonably expected, that that time is many decades off. In the meantime, however, etc.

Then he goes into the question of taxation, schools, etc. I quite agree with what the Senator says. What I mean to say is——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does not the Senator think that an industry which will last for at least a hundred years is proper to be taken into consideration when we build a state?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. To be taken into consideration, most assuredly, but not as one of the corner stones of the state, for the reason I gave. For I expect that this Republic, of which a state is an indestructible member, will live not for a hundred years but for a thousand years.

OBJECTION OF GREAT DISTANCES IN NEW STATE ANSWERED.

Mr. President, it is stated that the next difficulty is the question of distance; that the distances are too great; that it would be inconvenient to get from the various portions of this new state to its capital. I do not know who will want to go to the capital except the members of the legislature—and their expenses are paid; and the people who are interested in legislation—the lobbyists—and they ought to pay their own expenses.

It has been stated with very great particularity that it took such and such a length of time and so much money to go from Yuma to Santa Fe. You would have thought the entire population of Yuma was going to Santa Fe during the period of the sitting of the legislature there.

I have, however, taken two lists of places here, first by the shortest line as the crow flies, and second by railroad lines.

| | Miles. |
|---|---|
| Prescott, Ariz., to Santa Fe, N. Mex | 420 |
| Phoenix, Ariz., to Santa Fe, N. Mex | 420 |
| Sacramento to San Diego, Cal | 540 |
| Boise, Idaho, to north line | 420 |
| Lincoln, Nebr., to west line | 420 |
| Helena, Mont., to east line | 420 |
| Austin, Tex., to El Paso | 580 |
| Austin, Tex., to north line | 540 |
| Tallahassee, Fla., to Key West | 480 |

| | Miles. |
|---|---|
| Lansing, Mich., to Houghton | 400 |
| Richmond, Va., to southwest corner | 380 |
| Santa Fe to west extremity of Arizona | 540 |
| Sacramento to south line | 620 |

Now, Mr. President, how is it by railroad? We have heard about these vast distances which are so serious an obstacle to this new state.

| | Miles. |
|---|---|
| Prescott, Ariz., to Santa Fe, N. Mex | 535 |
| Phoenix, Ariz., to Santa Fe, N. Mex | 651 |
| Sacramento, Cal., to San Diego, Cal. (via Southern Pacific, Los Angeles and San Diego Surf Line) | 580 |
| Boise, Idaho, to Sand Point, Idaho (via Oregon Short Line and Great Northern) | 580 |
| Lincoln, Nebr., to Kimball, Nebr. (via Union Pacific) | 430 |
| Helena, Mont., to Wibaux, Mont. (via Northern Pacific) | 495 |
| Austin, Tex., to El Paso, Tex. (via Southern Pacific and International and Great Northern) | 700 |
| Tallahassee, Fla., to Key West, Fla. (via Tampa and Gulf; Tampa to Key West, 224 miles) | 560 |
| Houghton, Mich., to Lansing, Mich. (via Pere Marquette, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, and Lake Michigan) | 525 |
| Richmond, Va., to Norton, Va. (via Norfolk and Western) | 385 |
| Width of Arizona and New Mexico combined | 630 |
| Length of Arizona and New Mexico combined | 325 |

So, Mr. President, if distances are an obstacle in this state, why are they not also an obstacle in California, where they are greater? Why was it not also an obstacle in Texas, where they are greater? Why was it not also an obstacle in Idaho and Montana, where they are so great?

Then we have heard a great deal about this enormous territory. But, Mr. President, we will have to add to it the state of Ohio to make it as big as the state of Texas.

IF WRONG TO REUNITE NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA, ALSO WRONG TO KEEP TEXAS UNITED.

Texas is the justification for this bill—the answer to all arguments against it; for as a policy of statesmanship Texas demonstrates the wisdom of great states, the folly of small ones. What citizen of Texas does not glory in its magnificent dimensions? What citizen of the state of Houston does not hold his Texas citizenship second only to his American citizenship in his heart's pride?

Texas, born within the memory of men not yet old, is already fifth in numbers among all the states of the Union. In a quarter of a century Texas will be the first among the sisterhood of the Republic. Hardly sixty years have passed since Texas came to us, and yet to-day her sons and daughters number almost 4,000,000, although she has not a city within her borders of 75,000 souls. Within the next three decades the people of this mighty state will number 15,000,000. Her influence on the affairs of this Nation will be the highest of all the states, as her place will be first among her sisters.

In the conventions that name the Presidents of the Republic the voice of the single state of Texas, with her millions of electors, will be weightier than many smaller states, each with its handful of votes—weightier by far than would be the five comparatively petty commonwealths into which Texas has the right to be divided. It is a great thing to represent any state, large or small, in the American Congress; but it is a greater thing to represent a state whose mighty people and incalculable wealth give dignity and power to every word uttered in the name of that state and in behalf of that people.

I yield to no man in my admiration of the great men who founded this Republic and established its Constitution. But I should say that if there were men whose vision was even broader and hearts even more unselfish, they were the men who guided the destinies of Texas when it became a republic. Ten Senators might have come to this Chamber from Texas in 1840 instead of two; ten ambitious men might have crowned their lives with the glory of an American Senatorship; hundreds of politicians might have satisfied with state offices their lust for place. Because Texas then, as now, had the right to come in as five states or as one.

THE UNSELFISH WISDOM OF THE FOUNDERS OF TEXAS.

But the fathers of the Republic of Texas were great men indeed. They had a republic of their own; they loved American citizenship more than their separate glory. They had shed their blood to place the Lone Star flag among the banners of the nations, and the nations had welcomed it—every power on earth had recognized the Republic of Texas. And yet these great lion-hearted men, as unselfish as they were fearless and wise as they were brave, preferred absorption in the American Republic rather than the independent life of the republic which they had shed their blood to create. They preferred the Stars and Stripes rather than the flag they had shed their blood to raise and defend. And they chose to come in as one mighty, matchless, imperial state, with petty, personal, selfish ambitions of little men cast beneath their feet, than to come in as five comparatively insignificant communities with petty, personal, and selfish ambitions of little men soiling their glorious purpose and destroying their splendid destiny.

Divide the state of Texas? Ask any Texan what he thinks about that, Mr. President. The power to divide Texas into five states is reserved to the people of that commonwealth in the written law. And yet the men who most fiercely deny that that reserve power is valid are Texans. Let me quote the words of General Maxey, for they voice the sentiment of every Texan from the Rio Grande to Arkansas. General Maxey said that the power to divide Texas is not valid, and he plead for Texas the Great, for Texas one and indivisible, a Texas with two Senators and not a Texas with ten, Texas of and for the people and not Texas of and for the politicians.

A CONTRAST.

Contrast the attitude of Texas and her statesmen with the men who in Arizona and New Mexico are trying to prevent the reunion of a state which when reunited will be still smaller than Texas, though next to Texas in magnitude—the noble Commonwealth of Arizona the Great.

Are not Californians glad to-day that those who proposed to make six states out of this Pacific Commonwealth did not succeed? Are not Californians glad to-day that those who in the Senate of the United States proposed to divide California into two states, making one North California and the other South California, did not succeed? Is not every Californian glad to-day that the statesmanship of Stephen A. Douglas, Henry Clay, and William H. Seward saved the state of California and the Nation at large from such an error? Are not California Senators proud of every inch of the magnificent land they represent? Are California Senators willing to lose a single foot of its golden soil? And if a state more than a thousand miles in length is good for the people of California, why is not a state of lesser distances good for the people of Arizona and New Mexico? If Arizona and New Mexico ought not to be reunited and made one state, why ought not Texas be divided, as the law provides, and made five states? If the size and distances of Texas are good for the people of Texas and good for the Nation, why should not the size and distances of the greater Arizona of this bill be good for the people of that greater Arizona and good for the Nation?

GREAT STATES SOURCE OF PRIDE TO ENTIRE NATION.

I live in the very center of the Nation—in Indiana—within whose borders is the country's center of population. Yet I am as proud of California—that state from whose shores American destiny looks out upon the waters of the future—as if I had always lived within sight of the Golden Gate. Magnificent her present possibilities, glorious beyond the measurement of human speech her future. Humboldt, the prophet of science, foresaw the hour when the world's climax of civilization would be reached in that American wonderland that stretches between the Sierras and the sea. Surely God fashioned California for a career noble beyond precedent; equipped her for a place unique in the councils of the greatest nation that ever was or will be on this earth. Her mountains, matchless in majestic beauty, with their hearts of gold; her valleys shaming the fabled richness of the Nile; her great and ancient trees, older than the everlasting hills, the monarchs of all the forests of the globe; her far-flung coasts, equal in extent to the sea line of an empire—all the elements of California's being make her splendid among American Commonwealths.

What Californian, aye what American, would have California other than what she is? What American's heart does not thrill with pride when admiring lips name this golden-browed guardian of our western seas? What citizen of that vast Commonwealth that would not take up arms to prevent her dismemberment? Yet, only the wisdom and courage of Henry Clay prevented that catastrophe. If men exactly like those who to-day are resisting the reunion of New Mexico and Arizona could have had their way California would not now be standing among the proudest of her sisters in the American Union, but would have been two or more lesser and weaker commonwealths.

NO STATE TOO GREAT; NONE WILLING TO BE DISMEMBERED.

Thank God for California as she is. Thank God for the prophetic statesmanship of Henry Clay that made California what she is. Thank God that the little men who, for sectional reasons and personal ambitions, would have dismembered California and extinguished her glory even as its splendid flame was lit—thank God their plots and schemes were defeated and confounded. And just as no Californian to-day will admit that any ancestor of his tried to assassinate the destiny of California by preventing her from being one state, so fifty years from now no citizen of imperial Arizona will admit that any ancestor of his tried to assassinate the destiny of Arizona by preventing her from being one state. California on the west, Texas on the east, present visible and immortal examples of what Arizona should be, aye! and will be. Laws and institutions similar and not antagonistic.

LAWS AND INSTITUTIONS ALMOST IDENTICAL.

Now, Mr. President, what is the next objection? We are told not only that they are different people in race, which I have shown is not true; not only that there is a physical division which is insuperable, which I have shown is not true; but that there is difference in laws and institutions.

The answer to that is that it is not the truth. The organic acts are the same—everybody knows that. All the national laws are the same for those territories as for every other territory. The law of negotiable instruments is the same, the law of real estate is the same, the law of marriage and divorce, and inheritance is practically the same, their code of practice is the same, their irrigation laws are identical. The irrigation laws of Arizona were taken bodily from the irrigation laws of New Mexico. It is said that the laws of Arizona are based upon the common law and the laws of New Mexico upon the civil law.

That sounds plausible if you do not examine into it, because you are assuming that there are nothing but Americans in one territory, and nothing but Mexicans, so called, in the other. But that is not true, except as to the irrigation law, and that is the same in both territories. There was no irrigation law in the common law. The common law came from England, which is the land of rains and frogs, of streams bank full, flowing with fertility. But the civil law came from Italy where irrigation was practiced, then into Mexico and then into California.

The laws of these two territories concerning negotiable instruments, irrigation, descent, real estate, and their criminal code, excepting in their punishment, are almost absolutely the same.

What, then, becomes of the statement that is presented to Senators and to the American people that we are attempting to coerce in an unnatural union two unlike peoples and welding together different laws and hostile institutions when the laws and institutions are almost identical?

THE PROBLEM OF TERRITORIAL DEBTS SOLVED BY THIS BILL.

It has been said that there is such a difference in the debts that they will be very difficult of adjustment. The bill provides that the new state shall assume the debts of the territories. The debt of Arizona is greater than the debt of New Mexico. If any person gets the worst of that bargain, it is New Mexico and not Arizona. All told, their debts will not be over three and a half million dollars—something like that. As I have pointed out, the school fund will take care of that. The debts of counties will have nothing to do with the state. The debts that exist against the counties will still exist against the counties. That is not assumed by the state. Therefore there is absolutely no difficulty at all in the handling of their debts.

THE ARGUMENT OF SECTIONALISM UNAMERICAN.

But, Mr. President, we were told that there must be more Senators west of the Mississippi River. Why? The interests of the people west of the Mississippi River are the same as the interests of the people north of the Ohio and Missouri; are the same as the interests of the people south of the Ohio and Missouri. The interests of California and Maine are one. The people from the heart of the Republic in the Mississippi Valley will work and vote and fight to secure the prosperity of the people on our Atlantic seaboard, or the Gulf, or the Great Lakes, or of the mighty Northwest where rolls the Oregon.

There are no sections in this Republic. This Nation is not split in twain by the Mississippi River, or the Ohio, or the Missouri, or the mountains of the East or the West. The people of this country are not divided into classes, their interests antagonistic, their destiny hostile. No; this country is one country without sections, this people one people without classes, this Nation one Nation with a single flag and a single destiny.

And yet it is claimed that Senators should be increased according to areas and not according to population. It is claimed by the advocates of sectionalism that the interests of the people of the West are hostile to those of the remainder of the Republic.

That is not true, Mr. President. The interests of the West are not at war with the interests of the East. It is not true that the interests of Alabama are at war with the interests of Minnesota. That assertion is a denial of the great truth of the community of interests of all Americans, upon which this Republic rests and which, when destroyed, will cause this Republic to crumble into ruin.

AMERICANS NOT DIVIDED INTO CLASSES OR SECTIONS.

The advocates of this twentieth century sectionalism declare that Congress ought not to represent numbers of people, but groups of industries. It is said that in one section of the country is located one group of industries, in another quarter of the country another group of industries, and that representation in Congress ought to be determined by the geography of these industries and not by the number of people employed in these industries. The mere statement of that proposition is its answer.

Every rational method of representation was discussed in the constitutional convention, but this bizarre scheme was never suggested. No; the true basis of representation is people and not square miles, citizens and not acres, men and women, not factories and mines, human beings and not property. It is men who make industries, not industries which make men. And the prosperity of every industry of the Republic is based upon the prosperity of every other industry in the Republic.

PROSPERITY OF ONE DEPENDS ON PROSPERITY OF ALL.

The American farmer can not prosper if the American manufacturer does not prosper. The fortune of the man in the mills rises or falls with the fortune of the man in the furrow. The destiny of Dakota and Georgia, of Oregon and Ohio are inextricably interwoven with the destiny of California and New York. The engineer on the locomotive, the brakeman on the cars behind it are involved with the cowboy on the plains or the ranchman who employs him in a common welfare or a common failure.

There is no peril before this Republic except one—the possibility that Americans will be divided into classes, hating each other, warring with each other, and, in their strife, destroying each other in common catastrophe. And the man who proclaims that one section is hostile to another section, one interest antagonistic to another interest, and that sections and not people, industries and not citizens, should be the basis of representation in the councils of the Nation, is weakening the foundations upon which the future safety, power, and glory of this Republic is building and must rest.

The theory of this bill is that this Republic is a Nation and not an assemblage of sections. The theory of this bill is that the American people are a people and not a group of communities.

THE SO-CALLED "PLEDGE" OF STATEHOOD.

Now I come to the subject which was first called to the attention of the Senate by the then Senator from California, Mr. Bard, last year. In the first place, I do not think any Senator will maintain for a moment that any language in that act repeals the Constitution of the United States. I do not suppose anybody will claim that the power given Congress over this question by the Constitution of the United States is in any wise limited by any act of Congress, no matter when, where, or how passed. So our power remains the same. Nor does it bind a subsequent Congress, which is merely stating the same legal question in different terms. We may make one law concerning territory to-day. We may repeal that law next year.

So, Mr. President, if the language of the act is at all violated by this bill, and if there is any "pledge" in the language of the act which can be violated, it is, if anything at all, a moral "pledge," and that alone, is it not? There were not two parties capable of making a contract to begin with. But if it is a moral "pledge," then we have a right to inquire into its origin.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE "PLEDGE" NEVER EXPLAINED EXCEPT BY POSTON.

I was interested in the colloquy this afternoon that went on here concerning the origin of the act. I heard much concerning the origin of the act, which excepting this language is like every other act, but not a word concerning the origin of this so-called "pledge," which is unlike any other act. Not one word did I hear concerning the origin of this language, and not one word can be found in explanation of this strange "pledge," except the one I am going to quote in a moment. We have the remarkable spectacle of peculiar language being used, different from the language used in every other organic act since 1787, without one word in explanation being said about it, either in the House or the Senate, or without any word of it coming down to us.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator from Indiana heard the statement that the language to which he refers was incorporated in the bill by the House Committee on Territories.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Well, I know that.

Mr. PATTERSON. It was reported to the House and passed the House. It came over to the Senate, and it was satisfactory to the Senate Committee on Territories.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Did the Senator find any debate upon it or any reason given for the language?

Mr. PATTERSON. Not a word——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Not a word.

Mr. PATTERSON. Just one moment. Not a word with reference to that particular language——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is the language we are talking about.

Mr. PATTERSON. One moment. But there was a debate which showed very clearly that the unsettled condition of the territory, by reason of existing war and the contest over its possession by the southern army and the Federal Army——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes; you stated all that; I remember that very well.

Mr. PATTERSON. Probably led to the introduction of that language.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No, no; of course not! How would that language keep hostile troops away? The Senator will pardon me, but that explanation is puerile. Yet that is the best explanation the Senator can give. But I produce Mr. Poston's journal as to why that language was put in, and the Senator or anybody else can draw the conclusion that seems to them most satisfactory. One conclusion may be more satisfactory to the Senator. For example, the Senator may think that the reason that language got in there, unlike any other language ever used, was the reason he gives. He may think so, but I do not think he thinks so. No! The reason that the language went in there was the facts which Poston states. I will show the reason later on, without the remotest reflection upon any of the members of either committee when the bill was passed except one man whom Poston names.

WHY WAS ARIZONA "PLEDGED" STATEHOOD WHEN NO OTHER TERRITORY WAS EVER SO FAVORED.

Look at this, Mr. President! This act was passed—and I will call attention in a moment to what was going on when this act was passed—on February 24, 1863. One week later, March 3, 1863, the territory of Idaho was created; and just a little while before the territory of Dakota was created. Just a little bit later another territory was created. In all the organic acts from first to last, the one concerning Idaho being passed within a week of the one concerning Arizona, no such language was ever used. Where it was unique, where it was peculiar, and where nobody ever heard of it before, is it not astounding that no one ever mentioned it in debate? Is it not astounding that no person ever made a report from a committee concerning this one exception in all the organic acts that ever had been passed since the Constitution was adopted? Why did they put this language in the Arizona act and not in any other territorial act? I demand an answer to that question. That is a pertinent inquiry, because you admit that the only binding force it has is as a moral obligation. So if it is a moral obligation, we have a right to inquire into its origin. Let us see what this language is. Let us see what force it has.

Provided further, That said government shall be—

I want to call attention also to the fact that this was not drawn by a lawyer. This language was put in by an unskilled hand.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all that part of the present territory of New Mexico situate west of a line running due south from the point where the southwest corner of the territory of Colorado joins the northern boundary of the territory of New Mexico to the southern boundary line of said territory of New Mexico be, and the same is hereby, erected into a temporary government by the name of the territory of Arizona.

Down to that point, down to that colon, down to the proviso, it is merely a copy of previous acts.

Provided, further—

This is the "temporary government," mind you, so named in the act, so nominated in the bond—

"PLEDGE" FULFILLED BY THIS BILL.

Provided further, That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said territory shall, with the consent of Congress, form a State government, republican in form, as prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, and apply for and obtain admission into the Union as a state, on an equal footing with the original states.

That is the "pledge"—language never used in a territorial act before or since. Before I show its origin, before I show the fraud that produced it, let us see if this bill does not observe that pledge, no matter what its origin.

We propose to bring them into the Union upon an equality with the original states. That we add New Mexico to them can not change that. Does anybody deny that we have got a right to add one county of New Mexico to them? If we have a right to add one county, we have a right to add all of the territory, so far as right is concerned. The government will not be destroyed thereby. A new state government will be established and the "pledge" fulfilled.

FRAUDULENT ORIGIN OF THE "PLEDGE" OF STATEHOOD.

Why was it that this provision was put in? I suppose most of the Senators here are familiar with the history of this act; but because there are some new Senators, even at this late hour I shall read what Bancroft, in his History of the Pacific states, gives as an explanation of this act.

Senator Trumbull said, in debate, that the bill to split off Arizona looked to him like a scheme to create offices for somebody to fill, and it was; that it looked to him like a scheme to create salaries for somebody to draw, and it was. That is what the acute legal mind of Lyman Trumbull saw when this bill to split Arizona from New Mexico appeared. And this scheme was worked in the midst of war—for this bill was reported in 1862, soon after Shiloh had been fought, when the whole country was shocked and horrified and bathed in tears as well as blood and the minds and souls of men were stirred by mingled exultation and despair, by sorrow and rejoicing. Nobody was then thinking very much about a territorial act for a territory thousands of miles off, especially when, as Poston says, "Nobody knew where Arizona was."

"PLEDGE" ENACTED AT CRISIS OF CIVIL WAR.

There are Senators here who know very well that in ordinary legislation we leave it to committees, and there are only four or five Senators who sit day by day watching. Just such things as that occurred at that time. What time did Senators who were here during the Spanish war have to pay attention to the details of each little act that came from some committee? Were you not instead considering the safety of American soldiers and sailors? Were not your whole souls engrossed with the great cause of liberty for which our Army and our Navy were fighting? If that was true during the Spanish war, what must have been the conditions when this bill was introduced in 1862 and when it finally passed in 1863? It was passed about the time of Chancellorsville; it was passed not far from the time of the great, historic, and horrible battle of Fredericksburg; it was passed not long after the Merrimac and the Monitor had met in terrible conflict.

The people were not thinking about Arizona then. The people were not thinking about the effect of any bill that came from the Committee on Territories. McDougall, of California, said he could not get the Senate to pay attention to anything. He said he did not know that anybody knew where Arizona was. Nobody thought anything about it. I have read from the history of this bill that nobody was very much interested in this territory. It was thousands of miles away from their homes and a million miles away from their thoughts. It is said that nobody is interested in the present act—and that is not far from true, except as to the mining companies, the railroads, and politicians, they are interested. Very well. If Senators are not interested in the present bill in time of peace; if railroad rate legislation takes the attention of Senators more than statehood does now, after an earnest agitation, at a time when there are 400,000 people down there, if we are not interested in this statehood bill now, do you suppose that at the very climax of history's bloodiest conflict, during one of the greatest wars that was ever fought, this Arizona territorial act received much of the attention of the Senate? That is how it was possible that what I am going to read came about.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do.

Mr. PATTERSON. Is it the contention of the Senator from Indiana that by reason of the war and the battles and the victories——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. And all the rest—— [Laughter.]

Mr. PATTERSON. That the Senators who comprised the Committee on Territories and the Members of the House were so overcome and overwhelmed or benumbed or paralyzed——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Or anything else—— [Laughter.]

Mr. PATTERSON. That they did not know what they were doing, or that they were easily imposed upon, and that some scheming outsiders, without their knowledge or consent, succeeded in having this provision introduced in the bill?

CLIMAX OF CIVIL WAR ABSORBED ALL ATTENTION.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Without their knowledge or consent, either spoken or written. [Laughter.]

My answer to that is just this: That sounds very nice; but we are human beings, and I think nobody was paying very much attention to anything else, except the greatest war that was ever fought, at the moment of this Nation's greatest peril. Does not the Senator know that at that time it was a question as to whether the flag should continue to float in the heavens? Does he not know that at that time it was a question whether Washington itself would not be captured? I do not think very many people were inclined to give that deliberation to the temporary territorial status of Arizona such as our committee has given to the everlasting question of statehood now in these placid times of peace. Anyhow, here is what occurred——

Mr. PATTERSON. I do know, Mr. President, that Senators discussed the bill with a great deal of particularity; that amendments were offered, that amendments were discussed, and that amendments were voted on, and that amendments were then reconsidered, showing that the Senate was giving a great deal of attention to every one of the details of that bill.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do.

Mr. NELSON. I am informed that it will take about three-quarters of an hour for the Senator from Indiana to finish his remarks. I ask unanimous consent that he may be permitted to finish his speech to-morrow immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, under the arrangement that has been made, I think the Senator should conclude this afternoon. There are some Senators who want to speak to-morrow under the ten-minute rule.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me suggest this for the relief of the Senator from Indiana: Might we do in the morning as we did to-day—meet at 11 o'clock—and let the Senator from Indiana conclude his speech, say, by 12 o'clock.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, I have not made this request. It was suggested to me by several Senators. I am perfectly willing to go on now, or I will go on in the morning, just as will best suit the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. I think it better that it should be determined by the Senator himself, if he has any preference about it. I think, under the circumstances, we can accommodate ourselves to suit his preference. I was about to suggest that, if he so desired, I should like to have the Senate meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow instead of 12.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is very kind and is appreciated, but my only objection to that is this: I would like very much to go on to-morrow, but not at 11 o'clock, for the reason that I have seen that done several times, and I have observed that we are human beings and we simply do not get here at 11 o'clock, it does not make any difference what the matter under discussion may be. We are to go on from 12 o'clock to-morrow under the ten-minute rule until 4. That is four hours. I would say that if the Senate meets at 12 o'clock and I could proceed with my remarks, I would be through considerably before 1 o'clock, which would give three hours' debate under the ten-minute rule.

Mr. FORAKER. The only objection to that is that we would have to change the unanimous-consent agreement, and that is something that has never been done while I have been a member of the body. I do not know, however, that that is a good reason why it should not be done.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I should like it very much, but the only point about it is that we do not get here at 11 o'clock. I have seen that several times.

Mr. TELLER. I shall object to that. I will not object if the Senator chooses to occupy the time until 12 o'clock, but I will insist that at 12 o'clock the ten-minute rule shall go into operation.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I think, on the whole, I had better go on now. Mr. President, here is what occurred. I read from Bancroft's History:

HOW CONSPIRATORS ORIGINATED THE "PLEDGE."

Senator Trumbull led the opposition, and McDougall, of California, was an earnest advocate of the bill.

* * * * * * *

Charles D. Poston, Reminiscences, gives the following account of the preliminary wire pulling of 1862 at Washington: "At the meeting of Congress in December, 1862, I returned to Washington, made friends with Lincoln, and proposed the organization of the territory of Arizona. Oury (who, I suppose, had been elected Delegate in 1862 to succeed McGowan) was in Richmond, cooling his heels in the antechambers of the Confederate Congress, without gaining admission as a Delegate from Arizona. Mowry was a prisoner in Yuma, cooling his head from the political fever which had afflicted it, and meditating on the decline and fall of a West Point graduate. There was no other person in Washington, save General Heintzelman, who took any interest in Arizona affairs."

I ask Senators to note that.

"They had something else to occupy their attention"—

I should think they had—

"DID NOT KNOW WHERE ARIZONA WAS."

"and did not even know where Arizona was."

That was the "careful attention" given to this matter. "They had something else to occupy their attention, and did not even know where Arizona was."

Mr. PATTERSON. To whom does the writer of that refer?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. If the Senator wants to ask me a question, very well; but in view of the lateness of the hour, I want him to omit details. I am reading from Charles D. Poston's Reminiscences, as quoted by Bancroft.

Mr. PATTERSON. But who does he say was so ignorant that he did not know where Arizona was?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will read it over again:

Mowry was a prisoner in Yuma, cooling his head from the political fever which had afflicted it and meditating on the decline and fall of a West Point graduate. There was no other person in Washington, save General Heintzelman, who took any interest in Arizona affairs. They had something else to occupy their attention, and did not even know where Arizona was.

Mr. PATTERSON. Does not that refer——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not know to whom it refers, but the Senator has heard it. He says, then, there was nobody in Washington who knew anything about Arizona affairs but General Heintzelman. The reason he knew something about it was because he had a command at Fort Yuma. He says:

There was nobody else. They had something else to think about.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to know from what book the Senator is reading?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Bancroft's History of Arizona.

Mr. FORAKER. Bancroft's History, but Charles D. Poston's Reminiscences.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Charles D. Poston's Reminiscences.

Mr. SPOONER. Is the Senator able to enlighten us at all as to who Charles D. Poston was?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Indeed I am.

Mr. SPOONER. Who was he?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Charles D. Poston and Sylvester Mowry were men who had roving dispositions; who had been down in Arizona and nearly every place else. Charles D. Poston was an adventurer, explorer, politician, and permanent office seeker, who acquired the habit early in life and never lost it to the day of his death. [Laughter.] It was his desire for office, as his own Reminiscences show, that got this bill through Congress; and he got the office which he planned to get, and he kept on seeking office until a short time before his death, for last year I got a letter that he had written to Secretary Lamar, whom he knew, asking for another job—a good man and all that sort of thing, and I do not object to him at all because he was an office seeker.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do, sir.

Mr. PATTERSON. I want to ask the Senator whether he knows anybody else who has ever maintained that the world rested upon his shoulders, and that whatever Congress did was done through his agency, whether it was the creation of a state or a territory?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not know; but I have seen the Senator from Colorado very recently take a good deal on his shoulders that he could not carry. [Laughter.]

Mr. PATTERSON. And this Poston, or whatever his name may be, evidently assumed that he was "running" Congress. That is all that you can gather from his reminiscences.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. If the Senator has any other question that is designed to bring out any information of which I am in possession or can correct any faulty logic that I may engage in, I shall be glad to hear it, otherwise I would be obliged if the Senator would not bother me. Poston goes on in his account of how this Arizona "pledge" was made. He says:

There was no other person in Washington, save General Heintzelman, who took any interest in Arizona affairs. They had something else to occupy their attention, and did not even know where Arizona was. Old Ben Wade, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories, took a lively and bold interest in the organization of the territory, and Ashley, chairman of the committee in the House, told me how to accomplish the object. He said there were a number of Members of the expiring Congress who had been defeated in their own districts for the next term who wanted to go West and offer their political services to the "galoots," and if they could be grouped and a satisfactory slate made they would have influence enough to carry the bill through Congress. Consequently an "oyster supper" was organized, to which the "lame ducks" were invited, and then and there the slate was made and the territory was virtually organized. So the slate was made and the bargain concluded, but toward the last it occurred to my obfuscated brain that my name did not appear on the slate, and, in the language of Daniel Webster, I exclaimed: "Gentlemen, what is to become of me?" Gurley politely replied, "Oh, we will make you Indian agent." *So the bill passed, * * * and the oyster supper was paid for, and we were all happy, and* ARIZONA WAS LAUNCHED UPON THE POLITICAL SEA.

That is how the act happened to be passed.

Now, Mr. President, do you begin to see some explanation for this unusual language of this act? This was in 1863. Trumbull saw that something was the matter; and is anything more natural than that these gentlemen, knowing what was the matter, knowing that, as Poston wrote in his journal, they were creating offices for themselves, a whole legislature, a full court, a governor, and a secretary of state over 6,500 Mexicans 3,000 miles away, that, as soon as the war was over and Senators discovered that, they would be apt to repeal it, and therefore the language was put into the act. Whether it is that or whether it is something else, that is the explanation that exists in the record of the men who participated in it. So, Mr. President, if there be a moral "pledge," what becomes of the source of that morality? Who ever heard of morality flowing from fraud?

AND THE AUTHORS OF THE ACT GOT THE OFFICES.

As pointed out a moment ago, this "pledge" is fulfilled by this bill, no matter what its origin. It originated in a fraud, of which Wade knew nothing, and in a fraud of which nobody but the conspirators knew anything. Members of Congress entered the conspiracy, and I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that every man who was a member of what Poston calls this scheme to create this new territory for the purpose of getting offices to fill and salaries to draw, not one of them ever came back to Congress, and every man of them got the offices that were apportioned out at the "oyster supper." If they foresaw, as most men foresaw at that time, that the war would soon end, would not men who had places in a body like that, would not men who wanted to provide themselves with jobs like that, want to protect themselves in those offices? and what better could be provided to maintain themselves in those offices than the exact language that we find in this act, being the first and last time it was used in the organic acts in the history of the Republic?

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator be kind enough to tell me the names of those ex-Members of Congress?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes, sir; Mr. Gurley was one.

Mr. SPOONER. As given by Mr. Poston?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes, sir. I have one or two names.

Mr. SPOONER. I will not trouble the Senator now.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. But I have them, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. NELSON. I would suggest that the Senator from Indiana answer the Senator from Wisconsin in the morning, so that he can go on and finish his remarks.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Very good. The idea that there is a "pledge"—which can not be a legal pledge and if anything at all is only a moral pledge, if anything—has been shattered by the origin of the pledge. We know what the origin of the act was, but nobody has ever suggested why it was that this language was used. What public reason could there be why this language was used in this act only and never in any other act? Why was it not used in the Idaho act, which was passed only one week later?

ONLY EXPLANATION THE ONE GIVEN BY THE CONSPIRATOR.

If it were for the reason that it was in order to maintain government down there against the Confederate forces, that was a reason of national consequence, which would have certainly been mentioned by some Senator or Member of the House in the debate, and yet not a word is said in explanation. Is it not extraordinary, Mr. President, that in a whole series of acts here was a change antagonistic to the policy of Congress, for which no explanation exists now or has ever been given, except the one of fraud, which Poston gives? I saw that the Senator from Colorado handed the Senator from Wisconsin a book. Is an explanation given there?

Mr. SPOONER. That was a book which I had on my table, if I must explain it to the Senator, which contains the debate on this bill.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Does it give a reason for this language? I will be very glad to hear it if there is one.

Mr. SPOONER. No, the bill was discussed in the Senate several days. The bill was pending a good while.

Mr. PATTERSON. Over a year.

Mr. SPOONER. Over a year.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. And the reason it was pending was, as Lyman Trumbull says in his speeches, because he put it off.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, there were some men who took part in that discussion who did not derive their inspiration from the same source Mr. Poston derived his, and whose brains were not "obfusticated."

Senator Wade, of Ohio, participated in that debate. He referred to the amendments which had been offered to the bill in the Committee on Territories, of which he was chairman, and Senator Doolittle says this, if the Senator will permit me. The Senator asked me a question or I would not interrupt him. Senator Doolittle says this:

NO SENATOR GAVE A REASON FOR THE "PLEDGE."

Mr. President, there is another consideration which I confess presses pretty strongly upon my mind. It is well known that the traitors, the confederates, as they style themselves, have been trying to organize what they call the territorial government of Arizona. If we, who are under obligations to afford protection to these citizens, utterly abandon them practically to themselves, give them no government, no protection, and the confederates organize a territorial government for Arizona, and send their agents and officers into that neighborhood, the influence they will exert over that population and those persons who are citizens of the United States may be very deleterious to our cause. Although it costs us something to send officers to this territory, yet if we send officers there, it is to be presumed they will be friends to the Government of the United States, and they will exercise a strong influence in that territory and among that people in keeping them loyal to the Government of the United States. That, I confess, is one of the strongest arguments which operates on my mind. I shall support the bill, and shall vote against the motion to postpone it indefinitely.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That was Doolittle's reason, that was Wade's reason, that was Lincoln's reason for the passage of the bill; but what was the reason for this peculiar language of the bill never used in any other similar act? What was the reason for this "pledge" and, above all, why did nobody discuss it?

Mr. SPOONER. I thought no one was attending to the bill?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Nobody said that. Is it not strange that nobody who was attending to the bill gave any explanation of this "pledge"—this unheard of language, the most notable and important and novel in the whole act?

Mr. HEYBURN. I think I can tell the Senator, if he will permit me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. HEYBURN. I suggest that the reason is found in article 9 of our treaty with Mexico. Would the Senator regard it as an encroachment upon his time if I read that article?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No, I would not. I am going to conclude in the morning, anyway, as it is impossible for me to finish this evening.

Mr. HEYBURN. Article IX of our treaty with Mexico provided:

The Mexicans who, in the territories aforesaid—

That is the land which passed to us under the treaty—

shall not preserve the character of citizens of the Mexican Republic, conformably with what is stipulated in the preceding article, shall be incorporated into the Union of the United States and be admitted, at the proper time (to be judged of by the Congress of the United States)——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I am familiar with that treaty.

Mr. HEYBURN (reading)— to the enjoyment of all the rights of citizens of the United States according to the principles of the Constitution, and in the meantime shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty and property, and secured in the free exercise of their religion without restriction.

That was the inspiration of the provision.

WHY WAS NOT THE "PLEDGE" ALSO MADE TO NEW MEXICO, COLORADO, UTAH, ETC.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator has not contributed to the enlightenment of this question, although at first blush I have no doubt he thought he did, because if that were the reason it would have been put into the act which organized the territory of New Mexico also, and Colorado and Nevada and Utah and all other territories carved out of the Mexican cession. Why was it put in the act organizing the territory of Arizona and omitted from the act organizing the territory of New Mexico——

Mr. HEYBURN. I will answer that.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Wait a minute—which was passed immediately after the treaty?

Mr. HEYBURN. I will answer that; because part of the territory of New Mexico did not come with the Spanish treaty.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. But all of this did.

Mr. HEYBURN. Part of it came under the Louisiana purchase.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator from Indiana says it is impossible for him to conclude this evening, and that he would be very much obliged if the Senate would now adjourn to convene at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish to make a statement to supplement that of the Senator from Ohio.

I expected to get started to-day at 2 o'clock. That was the agreement, as it appears of record, between the Senator from Colorado and myself. I did not get started until twenty minutes after 3. The reason why I do not like to go on at 11 and prefer to proceed at 12 is that at the latter hour the Senators are here, and at 11 o'clock they are not, and I am trying to say something on this subject, and I should like to have an audience.

Mr. FORAKER. That is the only way I know of to avoid conflicting with the unanimous-consent agreement we have made and to overcome the objections of some Senators who are anxious to have the ten-minute rule effective from 12 o'clock.

Mr. TELLER. As most Senators know, I am opposed to this system of fixing a time for closing debate. I have consented to it because it has grown up to be a custom here. But an agreement having been made, I have never known it to be changed, and if you once begin to change them you might as well give up the custom. I am willing to come here at 11 and give the Senator from Indiana until 12 o'clock, because it was not anticipated that we would meet before 12 o'clock. But I am going to insist that after the close of the morning business the order shall be speeches of ten minutes.

Mr. DICK. Then do we understand the Senator from Colorado to object?

Mr. TELLER. I do object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado objects.

Mr. TELLER. I thought I made myself plain.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator does not object to the Senate meeting at 11 o'clock.

Mr. TELLER. I do not object to adjourning until 11 o'clock, and to giving the Senator from Indiana from 11 to 12.

Mr. FORAKER. I move, then, that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. BACON. I understand the purpose is that we shall meet at 11 o'clock, and that the morning hour shall not begin until 12. I suggest that the Senator had better include that in his request.

Mr. FORAKER. I will modify the request to that extent.

Mr. ALLISON. Suppose we take a recess until 11 o'clock?

Mr. BACON. That would be better.

Mr. ALLISON. I suggest that we take a recess, and then this legislative day will continue until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. FORAKER. Then I withdraw the motion to adjourn.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Before the motion is acted upon I wish to submit some amendments, which I ask to have printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. FORAKER. I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Friday, March 9, 1906, at 11 o'clock a. m.

---

The Senate reassembled at 11 a. m., Friday, March 9, at the expiration of the recess.

THE STATEHOOD BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States, and to enable the people of New Mexico and of Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, I have shown with at least a conclusiveness which did not challenge dispute, that the supposed and oft-repeated objection to size is not an obstacle in the way of the reunion of these two territories, and the claim that physical difficulties were in the way, that racial antagonisms existed which rendered it impossible, did not have a foundation either in fact or reason.

With reference to the "pledge," I showed yesterday before the recess was taken that, first, the language employed does not repeal the Constitution from which we get our power; that it does not bind a subsequent Congress, and that if it has any force at all it is a moral pledge which compels an inquiry into its origin. That inquiry I made on yesterday, establishing conclusively the reason for the passage of this act, and especially the reason for the peculiar language of the "pledge."

SO-CALLED "PLEDGE" TO ARIZONA NEVER EXPLAINED.

Last year I challenged an explanation of the singular circumstance that in all the organic acts which have been passed by the American Congress since the adoption of the Constitution no such language as this has ever been used. I have asked Senators to tell the Senate and the country why it was that the 6,500 Mexicans living in the territory of Arizona should have been considered entitled to greater rights than the people who were living in Idaho when they were made into a territorial government within seven days thereafter, and I have not yet heard an answer; why it was that the 6,500 Mexicans living in Arizona when the territorial government was established should be entitled to special favor when it had never been given to people living in any territories before, and I was not answered.

Now, Mr. President, I have pointed out the further fact that Mr. Poston was the originator of this particular and peculiar measure; for the first bill to make Arizona and New Mexico separate territories was for an east and west division. Finally that it was passed in war times, passed at a time when the flames of the greatest conflict of history were lighting up the entire Republic.

COMMITTEE ON TERRITORIES COULD GIVE LITTLE ATTENTION TO IT IN 1863.

Something was said yesterday about the high character of the Committee on Territories of the Congress which reported that bill favorably. They did not mention the fact that they were absorbed in weightier affairs. That did not deny the fact Mr. Poston stated, that "nobody knew where Arizona was."

Let us see whether the members of the Committee on Territories in 1862 and 1863 could in the nature of things and in the nature and circumstances of the case have been giving attention to this business. I wish to repeat before I read the names of the men who were members of the Committee on Territories in 1862 and 1863, that in all of the debate upon this question, although this was the significant language employed in this act, not one word of explanation was given of it by any Senator. No person said why they were inserting into this act the peculiar provision which gives a right to these people never given before to any American citizens in a territory. Is not that an extraordinary circumstance? Time and time again I have asked Senators for an explanation of that, and no explanation has ever been forthcoming.

THEY WERE ON COMMITTEES ON CONDUCT OF WAR.

Now, let us see what the Senators on this committee were doing that they overlooked this language. Mr. Wade was chairman of the Committee on Territories, but what else did Mr. Wade have on hand at that time? He was also a member of the District of Columbia Committee, which had not only, as the present District of Columbia Committee has, the government of this District, but also in a large measure was in charge of its defenses and provisions for the safety of the city itself. That is not all. Senator Wade was also a member of the House and Senate Joint Committee on—what? On the Conduct of the War, a committee which had, practically, charge of all military operations in the field and that was daily in consultation with President Lincoln. Do you think, therefore, it is extraordinary that Mr. Wade did not give any particular attention to this peculiar language?

Mr. Wilkinson, another Member, was a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and the Indians were then giving this country infinite trouble. Mr. Hale, of the same name as the present chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, was the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and the Navy at that time was in greater peril and was doing greater service for the Republic than ever before in history. The members of the Commitee on Naval Affairs during the Spanish war thought that they were busy then. What do they suppose these men were in the days when the greatest conflict in the history of the world was being carried on? It was these men who reported this measure, which Mr. Poston said was fixed up beforehand.

Does that give some explanation, Mr. President, why it was that peculiar language, which it is admitted does not legally bind, was not debated on this floor or even mentioned?

INTERPRETERS IN NEW MEXICO.

Mr. President, I want to break into the current of my argument to say just a word or two concerning statements in the report about Spanish population, interpreters, etc., because I see one or two Senators here who have asked about that. I made very diligent inquiry from very authentic sources since yesterday, and I find, to put it briefly, because I must proceed with rapidity, since my time is limited, that California absorbed and assimilated her population of Spanish extraction; Texas did the same; Colorado did pretty nearly the same, and that in the State of Colorado to-day there are six counties that are called "Spanish counties," in which counties many of the citizens speak the Spanish language, and nothing else. They are the counties of Montezuma, La Plata, Archuleta, Conejos, Costilla, and Las Animas.

I read for the benefit of the Senate also a list of the cities of New Mexico that are altogether or very largely American. They are Roswell, Las Vegas, Raton, Silver City, Carlsbad, Gallup, Albuquerque, Deming, Springer, Clayton, Folsom, Elizabethtown, Socorro, Magdalena, Rincon, Aztec, and Lincoln, and there are several other towns and villages where the population is about equally divided between the two races.

PROSPECT OF JOINT STATEHOOD ALREADY AMERICANIZING NEW MEXICO.

There are twenty-five counties in New Mexico. Of the twenty-five counties of New Mexico, at the present time interpreters are never seen or heard of in the courts of thirteen of those counties. In eight of those counties, where the Spanish population has kept its solidarity by reason of not having the very legislation we are providing in this bill, interpreters are used. In four counties they are sometimes used, and in all of them they are gradually disappearing.

Furthermore, Mr. President, I find that the report of the committee, which is now read with such approval by gentlemen who then resisted it, had very great effect upon the people of New Mexico. I find that since then no interpreter has been used in any territorial convention, and they were used before. I find that the law compelling English to be taught in the schools is now enforced all over the territory. I find, generally, that the prospect of joint statehood with Arizona is arousing those people from their hundred years of isolation and has made them in three years take on more American characteristics than they did in fifty years before.

EVEN IF SO-CALLED "PLEDGE" IS LEGAL IN EFFECT AND FREE FROM FRAUD IN ORIGIN, STILL NO ONE KNEW ABOUT IT.

Now, then, Mr. President, I return to my argument concerning this "pledge," and I wish the attention of every Senator upon whom this specious and unreal objection has made any impression. Suppose it did not have the origin that Poston, its author, said it had. Suppose it was not passed in war times. Suppose that Ben Wade and Hale and everybody else were not giving their time night and day and burning out their lives in taking care of the safety of the Republic. Suppose it was passed in a Congress such as we have now, with alert men, the keen debaters, intent upon the subject.

Suppose it was passed in that way. What then? Is a man to hold another man to a pledge about which he, the pledgee himself, knew nothing at all? Who has gone to the territory of Arizona because he read in the organic act that there were these peculiar words—this so-called "pledge?" Who has made any investments in the territory of Arizona because he had examined the organic acts of the territories of this country and then found that there was peculiar language in the Arizona act, and therefore there was a "pledge" and he would go down there and invest and live?

Is there a Senator here who will insult the intelligence of this body by insisting on that? Every one of us knows that the men who went to Arizona went there for human reasons. They went there because there were mines or other opportunities, or because there was a beautiful climate. They went there because of wealth, they went there because of adventure, and they went there moved by all those motives that inspire human beings everywhere with action; but no man will dare to say that anybody went there or invested there because he had read about this so-called "pledge," and upon this pledge made up his mind to go and cast in his fortunes with this territory.

SO-CALLED "PLEDGE" NEVER HEARD OF UNTIL 1905.

So, as a matter of fact, this Congress is not bound in any way by a "pledge" which, first, is not legal, which, second, was the result of fraud, and which, in the third place, the people in the territory never knew anything about. It has been a year since I asked a man to be produced who would tell me—not make an oath, but simply state to me that he had gone down to Arizona because of this pledge, or that he had even ever heard of it; and the pledge was never heard of until the former Senator from California, Mr. Bard, after a patient research of about two months, of which he told me, finally discovered it; and upon this discovery we have had built up a great moral obligation to people who absolutely knew nothing about it.

PROPOSITION OF SEPARATE VOTE: NOT SEPARATE PEOPLES—ALL AMERICANS.

Now, Mr. President, I come to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], the amendment based upon the proposition that these people are separate people, with separate origin, separate institutions, and separate destiny, and that therefore they ought to vote not at one general, common American election like common fellow-American citizens, but, as I said in opening my remarks, to vote as though they were citizens of foreign nations.

That is based, I believe, upon the idea that a territory is an "entity;" that when it has a legislature and a governor and other territorial officers it becomes an "entity" which Congress can not interfere with except by the consent of the people of that territory, or its legislature, or in some way by its authority.

Of course, Mr. President, that is the introduction of a new and advanced corollary of the old extreme doctrine of states' rights. I believe that in the entire history of this country nobody has ever before suggested such a thing as territorial rights in the sense that the territories were entities like states having territorial rights which could not be interfered with. One brilliant Senator came near it once. One of the greatest intellects that ever graced American public life, fired by his ambition to be on the winning side, Stephen A. Douglas, announced the principle of squatter sovereignty; and that went down, Mr. President, not only in defeat before the ballots of the people, but in defeat upon the field of battle. That is the nearest that has ever been advanced to the idea that a territory is an entity and that it is beyond the power of Congress to interfere with it except with the consent of its people.

TERRITORIAL "ENTITY" A CONTRADICTION IN TERMS.

Now, Mr. President, if this be true, if it is an "entity," if that is the reason they should vote separately, and not some other reason that I will examine in a moment, I wish to ask Senators this question. New Mexico was organized as a territory before and included Arizona. It had a full complement of territorial officers; it had a full legislature; and if a territory is ever an entity it was an entity. Yet in 1863 Congress split off Arizona from New Mexico, without consulting her legislature, her people, her governor, or considering her in any way.

If a territory is an "entity" which Congress can not interfere with except by the consent of the people, then the act of 1863, establishing Arizona, is null and void, because that act destroyed an "entity." How absurd!

If a territory is an "entity," I wish to call the attention of the Senate to some significant facts. I asked the Senator from Colorado yesterday, and I will ask any other Senator the question, whether we have the power to take off one-third of New Mexico and add it to Arizona, and he said he did not question it; whether we have the power to cut off one-half of New Mexico and transfer it to Arizona, and he said he did not question it. If, then, we have the power to destroy two-thirds of an entity, why have we not authority to unite the two "entities?" If we have the power, without consulting the people, to divide one entity into two entities, as was done when New Mexico and Arizona were separated, why have we not the power to reunite those two entities into one, as this act proposes?

SIMILAR INSTANCES CITED.

Let me show what Congress has done. The territory of Utah was formed. It had its legislature; it was a full territory. So was the territory of Arizona formed. Utah had its full territorial government. Yet the Congress of the United States, without consulting the people of the territory, without consulting their legislature even, cut off an entire degree of longitude from the territory of Utah and added it to the state of Nevada.

They asked the consent of the people of Nevada. Why? Because Nevada is a state. They did not ask the consent of the people of Utah. Why? Because Utah was a territory in the United States. They asked the consent of one, because it was an entity. They did not ask the consent of the other, because it was not an entity. If the territory is not an entity, then what becomes of the theory that we must give the people living in separate territories separate rights of voting and not a common right of voting?

Here is an old map of the territory of Arizona soon after its organization. It was duly organized and it was divided into counties. There is Piute County [indicating] and there is Mohave County. Those two counties at that time were embraced in this portion of that territory [indicating]. Yet Congress, without consulting the people of those counties or the people of the territory or anybody else, also added those counties to Nevada. But they consulted the people of Nevada.

I could go on all over this map. For example, a portion of Idaho was taken off and a portion of Utah was taken off again and added to the territory of Wyoming. Congress has three times taken territory from Utah and added it to Wyoming or Nevada or Colorado without consulting the people either of Wyoming or of Utah or Colorado.

The Senator asked the other day whether or not an instance could be cited where two territories or portions of territories had been taken off without the consent of the people and united. Another Senator was debating, and I could not answer. But the history of our country is full of such instances, and this instance here is an example where territory was taken from two territories after a full organization and added to another without the consent of the territories from which the portions were taken or the consent of the territory to which it was added.

BOUNDARY LINES MOVED.

Mr. President, take the case of Idaho. Idaho when admitted to the Union had a large portion of land up there [indicating on the map]. Congress made up its mind that that was not a proper boundary line, and therefore Congress established the present boundary line. Did they submit it to the people of Idaho whether they would accept it? No. But the question was submitted to the people in the remaining portion of the territory of Idaho whether they would come in as a state, and the people who were left out were not consulted at all as to whether they would be left out.

So, Mr. President, not only the legal aspect of the case, not only the reasonable aspect of the case, but the historical aspect of the case absolutely settles that question.

Let us take the boundary line in the organization of Utah at first. The boundary line was the line of the Rocky Mountains, to which I pointed yesterday and about which the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] had some difficulty. It was organized as a full territory. Later on the territory of Colorado was organized. Then, without asking the consent of the people of the territory of Utah, or the consent of the people or the legislature of the territory of Colorado, all that portion of Utah where the line now runs, making one-half of the present state of Colorado, was taken from one and added to the other without the consent of the people of either territory or of their legislatures.

And yet we are told that the language of the Constitution, that for territory or property belonging to the United States "Congress has power to make all needful rules and regulations," is obsolete.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Certainly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator submits a number of cases where territory has been detached from a Territory and united to some other State or Territory. Has he discovered any case where the entire entity has been wiped out by legislation without the consent of the people of the Territory?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Let me add that the Senator cites cases where territory has been taken away and not where the entire political entity has been destroyed, and it seems to me that it is very much like the difference between amputating a man's toe and putting a knife into his heart.

"TERRITORIAL ENTITY"—A NEW DOCTRINE.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. On the entity question I have asked Senators time and again if we did not have the right, if we could take one-third and two-thirds of Arizona, to take the entire territory. A new doctrine is proposed here, a doctrine that a territory is an "entity"— in other words, that it is like a state, with which the Congress of the United States can not interfere.

I say that in the making of the states, the Western states particularly, Congress has continually exercised this power. Take, for instance, the illustration of Oklahoma. Oklahoma, when it was first opened to settlement, was a very small tract of land. The next year Congress gave it a territorial government. Did that make it an entity? A year or two afterwards some more land was added. That made the bizarre boundary line of the present territory. Was the land it inclosed an entity? If so, by what authority was the original entity enlarged without the consent of the entity itself? How could it be diminished without the consent of the entity itself?

CAN FRAUD OR ACCIDENT DETERMINE STATEHOOD.

We have taken land from the territory without its consent and added it to another without its consent, but never from a state. That is a difference between states and territories. States are indestructible entities with whose existence Congress can not interfere. Territories are property "belonging to the United States" over which the Government has absolute authority, and an authority which we have exercised even when affecting the most fundamental and sacred rights of citizens.

Will Senators say, if it be true that Poston is correct and this boundary line was established by fraud, that an entity was created by fraud; that an entity which binds this Nation, which this Nation can not interfere with, was established by fraud? The entity of Oklahoma was established by accident, the accident of settlement and opening of lands for that purpose. Can it be said, therefore, that accident creates an entity which it is beyond the power of the Nation to interfere with; that a situation is created which binds this Nation for all time, which will help to govern this Nation for all time?

WHAT PEOPLE SHALL BE CONSULTED?

Now, that is the legal aspect of this case. What is one of the practical aspects of the case? It is this: Nobody questions the right of Congress to create states out of "territory belonging to the United States." Everybody concedes the right of Congress to do that without the consent of the people if it wishes. But the custom has grown up of consulting the people. What people, Mr. President? ALL the people living within the boundaries of the proposed new state. But here is a proposition, not that all the people living within the boundaries of the new state shall settle their destiny, but that a majority of a small minority living in one portion of the proposed new state shall control the destiny of all.

Mr. President, it looks remarkably fair, plausible, and even winning, to say, Let these people vote separately; and some emphasis is given to that by calling that method the "referendum," which is always an attractive phrase to every man who believes in progressive liberty. But this bill proposes the only true referendum. This bill submits the provisions of the bill itself to the people themselves—to all the people. It does not merely say, Here is one proposition in the bill, vote on that alone and vote separately; but it says, Here are all the propositions in the bill—all of you vote on them at the same election, and not separately.

SO CALLED "REFERENDUM."

Mr. President, if it is right that a minority of the people living in one portion of the proposed state should control all the people living in the whole new state, will Senators tell me why it is that the people living in one of the counties of either one of the territories should not themselves vote separately? If you make a so-called "referendum" for the territories separately, why do you not also do it for the counties separately? It is undeniable and undenied that certain counties of Arizona are in favor, and overwhelmingly in favor, of this joinder. If Arizona should vote alone, why should not a county vote alone? If the majority must control this political "entity," this county in Arizona, then why should not the majority of the whole new State control the minority in Arizona on the question of statehood, assuming that they were for it? Why do you make an "entity" in one instance and deny it in the other instance?

Mr. President, is it right for Congress to say to a people living in a proposed new state, Here are the conditions upon which we invite you into the Union, but you shall not vote on it at one general election? It is not right; and so this bill fixes it that a majority of all the people shall control, not that a minority of the people living in one portion of the proposed new state shall control the will and destinies of the great majority living in the remainder of the state.

NO FAIR ELECTION POSSIBLE IF TERRITORIES VOTE SEPARATELY.

I showed yesterday that there are 21,000 voters in Arizona. There are, perhaps, between three and four hundred thousand white people in both the territories. So if you get by any means a little more than 10,000 votes in Arizona you control the present condition and the entire future destiny of 400,000 people and their descendants. You propose to let 10,000 voters in one portion of this new state fix the relationship for all of the entire 400,000 to the remainder of the 80,000,000 people who live in this Republic. Does that look so fair as it looked when you said, "Don't coerce them. Let them vote separately?"

Mr. President, there are also some other reasons why either one of the amendments offered to permit the people living in the so-called "entities" to vote separately is ill advised. That applies to both amendments, both to the one which proposes that the election for constitutional delegates, as provided in the bill, and that all the provisions of the bill shall be laid before the people separately; and also the last amendment, which provides not that the constitution itself, or the provisions of the bill, or that Congress's proposal to these people shall be laid before them, but only that an abstract question, Will you be joined? shall be laid before them without reference to the conditions of joinder, and laid before them separately.

The objections that I am going to point out of a practical nature are objections to both. There will be opposing this measure when it comes to a vote before the people in any form certain elements, notably in Arizona. I do not know that they are to be blamed for it. Perhaps it is merely human nature. Some of the same elements bitterly assailed the first part of the bill, when the Committee on Territories introduced it into the Senate, uniting Oklahoma and Indian territories. The politicians of those territories were a unit in fierce opposition to the bill.

OFFICE SEEKERS AGAINST THE BILL.

Now, that is true in Arizona, though not so much in New Mexico—already joint statehood is making progress in New Mexico as it did in Oklahoma and Indian territories. There will be simply twice as many offices to fill; there will be twice as many Senators to send, but not twice as many Representatives, because one side of the state has not enough people for one Representative now. There would be twice as many state offices and twice as many commissions. If I had time, I have here a long list of state offices and commissions in various states that I should like to read to the Senate. Therefore there would be twice as many places for ambitious gentlemen to fill if this bill should be defeated as there would be if the bill were not defeated.

So, Mr. President, if these territories were to vote separately—if you do not get the combined vote of the whole people—if you segregate the people or put them more and more in the power and under the influence of men who have personal ambitions to serve. Senators may get indignant at that, but that is the simple truth of human nature.

CATTLE INTERESTS WILL OPPOSE BILL AND WHY.

In the second place, it has appeared that the whole cattle industry of those territories will be organized against this measure. It is useless to say that they do not have influence upon their employees and other people, because they do. They are against it for a very excellent business reason, one which no doubt appeals to them as a perfectly proper reason, to wit: That the grazing lands now feeding and fattening their herds and from which they derive their wealth will largely be taken up by the school grants made by the bill for the benefit of the children of the people of that territory.

TERRITORY RAILROADS WILL FIGHT BILL AND WHY.

Mr. President, in the next place, the railroads of the territory will be absolutely against the bill. If the so-called "referendum," the false referendum, is submitted to the people, all the influence of the railroads in the territory of Arizona or that run through it will be against the bill. Let me read to you a list of roads in Arizona that pay absolutely no taxes. They are, under territorial laws, totally exempt from taxation.

| Name of road. | Date of filing. | Years exempted. |
|---|---|---|
| Phoenix and Eastern | Sept. 14, 1897 | 15 |
| Arizona and California | Sept. 12, 1903 | 10 |
| Prescott and Eastern | Sept. 14, 1897 | 15 |
| Arizona and Utah | Apr. 20, 1899 | 10 |
| Arizona Southern | Sept. 14, 1891 | 20 |
| Santa Fe, Prescott and Phoenix | Mar. 30, 1893 | a 20 |
| Grand Canyon | Sept. 14, 1897 | 15 |
| Bradshaw Mountain | Aug. 16, 1901 | 10 |

a Exemption commencing with year 1891.

This is under the territorial law. Perhaps it ought to be so, but this one thing is pretty sure. If you examine carefully into the history of that territory you will find that they will be exempted just as long as the proprietors of those railroads ask that they shall be exempted.

I shall come in a moment, if time permits, to the report of Governor Kibbey upon the whole pitiful question of taxation in Arizona. I am not making statements outside of the record. I am making statements that are made with much greater vigor, with much greater positiveness, with much greater assurance by Governor Kibbey, of Arizona, himself.

MINING INTERESTS WILL TRY TO DEFEAT BILL, AND WHY.

In the third place, Mr. President, the mines of that territory and the whole mining industry of that territory (and we have heard it repeatedly said that it is the greatest interest in the whole territory) will be against the bill when it comes before the people, as they have been against the bill from the time it was proposed here two years and a half ago. I presented a statement yesterday to the Senate made before the House committee, from the manager of the Copper Queen Mine, showing that that mine alone employs 10,000 people, most of them in Arizona, and that one-tenth of the entire population of Arizona is employed in that company's enterprises.

Now, let us see what the mining situation is. I hold in my hand the Copper Handbook. It is a standard authority upon the subject of copper production and copper mines in the United States and, I believe, in the world. I will read from it concerning three or four mines. On page 794 it appears that the United Verde mines produce and refine of pounds of copper, and I run down here—this is the last year—43,995,932 pounds. The net value of dividends paid was $4,495,932, in 1900. Its capitalization upon those dividends at 5 per cent is $89,918,640, and yet it is assessed for taxation at only $895,425, including its plant and machinery, and its plant and machinery alone are said to be worth $2,000,000 or $3,000,000.

OUTPUT, VALUE, AND ASSESSMENTS OF ARIZONA COPPER MINES.

Now, Mr. President, let us go to the Copper Queen. I have the report for several years, but I will give the last year's production from the Copper Hand Book, page 884. Its production in 1904 was 58,605,000 pounds. The value at the current price of copper was $6,000,000. A capitalization of 5 per cent is $120,000,000. Yet that mine is assessed for taxation at $56,513.50.

The Calumet and Arizona Mining Company produced 31,634,895 pounds of copper. Its value at the current price is $3,000,000. Its capitalization at 5 per cent is $60,000,000. It pays taxes on $67,719.

I have here a long list of the last year where there is data (1904) and the assessed valuation for the last year—1905. Perhaps I had better put them in as a table. They are all authentic; they are not on rumor. They are taken from standard authority and from the records of taxation.

REAL VALUE AND ASSESSED VALUE OF ARIZONA MINING PROPERTIES.[a]

| Name. | Production (pounds refined copper). | Net value annual dividends. | Value if capitalized at 5 per cent of output. | Value as assessed for taxation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| United Verde Mines | 43,995,932 | $4,498,680 | $89,973,600 | $895,425.00 |
| Copper Queen Mining Co | 58,605,000 | 6,000,000 | 120,000,000 | 56,513.50 |
| Calumet and Arizona Copper Co | 31,634,895 | 3,000,000 | 60,000,000 | 67,719.00 |
| Imperial Copper Co | 3,030,632 | 300,000 | 6,000,000 | 75,000.00 |

a Stevens's Handbook on Copper.

Of course, Mr. President, these are not all even of the larger of the copper mines of Arizona. There are many others, but the above will do as illustration. As I have said, this does not include the gold mines, for which I have not been able to find any standard authority. But this undertaxation, or rather failure of taxation, applies to all the mining interests of the territory. In other words, while the mining companies are taking from Arizona its chief source of wealth they are not helping to bear their just share of the burdens of taxation.

I ought to repeat again that the above estimate of their value is merely a calculation based upon their actual annual products; and these estimates are much below what common report says the value of these mines is. For example, it is the universal belief, sustained by the opinion of well-informed men, that the United Verde mine is worth $150,000,000; yet, as I have shown, it pays taxes on less than $1,000,000; that the Copper Queen mine, with its associate properties, is worth $200,000,000, and so on.

GOLD MINES AND TOTAL MINING OUTPUT AND ASSESSMENTS.

It is also common report that the Congress gold mine is worth, at a low estimate, $5,000,000; but of course I can not give that authoritatively or even as an estimate, yet the Congress mine is assessed for taxation at only about $112,000. The Congress mine is a gold mine, and this proportion is true of other gold mines of the territory.

For several years last past the bullion production of Arizona has almost equaled the entire tax return of the Territory. Last year the bullion production of Arizona, including copper and other metals, amounted to about $43,000,000. That was almost as much as the entire tax returns, which was put at about forty-eight millions. In the entire tax returns of Arizona all the property in the whole territory was put in at about only $48,000,000.

Governor Kibbey, in desperation, endeavored to get the mines taxed at something like a reasonable figure and had to remove arbitrarily one of the members of the board of equalization in order to have that done. The board then raised the tax returns of the territory up to $57,000,000, the raise being almost entirely upon mining property, but the supreme court of the territory, to which the question was carried by the mine owners, reversed the action of the board of equalization and reduced the tax assessment of the territory back to forty-eight millions.

PROPERTY AND TAXATION IN TERRITORIES; PEOPLE OPPOSED, CORPORATIONS ESCAPE.

It is said on reliable authority that Arizona possesses, subjects of taxation, more than $400,000,000 worth of property, and yet returns less than fifty millions' worth on the tax list. The railroads are worth about $70,000,000 and are returned for less than seven millions. In New Mexico, at a moderate valuation, the property of the territory has been calculated to be of a value of $350,000,000, yet but forty millions are on the tax list. The railroads in New Mexico are valued by the Secretary of the Interior at $90,000,000, but are on the tax rolls at eight and one-half millions.

I can not tell what the gold mines are worth because I have not a gold-mine handbook. I do not know the value of the Tombstone mines and Congress mine, but this is true all over the country. That is the condition which Governor Kibbey attacks so bitterly, because the people themselves are beginning to complain of the conditions that exist there.

OUTPUT TAX ON MINE PRODUCTS, LIKE THAT OF MINING STATES, DEFEATED IN ARIZONA.

Mr. President, for years down there—and I speak again by the record—there has been an attempt to have an output tax on the product of the mines, but it has never succeeded. I have a letter here, which I find I am not going to have time to read, from a man of eminence and authority and reliability in that territory, who tells me how it was defeated the last time in the legislature. Please remember that in these two territories the upper house consists of only twelve members, and seven are a majority.

Now, Mr. President, in the state of Montana, in the state of Nevada, in the state of Colorado, and nearly every mining state there is an output-tax law which does not oppress the mine owners.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I would not oppress them any more than I would excuse them from paying their just share of the taxes. I will hear the Senator from Montana.

Mr. CARTER. The Senator is dealing with a very interesting question in all the world—that is, the question of taxation. To the end that he may advise the Senate as to the basis of mining operations, I wish to make a brief explanation. In the state of Colorado——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. If the Senator is to take a long time, I will ask unanimous consent that it be not taken out of my time, as I am limited now.

Mr. CARTER. I will take less than two minutes, if the Senator will yield.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. All right.

Mr. CARTER. In all the mining states the mines are assessed at the Government price of the land primarily—that is, $5 per acre is the valuation. The assessments upon the output are properly attached to the net, and not the gross. We have mines in the Rocky Mountain country yielding millions of dollars per annum and yet being run at a loss. Therefore I suggest to the Senator, in the course of his analyses, that he differentiate between the gross and the net income, because if the gross income of the mine should be assessed all the mining ventures of the country would be ruined by taxation.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Nobody claims anything different, but does not the Senator think that the mining law upon the net output in his own state is a good law, that the one in California is, that the one in Colorado is, and those in other states are? Nobody insists upon anybody else paying more taxes than he ought, but everybody insists that he ought to pay as much as he should. I have not a bit of objection to wealth in any form; but I do not want it to escape its just burdens any more than I would ever consent that any unjust burdens should be laid upon it. I would fight as earnestly to defend any form of capital engaged in honest enterprise from unjust assaults upon it, which would make it pay more than its fair share of the public burdens, just as much as I would insist that it should pay its full share.

RAILROADS WOULD PAY MORE TAXES UNDER JOINT STATEHOOD.

Now, Mr. President, in the case of the Santa Fe road, we, of course, all know that there is a flat rate of $175 a mile. I have figures, which I intend to present, as to the mortgage indebtedness of that road, the basis upon which modern states make up their tax returns, which show that it ought to pay vastly more and that this $175 is little less than robbery of the people. If they paid their just taxes, all the roads of the territories would have to pay, perhaps, $2,000,000 a year, under a state government, more than they pay now.

The question will be put, If that is true under a territorial government, would it not be true under a state government? If they have influence upon their laborers under a territorial government, will they not have the same influence under a state government? Yes; if it is a single state. And so we see that the very men who three years ago were most earnestly urging the admission of Arizona as a separate state, are now resisting its admission as a joint state, and, in some instances, declaring that they do not want it to be a state at all. Some of the men who three years ago were insisting to me that Arizona ought to be made a state by itself have for the last three months been insisting to me that it ought not to be made a state at all.

JOINT STATEHOOD CORRECTS UNJUST TAXATION.

If, on the other hand, the question is put to me: Well, if that is true of the single state, how will it be remedied by making a double state? I answer, this is how it will be remedied: There is a great deal of difference between 400,000 people engaged in various industries, interwoven with each other, and scattered over a vast area of country, than when there are a few people congested in small towns and depending upon one industry. Where one industry dominates a community, it is easy for that industry to influence elections; but when you scatter 400,000 people over a territory where it is not easy to reach them, where some are grazers, where some are agriculturists, where some are miners, where some are lumbermen, where some are engaged in other industries, where they are not very accessible, as is the case in Texas, you find them less subject to the influence of any interest or industry. That is plain on the face of it. So it happens, Mr. President, that in the case of the state of Texas, it is perhaps the best governed state in this Union in respect to its control of its industrial affairs.

Therefore, it is not fair to submit this proposition to a vote of the people of each territory, because they would be subject to the earnest efforts of the most powerful interests in that territory, and among them are the most powerful interests in all this country. That is not what produces a fair election. The mammoth mining interests in Arizona, taking hundreds of millions from the territory and paying little taxes; the mighty railroad interests paying scarcely any taxes; the cattle and lumber interests; the politicians, and every element that influences elections, will do all they can to influence the necessary 10,000 votes in Arizona against joint statehood. And so no fair election could be had. Of course I am speaking always of proper influencing.

SEPARATE ELECTION ON ABSTRACT QUESTION NO ELECTION AT ALL.

But suppose that that were not true. The last amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio was not drawn by the Senator, as he said the other day. I know perfectly well by whom it was drawn. But no matter; the question is, What is the effect of that? It is not necessary to go into a question of what the purpose is; the question is, What is the effect of the amendment which the Senator last presented?

Last year this proposition was that when this constitution was submitted to the people, when they elected delegates to a constitutional convention—in other words, when the provisions of this bill, when the conditions upon which Congress made its invitation to them to come into the Union were presented to them—that they should vote separately. That was the proposition then. Now the proposition is, not that they shall do that, not that they shall vote for delegates to a constitutional convention, not that they shall consider the propositions of this bill, but that at a special election, held before the other elections, they shall vote upon the sole, abstract proposition, Shall we be joined? and that upon that they shall vote as if they are separate peoples.

How would such a plan get anybody to the polls, except those whom certain men wanted to get to the polls? It has no human elements to get people out to vote. Nearly every man in this Chamber, or all the men in this Chamber, have had practical experience in politics, and we know that it takes the machinery of the party; we know that it takes all the enthusiasm of candidates upon opposite tickets, contending for the mastery; we know that it takes literature and everything else to finally get votes to the polls, even in our most earnest state and Presidential elections. But where a mere abstract proposition is presented to the people, without any of the human elements that ordinarily accompany an election, how is it to be expected that people in the short space that will be given by this amendment will ever get to the polls? They will not. We know perfectly well they will not.

LET THE PEOPLE VOTE ON THE BILL ITSELF; DO NOT TRY TO KEEP THE CONDITIONS OF THE BILL FROM THE PEOPLE.

No such proposition was ever before submitted—and I have looked the matter up—since this Government was founded. When we were proposing to admit other territories as states the question never has been put to the people, Will you come in as a state? Always there was an enabling act passed, or the people passed upon a constitution which they themselves had drawn. Always they were considering, not only the abstract question as to whether they would come in as a state, but also the grounds, the conditions, and the provisions under which they were to come in as a state. Why is an exception now made? Why is a mere abstract proposition put to them while the benefits of the bill and its defects are not to be considered or presented to the people?

Now, how are those people to get to the polls? That is another thing of practical importance. This election is put so that it will surely fall just in the hot season. It appears by the testimony taken before the committee that at that time nearly half of the people of Arizona—all the people in prosperous circumstances—are away at the seashore over near Los Angeles or San Diego, or some place of that kind; and a great many of the people of New Mexico go away also. So that here are practical difficulties in the way of the proposed amendment.

No matter what the intention was—and the Senator's intention in introducing the amendment was of the highest and best; I say nothing about the intention of the men who drew it—Mr. Hurd and Mr. Goodrich—but the fact is undeniable that the news of this election would not get to half the people of those territories, and in New Mexico, in my judgment, not to a third of them.

THE PLAN WILL DEFEAT ANY REAL ELECTION.

We are presenting here a grave question which is to affect the whole American people, and yet it is not only proposed that the people shall vote separately, as if they were "entitles"—something never heard of before in the whole history of the American Republic—but it is actually proposed that they shall vote upon an abstract proposition of which they will know nothing. How will they know it? There will be no political parties to present it to them; there will be no candidates to present it to them; there will be none of the usual machinery by which issues get to the people.

ARIZONA THE GREAT A FUTURE CERTAINTY.

Now, Mr. President, I have about concluded. Twice this measure has come to us from the House of Representatives, the direct agents of the American people. Your Committee on Territories are rejoiced to find that that portion of the bill reuniting Oklahoma and Indian territory which three years ago we reported amidst such a cannonade of disfavor has now won such general acceptance. We believed then, Mr. President, that it would win, and it did win, over politicians and interests—won the approval of the people and Congress and the Nation; and just as surely as we then believed joint statehood for these two territories would win, we now believe that immediately or ultimately there will come the triumph of that portion of the bill reuniting New Mexico and Arizona about which now the battle rages.

The thought has been planted in the minds of the people; the cause has been started, and no power on earth can ever permanently turn back the wheels of a cause. No, Mr. President, it may be defeated now; but if it should be, it will confront us again next year with greater power, like another Antæus, gathering additional strength with every fresh overthrow.

Finally, Mr. President, when the greater Arizona of this bill shall have had statehood conferred upon it, every Senator who by his vote helps to bring about that blessed and happy consummation will be prouder of that vote than of any act of his entire Senatorial life. Yes, Mr. President, statehood for Arizona and New Mexico reunited is inevitable, now or soon; and when finally this Arizona the Great shall take its place among the "seats of the mighty," with its grand resources, its splendid people, its glorious and ever brightening destiny, it will be forever one of the noblest of the American states.

THE PROGRESS OF A CAUSE.

As joint statehood for Oklahoma and Indian Territory won its way against interests and influences and machines, so, ultimately, joint statehood for Arizona and New Mexico will win its way in spite of like interests and influences. The committee of which I am chairman originated the idea of joint statehood for Oklahoma and Indian territory. Everybody says everybody is for that part of the bill now. Yes, Mr. President, I have observed that it is easy to be for a measure after it has won. But when the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], on behalf of our committee, reported the bill to unite Oklahoma and Indian Territory three years ago nobody was for it. It was resisted with a fierceness that made men gasp—resisted by some who now say that "everybody is for it."

So, Mr. President, will it finally be with joint statehood for New Mexico and Arizona; so will it finally be with Arizona the Great. For remember, you who now resist, that the thought, the idea, has been planted in the minds of the people and you can not prevent its growth. You fight the very processes of nature, and in the end you can not win. You can not stifle an idea by preventing the people from voting on it. The interests in those Territories may succeed for a time, but the people will succeed in the final reckoning; and Arizona the Great will break her chains and rise in her majesty and strength to protect and bless her children.

ORIGIN OF ARIZONA THE GREAT.

The idea of Arizona the Great—of joint statehood for Arizona and New Mexico—like most great measures of statesmanship, did not originate with any one mind. No! Like most great measures of statesmanship, it was the composite result of the thought of many minds, and those the ablest minds in the legislative world—the oldest, wisest, most experienced men in legislative life. The Committee on Territories accepted it, and every hour of our almost constant study of this measure for the last two years has strengthened our belief and conviction in its wisdom and in its justice.

What more, Mr. President! This—it has come to us, not once but twice, from the House, which, I repeat, is the direct agent of the American people. Twice it has had the approval of the most popular President who has sat in the seat of Washington since Washington's day—the last time with the emphasis of a formal and emphatic recommendation in his message—and now it has grown into a great national policy, and that policy is just as sure of realization in the end as the progress of the Republic itself.

THE GOOD OF THE NATION.

For a long time the Committee on Territories has borne the battle, in the front of which circumstances have placed us. We have borne it with patience and fortitude and courage and an increasing pleasure, born of our faith in its wisdom and in its righteousness. Always in considering it we have thought of the nation and what was just to and best for it; we have thought of the whole American people and what was just to and best for them; aye, and we have thought of the people of the territories themselves and what was best and just for them. For, Mr. President, every member of the Committee on Territories is the earnest friend of the people of these territories and holds the people of these territories in his heart's affections as dear as the people of the states who send us here.

Ah, Mr. President, we heard much said about sectionalism, about rivers and mountains separating the American people into sections. The American spirit is not divided by mountains; it is not divided by rivers or divided by lakes; but that spirit of American brotherhood which bids every American, wherever he may be, to be the friend and brother of every other American, exists all through the Republic, and that is the spirit which inspires the Committee on Territories.

Mr. President, thinking of the nation and its good, we approve this bill; thinking of the nation and its good, we ask this Senate to ratify this measure as recommended by the most typical of American Presidents and as it came to us twice from the House of Representatives, that body which, in our scheme of government, is the direct and immediate representative of the people. [Applause in the galleries.]

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that applause is not permitted in the galleries under the rules of the Senate.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, it is only two or three minutes till the Senate must adjourn, but I take the floor in order that when the debate under the ten-minute rule begins I may have an opportunity to address the Senate. I will make a motion to adjourn now, or a minute later, just as Senators may prefer.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish to call the Senator's attention to the fact that debate under the ten-minute rule begins after the morning business, not at 12 o'clock.

Mr. FORAKER. I understand that it begins after the morning business, but I want to say a word, however, so that I may be started in the remarks which I desire to submit.

If there be anything unusual in the amendment I have offered and upon which the Senator from Indiana has been speaking, it is due to the fact that the proposition which the Senator advocates is itself unusual. Never before in the history of this Government, from the time our Constitution was adopted down until this moment, has there been a proposition made in the creation of a new State to join together two Territories without regard to whether they desired to be joined; and, Mr. President, never before in the history of this Government down until this moment has a proposition been presented in Congress to admit to statehood in this Union a Territory that had not first applied for admission.

Of those propositions I will speak when I again get the floor. It is time now for me to make the motion that has been suggested, and I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, March 9, 1906, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, March 8, 1906.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY D. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

COLVILLE INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate concurrent resolution No. 14.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Washington asks for the present consideration of the Senate concurrent resolution No. 14, from the Speaker's table, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of the Senate be authorized in the enrollment of the bill (S. 4229) "to authorize the sale and disposition of surplus or unallotted lands of the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes," to change the words "section seven" to "section six" where they occur in line 40, page 3, of the enrolled bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

CONSULATES IN THE ORIENT.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Affairs to report House resolution No. 348, with amendment, which the committee recommends be adopted as amended.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and is hereby, directed to send to the House of Representatives, for its information, reports made to the Department of State, or to the President of the United States, by Herbert H. D. Peirce, Third Assistant Secretary of State, as a result of his inspection of United States consulates in the Orient, and especially in Shanghai and in other Chinese cities.

The amendment recommended by the Committee on Foreign Affairs was read by the Clerk, as follows:

In line 2 strike out the word "directed" and insert the words "requested, if not incompatible with the public welfare."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

WESTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF TEXAS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 6977, with Senate amendment, of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act to create a new division of the western judicial district of Texas and to provide for terms of court at Del Rio, Tex., and for a clerk for said court, and for other purposes.

The Senate amendments were also read.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The question was taken, and the Senate amendments were agreed to.

SPECIAL EMPLOYEES.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote by which House resolution No. 145 was passed.

Mr. TALBOTT. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from West Virginia moves to reconsider the vote by which House resolution No. 145 was passed. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The resolution was read, as follows:

House resolution 145.

Resolved, That hereafter Arthur Lucas, L. W. Pulles, Robert Coates, and Albert Scott, "cloak-room men" in charge of the Republican and Democratic cloak rooms, House of Representatives, shall be classified as skilled laborers and their compensation shall be at the rate of $840 each per annum.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the House, to Arthur Lucas, L. W. Pulles, Robert Coates, and Albert Scott, respectively, the difference between their pay as "cloak-room men," at the rate of $60 per month, and the rate of $70 per month each as skilled laborers during the remainder of the present Congress, and the Committee on Appropriations is hereby authorized to provide, in one of the general appropriation bills, for said increase from and after the adjournment of the first session of the Fifty-ninth Congress.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from West Virginia entered a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to. He now calls up that motion, and the gentleman from Maryland moves to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is in doubt; but it seems to the Chair that the noes have it.

Mr. TALBOTT. Division!

The affirmative vote was counted.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, can we not have the question again stated?

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Chair will again state the question. The gentleman from West Virginia entered a motion some days ago, under the rule, to reconsider the vote by which the resolution which was reported at the Clerk's desk was agreed to by the House. He calls up that motion to reconsider for disposition this morning, and the gentleman from Maryland moves to lay that motion upon the table.

Mr. FULLER. And the vote to lay it on the table approves the resolution as adopted?

The SPEAKER. It will stand as agreed to.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, can not some arrangement be made by unanimous consent for ten minutes' debate to explain this resolution? I ask unanimous consent that there be ten minutes on a side given to explain the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that there be ten minutes' debate before the motion to lay on the table is submitted. Is there objection?

Mr. TALBOTT. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland demands the regular order.

The negative vote was taken.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, let me change my vote.

The SPEAKER. It is so close, the Chair will ask the House to divide again.

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 96, noes 41.

So the motion to lay the motion to reconsider on the table was agreed to.

ST. ELIZABETH'S INSANE ASYLUM.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following bill:

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 15643) to authorize the board of visitors of the Government Hospital for the Insane to summon and examine witnesses under oath, and making it a misdemeanor for any such witness to refuse to attend or testify or produce books and papers when summoned.

Be it enacted, etc., That the board of visitors of the Government Hospital for the Insane shall, as a part of the supervision now required of them by law, have power to make such public investigations from time to time as shall, in their judgment, be necessary for the ascertainment and correction of abuses and for the general well-being of the patients and the efficient and economical administration of the hospital in all its branches; and to that end the board of visitors are hereby empowered to summon witnesses and examine them under oath, such oath to be administered by the secretary of the board or any member thereof; and any witness who shall knowingly and willfully swear falsely as to any matter involved in any such investigation shall be deemed guilty of perjury, as defined by section 5392 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and on conviction thereof shall be punished as prescribed by said section; and any witness who shall refuse to attend any such investigation in obedience to a summons signed by the secretary of the board of visitors, or any member thereof, or who, being in attendance, shall refuse to testify or to produce any books or papers relating to any matter under investigation shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment for not more than sixty days, or by both; and the fees and allowances of such witnesses shall be the same as are allowed witnesses attending on the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and when certified to by the president or other member of the board shall be paid by the superintendent as part of the general expenses of the hospital and credited as such in his accounts at the Treasury.

SEC. 2. That whenever a witness summoned as aforesaid refuses to attend or testify or produce books or papers it shall be the duty of the board of visitors to certify such refusal to the district attorney for the District of Columbia, whose duty it shall be to bring the matter before the grand jury for their action, and if an indictment be found he shall prosecute the same with expedition.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. GROSVENOR. If I can have order I will explain the bill. Mr. Speaker, the bill comes from the Committee on the Judiciary, with a unanimous report in its favor.

Mr. CLAYTON. Reserving the right to object, I desire to ask the gentleman some questions.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I will state first what the purpose of the bill is in a very few words, if the gentleman desires. Some days ago a very severe attack was made upon the management of the lunatic asylum over on the other side of the river, and a publication made in the newspapers, and made in the form of a pamphlet, which appears emanated from some medico society—I do not know what it was—and thereupon the board of visitors, which corresponds to our board of trustees of benevolent institutions generally, undertook to ascertain what there was is the charges that were published; and they requested these people to come forward and testify. They notified them, but they would not come; they utterly refused to come and bring the papers or anything of the kind. Thereupon the board of visitors procured the district attorney to draw up this bill, and the bill was brought here to introduce. I have no possible interest in it, and if the gentleman from Alabama is opposed to the bill, the bill can be withdrawn without a word. Some of the witnesses are disappearing and the evidence is being gotten rid of, and the board is anxious to proceed as rapidly as possible and try to ascertain whether there is anything wrong in that institution.

Mr. CLAYTON. The report of the committee has not yet been printed?

Mr. GROSVENOR. No.

Mr. CLAYTON. I think the report ought to be printed and before us so that the House may have some information. As the House knows, very infrequently a matter comes from a committee upon an ex parte representation, on an examination which was not full and complete; and in this case I am inclined to the opinion that as a thorough investigation into the merits of this bill ought to be made, and at any rate the report ought to be printed, and therefore I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama objects.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I withdraw the bill, and so far as I am concerned it will never come up again.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN. I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 15331, the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. CURRIER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk (proceeding with the reading of the bill) read as follows:

That no part of the moneys herein appropriated for fulfilling treaty stipulations shall be available or expended unless expended without regard to the attendance of any beneficiary at any school other than a Government school.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by adding at the end of line 17, page 2, the following:

"Provided, That in the administration and disbursement of funds held in trust for the Indian tribes by the United States that part of the act of June 7, 1897 (30 Stat., p. 79), which provides 'and it is hereby declared to be the settled policy of the Government to hereafter make no appropriation whatever for education in any sectarian school,' shall apply to any trust fund or interest thereon held by this Government for the benefit of any Indian tribes by the United States, and no such trust funds nor any moneys appropriated by Congress shall be expended or used for the education or support of Indian children in any sectarian or denominational school."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order against that amendment that it is clearly legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chiar will hear the gentleman from Texas on the point of order.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to say that this is only a limitation on this appropriation and it construes existing law. The law in question is the act of Congress approved June 10, 1896, providing as follows:

And it is hereby declared to be the settled policy of the Government to hereafter make no appropriation whatever for education in any sectarian schools.

The reason of this amendment is that recently the Government, in violation of this law, in my judgment, has used $102,000 of trust funds belonging to the Indians, a fund in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians, and out of that $102,000 the sum of $98,000 went to the Catholic Church and $4,000 to the Lutheran Church. In my judgment this is a violation of the act that I have just read.

In the pending bill we find the provision which has just been read by the Clerk. It is as follows:

That no part of the moneys herein appropriated for fulfilling these stipulations shall be available or expended unless expended without regard to the attendance of any beneficiary at any school other than a Government school.

It is difficult to understand the exact meaning of this language, but I do know that under this language trust funds belonging to the Indians have been used; and this being so, the appropriations that we are now making should be limited and defined. We have a plain provision of law here reciting that since 1896 it has been the settled policy of this Government to make no appropriation whatever for education in any sectarian school. Now, these funds are used by the President, or through his direction, as I understand, for sectarian schools, and I desire to limit this bill so as to prevent the use of these trust funds, which in my judgment is unlawful. That is the object of offering this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment I offer is only declaratory of the law as it is now, and I believe that when the Secretary of the Interior pays out or permits these trust funds to be paid out to sectarian schools the act of Congress approved June 10, 1896, which provides as follows—has been plainly violated, and my amendment would only carry out the policy of this law and prevent the use of these Indian trust funds to support sectarian schools. The following protests from missionaries to the Indians, the Indian Rights Association, and other well-known men fully set forth the reasons why these trust funds should not be used in sectarian schools. These protests are as follows, viz:

And it is hereby declared to be the settled policy of the Government to hereafter make no appropriation whatever for education in any sectarian school.

DECEMBER 9, 1905.

The undersigned, whose occupations are given after their names, hereby most earnestly and respectfully present their petition against the use of Indian tribal funds of any kind whatsoever, by contract or otherwise, for the purpose of conducting denominational schools:

First. Because petitions for contracts, purporting to be signed by Indians, are generally obtained by misunderstanding, if not by fraud. Everyone who resides in the Indian country knows this to be the fact.

Second. Because such action will engender struggle and strife in the Indian country between heathen Indians and Christian Indians and between different denominations of Christians.

Third. Because all the religious bodies in the country, with the exception of one or two, have formally expressed their disapprobation of such contracts, on the ground that such contracts were contrary to the spirit of our institutions and the mind of the American people. These religious bodies could not consistently ask for such contracts, and it would be contrary to the spirit of our Government to show favoritism to the one or two religious bodies who would be willing to seek such pecuniary favors.

William H. Hare, for over thirty-two years missionary bishop of the Episcopal Church among the Indians of South Dakota; Wm. J. Cleveland, for over thirty-two years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians of South Dakota; Isaac H. Turtle, an Indian, for twenty-two years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Joseph Marshall, an Indian, for ten years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Percy I. Phillips, an Indian, for six years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Aaron B. Clark, for sixteen years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Dallas Shaw, an Indian, for seven years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Amos Ross, an Indian clergyman, for twenty-seven years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; John Robinson, for over thirty-three years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Victor Renville, an Indian, for ten years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; John Flockhart, for three years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; Joseph Goodteacher, an Indian, for seven years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; B. P. Lambert, an Indian, for twelve years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians; William Holmes, an Indian, for twelve years a missionary of the Episcopal Church among the Indians.

---

AGENCY OF THE INDIAN RIGHTS ASSOCIATION,
Washington, D. C., February 27, 1906.

Hon. JOHN H. STEPHENS,
House of Representatives.

SIR: The honorable Commissioner of Indian Affairs holds that—

"Indian trust funds consist of money belonging to the Indian tribes, derived from the purchase or sale of their lands and held in the Treasury of the United States as trustee, in which they have the vested right and on which interest accrues by operation of law."

Treaty funds may be denominated those funds the principal of which is not deposited in the Treasury and for which an annual appropriation is made. The annual report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs (1904, p. 535) shows the aggregate of Indian trust funds held by the United States to be $35,690,878.46, the annual interest thereon amounting to $1,762,412.16.

In carrying out the authority granted by the President's letter of February 3, 1905, it was decided that the expenses incurred for maintaining Government schools should first be deducted from the aggregate of tribal funds applicable therefor and a pro rata division struck of the balance, such shares to be available for denominational schools if desired by individual Indians. Objection being made to this plan, it was finally determined to permit of such pro rata division of the whole fund, so that now whatever portion of the trust funds is used for support of the Government schools it will be taken out of the balance remaining of such trust funds after deducting the pro rata shares of the Indians who desire that their funds may be used for a certain denominational school. Since the schools provided by the Government for Indians can with propriety be likened to public schools, it will be seen that the present plan is antagonistic to the principle involved in our public school system, which requires that the whole population should contribute to the support of such schools.

The plan determined upon works a hardship upon those Indians entitled to share in the trust funds who are content to have their children educated in the Government schools, by reason of their bearing the full burden of expense deducted from the trust fund, which is thus borne by a portion of the tribe instead of the whole membership.

The burden of the Indians patronizing the Government schools is further increased from the fact that the children heretofore attending the denominational schools were supported wholly by the particular denomination controlling such schools, while now these schools will receive for this class of pupils a pro rata share of tribal funds.

As has been tersely stated by Rev. Lyman Abbott in the Outlook, this is "a policy which is un-American, which is in direct contravention of the constitutional provisions of many of our States, which violates the spirit of the Constitution of the United States, and introduces sectarian strife among the Indians by setting Protestant and Roman Catholic Indians signing antogonistic petitions."

Many of the Indians are objecting to the plan of deducting pro rata shares before the expenses for continuing the Government schools is taken out of the tribal funds.

Whether or not the same policy will be continued after the present fiscal year is uncertain. In the meantime Congress should take decisive action and settle the controversy.

Very truly,

S. M. BROSIUS,
Agent Indian Rights Association.

---

At a meeting of the Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate, during the past year, S. M. Brosius, agent of the Indian Rights Association, said:

"A statement has been made to me by an honorable Senator, which will be amplified before the Committee on Indian Affairs if requested, to the effect that a Mr. Scharf, a representative Catholic, submitted a table of twenty close Congressional districts, with the alleged Catholic vote in each, and a written proposal to deliver the necessary votes to carry those districts that might be selected by the Republicans if the appropriations for Catholic Indian schools to the amount of $200,000 were continued for two years longer. Even threats were made by this Mr. Scharf that the defeat of certain Congressmen would be brought about unless opposition to sectarian appropriations was withdrawn.

"I will state further that a Member of the House of Representatives, who was opposing legislation which provided for support of Indian contract schools from Government funds, was approached by the same Mr. Scharf, and threatened that if he did not withdraw his opposition to the legislation that he (Mr. Scharf) would see to it that the Catholic Church organization would defeat him at the next election. I am authorized to make this statement to this committee, and the Member referred to is Hon. JOHN H. STEPHENS, of Texas."

Hon. A. J. Bard, of California, thereupon said that he was the Senator to whom Professor Scharf made the statement, and he added:

"I believe, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, that it is a very dangerous thing to let such a matter go by unnoticed, and I therefore feel that it is my duty to make this statement before this executive session of the committee. I made a memorandum soon afterwards, so that I refer to that now; I am not trusting my memory at all with reference to it. I have tabulated statements here showing some twenty districts in the United States, and the names of the Members representing such districts, the total Catholic population in each district, and the total Catholic vote.

"Mr. Scharf called on me and stated that he was authorized by his church authorities to offer a proposition to the Republican leaders in Congress to this effect: That he would guarantee these twenty weak Congressional districts to go Republican the next election provided Congress gave to the Roman Catholic schools an appropriation for two years, each of $200,000. These statements which I am referring to were handed to me by Mr. E. L. Scharf at the Hotel Normandie on the evening of March 20, 1902. But let me refer to a written memorandum referring to the matter which I made on the following day. Mr. Scharf at that time delivered to me a letter from Bishop Montgomery, dated March 5, 1902, relating to the appropriations for the Catholic Indian schools. The first tabulated statement was exhibited to me several weeks before by Mr. Scharf, he stating at that time that for a year or more he had been employed to go through the country and get together the statistics therein shown; that he was authorized to propose to the Republicans in Congress that if the appropriation for the Catholic Indian schools shall be continued for two years the church would guarantee that during that period the Congressional districts named would be carried by the Republicans.

"He assured me over and over again that the church was able to secure such results. In his interview on the evening of March 20 he again reiterated the statement that the Roman Catholics could always command a sufficient number of Catholic votes to carry any measure or elect any man when they were informed by the authorities of the church that such a result would be for the benefit of the church. He further stated that arrangements had already been arrived at by which the reelection of the Member of Congress from one of the districts in California would be assured, and that he had, in pursuance of his promises to this gentleman, written to the Roman Catholic clergymen in the various counties comprising that district.

"These papers were delivered to me by Mr. Scharf at my request for the purpose, as I explained at the time, of making copies thereof, the originals to be returned to Mr. Scharf at 1531 I street NW., Washington, D. C."

Following this exposure of Professor Scharf's activity along political lines came a prompt "denial" from Cardinal Gibbons, who, under date of February 1, 1905, declared that Professor Scharf "is not an agent of the Catholic Church or of the bureau of Catholic Indian missions, and has never been employed by the church or by the Catholic Indian bureau in any way whatever."

Yet in the report of the "director of the bureau of Catholic Indian missions for 1903–4" is the following paragraph at the close of that document:

"AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

"The bureau is indebted to Prof. E. L. Scharf, of Washington, D. C., for very valuable services which he rendered the cause of the Catholic Indian schools."

Evidently, if Professor Scharf was never "employed" by the bureau of Catholic Indian missions, he was no stranger to its officers.

Notwithstanding the repudiation by Cardinal Gibbons, Mr. Scharf contemplates a resumption of his activities. In the New York Evening Post of October 9, 1905, appeared a Washington dispatch—which, so far as we know, has not been contradicted—as follows:

"Prof. E. L. Scharf, the so-called Catholic lobbyist, whose activities last winter in connection with the diversion of Indian trust funds to sectarian schools attracted so much attention, is in town again to look to the interest of his church and the legislation that will be considered this winter. He was at the White House this forenoon. Afterwards he told some correspondents on the steps of the Executive Office that he had seen the President and that Mr. Roosevelt had not changed his attitude, and still favored the use of tribal funds for the support of Catholic schools on the reservations. Scharf talked with the utmost frankness.

"'You know,' he said, 'that last winter the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs inserted in the Indian appropriation bill an amendment providing that no portion of the Indian trust or tribal funds held by the United States for the benefit of any tribe should be expended for the support of any sectarian or denominational school. The bill passed the Senate in this form, but we knocked it out in conference, and the President's original order still holds. Though these moneys had been so used for several years, when the Democratic Administration came into power in 1892, though it had been elected by Catholic votes, the appropriation was knocked out.

"'The Catholics had been trying to get it restored by appealing to the fairness and justness about Congress, but they soon realized that if they wanted to get the appropriation again, they would have to talk votes, so I prepared the tabulations of the Catholic vote in twenty close Congressional districts that caused so much comment last winter, and showed it to Senator Bard and others. The A. P. A. sentiment was not dead in the country, and that organization was active in certain sections. I told members of the two Indian committees that if any Congressman was afraid to vote for the bill, it would be mighty easy to rally the Catholic votes in his district to him. I knew what the A. P. A. was doing because I have a relative who is a member of it, and he was telling me everything that was going on.

"'We expect the same fight this winter. Representative STEPHENS of Texas has prepared an amendment to the Indian bill to knock out the appropriation, and we shall probably have our work to do all over again.'

"'What will be the attitude of the Indian Commissioner?'

"'I do not know yet. You know he used to work for the New York Evening Post, and that is a sort of A. P. A. paper. Some of his recent decisions have been very cautious, and he has not defined his attitude, so we can not tell exactly where he stands. Some of the questions relating to the disposition of these funds are now before the Department of Justice, but you know even the decisions of the Department of Justice are sometimes influenced by politics.'"

---

[Extract from the platform of the Twenty-third Lake Mohonk Conference of Friends of the Indian and other Dependent Peoples, held at Mohonk Lake, N. Y., October 18–20, 1905.]

6. This conference respectfully petitions Congress by legislation to pass upon the question whether any funds held in trust by the United States should be used for the support of any schools under denominational or ecclesiastical control. And the conference records its conviction that the decision repeatedly embodied in the legislation of Congress against the appropriation of any public funds for the support of such schools should also be by law enforced against the use of Indian tribal funds of which the United States Government is the trustee.

---

[From the Outlook, New York, February 3, 1906.]

INDIAN CHURCH SCHOOLS—THE WAY OUT.

As our readers will remember, all Congressional appropriations for Indian schools under ecclesiastical control were discontinued by Congressional act, by a series of diminishing appropriations, and in accordance with a policy settled and announced some years ago. Notwithstanding this, the practice grew up in the Department of allowing, under restrictions, the appropriation of certain trust funds under the control of the Department to church schools upon the request of the Indians. After consideration, the President ordered this practice continued until it was negatived either by the courts or by act of Congress. His recognition of the fact that it might be negatived by the courts was tantamount to an acknowledgment that the legality of such an appropriation was doubted, and in point of fact this was the case. In his last report the Commissioner of Indian Affairs prescribed very careful regulations to prevent the perpetration of frauds upon the Indians in the endeavor of church representatives to secure the consent of Indians to the use of their moneys in church schools, these regulations being provided in compliance with the President's direction that "care must be taken, of course, to see that any petition by the Indians is genuine, and that the money appropriated for any given school represents only the pro rata proportion to which the Indians making a petition are entitled." It is our opinion that anyone reading these regulations would find an additional and weighty argument against the policy which the President is pursuing in this matter in the very fact that it is necessary to make such an elaborate provision to prevent fraud. We do not need here to repeat the more fundamental reasons which we have given to our readers from time to time against that policy; it is enough to say that the true way out is indicated by two bills now before Congress. The first is the Stephens bill, which explicitly provides that no trust funds shall be used for purposes of education in any sectarian or denominational schools. This bill is simply an extension of the principle that Congress has already adopted, and may almost be said to have been suggested by the President's phrase that the practice of giving such appropriations "will be continued unless the Congress should decree to the contrary." The other measure is the Lacey bill, which authorizes the President, in his discretion, from time to time to designate such Indian tribes as he may deem to be sufficiently advanced in civilization to be prepared to manage their own money, and shall thereupon cause the money held in trust for such tribes to be allotted in severalty to the members thereof. These two bills, supplementing each other, would take this troublesome question out of politics. There is very good reason why the United States Government should not, directly or indirectly, make, for the benefit of church schools, any appropriations out of any funds, however they may be held; but there is no reason why Indians who are sufficiently intelligent to determine how their money should be spent should not have their money given to them and be left to spend it in their own discretion. Strenuously as the Outlook is opposed to any connection between the Government and the church schools, it is inclined to advise Indians, where they can do so, to send children to schools of their own religious faith and to pay for the tuition out of their own funds.

---

[From The Outlook, April 8, 1905.]

INDIANS AND SCHOOLS.

To the Editors of The Outlook:

I wish to commend you for the strong stand you are taking with respect to the Indian school question. Your articles in the issues of February 18 and 25 are thoroughly American in tone and conception. I believe that you are right in affirming that the action of the President "violates a vital and fundamental principle of the unwritten constitution of the American Commonwealth, a principle incorporated in the written constitution of many of the States and implied in the written Constitution of the United States."

I am an ardent admirer of the President. I admire his remarkable courage, his keen insight, and his celerity of judgment. I agree with you in your statement concerning him in The Outlook of last October that "the celerity of his judgments is due to the fact that he determines on certain well-considered principles of action, and by those principles determines particular questions before him." On this occasion Mr. Roosevelt does not seem to have acted on fundamental principle. In this his friends are surprised. They are surprised because he has trained them to expect that he will always act in accordance with "well-considered principles."

I consider the analogy legitimate which you allege between the Indian trust funds and the funds held by the Government for white citizens. Furthermore, I am glad to note that you still retain your judgment "that any allotment of moneys out of the trust funds by the United States Government, as a trustee for the Indians, for denominational schools is inconsistent with the fundamental principle that there should be no financial connection of any sort between the Government and ecclesiastical organizations." Such a judgment is worthy of Mr. Roosevelt himself, and is exactly such as his friends would expect him to give utterance to.

G. V. C.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Chair desires to hear me——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is ready to rule. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, while in the form of a limitation, is not confined to this particular appropriation, and it deals with funds which are not covered by the law to which the gentleman refers. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

That no purchase of supplies for which appropriations are herein made, exceeding in the aggregate $500 in value at any one time, shall be made without first giving at least three weeks' public notice by advertisement, except in case of exigency, when, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, who shall make official record of the facts constituting the exigency, and shall report the same to Congress at its next session, he may direct that purchases may be made in open market in amount not exceeding $3,000 at any one purchase: Provided, That supplies may be purchased, contracts let, and labor employed for the construction of artesian wells, ditches, and other works for irrigation, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, without advertising as hereinbefore provided: Provided further, That as far as practicable Indian labor shall be employed and purchase in the open market made from Indians, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve a point of order to each of the provisos, separately, contained in this paragraph, on the ground that it is new legislation, with a view to getting an explanation.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, either it is a limitation upon the appropriation herein contained or else it is law, because this exact provision has been carried in every appropriation bill since I have been its chairman. If it is legislation, it is now enacted. If it is not legislation, it is simply a limitation upon the appropriation herein carried.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I think it is clearly legislation. It is not a limitation upon the appropriation, and the fact that it may have been carried in a succession of appropriation bills under repeated decisions of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House does not give it the status of law.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a suggestion right there?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. SHERMAN. It has been carried in other bills. If it is legislation it is now the law, and it is a matter of no consequence whether or not it be repeated.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Carried in other appropriation bills?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; every bill for ten years; so that if it is legislation, it is already law now.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The point I make is that each appropriation bill in so far as it contains such provisions as this constitutes the law for the fiscal year for which that appropriation obtains and no more.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then it is but a limitation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, that is a question. I understand the rule to be that the fact that a provision is contained in a succession of appropriation bills does not constitute law in the sense of the rules of the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would state to the gentleman from Indiana that that is the opinion of the Chair in ordinary cases, but legislation can be enacted in an appropriation bill, and the Chair thinks that if this provision was carried in the last appropriation bill it would not be necessary in this bill at all; that it is existing law; and the Chair overrules the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior, under the direction of the President, may use any surplus that may remain in any of the said appropriations herein made for the purchase of subsistence for the several Indian tribes, to an amount not exceeding $25,000 in the aggregate, to supply any subsistence deficiency that may occur: Provided, That any diversions which shall be made under authority of this section shall be reported in detail, and the reason therefor, to Congress, at the session of Congress next succeeding such diversion: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior, under direction of the President, may use any sums appropriated in this act for subsistence, and not absolutely necessary for that purpose, for the purchase of stock cattle for the benefit of the tribe for which such appropriation is made, and shall report to Congress, at its next session thereafter, an account of his action under this provision: Provided further, That funds appropriated to fulfill treaty obligations shall not be used: Provided further, That in lieu of the milch cows, mares, and implements to be issued to Sioux allottees under the provisions of section 17 of the "Act to divide a portion of the reservation of the Sioux Nation of Indians in Dakota into separate reservations and to secure the relinquishment of the Indian title to the remainder, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1889, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, issue to any allottee entitled to benefits under said section who shall petition therefor an equal value in good stock cattle.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve the point of order on that just to find out something.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I would like to offer. I move that, in line 14, on page 3, the word "said" be stricken out.

The CHAIRMAN. Against what provision does the gentleman from Indiana reserve the point of order?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Against the entire paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to be heard? The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to find out something about it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like the attention of the gentleman from New York for a moment. Was this provision in these identical words carried in the last appropriation bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. Not from line 4 to line 14, inclusive, on page 4. That is new, but I do not understand that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] is so much desirous of pressing his point of order as he is of obtaining some information.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state, then, to the gentleman from Indiana, in answer to a parliamentary inquiry, that a provision in the appropriation bill of last year changing existing law, unless it applied to that appropriation only and did not extend beyond that year, is existing law to-day, and that same provision inserted in the identical words in this bill is a reenactment of existing law, against which a point of order can not lie.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, Mr. Chairman, I beg to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that this paragraph is not the same as that contained in the former appropriation bill, because it has some provisos and conditions attached to it. The gentleman from New York admits that.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman is correct in his assumption and will point that out to the Chair, the Chair will sustain the point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I think the Chair does not understand the gentleman's object in raising the point of order and reserving it. I understand the gentleman from Indiana desires information and desires to reserve the point of order until he obtains the information in order that he may determine whether or not he shall press the point of order.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The gentleman from New York has stated my purpose quite clearly and correctly.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I thought it good policy to raise a point of order so if on explanation the paragraph be subject to a point of order it could be a good deal more easily and surely disposed of than on a motion to strike it out. Therefore I reserve the point of order in order that I might get an explanation from the gentleman from New York respecting this policy of the diversion of funds. I had understood it to be the general policy of Congress to prevent the diversion, to require funds to be appropriated for the purpose to which they are specifically applied in the bill. It seems to me as a general policy it is a bad one; it may be under some conditions that good administration would justify the vesting of a discretion of this character in an administrative officer, provided it is sufficiently limited and safeguarded, but I think almost all of the abuses in the use of appropriations—I know practically all of them—arise where unlimited discretion is conferred on a Department that has control of the disbursement. I rose simply to raise the question that I have presented, with a view of finding out the reason.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman allow me a question?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Certainly.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I want to ask the gentleman what objection he has to the change of milch cows, farm implements, etc.?

Mr. SHERMAN. That is not the provision the gentleman is inquiring about.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I ask the gentleman why he objects to the change?

Mr. SHERMAN. That is not the change the gentleman is objecting to.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I am inquiring about this provision authorizing the diversion of appropriations from the purpose to which they are specifically intended.

Mr. SHERMAN. I agree with the gentleman from Indiana in his statement, but not as to the general policy. I am fully in sympathy with the provision which the Appropriation Committee has made in reference to diversion of funds; but this appropriation, this arm of the service, differs materially from any other service. This provision simply relates to the use of funds for the support of suffering Indians. This is different from the legislative bill, and it will not be possible to carry clerks or anything of that kind under this provision; it simply makes it possible where there is a fund left on hand which provided for the support of the indigent Indians. It provides that where one fund has been exhausted and another has not been exhausted the unexhausted fund may be used. Conditions vary from one section of the country to the other. A detailed report is required to be made of the diversion of the specific appropriation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I suppose I may ask about the succeeding paragraph, so that no explanation may be required later?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In that paragraph the same power is given respecting the employment of labor, millers, blacksmiths, engineers, carpenters, physicians, and so on. Is it not possible to determine with practical certainty the amount of labor and clerical force that will be required at these various places?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; with reasonable certainty; and yet there are certain treaty provisions which provide for blacksmiths, which, under changed conditions, are not at all necessary. Changed conditions may make it advisable to use the funds for the employment of some other person, as, for instance, a farmer. Farmers are of great value, not only on reservations, but wherever Indians are congregated together.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. These provisions practically make the whole appropriation a lump-sum appropriation?

Mr. SHERMAN. So far as certain gratuities are concerned and certain specific treaty provisions are concerned; yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is it the judgment of the gentleman—and I suppose it is, or he would not have put the appropriation in the bill—that this provision is necessary to the successful and proper administration of this service?

Mr. SHERMAN. It has been deemed advisable to have these provisions by all of the administrative officers in the Department with whom I have come in contact, although it has happened that at no time has any considerable sum been diverted from specific appropriations.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. How long has it been the practice of Congress to confer this authority on the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. SHERMAN. For a dozen years, I should say, if not longer.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And these are substantially the same provisions as were contained in former bills?

Mr. SHERMAN. Absolutely, except the provision in lines 4 to 12.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is the last proviso of the paragraph under consideration.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I will withdraw the point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, in line 14, page 3, I move to strike out the word "said."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 14, page 3, strike out the word "said."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That whenever after advertising for bids for supplies in accordance with sections 3 and 4 of this act those received for any article contain conditions detrimental to the interests of the Government, they may be rejected, and the articles specified in such bids purchased in open market, at prices not to exceed those of the lowest bidder, and not to exceed the market price of the same, until such time as satisfactory bids can be obtained, for which immediate advertisement shall be made: Provided, That so much of the appropriations herein made as may be required to pay for goods and supplies, for expenses incident to their purchase, and for transportation of the same, for the year ending June 30, 1907, shall be immediately available, but no such goods or supplies shall be distributed or delivered to any of said Indians prior to July 1, 1906.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, on page 5, line 7, I move to strike out the words "sections 3 and 4" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the provisions."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 7, strike out the words "sections 3 and 4" and insert in lieu thereof the words "the provisions."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized to investigate and report to Congress upon the desirability of establishing a sanitarium for the treatment of such Indians as are afflicted with tuberculosis, and to report upon a location and the cost thereof, and also upon the feasibility of utilizing some present Government institution therefor; said report to include, as far as possible, the extent of the prevalence of tuberculosis among Indians.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve the point of order against that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The paragraph beginning line 21, on page 7?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The paragraph just read, beginning with line 20, page 7.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana reserves the point of order against the paragraph.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from South Dakota desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. No, sir; I do not.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I reserve the point of order, so as to have an explanation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from South Dakota.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The gentleman in charge of the bill will probably explain it. I rose for another purpose, and I will wait.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. I am looking for the hearing of the Commissioner upon the subject.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman from Indiana permit a question?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will state to the gentleman that this provision only requires investigation and a report, and it will not cost the Government one cent. It is well known that this disease has become widespread among the Indians, and some such institution has become a necessity. It has been urged by the Indian Department and recommended by various associations and individuals looking after the interests of the Indians of the United States. It does not cost the Government anything, but only authorizes the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to investigate and report to Congress the desirability of establishing a sanitarium for the treatment of such Indians as are affected with tuberculosis and to report upon a location and the cost thereof.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Has not the Secretary of the Interior that power already?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. If he has, he has not exercised it, and we desire it to be exercised.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Has not he probably all the information that is necessary, and can not he embody his recommendations in his annual report? The objection I see to the paragraph is this: It seems to me that it is in a sense a commitment of the Congress to the establishment of a tuberculosis sanitarium, and of course if one should be established, it will be a creditable institution, and ought to be. I have been hoping all the time, and I have been led to believe, that the policy of the Department of Indian Affairs looked toward the ultimate dissolution of the tribal status of the Indians and the ultimate withdrawal of Federal guardianship. I fear if we provide for the construction of a sanitarium for the Indians, with reform schools, insane asylums, and institutions of that kind, we will be constructing governmental machinery of such tenacity of life and tenure that its tendency and influence will be to indefinitely postpone the time for the withdrawal of guardianship over the Indian tribes. Are not there sanitariums open to Indian patients—tuberculosis sanitariums in the country?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; not unless the Government sends a patient there and pays for him. If the gentleman from Indiana was here yesterday he might have heard the gentleman from South Dakota make quite an extensive argument upon the subject of establishing a tubercular hospital.

Here is what the Commissioner says upon the subject:

Besides the danger of undermining the moral health of wholesome-minded children by introducing the unwholesome minded freely among them, it seems to me that we are making a mistake in not establishing somewhere—preferably in the Southwest—a school for children suffering from tuberculosis, the disease which is more generally disseminated than any other among the Indians. In their own homes these little ones can have no sort of sanitary surroundings, and only in rare instances proper medical care. The most stringent rules, moreover, which the Office of Indian Affairs can prescribe for the protection of healthy children from perilous contact with those who have been stricken are bound to be only partly effective; for, though we may weed every sign of the scourge out of the schools by excluding all children pronounced by the examining physician unsound, we are only segregating these in order to make them grow up—if they do grow up—in ignorance. The establishment of such a sanitarium as I have here suggested would insure to the unfortunates the special care and the chance for recuperation which is their due, as well as the schooling needed to fit them for the serious business of life, instead of being sent home to serve as centers of infection for both their own people and the whites of the neighborhood.

Then the Commissioner at another time said at a hearing on the bill H. R. 8986:

The prevalence of tuberculosis among the Indians is a matter of grave concern. While investigations made by this Office reveal an alarming situation, it is probably only in particular localities where the scourge is worse among the Indians than among whites under similar conditions. A campaign of education has begun among our own people, and if it is necessary for them it is at least as important for our Indians. In their own camps and cabins they do not have the sanitary conveniences of a modern civilized home, and one consumptive may become, through ignorance, a source of infection to numberless other persons.

Then later on, in answer to my inquiry as to what extent tuberculosis does prevail among the Indians, he said:

In a recent report by Dr. Joseph R. Walker, agency physician at Pine Ridge Agency, S. Dak., a number of statistical tables were given, from which it appears that in 1905 the full-blood Indian population of the reservation was 4,875, among whom there were 561 cases of consumption during the year, of which 172 were new cases, 104 recoveries, and 109 deaths. The mixed-blood population was 1,822. Among these there were 54 cases of tuberculosis, of which 22 were new, 13 recoveries, and 6 deaths.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Now, would it be feasible to admit members of the various Indian nations into one hospital for treatment?

Mr. SHERMAN. That is the theory, certainly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Only one hospital for all of them?

Mr. SHERMAN. That is the theory.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is it not true that the Secretary of the Interior could make this investigation now and recommend in his annual report the advisability of the construction or establishment of this hospital?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; he could; without specific instructions from Congress.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. So really this provision is not strictly necessary?

Mr. SHERMAN. The Secretary has the authority, and he has the machinery under which he may do just what the gentleman indicates, but it seemed to us, in view of the statement made by the Commissioner, and, I say it without disparagement, a gentleman who is more familiar with the Indians upon their reservations than is the Secretary, it was wise to order an investigation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This paragraph requires it, and seems, in a way, to commit Congress to the policy after the investigation may be made.

Mr. SHERMAN. It commits it to this extent: The expectation is—and I want to be perfectly frank with the gentleman, because he is always so with everybody—the expectation is that the report will disclose a condition which will not only warrant, but substantially impel us to set aside one of the schools. The theory is not, you know, to establish a new institution, but to take some one of the schools now existing and to take one in that portion of the country where the climate is supposed to be most beneficial to tubercular patients, and set aside that school for the care of these tubercular patients.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I do not like to insist upon an objection to a provision in a bill of this character when gentlemen who have had charge of its preparation and who have been responsible for the investigation of conditions upon which it is made have recommended it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana be extended five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] be extended five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I say I feel greatly disinclined to insist upon an objection under the circumstances, as I am solicitous for the welfare of these wards of the Government, and upon the statement of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN], I am disposed to withdraw the point of order if he thinks this provision is necessary.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think it is a very wise course to pursue.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And while a wise thing, a prudent thing for the Government to do?

Mr. SHERMAN. I believe so.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I stated in my remarks yesterday that the subject of tuberculosis among the Indians was a subject of grave concern. I referred to an article contributed to the Review of Reviews, and published in the March number, by Dr. D. W. Robinson, of Pierre, S. Dak., who has made the subject of tuberculosis among the Indians considerable of a study for some years. I now ask unanimous consent that the article referred to be printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota asks unanimous consent that the article to which he has referred be printed in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The article referred to is as follows:

TUBERCULOSIS AMONG THE SIOUX.

The great Sioux tribe, the most puissant of the American aborigines, is withering to extinction with tuberculosis at the agencies along the Missouri.

There are about 25,000 of these people, making fair progress in civilization, living in houses, wearing citizens' clothing, the children being educated, the families generally professing Christianity, the able-bodied engaged in some form of manual labor by which they earn the means of subsistence.

The alarming extent of this dread infection prevailing among them can not be overstated. Hardly a home but it has found victims, and hardly a home where it does not still exist in some form. The disease is usually quick in its deadly mission. A man, apparently healthy, leaves his work and goes to his trader and orders a suit of grave clothes. "I have the sickness," he says. He is measured for the suit and by the time it is finished the buyer is often ready to wear it through the long sleep. The mother and the grownup son or daughter are apt to share a similar fate.

Under such conditions and in such environment it will readily be understood that an atmosphere of gloom and depression abounds, paralyzing to ambition and further advancement.

In the old wild life the Sioux were a healthy people. They were probably not wholly free from tuberculosis in some form, but if the infection was present, it was not general.

From the beginning of the reservation system among the Sioux of the Missouri, in 1863, for a period of fifteen years, during which time the wild buffalo had been destroyed and all of the western Sioux had been brought under agency influences, the annual reports of the several agents were optimistic in relation to the health of their people, constantly affirming improved health conditions as the Indians came under civilized influences, lived in better houses, and accepted the attendance of the agency physicians.

The first mention of consumption in these reports is in 1878. In 1880 one agency reports that 5.26 per cent of the deaths resulted from tubercular troubles. In 1881 consumption is generally mentioned, and in 1884 it is said: "Consumption has a firm hold upon them."

In 1886 the Indian Commissioner began to publish tabulated medical reports. From the tabulation for that year we find that among the Dakota Sioux 341 cases of consumption were treated and 605 cases of "tubercular scrofula." It is probable the earlier reports were of the pulmonary type; the other forms of tubercular infection were not then recognized as such. The report of 1886 gives a larger proportion of tubercular diseases and the greater number as "tubercular scrofula" (glandular tuberculosis). Doubtless most of these were children, below the age of puberty, who, with the ever-increasing number of their own age, have since swelled the ranks in the pulmonary form of the disease. It is extremely unfortunate that the publication of these tabulated medical reports was not continued. Yearly since 1886 the agents' reports have more and more teemed with fearsome tales of the ravages of the scourge.

In 1880 there were in four of the leading bands 293 births and 208 deaths. Last year in the same bands the deaths equaled the births.

It is impossible to reduce the condition to tables of figures, though an experience of several years as State health officer and as physician to two Indian schools has convinced me that fully 60 per cent of the younger generation have some form of tubercular infection and that 50 per cent of those above the age of puberty die of some form of the disease. Other observers place the percentage much higher. Miss Mary Collins, for twenty-five years missionary at Standing Rock, testifies that 75 per cent of all deaths result from tuberculosis. Thomas Robertson, who has lived fifty years with the Sisseton, believes that 50 per cent of them die of the disease. Rev. Matthias Schmitt, missionary at Pine Ridge, says: "We buried from our congregation last year ten adults and eleven children, 80 per cent of whom died from tuberculosis. Whole families die of the terrible plague."

One of the striking instances in point is the destruction of the family of the noted and worthy chief, John Grass. In 1892 a white friend met him and his seven sons at a convocation of the tribe. These sons were stalwart fellows and apparently well. In 1902, ten years thereafter, the friend again met the aged chieftain, who at once recognized the white man. "You saw my boys," he said. "All gone. All died of 'the sickness.' I have no child left." This is but one among many families bereft of all children on account of this persistent and restless scourge. What wonder the Indian considers it the white man's blight upon him—the white man's imposed bequest to him.

The foregoing indicates the general condition at all of the agencies.

What has brought a strong and virile people to this condition? Almost every observer has a theory. Among these the more rational are: The radical change from the old life in the open, living in tents located where drainage was perfect and subject to almost daily removal, so that rarely was there an accumulation of filth, to permanent illy ventilated and illy kept houses where filth abounds; exposure in going upon winter trips, passing from overheated houses to sleep in the open tepees; bovine infection from eating tubercular meat and refuse from about the poison-breeding Government slaughterhouses; weakened constitutions from syphilitic diseases; contagion from the sputa of those previously affected; insufficient and badly prepared food, and in some instances the ignorant treatment of the Indian medicine men.

But it is a condition which exists, and it is only profitable to theorize about the cause that the cause may be removed and to that extent conditions improved.

The condition is strikingly pathetic and appeals most emphatically to the Government for its amelioration. Most justly do these poor wards deserve some measure of relief. The Indians are not alone interested. The health of the white community is seriously menaced by the plague spots which surround the agencies.

What is to be done; what course pursued? Advanced medical wisdom would no doubt suggest:

First. The establishment of sanitaria at convenient points to the reservations.

Second. Field nurses who have special experience in the management of tuberculosis patients to instruct the Indians at their homes and to work in conjunction with the sanitaria.

Third. Government supervision in building well-ventilated houses, and as rigid enforcement of proper sanitary conditions in their surroundings as possible.

Fourth. Careful inspection of their beef issues and the abandonment of the Government slaughterhouses at the agencies.

At a properly equipped and properly conducted sanitarium patients live quietly under conditions similar to those in which the Sioux lived in his native state. They may have the sun bath, the moon bath in the open, and invigorating air of the upland. To this is added plenty of good food, regular but quiet habits, and other health benefits under the necessarily rigid and constant care of a competent attendant. Then trained field nurses should be supplied to instruct the Indians in proper ventilation and other sanitary needs of his home; to teach him how to manage a consumptive member of his family, and the proper safeguards for those not yet afflicted. Such nurses should be competent to select those suitable for sanitaria treatment.

The breeding places of the plague upon the reservation should have the strong, regulating hand of the law. The average Sioux home is a log house 18 by 24 feet, provided with one-half window and a door. There are no partitions, and from five to twenty persons sleep nightly in this unventilated oven.

Their food is illy prepared and insufficient. In the wild life and in the earlier reservation days their food was almost entirely beef killed in the open and dressed out on the greensward of the prairie. Rarely if ever were two animals slaughtered upon the same spot, so that the sanitary conditions about the butchering were the best possible. To-day the beef is killed in the agency slaughterhouse, and in their frequently famishing condition the Indians are compelled to resort for food to the putrified offal scattered about these filthy butcheries.

The sanitary conditions about agencies are such as to demand the exercise of the police power of the Government to compel the Indians to observe the ordinary laws of health. Their very existence depends upon it. They must be, with patience but firmness, taught that only through cleanliness and the observance of the decencies of life can they hope to live in the new condition which has been thrust upon them. Where shall the sanitaria for the Sioux be located? The Commissioners of Indian Affairs suggests in his latest report that a great sanitarium for the object be provided in the far Southwest. When the extent of the contagion is considered, not only among the Sioux, but other tribes, where the same condition is said to obtain, the impracticability of a single national sanitarium at once appears.

Each tribe should be provided with its own retreat, at a point convenient to the agencies, where patients, while isolated, should not be wholly removed from home and kindred. Fortunately, where proper sanitary conditions are observed almost any portion of the West is found healthy and adapted to the sanitarium treatment of consumptives. Every sentiment of humanity demands that the patients shall be kept as near to their friends as the probable restoration of their health and the safety from contagion of their families and neighbors will permit.

The subject has been called forcibly to the attention of Congress by the recent report of the Indian Commissioner. Congressman BURKE, of South Dakota, has presented a bill for a sanitarium, to be located in the vicinity of their reservations at a point to be selected by the Indian Office.

The passage of a measure of this character is of the most pressing moment. Under its provisions it is not only possible to arrest the progress of the plague, but perhaps to wholly eradicate it.

DELORME W. ROBINSON,
Superintendent and Ex Officio Secretary to South Dakota State Board of Health.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized and directed to select and designate some one of the schools or other institution herein specifically provided for as an "Indian Reform School," and to make all needful rules and regulations for its conduct, and the placing of Indian youth therein: Provided, That the appropriation for collection and transportation, etc., of pupils, and the specific appropriation for such school so selected shall be available for its support and maintenance: Provided further, That the consent of parents, guardians, or next of kin shall not be required to place Indian youth in said school.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve the point of order against that.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman reserve the point of order against the entire paragraph?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be in order after the point of order has been disposed of. The Chair will hear the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will ask the chairman of the committee if it is intended that Indian children generally shall be eligible for places in this reform school, or is it intended only to take children from the Indian schools?

Mr. SHERMAN. I did not hear the gentleman's inquiry.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Is it intended that Indian children shall be placed in this reform school only from Indian schools, or may they be taken from the reservation, not having attended any school?

Mr. SHERMAN. I presume they may be taken from the reservation under this provision.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I wish to call the attention of the Chairman to this fact: The school facilities are not sufficient to accommodate about 10,000 Indian children in schools. Under the law at present no child can be taken from an Indian reservation and placed in a school outside of the reservation without the consent of the parents or guardian. Under that provision of law, where the parent might refuse his consent that the child be sent to a nonreservation school, under this provision the Commissioner could take the child and place it in this reform school and then suggest that the child in a short time had improved so much that if the parent would consent the child would be placed in a nonreservation school.

Mr. SHERMAN. Surely the gentleman from New York would not argue that in order to confine a refractory child it must be essential to first obtain the consent of the parents. I presume that the gentleman from New York would not argue that for a red child any more than for a white one. If our children are refractory and disobey the laws of the land, they can be confined in institutions provided for that purpose; and certainly it requires no consent of the parents for that.

Mr. FITZGERALD. What I desire to ascertain is this: Whether it was intended, after investigation had been made, to supply the want for such a school that has been found on the reservations or to take care of refractory children found in the schools?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; the suggestion has been made to create this school because of conditions that have been found to exist in schools, not on the reservation. The gentleman knows the schools are the occasion for the Commissioner's making this recommendation, and not the reservation. It may be the condition of children in the reservation schools; but this thought was not especially prompted by the conditions outside of schools, either reservation or nonreservation.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I have very grave doubts as to the advisability of this school, but not having had an opportunity to investigate the matter thoroughly, I am inclined to withdraw the point of order and rely on the judgment of the gentleman from New York, the chairman of the committee.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Commissioner has given the subject considerable thought. He is not visionary about Indians. He has served for a number of years on the board of citizens serving without compensation. He has, without question, visited more reservations than any man in this House, and is familiar with the condition of the Indians throughout the country from actual observation and experience. He has strongly advocated this proposition. It is recommended in his annual report, which I assume the gentleman has seen, and which recommendation I think I will insert in the RECORD, but will not detain the committee to read it in full. It is on pages 13 and 14 of the annual report, and is as follows:

DEMAND FOR A REFORM SCHOOL.

The best provision which it has been possible to make for the care and instruction of children of normal disposition has left still unsupplied the needs of the class whom ordinary teachers find unmanageable. To group together the well-meaning and the vicious is not a wise practice if it can be avoided, because the tendency of such association is rather to lower than to raise the average moral level of a school. And yet the Government owes a duty even to the children of perverted instincts. There is hardly a large school in the service which does not contain its modicum of an element that requires the discipline of correction as much as of guidance. It would be an excellent plan to have one reform school, to which chronically refractory pupils may be sent. We are every year swelling the list of unnecessary and undesirable nonreservation schools. One of these superfluous institutions might be set apart as a reform school where should be gathered the children whose presence elsewhere is a moral menace, yet who have not passed the stage where bad impulses crystallize into the criminal habit. Here the young offender, instead of being herded with hardened evil doers and professional jail birds, would have a chance to change his ways and earn his restoration to a respectable place in life.

For example, during the year last past the entire plant of the Menominee boarding school, at Green Bay, Wis., was burned, as were also the school and assembly hall at Oneida, Wis., and the mess hall at Rice Station, Ariz. Fortunately the children were got out of the buildings in time and no lives were lost; but had the Menominee fire occurred later in the night the result would probably have been too horrible for thought. The Menominee and Rice Station fires, as has since been discovered, were the work of incendiaries among the older pupils. I have instructed the superintendents to confer with the United States attorneys about having the guilty parties regularly indicted and tried, as would be done in the case of young white persons, for incendiarism in the schools has become too frequent within the last few years to be passed over indulgently, and the only way to teach our Indian youth respect for the law under which they must live when they come into the full relations of citizenship is to let a few of them feel the pinch of its displeasure by way of a warning to the rest. The presence of such ill-disposed pupils in a school full of innocent children is a wrong to the latter; on the other hand, the penitentiary is scarcely the place in which to confine a young person who still retains a germ of self-respect. For such wayward pupils there should be a special provision, and I trust that Congress at its coming session may be persuaded to enact the legislation necessary.

AN INDIAN SANITARIUM.

Besides the danger of undermining the moral health of wholesome-minded children by introducing the unwholesome-minded freely among them, it seems to me that we are making a mistake in not establishing somewhere—preferably in the Southwest—a school for children suffering from tuberculosis, the disease which is more generally disseminated than any other among the Indians. In their own homes these little ones can have no sort of sanitary surroundings, and only in rare instances proper medical care. The most stringent rules, moreover, which the Office of Indian Affairs can prescribe for the protection of healthy children from perilous contact with those who have been stricken are bound to be only partly effective; for, though we may weed every sign of the scourage out of the schools by excluding all children pronounced by the examining physician unsound, we are only segregating these in order to make them grow up—if they do grow up—in ignorance. The establishment of such a sanitarium as I have here suggested would insure to the unfortunates the special care and the chance of recuperation which is their due, as well as the schooling needed to fit them for the serious business of life, instead of being sent home to serve as centers of infection for both their own people and the whites of the neighborhood.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will not press the point of order, because I do not wish to set my judgment, without opportunity to fully investigate, against that of the committee; but it seems to me this distinction ought to be borne in mind. When a white child is placed in a reform school, after it has made sufficient improvement the child can go back to the family and should not retrograde; but the Indian child will undoubtedly go back to a condition where there is not much opportunity for him to improve. I will, however, withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend page 8, in line 15, by adding the following:
"Provided further, That no money appropriated by this act for said reform school shall be used for the education of any Indian pupil in said Indian school when the parent or parents of such pupil have become citizens of the State or Territory in which they resided."

Mr. SHERMAN. Well, Mr. Chairman, I want to say, in the first place, I am just a little surprised that the gentleman from Texas, a member of the committee, and the ranking member of the minority of the committee, presents amendment after amendment that he has never brought to the attention of the committee. It puts the chairman of the committee in an embarrassing position, because it is his duty, it seems to me, to attempt to maintain the bill that the committee authorized him to report in the exact form in which he has reported it, and it compels him to oppose amendments offered, no matter from what source. It seems to me that a member of the committee, at least, ought not to come on the floor, having voted to report the bill, and offer amendments which he at no time, either before or after the bill was reported, presented for consideration of the full committee. But aside from that, Mr. Chairman, our obligation to watch over the Indian does not expire when he becomes a citizen by allotment. We still have an obligation, and it may be that the very condition of citizenship will make it more probable that the Indian youth will become refractory. It may be that from that very cause he will be more likely to be a child who should be confined in the reform school; and we are attempting, with all the rapidity that safety will permit, to allot to all the Indians of the country and to make them all become citizens; and the gentleman's amendment would become more sweeping every single day, if it were adopted. I think under those circumstances that the amendment ought not to be adopted, and I trust it will be voted down.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Does the gentleman not admit that under the act of 1887 the Indians, when their lands are allotted, become citizens of the United States?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly they do.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then suppose that one of these citizens of the United States sends his child to a school, and that child becomes refractory, and the Government attempts to send the refractory child to this reform school, which is a place of punishment. Does the gentleman think the United States ought to punish that child arbitrarily without any trial whatever?

Mr. SHERMAN. We have a supervisory guardianship over the Indians, both before and after they become citizens, and I think it is better, and I think the gentleman, on second thought, must conclude it is better, if we are to have a reformatory, to confine all Indians in a reformatory school where they will only come in contact with the members of their own race, with their fellows, and not to confine them in reformatory schools provided by the various States where they will come in contact with evil-doers of other races.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Does the gentleman believe such a law as this would be constitutional, even if it were adopted?

Mr. SHERMAN. Why not?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Do you believe the child of a citizen of the United States could be taken and without trial put into a reform school outside of his own State or Territory? Does not the fact that the parent becomes a citizen and is entitled to all the rights and privileges of a citizen of necessity carry with it the same right to this child to a trial by jury?

Mr. SHERMAN. Why, yes; but the parent's right to the child does not become a right to say that that child shall not be confined when it infracts the laws of the State or the nation.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then if you can take a child of Indian parentage and punish him differently to what you can the child of white people, where will you ever stop?

Mr. SHERMAN. The proposition is not to punish them differently, but to provide a special place of confinement. The theory is not to impose a more severe punishment or an unusual punishment. The theory is to provide a central reform school where their vicious habits and ideas may be done away with, and at the same time their intellectual growth proceed.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. As long as the Indian is the ward of the Government, we have a right to provide a separate punishment, and to provide different schools for him, but when the Indians are no longer the wards of the Government but become citizens of the United States, then they come from under our jurisdiction and pass under the jurisdiction of the State or Territory where they live, and we then should take our hand from them and permit them to be governed by their own State and educated by it. That is the reason I offer this amendment. The question is fundamental, and the punishment of the child of a citizen of any State without a trial is an outrage, and should be prevented by law.

Mr. SHERMAN. I trust the amendment will be voted down. I have nothing more to say about it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas, and the Clerk will report it again for the information of the committee.

The amendment was again read.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

That so much of the section 3 of the act of August 15, 1876, as required the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to embody in his annual report a detailed and tabular statement of all bids and proposals received for any services, supplies, and annuity goods for the Indian Service, together with a detailed statement of all awards of contracts made for any such services, supplies, and annuity goods for which said bids or proposals were received, is hereby repealed, and hereafter he shall embody in his annual report only a detailed statement of the awards of contracts made for any services, supplies, and annuity goods for the Indian Service; and that so much of the acts of March 2, 1892, and April 21, 1904, which require the Commissioner to report annually the names of all employees in the Indian Service is hereby also repealed.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against that paragraph with a view of getting some information respecting the effect of the change proposed and its necessity.

Mr. SHERMAN. The proposed change is suggested purely for the sake of economy. Under the existing law it is essential to publish all the bids for all of the supplies, and it requires the services of several clerks for some months to prepare that table, and then there is the cost of the publication thereof. It seemed to the Commissioner and to the committee absolutely idle to publish the bids of these competitors, as I presume the most of them are never looked at by anybody; that all that is at all necessary is to publish the bid of the successfud bidder. Let me read what the Commissioner and the Secretary say on this subject. The Commissioner refers to his previous recommendation that the provision for printing bids be repealed, and says:

If they are omitted, several thousand dollars of expense for preparing and printing them will be saved annually and the office will be relieved of the necessity of burdening its reports with this cumbersome and almost useless matter.

With reference to the publication of names of employees, they are published every other year, together with all other employees of the Goevrnment, in the Blue Book, and it seems unnecessary to have this additional publication by the Bureau.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. You propose to require hereafter that the report shall contain a detailed statement of all contracts made for service, supplies, annuities, and goods for Indian Service; that is as far as you require the report to go. I wondered whether the provisions of the original law, while they may require paying for a detailed report—I wondered if they did not have a wholesome effect in securing a rigid administration of the law; if all bids were to be made public, even though the public as a rule paid little attention to them, the officer having charge of that branch of the service and of letting the contracts would be extremely careful to give the contract to the lowest responsible bidder.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me say to the gentleman that these contracts are let not to the lowest bidder of necessity, they are let on samples—let to the person or concern whose bid seemingly offers the best return for the expenditure. For instance, a sample of clothing is submitted; a suit is offered for $6.10, and a sample suit presented; another suit is offered for $5.40, and so on. Attempt is made to get the best talent in that particular line of business to pass upon the question as to which one of these offers presents the most advantageous proposition for the Government; is there greater economy in buying this suit marked "A," at $6.30, or this one marked "B," for $5.50.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. So the published statement of bids would perhaps contain more confusion than information?

Mr. SHERMAN. It would not contain accurate information, because you could not publish the samples with the bids. I should say there were 3,000 bids submitted last year, and the gentleman can readily see that it requires an immense amount of work to tabulate those bids.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, in view of the explanation made by the gentleman from New York, I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

To enable the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to take action to suppress the traffic of intoxicating liquors among Indians, $10,000.

For support of Indian day and industrial schools, and for other educational purposes not hereinafter provided for, $1,300,000.

For construction, purchase, lease, and repair of school buildings, and sewerage, water supply, and lighting plants, and purchase of school sites, and improvement of buildings and grounds, $415,000.

In all, $1,715,000.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of saying that this paragraph flagrantly violates the well-established and generally approved policy of making appropriations, in that it contains no limitation upon the amount of money that can be expended for any single purpose mentioned in the paragraph. The Secretary of the Interior may expend the entire $415,000 in the construction of a single school building. Of course, I do not desire to reflect upon the business judgment or the integrity of a Department officer, but every limitation that is included in an appropriation bill may be said to carry an implied reflection—and not a reflection, but it must be construed to be a safeguard against careless and improvident use of the public money. Now, let me ask the gentleman if it is practicable to include in this paragraph an amendment limiting the appropriation for any one of the subjects named to a reasonable amount? I would not personally know anything about what limitations would be proper to impose.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I think the suggestion of the gentleman from Indiana is not practicable, for this reason. There are 260-odd school plants that are cared for under this provision. I can not say how many buildings there are, but certainly many hundreds. It is impossible to determine in advance just where the necessity requires the expenditure. Such a condition as this did arise last year. One entire school plant in Wisconsin was destroyed by fire. It required an expenditure last year in the neighborhood of $30,000 to replace those buildings. Probably next year it would not require $200 in that place. Three or four years ago a like catastrophe occurred in the State of Washington, which required $40,000 or thereabouts to replace the school plant. That condition is liable to arise in some part of the country almost every year, and hardly a year passes that something of that kind does not occur.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is this the only fund that is put in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior for the purpose mentioned in this paragraph?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. So that he is required to apply this fund for the lease and repair and building and improvement of schools covering the entire service.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes. There is a similar clause that relates to buildings at agencies and matters of that kind, the same sort of a provision relating to all other buildings at agencies.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This appropriation applies to the school service only.

Mr. SHERMAN. Of course the gentleman understands that it does not apply to the schools for which we specifically appropriate, like Haskell and Carlisle and others.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No; but this entire appropriation is limited to the school service.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is; yes, sir.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my pro forma amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

That all expenditure of money appropriated for school purposes in this act shall be at all times under the supervision and direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and in all respects in conformity with such conditions, rules, and regulations as to the conduct and methods of instruction and expenditure of money as may be from time to time prescribed by him, subject to the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That not more than $167 shall be expended for the annual support and education of any one pupil in any school herein specificially provided for, except when, by reason of epidemic, accident, or other sufficient cause, the attendance is so reduced or cost of maintenance so high that a larger expenditure is absolutely necessary for the efficient operation of the school affected, when the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, may allow a larger per capita expenditure, such expenditure to continue only so long as the said necessity therefor shall exist: Provided further, That the total amount appropriated for the support of such school shall not be exceeded: Provided further, That the number of pupils in any school entitled to the per capita allowance hereby provided for shall be determined by taking the average enrollment for the entire fiscal year and not any fractional part thereof.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend page 11, at end of line 2, by adding the following:

Provided, That no money appropriated by this act for school purposes shall be used for the education of any Indian pupil in any Indian school where the parent or parents of such Indian pupil have, under act of Congress of February 8, 1887, become a citizen of any State or Territory.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to explain that amendment. About two years ago the agents of some of the Indian schools in the United States come to El Paso, in my State, and found there children who were part Indians, but citizens of that State. They induced them to go and register in these Indian schools. It was ascertained very soon that they were dissatisfied with the schools, and they determined to leave them. They then raised the question that they were not Indians who were entitled to be educated there, but were mixed-blooded Mexican and Indian, and a controversy arose between the Secretary of the Interior and the parents of those children as to who had jurisdiction over the children. Therefore, it is necessary to perfect this bill by adopting this amendment, and it should be adopted. I would further state that if we adopt the policy of taking all persons who are Indian blood and educating their children forever after they become citizens of the United States, we will always have the Indians upon our hands, and will be educating them as long as we have Indians in the United States. We have to make a dividing line somewhere, and why should it not be whenever their parents become citizens of the United States? I desire to ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] if he remembers the recent case of Heff against the United States, where an Indian bought whisky from Heff, I believe, in Kansas. The man was convicted of that offense, and he appealed. Finally the case was determined in the Supreme Court of the United States. It was held in that case that under the act of 1887 the Indian, being a citizen of the United States, lands having been allotted to him, as provided under the act of 1887, carried his citizenship into the State in which he lived, and that, therefore, it was no offense for a citizen of Kansas to sell to that man of Indian blood this intoxicating liquor. The same rule ought to apply with reference to the education of children. Whenever the parents of children become citizens of a State or Territory in which they live, then the public schools of that State or Territory should be open to those Indians, and in that way they would mix with the white children and would become part and parcel of the people of the State where they live.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman if it was ever considered that Indians who had taken allotments were citizens of the State wherein they resided and no longer subject to the jurisdiction of the United States up to the time the decision in the Heff case was rendered, to which the gentleman has referred? Was it ever considered that they were citizens?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Not up to that time. But will not the gentleman concede that when they do become citizens of a State then the United States loses jurisdiction, and they no longer are wards of the Government?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I would like to ask the gentleman another question.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Let me proceed with this sentence. After the guardianship of the United States has been withdrawn from them they are no longer our wards; their citizenship then attaches to the State or Territory where they live, and why should the United States Government pay for educating thousands of Indian children in the State where the parents of those same children are voters and taxpayers and probably hold office?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman if it would not practically or at least to a very great extent end the education of the Indians if the amendment which the gentleman proposed should be adopted?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I did not understand the question.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I say would it not practically end the education of the Indian if your amendment were to be adopted?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. It certainly would at the expense of the United States. Do you propose to keep every child of Indian blood forever in schools of the United States and compel the citizens of the United States to pay for educating these children?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Most certainly not.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then where do you draw the line and when? Please answer that to this House.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent for three minutes' additional time. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to ask the gentleman from South Dakota why this Government should educate all children of Indian blood after they have become citizens by allotment of land and under the decision in the Heff case?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. When they have reached such a stage of advancement and civilization that will fit them to take their place in the world with white men, and I contend, and I think the gentleman will admit, that the allotment law which the Supreme Court construed in the Heff case which gave the Indian allottees citizenship, that Congress when it passed that law never contemplated that citizenship would follow until the fee simple patent had issued.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Does the gentleman believe it is fair to the States which have no Indians to pay their pro rata part of the fund for educating citizens of other States, whether Indians, negroes, or any other foreign blood?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, that interrogatory would practically apply to every appropriation that is made by Congress, that it would not be fair to make it because it was not equitably expended in every part of the United States.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Why should not the General Government go into every State and take every citizen's child alike; why should they single out the red man and not the black man to bestow its bounties upon?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Because it is the policy, and has been for many years, to educate the Indian, who occupies a different status from every other inhabitant in this country, being a ward of the nation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

MISCELLANEOUS.

Telegraphing, telephoning, and purchase of Indian supplies: To pay the expense of purchasing goods and supplies for the Indian service, including inspection and pay of necessary employees; advertising, at rates not exceeding regular commercial rates, and all other expenses connected therewith, and for telegraphing and telephoning, $60,000.

For transportation of Indian goods and supplies, including pay and expenses of transportation agents and rent of warehouses, $200,000.

For buildings and repairs of buildings at agencies and for rent of buildings for agency purposes, and for water supply at agencies, $75,000.

For pure vaccine matter and vaccination of Indians, $5,000.

That the provisions of section 3786 of the Revised Statutes of the United States shall not apply to such work of the Indian Department as can be executed at the several Indian schools.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph, with a view of having an explanation from the gentleman from New York in regard to the last portion of it.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, that provision is inserted so as to permit the Indian Office to utilize the printing plants that are now in certain of the industrial schools to do certain printing. The statute requires that all printing must be done at the Government Printing Office.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Under that paragraph, if it shall be enacted into law, it will authorize the Secretary of the Interior to do printing where he pleases, of course. You say the service is equipped with printing offices?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, there are several schools where they have printing offices and where they are glad and anxious to do some printing that is necessary for the Bureau, and under the statute they are not permitted to utilize these little plants.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It seems to me that it ought to be the policy of the Government to do all the printing in the Government Printing Office.

Mr. SHERMAN. They are small matters and it is purely in the interest of economy that the provision is inserted here, as it can be done at these schools without cost.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. You say it can be done without cost?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes; these are little plants that are maintained at some of the schools more for instruction than anything else.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is the intention of this paragraph to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to do only such printing as may be done at these schools which have printing presses?

Mr. SHERMAN. That is all. It really means to do what little printing the bureau, not the department, may need and which can be done at these little plants. It would save perhaps a few hundred dollars a year and would give a little added opportunity for the students to work in these small printing offices.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is broad enough to authorize all of the printing of the Indian Department to be done at any private printing establishment.

Mr. SHERMAN. As can be executed at the several Indian schools, but at no other printing office.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk proceeded to read the next paragraph.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas will suspend until the Clerk finishes the reading of the paragraph. The last paragraph was in respect to the provisions of section 3786 of the Revised Statutes. To what line does the gentleman apply his amendment?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The amendment will come at the end of line 21, page 11.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the Clerk had begun the reading of the succeeding paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Was the gentleman from Texas on his feet seeking recognition of the Chair?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will state to the gentleman that this amendment is a bill that has passed the committee and appropriates for Tony E. Proctor $2 a day for some work performed at Wagoner, Ind. T.

Mr. SHERMAN. It should come under Indian Territory, and it would not be germane at this point.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. All right.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the amendment will be withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

BOARD OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS.

For expenses of the commission of citizens, serving without compensation, appointed by the President under the provisions of the fourth section of the act of April 10, 1869, $4,000, of which amount not to exceed $300 may be used by the commission for office rent.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order against the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] reserves a point of order against the paragraph.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It clearly changes existing law.

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, no; surely the gentleman is in error upon that, Mr. Chairman. This board was created in 1869 by general statute, and has continued ever since. There is no possibility of a point of order lying against the provision.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think that Congress in the enactment of the recent urgent deficiency bill repealed practically that original law, repealed it by implication, because in section 3 of the urgent deficiency bill it is provided——

Mr. SHERMAN. Of what year?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This year, approved February 27—last month. The following provision is contained in section 3:

Nor shall any department or any officer of the Government accept voluntary service for the Government, or employ personal service in excess of that authorized by law except in cases of sudden emergency involving the loss of human life or the destruction of property.

Now, a number of years ago Congress enacted a law authorizing the appointment of this Commission, providing that it should serve without compensation, and the Commission was appointed under the authority of law. The urgent deficiency bill, approved on the 27th day of last month, by necessary implication, repealed the law, because it expressly provides that neither the Government nor any department thereof shall accept voluntary service for the Government or employ personal service in excess of that expressly authorized by law. The Government shall not accept voluntary service.

The paragraph in this bill is:

For expenses of the commission of citizens, serving without compensation, appointed by the President under the provisions of the fourth section of the act of April 10, 1869, etc.

Now, this undertakes to appropriate money for the expenses of a commission that is performing voluntary service for the Interior Department, and the recent law, that I have just read, says that no department shall accept voluntary service from anyone.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes, indeed.

Mr. CURTIS. Does the gentleman hold that these gentlemen are working under the Department of the Interior?

Mr. SHERMAN. They are absolutely beholden to no one but the President.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This law is broad enough: "Nor shall any department or any officer of the Government." The President must be an officer of the Government within the meaning of that law.

Mr. LACEY. There is a qualification there. Read further on.

Mr. CRUMPACKER (reading). "Accept service."

Mr. LACEY. Except as authorized by law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER (reading). "Accept service for the Government or employ personal service in excess of that authorized by law."

Mr. LACEY. This is not in excess of that authorized by law. They were authorized by law to perform all the work they wanted to, for nothing.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The qualification upon the prohibition contained in this provision of the law applies only to the employment in excess of those authorized. It says that the Government shall not accept voluntary service at all and shall not employ service in excess of that authorized by law. It is quite clear to me that that is the interpretation that must be given the provision. Then, what is the good of this Commission? What service does it perform?

Mr. LACEY. These Commissioners are authorized by law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. But this law provides that we shall not accept voluntary service.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would like to inquire whether the law of 1869 authorizes the payment of the expenses of the Commission?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes; and it has been done year after year; formerly $30,000 and $25,000 have been appropriated for the expenses of this Commission, and it did not drop to the $4,000 amount until 1893. The original act provided that these Commissioners should serve, and appropriated for their expenses. I think the gentleman is attempting to apply a provision that never was intended to be applied under conditions such as exist here. This Commission was specially authorized by law, and has continued to act, always has acted, and is now acting without compensation; and I want to say that the appropriation here, in accordance with the original act creating the Commission, is to pay their expenses—disbursements.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It may be that it was not the intention of Congress to repeal the law creating this Commission; but it seems to me that it does in effect, because it does prohibit any officer of the Government from accepting voluntary service.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Indiana tell the Chair where that provision can be found in the urgent deficiency bill?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It is section 3, the last section of the urgent deficiency bill, amending section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, and my interpretation of it is that the words—

Nor shall any Department or any officer of the Government accept voluntary service for the Government or employ personal service in excess of that authorized by law—is positive prohibition. That prohibition applies to the employment of the services of this Commission, as the Government shall not accept voluntary services; and where it is authorized to employ, it shall not employ in excess of that expressly authorized by law.

Mr. SHERMAN. Here is a provision that is expressly provided for by law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Yes; but this is voluntary.

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly. The law provided that it should be voluntary, and it is voluntary now; and this section does not propose to pay them any compensation whatever. It simply pays their expenses. The law formerly required these Commissioners to be present at every letting held within the United States, and provided that no bids should be accepted, no matter how large or small, without the O. K. of this Commission. That has been somewhat changed. But this Commission is empowered to be present at every letting, to inspect the goods, power to visit the reservations, make reports, and all that sort of thing. They never have had any compensation, save their secretary. The law provides that they may pay one of their number compensation to act as secretary to the board. Outside of that not one single cent is paid for compensation. This fund is used for paying their actual and necessary disbursements in coming to Washington when necessary to visit the Secretary, in going to the reservations, or in coming to New York or Chicago. This Commission is composed of very distinguished men from all over the United States. It is necessary for them to travel many miles. Bishop Walker, of Buffalo, is one member of the Commission; Mr. Philip Garrett, of Philadelphia, is another; Mr. Albert G. Smalley, of New York, is another; and this fund is intended to meet the legitimate traveling expenses of the members of this Commission in going from their homes to the various points at which the service for the Government, gratuitous service, is to be rendered.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Does this Commission render service of any special benefit to the Government?

Mr. SHERMAN. I think it does. The members, particularly Mr. James, Mr. Garrett, and Mr. Lyon, attend all the lettings in New York. They are there day after day and perform services of value. The mere fact that these men, who stand high in the minds of all philanthropic people, are present looking after the interests of the Indians, satisfies the public mind that there is justice being done; and there is a feeling that no wrong can creep in. I think, if for no other reason, it is a wise expenditure to satisfy the public as to this branch of the service to which I have referred which relates to the supplies to the Indians. It is a wise expenditure simply to satisfy the public that that is conducted as it should be.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will say to the gentleman that these men have been acting on this board since 1869, being appointed, I believe, under President Grant's Administration; and they have been found to be very beneficial to the Indian Service. They collect a great many statistics of facts that could not very well be gotten otherwise.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Albert K. Smiley, of this Commission, has, in his endeavors to promote the welfare of the Indian, spent more every year for the last twenty years, in my judgment, than Congress has appropriated for the entire expenses of this Commission.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. That has been my information in regard to it.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, for the information of the House, I should like to read the law which defines the authority of the Commission.

And hereafter the Commission shall only have power to visit and inspect agencies and other branches of the Indian Service, and to inspect goods purchased for said Service; and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs shall consult with the Commission in the purchase of supplies. The Commission shall report their doings to the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. SHERMAN. They make an annual report every year, which is published.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I doubt if the Congress had in mind, in the enactment of the statute I referred to, the abolition of this particular Commission, even if the law operates to abolish it. It seems to me it might properly be so interpreted. But in view of the explanation made by the gentleman (and I appreciate the force of the reasons that have been stated for the continuation of the Commission), I will withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

MATRONS.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to employ suitable persons as matrons to teach Indian girls in housekeeping and other household duties, at a rate not to exceed $70 per month, and for furnishing necessary equipments, and renting quarters where necessary, $25,000. Provided, That the amount paid said matrons shall not come within the limit for employees fixed by the act of June 7, 1897.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, in line 4 I move to strike out "seventy" and insert "sixty."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 14, in line 4, strike out "seventy" and insert "sixty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the construction of an irrigation system necessary for developing and furnishing a water supply for the irrigation of the lands of the Pima Indians in the vicinity of Sacaton, on the Gila River Indian Reservation, $250,000, to be expended out of the irrigation reclamation fund, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, further, That when said irrigation system is in successful operation, and the Indians have become self-supporting, the cost of operating the said system shall be equitably apportioned upon the lands irrigated, and to the annual charge shall be added an amount sufficient to pay back into the Treasury the cost of the work within thirty years, suitable deduction being made for the amounts received from disposal of lands which now form a part of said reservation ($490,000).

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against the words in this paragraph beginning with the word "to," in line 11, and ending with the word "Interior," in line 13.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wyoming makes a point of order against the words in lines 11, 12, and 13 which he has indicated. Does the gentleman desire to be heard?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, the suggestion is made——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would suggest that he does not need to hear from the gentleman from Wyoming until after he has heard from the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I wish to amend my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well; the Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. MONDELL. Against all after and including the word "to," in line 11——

Mr. SHERMAN. The only words against which the gentleman desires to make the point of order, as I understand it, are the words "out of the irrigation reclamation fund."

Mr. MONDELL. Down to and including the word "fund," in line 12, the words to be stricken out being the following:

To be expended out of the irrigation reclamation fund.

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, no; leave in the words—to be expended—

So that it will read—

to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. CURTIS. I suggest to the gentleman that he simply raise the point of order against the words "out of the irrigation reclamation fund." That covers the question.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, that is satisfactory to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair then understands that the gentleman from Wyoming makes the point of order against the words, in lines 11 and 12, "out of the irrigation reclamation fund."

Mr. MONDELL. I make the point of order that those words are a change of existing law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] desire to be heard?

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, the original act authorizing this work did not provide that the payment should be made out of the reclamation fund. That is all I can say.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I move to strike out the last word, and in that connection I should like to inquire of the chairman of the committee whether this bill creates any new or additional offices; and if so, how many, and to what extent they make a charge on the Treasury?

Mr. SHERMAN. There are no new or additional offices created. In the change of the form we have in one place specifically provided for the support of a school which has heretofore been supported out of the general fund, and there we have appropriated for the superintendent of the school. We create no new or additional offices.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. It is the same superintendent?

Mr. SHERMAN. The same superintendent; and we specifically appropriate for his salary, instead of paying it out of the general fund.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. But it makes no additional charge on the Treasury?

Mr. SHERMAN. No.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Now, does the bill omit any officers? I notice by an analysis of the Indian appropriation bill for 1906——

Mr. SHERMAN. It omits the Shoshone Agency, and dispenses with that agent, whose salary is $1,800.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. It relieves the Treasury of how much?

Mr. SHERMAN. Eighteen hundred dollars.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. So that the bill, as a matter of fact, instead of adding to, decreases the charge on the Treasury so far as officers are concerned.

Mr. SHERMAN. No; that is not so, because it increases the compensation to be paid to the police.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. So that the net result is an increase or decrease?

Mr. SHERMAN. The net result, so far as the payment of officers is concerned, is an increase, but the net result of the bill is a decrease of $550,000 below last year's appropriation, and an appropriation of $400,000 less than the estimates for this year.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. What is the result, if the chairman can give the information, with references to the offices omitted?

Mr. SHERMAN. No change except the Shoshone agent, who was paid $1,800, is omitted.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That is offset by the salary or wages of the police department.

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; very largely; an increase of $100,000 for Indian police.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Does not that increase the number?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; only the compensation.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. What is the occasion for that?

Mr. SHERMAN. The occasion of the increased appropriation is that the Commissioner found he could not retain the services of the best men at the former compensation, which was $15 a month for a captain and $10 a month for a private. He recommended the increase so that he could pay $25 a month for a captain and $15 a month for a private.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. And the aggregate result is $100,000?

Mr. SHERMAN. One hundred thousand dollars; but the gentleman must remember that these officers furnish their own horses. They are largely used to restrain the traffic in liquor.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Do they get anything in the way of compensation by the way of being found?

Mr. SHERMAN. No; they are not found.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. They get their food and supplies at cost price?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

For the purpose of removing obstructions from the bed of the stream which drains into the Eel River in the Round Valley Reservation, Mendocino County, Cal., $8,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 19, line 19, for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to return to page 19, line 19, for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 19, line 19, before the word "dollars," add the words "and fifty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For clerical work and labor connected with the sale and leasing of Creek and the leasing of Cherokee lands, $30,000.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 23, after line 11, insert "that there is appropriated, out of any money in the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,236 to pay Toney E. Proctor $2 per day in lieu of subsistence from August 13, 1899, to April 23, 1901, while serving as townsite appraiser of Wagner, Ind. T., Creek Nation.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me ask the gentleman if this is the item for which the committee reported a separate bill?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Yes; a few days ago.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the maintenance, strengthening, and enlarging of the tribal schools of the Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Seminole nations, and making provision for the attendance of children of noncitizens therein, and the establishment of new schools under the control of the Department of the Interior, the sum of $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior, and disbursed by him under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make an inquiry with reference to lines 17 and 18, page 25. I see that these funds are placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior. I think it should be the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, because it applies to the five tribes of the Indian Territory, and all the other school matters are in the hands of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN. The gentleman knows that the affairs in the Indian Territory are in the hands of the Secretary rather than in the hands of the Commissioner.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think that the gentleman will find that school matters in the Indian Territory are in the hands of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

Mr. SHERMAN. Not in the Indian Territory. The administration of Indian Affairs in the Territory is all within the jurisdiction distinctly of the Secretary and not the Commissioner.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will look that up, and ask to return to it if necessary.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the formal amendment is withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For permanent annuity for support of blacksmith, per sixth article of treaty of October 18, 1820, ninth article of treaty of January 20, 1825, and thirteenth article of treaty of June 22, 1855, $600.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to ask the chairman of the committee if he will not consent to return to line 19, page 25, for the purpose of offering an amendment. I desire to increase the sum from $100,000 to $150,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not object to returning to the line and page mentioned.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I move, Mr. Chairman, to amend by adding, after the word "hundred," in line 16, the words "and fifty;" so as to make it $150,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to return to page 25 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 25, line 16, after the word "hundred," insert the words "and fifty."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, $150,000 is the amount appropriated last year, and only $98,000 was expended, and only $100,000 is asked for this year.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I understand the reason of that is that the schools have not had time to be gotten in operation, and that this next year they can well expend $150,000, having organized the school communities and having the children so grouped that they can send them to school. In that country it takes some time to organize their schools and secure or build schoolhouses.

Mr. SHERMAN. But the gentleman knows that they receive certain fees from the recording officers, which adds very materially. It seems to me, if I remember correctly, it more than doubles the amount.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. If the gentleman will excuse me, I am informed that none of those fees have ever been paid to the school fund, that they are outstanding somewhere.

Mr. SHERMAN. But the law compels their payment into the school fund.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. But they have not been paid in. That is the information I have from the people who live there and understand the matter.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think that is an error.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, your informants must be mistaken, because the Secretary of the Interior when the bill was prepared to wind up the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes referred to those fees and asked that the laws be reenacted, so there is no question about the surplus fees being used for the maintenance of schools in the Indian Territory.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The law required that to be done. But I do not think the appropriation has been made, at least I do not think that it has become part of the fund at the present time.

Mr. CURTIS. There is no appropriation required. The money is paid to the Attorney-General, and he turns it over to the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. This fund, I will state to the gentleman, of $50,000 extra would be returned to the Treasury if it is not used. If the excess funds coming from the clerk fees are sufficient to carry on the schools then it would not be necessary to use this fund, but unless this additional $50,000 is put in this bill the schools will become very inefficient. I hope the amendment will be agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 750 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kans., and for transportation of pupils to and from said school, $125,250.
For pay of superintendent at said school, $2,500.
For general repairs and improvements, $8,000.
For dairy barn, $6,000, to be immediately available.
For draining and ditching, $4,500, to be immediately available.
In all, $146,250.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7, page 30, after the word "barn," strike out the word "six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to cancel the record of the patent issued to Charlotte Nay taw me ge zhick for the south half of the northeast quarter, section 29, township 51 north, range 33 west, on the L'Anse Reservation, in Michigan, and to issue a patent of like force and effect to Charles Beneche, a member of said tribe, for the above-described land.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to strike out this section, because by some mistake it is a duplicate of the one that follows.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves to amend by striking out the paragraph contained within lines 17 to 24 on page 34. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

PIPESTONE SCHOOL.

For support and education of 200 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., $33,400.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 35, line 20, after the word "hundred," insert the words "and twenty-five," and in lines 21 and 22, after the word "Minnesota," strike out the words "thirty-three thousand four hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the words "thirty-seven thousand five hundred and seventy-five."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have the gentleman from Minnesota give some explanation of his reason for offering this amendment.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, the Pipestone Indian School now has in regular attendance 210 pupils. More would be in attendance if there were room for them. Room will be found for more pupils in the coming year by reason of the fact that two new buildings, one a home for the superintendent and the other a home for the employees, now housed in the existing buildings, will be erected. So that during the coming fiscal year there will be room at that school for thirty or forty pupils more. It seems only proper, therefore, that 225 pupils should be provided for under the circumstances, because pupils are seeking admission that now can not be admitted.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not oppose the amendment.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to ask the gentleman whether or not this matter has been referred to the Secretary of the Interior or the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Have they reported on the necessity for this increased amount?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. I can not answer that definitely.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Did the gentleman appear before the committee and ask that the appropriation be enlarged?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. I did not, being occupied at the time with other duties.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then where does this demand come from?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. From my own personal knowledge.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Have the professors in charge of the school out there and the superintendents made a demand upon the gentleman for this?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Not exactly. When I was visiting the school I looked over the buildings and asked how many pupils could be accommodated and whether the authorities had to go out and search for pupils or whether the pupils were seeking admission to that particular school. My friend from Texas understands that that is a sort of Holy Land for the Indians. Included in that reservation is the Pipestone quarry, out of which the sacred peace pipes are made. The Indians have peculiar regard for that locality. Moreover, for other reasons it is a very desirable section to be in. It is a very well settled portion of the country, and young men when they get through the school can find employment there. Consequently there is great demand at that school for admission.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. What is the increased appropriation which you ask?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. To allow for twenty-five more pupils. As I explained, they can be taken care of in the existing buildings during the coming year, because there is now provided a home for the superintendent, who now lives in one of the buildings, and a building for the employees now quartered among the other buildings.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For improvement to water system, $2,000.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 36, line 1, after the word "system," strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "five."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, in the absence of information other than I have before me I shall have to oppose this amendment. The superintendent in his report says this:

A very important improvement required at this time is the enlargement of the water-storage capacity. The present 500-barrel tank is practically no fire protection, as the forced water through a 2-inch hose is not sufficient to give any appreciable good result in extinguishing even a small fire where the distance the water is thrown amounts to more than 10 or 15 feet. The present water supply is somewhat limited also, both as to the source of supply and storage. Another well is said to be necessary. For the improvement of the water system $2,000 is recommended.

Now, the superintendent seemingly makes out a very clear case that something should be done, but he states that $2,000 is all that is necessary. If the gentleman from Minnesota from his personal observation and experience can demonstrate that $2,000 is not sufficient, why I have not anything further to say.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, when I last visited the institution at Pipestone I went over this matter with the superintendent. From what I could learn I am of opinion that $2,000 is not sufficient.

The present water supply is furnished by a tank of 500 barrels capacity. This is not sufficient to supply the water for the daily needs of the school, let alone to make any provision in the case of fire.

Mr. SHERMAN. Permit me to ask you when was this visit made?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. I can not now remember the exact date.

Mr. SHERMAN. The point I wish to ascertain is whether the visit was made since about the 1st of September, when this report to which I refer was made.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. No, sir; it was not.

Mr. SHERMAN. It was made prior to that time?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. It was made prior to that time. If the superintendent in that report estimates $2,000 as sufficient, why his information is better than mine.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have read to the gentleman all that is said on the subject. I think the superintendent's report was made probably in September, possibly the 1st of October last, and he asked for $2,000 for the purpose, and the superintendent's statement as to conditions does not vary at all from what the gentleman from Minnesota has said.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. That is satisfactory to me, Mr. Chairman, and as the superintendent seems to think that $2,000 is sufficient, I withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

To maintain at the city of St. Louis, Mo., in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, a warehouse for the receipt, storage, and shipping of goods for the Indian Service, $8,000.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 39, line 8, strike out the word "eight" and insert the word "ten;" so as to read "ten thousand dollars."

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, from the time this warehouse was originally established the appropriation was $10,000 annually. I can not account for the recommendation, which I understand has been made by the Interior Department, to cut that amount from $10,000 to $8,000. According to the figures which have been furnished me by the superintendent of that warehouse, the actual expenses to run it were eighty-two hundred and fifty and some odd dollars, and it seems to me it certainly can not be the intention of either the committee or the Department to cripple the warehouse, in view of the fact that the business of that institution is constantly increasing; and I therefore hope that the committee will accept this amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. We provided the amount which the Commissioner asked us to provide. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] presents figures which show that last year it cost to maintain this warehouse more than that amount. But I assume that the Commissioner contemplates certain economies by which he can reduce the amount that was required last year during the coming fiscal year. We have provided here an appropriation in the amount which the Commissioner asks. It seems as though that ought to be sufficient.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, this expenditure of money has been made under the most economical management possible. The men employed in that warehouse are a superintendent, a clerk, and two laborers. They certainly can not get along with less than that, and the expenditures for rent and light, in addition, brought up the amount to $8,250 last year. I can not account for a reduction except upon the theory that it is an error on the part of some one, and I sincerely hope that the gentleman will accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as folows:

To maintain at the city of Omaha, Nebr., in the discretion of the Secretary, a warehouse for the receipt, storage, and shipping of goods for the Indian Service, $8,000.

Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 19, page 42, strike out the word "eight" and insert the word "ten;" so as to make the appropriation $10,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that the committee has seen fit to change the appropriation for the warehouse at St. Louis to $10,000, I do not think I shall oppose the changing of this to $10,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. KENNEDY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to issue fee-simple patents to the following parties for the lands heretofore allotted them: Louis Dick and Ida C. Shott, Omaha allottees Nos. 962 and 916, respectively; David St. Cyr, Daniel Rice, Alexander St. Cyr, Charles Raymond, Louis Armell, Louis St. Cyr, Mrs. Elsie E. Paulson (née Perry), Mrs. Henrietta Lemmon, and Henry Lemmon, Winnebago allottees Nos. 248, 419, 139, 338, 237, 245, 509, 132, and 136, respectively; Mary Whiting, Ponca (Nebraska) allottee No. 11; Rosa Baker and Emma M. Post, Ponca (Nebraska) allottees Nos. 39 and 106, respectively; Josephine Amell, Winnebago allottee No. 235; Zally Rulo, Ponca (Nebraska) allottee No. 83; George W. Dupuis, Koyakewin, William Holmes, Mary Rockwood, Henry Ross, Frank H. Young, Samuel Baskin, John Hoffman, David Thomas, Joseph Coursoll, jr., Samuel Thomas, Cecilia Coursoll, Julia Rouillard, Frederick A. Dupuis, Alemia Jones, Eliza Rouillard, Edward Mackey, Andrew Jackson Felix, David Mazakute, Henry Felix, Wakinyangi or Samuel, Alfred Dupuis, Samuel Campbell, Mary Coursoll, Thomas Whipple, and Jannie Cox, Santee Sioux allottees Nos. 195, 32, 839, 179, 758, 99, 844, 359, 427, 53, 425, 76, 831, 71, 816, 830, 677, 710, 394, 709, 386, 194, 821, 74, 807, and 246, respectively; Fannie Baker, Rosebud Sioux allottee No. 1, Sioux ceded tract; James Garvie, Santee allottee No. 15; and the issuance of said patents shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of the lands so patented.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "Shott," line 24, page 42, insert:
"Elsie Grace Pilcher, William H. Campbell, Henry Guitar, Harriet L. Pilcher, Me khu bae, or Anna Mary Walker."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Also the following amendment:

After the word "16," in line 25, page 42, insert:
"492, 892, 420, 366, 369."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Also the following amendment:

After the word "Post," line 10, page 43, insert:
"Mary Knudsen, Buffalo Chip, White Dog, Frank Sherman, Runs Bowing, or William Elk, William Bear, Mary Lesor."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Also the following:

After the word "6," in line 12, page 43, insert:
"20, 2, 100, 88, 84, 95, 133."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Also the following:

After the word "Cox," line 22, page 43, insert:
"Reuben H. Cahney, Sarah Sheridan, Tae hu tam be, or Harvey Warner, Ge u ka, or Charles Stabler, Peter Felix, jr., Hinhanskaden, or Thomas Whiteowl, Dennie Felix, James Hemans, Charles Wicanhpidutawin, Bushman Chapman, Wacanga, George Goodteacher, Asdohewin, John Halfiron, David Boy, Hupojanjanwin, Samuel Stone, Andrew Sherman, Wospimaniwin, Phillip Webster, Joseph Paypay, Sarah Jones, Cantanna, or Thomas Whipple, Wihaki, or Lina Whipple, Thomas Rouillard, Samuel Whipple, August Trudell, John Ross, Joseph Samuels."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Also the following:

After the words "46," line 9, page 44, insert:
"314, 292, 508, 396, 708, 468, 714, 363, 375, 650, 15, 100, 344, 204, 788, 349, 311, 379, 50, 326, 472, 126, 809, 810, 828, 396, 548, 513, 826."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word simply for the purpose of saying that all of these amendments have been offered by instruction from the Committee on Indian Affairs, and that all of these provisions, the issuance of these patents, both those originally provided in the bill and all the amendments which I have offered, have been specifically reported on, each individual, by the Indian Bureau, whose officer, special agent, or inspector has examined into the conditions in each particular case and made a special report thereon.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is there not some provision in the Department of the Interior for the issuance of patents under proper circumstances?

Mr. SHERMAN. There is not. And last year, when reporting the Indian bill, we incorporated therein a general provision of that character, and it went out on a point of order.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Does the gentleman think it would be advisable?

Mr. SHERMAN. I think it would be advisable to make a general provision to meet all such cases.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I wish, for the benefit of the committee, to say that the bill H. R. 11496, which has been favorably reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs, contains that provision, and I hope to call up the bill within a very few days, and hope it will pass.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. LACEY. I move to strike out the last word. I renew the pro forma amendment.

I would like to say, in this connection, that the proposition of having a general law is superior to the present method. Under a general law the Indian Department would release the Indian and give him a patent with full authority as provided by the law through these special acts. Now, by giving this privilege always through a special act and by naming the party in an appropriation bill there is much more danger that some name will slip in without being duly considered than there would be if the matter were handled by general law, because between the two Houses an amendment could be inserted on the floor of the House adding this name or that name, with little or no consideration. That could not occur if the matter were provided for by general law instead of in this special way.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. If the gentleman will allow this suggestion. If a provision were made by general law for the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to issue the patents under proper circumstances, he would then have the entire responsibility for the administration of that branch of the law and would doubtless be more careful in the examination of the several cases as they presented themselves. Under this system of Congress authorizing the issuing of patents, it must carry the final responsibility. It seems to me that this ought to lessen the feeling of responsibility on the part of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. I think the general-law policy is a better one, too.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to issue fee simple patents to the following parties for the lands heretofore allotted them: Victoria Ezell (née Bradley), Glen Bradley, Alexander B. Peltier, Lincoln Kennedy, John B. Bruno, Lucy A. Lourane, Zoe Rhood, Nellie Finley, Eliza J. Neiswender, Davis Hardin, Daniel Chilsom, Amanda Nadeau (née Toupin), and William Frapp, Citizen Pottawatomie allottees Nos. 180, 182, 113, 1351, 121, 210, 104, 563, 17, 41, 702, 98, and 738, respectively; Albert M. Glardy, John B. Bergeron, Catherine Peltier, and Anthony Bourbonnais, jr., Citizen Pottawatomie allottees in Oklahoma Nos. 1363, 37, and 34, respectively; Julia Lazelle and Philip Wickens, Citizen Pottawatomie allottees Nos. 117 and 583, respectively; and the issuance of said patents shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of the lands so patented.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, on page 57, line 14, after the word "Toupin," insert the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "Toupin," page 57, line 14, insert the following: "R. W. Dike, Doshia E. Phillips, née Kennedy, Joseph Bertrand, Benjamin Bertrand, Dan. O'Brien, Philip Wickens."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, following the word "thirty-eight," at the end of line 20, insert the following.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "thirty-eight," line 20, page 57, insert "371, 140, 772, 774, 109, 583."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. On page 58, after the word "respectively," in line 3, insert.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "respectively," line 3, page 58, insert "heir of Horace P. Jones, Kiowa allottee No. 2356."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. After the word "patented," in line 5, same page, insert the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "patented," line 5, page 58, insert:
"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay out of the funds of the Otoe and Missouri Indians of Oklahoma Territory the sum of $182.50 to the Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf Railroad Company for five tickets from Oklahoma City to Washington, D. C., furnished members of said tribe, the payment of which has been asked by the council of said tribe."

The question was taken; and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For additional salary for superintendent in charge, $1,000.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Reserving the point of order, I want to inquire what is the purpose of this appropriation, as it seems to me to be new legislation.

Mr. SHERMAN. Which paragraph?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. For additional salary for superintendent in charge of Carlisle school, $1,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is not new legislation. The Carlisle school has for twenty years been in charge of an Army officer, and in order to induce the Army officer, who has been desired to remain there under that assignment, it has been necessary to give some extra compensation. Captain Pratt was there for a great many years, and rendered service of the utmost value. Captain Mercer is now there; a man of extraordinary executive ability, exceptionally well qualified to act as the head of a great institution of that kind. There are more than 1,000 pupils there, and this provision gives this amount of compensation in addition to his Army salary.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And the law already authorizes this appropriation, does it?

Mr. SHERMAN. Well, it is current. No; under the correct rulings of the Chairman here there is no law on the subject. It simply has been carried. It has been the custom from year to year to pay the Army officer who held the position this additional compensation.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And this appropriation has been carried on the appropriation bill for a number of years, has it?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes; for ten years.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

CHAMBERLAIN SCHOOL.

For the support and education of 200 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Chamberlain, S. Dak., $33,400;
For pay of superintendent of said school, $1,600;
For general repairs and improvements, $2,500;
For fire house and equipment, for two reservoirs or water tanks, and changing sewer, $12,000;
In all, $49,500.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, there was a misprint here, so that I move to strike out in lines 5 and 6 the words "two thousand five hundred dollars;" and in line 9, to reduce the total by $2,500; so that it will read:

For general repairs and improvements, and for fire house and equipment for two reservoirs or water tanks, and for changing sewer, $12,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 5 and 6 strike out "two thousand five hundred dollars" and insert "and."

In line 8, after "and," insert "for;" and in line 9 strike out "forty-nine thousand five hundred" and insert "forty-seven thousand."

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Does this increase the appropriation?

Mr. SHERMAN. It reduces it. The committee agreed on it in that form, but it is simply a mistake in printing.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For general repairs and improvements, and for cement veneer for old buildings, $6,000.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "dollars," in line 18, on page 61, insert "two thousand five hundred dollars, to be immediately available."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to cancel the patents for the allotments made to Thomas Bull, Sarah Bull, and Lillie Bull, Yankton Sioux allottees Nos. 1136, 1137, and 1138, respectively, and to reallot the lands covered by said patents to members of the Yankton Sioux tribe who were entitled to allotment, but failed to receive lands when the Indians of said tribe were allotted lands in severalty; the patent issued December 31, 1901, in the name of James Longhat, Wichita allottee No. 582, and he is further authorized to cause the land covered thereby to be allotted to Gertrude Lamp, a member of the Wichita tribe of Indians who failed to receive an allotment, although legally entitled thereto.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to issue fee simple patents to the following parties for the lands heretofore allotted them: Frances Ree, Victoria McBride, and Peter Picotte, Yankton Sioux allottees Nos. 228, 462, and 162, respectively; Louis Cutschall (née Herman), Rosebud allottee No. 643; George W. Dripps, Yankton Sioux allottee No. 1435; Joseph Volin, Yankton allottee No. 1129; and the issuance of said patents shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of the lands so patented; heirs of Louis Dechon, Alexis V. Renville, William M. Weatherstone, Daisy Rice, Mary S. Weatherstone, James Weatherstone, Ada Cloutier, Ralph Weatherstone, and Joseph La Fromboise, Sisseton and Wahpeton allottees Nos. 215, 1070, 1300, 1307, 1296, 1301, 212, and 724 (two numbers), 1299, and 1337, respectively; and the issuance of said patents shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of the lands so patented.

Mr. SHERMAN. On page 66 I move to strike out the word "the," at the end of line 9, and also to strike out all of lines 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15. The provision is duplicated on page 57.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers the following amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 66, beginning with the word "the," at the end of line 9, strike out the remainder of the paragraph.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. On the same page, in line 19, I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 66, in line 19, after the word "Picotte," insert:
"Louis Shunk, Frank La Rochelle, Louise Barbier Moran, Kate Marion Barbier, Peter La Grande, Lucy S. Patton, Joseph Dubray, Frederick Barbier, Marie Barbier."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. On the same page, in line 22, after the word "two," I move to insert the numbers which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers the following amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 22, after the word "two," insert "1,038, 817, 1,416, 1,356, 776, 1,007, 1,040, 1,354, 779, 242, 780."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. In the same line, after the word "Louis," add the letter "e," so that the spelling will be "Louise."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 66, in line 22, change the spelling of "Louis" to "Louise."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For general incidental expenses of the Indian service in Utah, including traveling expenses of agents, $1,000.

Mr. HOWELL of Utah. I offer the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Utah offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, after line 6, page 68:
"For the construction of an irrigation system necessary for developing and furnishing a water supply for the irrigation of the lands of the Uinta and White River Utes in Uinta County, Utah, $125,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the total cost of the entire construction and installation of said irrigating system shall not exceed $600,000: And provided further, That all moneys expended on said irrigation system shall be reimbursed to the United States from the proceeds of the sale of lands of the Uinta Reservation."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I raise a point of order on that amendment, but I will reserve it if the gentleman from Utah desires to address the Chair.

[Mr. HOWELL of Utah addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the amendment is subject to a point of order, and will therefore sustain the point of order.

Mr. HOWELL of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert after line 6, page 68:
"A right of way for the construction and maintenance of canals and ditches for mining, irrigation, or manufacturing purposes through or across the grazing lands set apart for the Indians in the late Uintah Indian Reservation is hereby granted."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against that if the gentleman wishes to discuss it.

Mr. HOWELL of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I hope the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] will not insist on his point of order against this amendment. In a former amendment I sought to provide for funds to enable the Secretary of the Interior to protect the rights of the Indians to sufficient water for their allotted lands; the wisdom and advisability have, I trust, been clearly set forth in my remarks on that amendment.

In support of the present amendment let me briefly explain the situation that confronts the settlers who have filed on homesteads in that section of the State known as the "Uintah Reservation." It appears that there have already been made on the lands in this reservation recently thrown open to settlement some 1,300 entries, aggregating over 200,000 acres; and this all happened within the brief time from the opening to the beginning of the inclement weather, and under the limitations imposed by the President's proclamation for the first sixty days. With the advent of spring—that is to say, as soon as the rigorous climate of that country will permit of ready access to it—and under the regulations of the homestead laws which now prevail there, settlers will be drawn to this Uintah country in large numbers to avail themselves of the opportunities there afforded for making homes.

This section of country is traversed by a number of beautiful mountain streams from which these newly opened lands can be watered. Without irrigation these lands are like those in many other portions of the West—desert and barren, and therefore of little value. With water, however, they contain boundless possibilities in the shape of crops of cereals, grasses, fruits, and vegetables. These mountain streams carry water sufficient not only for the agricultural lands allotted to the Indians, but also for thousands of the prosperous farm homes of the white settlers.

But this is the situation with respect to these white settlers who, with the sturdy characteristics of the western pioneer, have taken up lands in that comparatively remote section. It happens that the Secretary of the Interior in making the choice of grazing lands for the Indians, as provided for by law, selected these same lands along the margins of the streams. It also happens that, except by permission of the Interior Department, no right of way for ditches or canals can be obtained. It is therefore in the power of this same Department to completely nullify the efforts of the settlers who desire to develop and make fruitful this naturally favored portion of the State by refusing permission to construct the necessary irrigation canals across these Indian lands, so as to convey the water onto the fields of the settlers.

To all applications thus far made for the necessary rights of way the Secretary has given an absolute refusal. I will not say that he has not been actuated by a praiseworthy determination to guard the rights of the Indians. I merely state the facts in the matter.

As appears from the recent presentation of this subject to the House Committee on Indian Affairs, the Indian Commissioner strongly urges an appropriation that was deemed ample to secure an adequate water right for all the Indian allottees. I have earnestly advocated this policy as being as wise as it is necessary.

What should be said of a guardian under similar circumstances who would refuse or neglect to faithfully guard the interests of his ward? But is not this precisely the attitude of the Government with respect to these lands?

Without making any provisions for securing the necessary water rights for the Indians, it denies the right to white settlers there to convey water across the Indian lands and onto their own fields, and thus prevents these same settlers from making homes, with the effect that the further disposal of lands will be checked, to the ultimate injury of the Indians.

Now, Mr. Chairman, this dog-in-the-manger policy is an outrage on those settlers who, at great expense and in the full expectation of a "square deal" from the Government, have cast their lot there and intend to make this desert land fruitful and productive. The necessity for this provision which is incorporated in my amendment is urgent and ought to be adopted. I hope the gentleman from New York [Mr. SHERMAN] will withdraw his point of order and allow this provision to be inserted in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to issue fee-simple patents to the following parties for the lands heretofore allotted them: L. F. Laqua, a Yakima Indian, to his allotment, No. 780; Susan Stone (Swasey), a Yakima Indian, to her allotment, No. 286; Suis Sis Kin, or Loupe Loupe Charley, No. 4, Yakima, now Waterville, Wash.; Margaret Sar Sarp Kin, No. 6, Washington; and the issuance of said patents shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of the lands so patented.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, on page 71, line 7, I wish to have inserted an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 71, line 7, after the word "Washington," insert "Charles Wammasy, Yakima allottee, No. 1618."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to cause an investigation to be made of the claims of the Potawatomi Indians of Wisconsin, as set forth in their memorial to Congress printed in Senate Document No. 185, Fifty-seventh Congress, second session, and to report thereon to Congress at the beginning of the next session thereof, showing, on the best information now obtainable, what number of said Indians continued to reside in the State of Wisconsin after the treaty of September 26, 1833, their proportionate shares of the annuities, trust funds, and other moneys paid to or expended for the tribe to which they belong, in which the claimant Indians have not shared, the amount of such moneys retained in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the claimant Indians as directed by the provision of the act of Congress approved June 25, 1864; if none have been so retained the amount that should have been annually so retained under said law, showing also what disposition has been made of the annuities, trust funds, and other moneys of said tribe, with the amounts and the status of any now remaining to their credit in the Treasury or otherwise. He will also cause an enrollment to be made of said Potawatomi Indians.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order with a veiw of asking the chairman of the committee what the necessity is for authorizing this investigation.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will ask the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BROWN] to answer the gentleman. A separate bill has been reported and the gentleman from Wisconsin made the report and is very familiar with the facts.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Chairman, I will say that at the time the Potawatomi Indians of Wisconsin and Michigan were transferred to Kansas a good many of them were compelled to go against their wishes. During the intervening years they have drifted back into Iowa, Wisconsin, and into Michigan. The reason for their leaving Kansas was the fact that they were located there on prairie land, and these Indians had always resided in a timber and lake country. They were not satisfied to remain in Kansas, and in consequence of that, 500 or 600 Indians have drifted back into southern Wisconsin, many into Michigan, and I think some have stopped in Iowa. It is desired to get an enrollment of these Indians for the reason that there are certain trust funds which have been distributed in part to the Kansas Indians, and other funds remaining in the Treasury which should be distributed to the Indians in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. These Indians in leaving Kansas did not relinquish their right to the trust fund?

Mr. CURTIS. If I may answer the gentleman, the Department has never held that the Potawatomi Indians abandoned their rights by going to Wisconsin. Within the last two years a census has been taken of the Potawatomi Indians in Wisconsin who belong to the Kansas tribe. Nearly every year members of the tribe who are in Wisconsin come to Kansas to draw their annuities. I do not see how any harm can come from this legislation, and, in fact, it will give the Department needed information.

Mr. BROWN. This provision is to get the information before the House, and it provides for a report to be made to the next Congress, so that if legislation is necessary Congress can take it up.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I inferred from the character of the provision that it was its purpose to authorize an investigation of the condition that if the share of the trust funds that lawfully belonged to these Indians had been paid over to any of the other members of the tribe or nation, that perhaps there would be a claim against the Government for the fund that had been so diverted and paid over.

Mr. CURTIS. I think not. Under the rules of the Department payment of annuities is refused to the Indians who are away from the reservation, and many of the Potawatomies come back to Kansas to draw their annuities. There has been no general payment of funds to the Potawatomies in Kansas during the last few years.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Suppose, now, that an investigation should show that these Indians—the Potawatomi in Wisconsin and other places who have gone from Kansas—are entitled to certain funds that have not been segregated, put up for them, how will they be benefited?

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, I think under the rules of the Department they did not forfeit their rights in the general fund, but they would forfeit their rights to the annual payment of annuities. At least I am informed that the Department has so held.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I was prompted to make this inquiry because I think the only Indian that lives in the district I have the honor to represent is John Madigan, who is a Potawatomi, and who has been half a dozen times to inquire about his rights up in Wisconsin.

Mr. CURTIS. A few years ago a bill was passed authorizing the payment of a certain amount of money to the Potawatomi in Indiana who did not follow their brothers to Wisconsin, Michigan, and Kansas.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, this paragraph provides only for an investigation, so that I do not see that any harm could result. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws his point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to issue fee-simple patents to the following parties for the lands heretofore allotted to them: (Compson) Doxtater, William Cornelius, Ida Powless, Daniel H. Cooper, Charles Elm, Abram Elm, Catherine Nynhan, Joshua Cornelius, Lehi Wheelock, Dennison Wheelock, Rachel Peters Jones, Jerusha Peters, and Alice Cornelius, Oneida allottees Nos. 137, 57, 224, 769, 1272, 1271, 1398, 1514, 373, 21, 310, 1137, and 62, respectively; Jacob Doxtater, allottee No. 1099; Rachel Elm, allottee No. 879; Jerusha Powless, allottee No. 1483; Hendrix Skenandooh, allottee No. 804; Hannah Hayes, allottee No. 305; Dolly Ann Doxtater, allottee No. 174; Martin Williams, allottee No. 420; Moses Webster, allottee No. 1135; Adam King, allottee No. 121; Elizabeth Nynham, allottee No. 1075; Elijah John, allottee No. 506; Silas Webster, allottee No. 1350; Henry Cooper, allottee No. 338; David King, allottee No. 201; Job Silas, allottee No. 333; Joseph Skenandooh, allottee No. 573; James Silas, allottee No. 255; John Parkhurst, allottee No. 236, and David Adams, allottee No. 594, Oneida Indians; Isaiah Sycles, Schuyler Nynham, Archie Wheelock, Truman Doxtater, Sophia Webster, Mary Webster, Jane Parkhurst, Henry Wheelock, Eva Jourdan, William Archquette, Sarah Hill, Frank Button, Sylvester Button, Margaret Thomas, William Christjohn, Frank Cornelius, Alice Cornelius, Hannah Hill, Sarah Sycles, Adam P. Cornelius, Thomas John, Esther Christjohn, Joseph Metozen, and James Wheelock, Oneida allottees Nos. 677, 1399, 1061, 1079, 184, 1183, 1277, 344, 839, 720, 471, 376, 1268, 876, 1238, 717, 718, 148, 1486, 713, 733, 364, 142, and 16, respectively, and the issuance of said patents shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of the lands so patented.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Following line 18, on page 75, add the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to issue a patent in fee to any Indian of the Oneida Reservation in Wisconsin for lands heretofore allotted him, and the issuance of such patent shall operate as a removal of all restrictions as to the sale, taxation, and alienation of the lands so patented."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 175 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., $29,225;
For pay of superintendent at said school, $1,800;
For general repairs and improvements, $5,000;
In all, $36,025.
For general incidental expenses of the Indian Service in Wyoming, including traveling expenses of agents, $1,000.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 76, at end of line 10, insert:

"That the provisions of sections 18, 19, 20, and 21 of the act entitled 'An act to repeal timber-culture laws, and for other purposes,' approved March 3, 1891, relating to rights of way through the public lands and reservations of the United States, are hereby extended over the lands on the Wind River Reservation in Wyoming, ceded by the Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians in the treaty ratified by the act of March 3, 1905: Provided, That the grantees under the said sections on the said ceded lands shall pay to the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of the said Indians the sum of $1.25 per acre for the lands covered by their rights of way."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that provision that it is new legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. SHERMAN. Certainly.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I trust the gentleman will not insist on his point of order, because I think the matter quite important. On the 3d of March last a bill was passed ratifying the agreement with the Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians for the sale of certain lands on the Wind River Reservation. The bill provided in section 2 that the lands ceded to the United States under such agreement shall be disposed of under the provisions of the homestead, town site, coal, and mineral land laws of the United States, clearly limiting the laws under which these lands could be disposed of. It was my impression at the time and that of others who gave the matter some study that the general right-of-way act of March 31, 1901, just referred to, and which gives rights of way for irrigating ditches over the public lands and reservations, extended over these lands when ceded. But after further consideration I am inclined to think it is that the right-of-way act does not extend over these lands. Now, this reservation must be irrigated. Steps are now being taken looking to its irrigation. What is now desired is that the general right-of-way act, which applies to all public lands and reservations, shall apply to these lands which were ceded by the bill of last March. The right-of-way act grants right of way for irrigation ditches and canals, subject to approval of the Secretary of the Interior. It is very doubtful whether without this legislation the Secretary would be empowered to grant the rights of way that must be had in order to build irrigating ditches necessary for the reclamation of this land.

Mr. LACEY. If this cession had not been granted, there is no question but what the right of way could have been granted?

Mr. MONDELL. No question at all, if they had remained Indian lands.

Mr. LACEY. That is, the land we ceded becomes public land and then comes in under the public-land law. What is the interval between the two transactions where this land gets lost so as not to be subject to the law?

Mr. MONDELL. The question is whether the land does become public land. I think the gentleman will agree with me that this land is not to all intents and purposes public land. It is land to be disposed of for the benefit of the Indians and under certain specific provisions of law. Now, if the law ceding this land antedated the right-of-way act, then the right-of-way act would have covered it, but the legislation ceding these lands was passed subsequent to the right-of-way act and makes provision distinctly and explicitly for the disposal of this land only under a certain law, and the strong probability is that the right-of-way act does not apply, so that the builders of the necessary ditches could not secure the right of way that they must have. Now, in order that the Indians shall be fully protected in this matter, I add to my amendment a provision not contained in the right-of-way act to the effect that all the land included in rights of way shall be paid for at $1.25 an acre, which is the average price paid for the land to the Indians. The legislation is exceedingly important and it is necessary for the development of the reservation. It is necessary that it should be had in order that the Indians may dispose of their land and that the settlers who may come upon it may build their ditches; and we give the Indians under this amendment what we do not grant elsewhere, to wit, payment for the lands included in the right of way, so that the Indians can not in any way be injured, and they will be benefited by reason of the fact that settlers can get rights of way for their ditches and canals, and will therefore be encouraged to settle on the lands. I hope, therefore, that the chairman will not insist upon his point of order.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I must make the point of order that this is legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 20 for the purpose of offering an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to return to page 20 that he may offer an amendment. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, in line 7, page 20, after the word "service," the word "eight" and insert "ten."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken; and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill to the House with the amendments with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. CURRIER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 15331), the Indian appropriation bill, and had directed him to report the same with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to, and the bill as amended do pass.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded upon any amendment? If not, the amendments will be voted upon in gross.

The question was taken; and the amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, Mr. HUGHES was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of F. F. Morris, Fifty-seventh Congress, and papers in the case of John Morgan's heirs, Fifty-seventh Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 16305. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8977. An act to create a new division of the western judicial district of Texas, and to provide for terms of court at Del Rio, Tex., and for a clerk of said court, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bill:

H. R. 16305. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to sell certain coal in Alaska, and for other purposes.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. BOUTELL, for one week, on account of important business.

To Mr. ROBERTS, for ten days, on account of important business.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PRINCE rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the regular order. The Clerk will call the committees.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I think the Committee on Indian Affairs is the first on the call. I think the House ordered the other day that that committee should be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. If that is the case, the gentleman is correct.

RECORDING DISTRICT, INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. SHERMAN (when the Committee on Indian Affairs was called). Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up bill S. 134 on the House Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York calls up the bill S. 134, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, in addition to the places now provided by law for holding courts in the central judicial district of Indian Territory, terms of the district court of the central district shall hereafter be held at the town of Wilburton, and the United States judge of said central district is hereby authorized to establish by metes and bounds a recording district for said court.

SEC. 2. That all laws regulating the holding of courts in the Indian Territory shall be applicable to the court hereby created at the town of Wilburton.

Also the following committee amendments:

In line 4 strike out the words "central judicial district."

In line 5 strike out the words "of the central district."

In line 6, after the word "Wilburton," add the following: "in the central district; at the town of Bartlesville in the northern district, and at the towns of Weleetka and Checotah in the western district."

In line 7 strike out the words "of said central district."

After the word "for," in line 8, strike out the words "said court," and add the following: "each new court town hereby created in his district."

In line 11 strike out the words "the town of Wilburton," and add the following in lieu thereof: "each of the towns named in this act."

Amend the title so as to read: "An act establishing additional recording districts in the Indian Territory."

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri raises the question of consideration on this bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. DE ARMOND) there were—ayes 65, nays 23.

So the House determined to consider the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS], who reported the bill, and who will explain it.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, two bills passed the Senate and were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. One of these bills established a court at the town of Wilburton, in the Indian Territory, and the other at the town of Bartlesville. The chairman of the Committee [Mr. SHERMAN] is mistaken when he says I reported the bill. It was reported by Mr. REID, of Arkansas.

At the hearing before the subcommittee other towns were suggested, and the committee added the towns of Weleetka and Checotah to the bill (S. 134), also added the town of Bartlesville to the same bill, and recommended that the bill that passed the Senate, authorizing the establishment of a court at Bartlesville, be laid upon the table. The bill reported (S. 134) establishes new court towns, but does not define the bounds of the recording district. It leaves that matter to the presiding judge of the district. The committee thought the judge was better qualified to define the limits of the district than was the committee. I will state that we heard all of the parties who are interested in different towns, and the committee added the towns for which a proper showing had been made.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. CURTIS. Certainly.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. I did not understand the names of the different towns at which these courts were established.

Mr. CURTIS. Wilburton, Bartlesville, Weleetka, and Checotah.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Another question. Does the gentleman object to putting in the town of Duncan for one of those courts?

Mr. CURTIS. I should say not. I am only speaking for myself. Duncan was reported from the committee and passed the House, and, having been favorably reported and having passed the House, I do not see why any Member should object to its being included in this bill.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. I wanted to say that several of these bills have been before the Committee on the Judiciary, and I thought possibly Weleetka was one of them, and we thought it ought to be established, and I think Duncan also. I have no objection to it myself and I shall be glad to vote for it; but I would like Duncan to be included as an amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I understand the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] intends to offer such an amendment.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield a moment?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I simply yielded for the purpose of allowing the gentleman to offer an amendment. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHERMAN. The period has not arrived for that yet.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CRUMPACKER in the chair). If the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] yields for the purpose of offering an amendment, he will lose the control of the floor. Does the gentleman from Kansas reserve the balance of his time?

Mr. CURTIS. I do.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I seek the floor for the purpose of offering an amendment.

Mr. FLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. CURTIS. I would like to know how much time the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] desires.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Only time enough to offer an amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I yield the gentleman five minutes, or so much thereof as he may desire.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. During the argument the Chair understands that it is not in order to offer an amendment. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS], in yielding to another gentleman for the purpose of offering an amendment, will lose control of the floor.

Mr. CURTIS. He then loses control?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. He does. The Chair will read the decision on that.

A Member who yields the floor to offer an amendment loses his right to occupy it.

Mr. CURTIS. Then, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman five minutes for the purpose of having an amendment read and explaining it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It will be in order during the course of his remarks to have an amendment read as a part of his remarks, but not pending as an amendment.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Will the bill be open to amendment in the time Members are able to get the floor?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That will depend upon circumstances and the attitude of the gentleman from Kansas that there should be any time for debate. At the end of his hour the bill will be open for amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I will say it is not the purpose to shut out amendments of any kind.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to have read the amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 8, after the word "district," insert the words "and in the town of Duncan, in the southern district."

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this bill creating a court at Duncan has passed this House as many as three times. It has passed this session, and the Senate bill now being considered by the House makes Bartlettsville and Weleetka in the Indian Territory, court towns, and by my amendment I desire to add to the bill the town of Duncan. I will state that the town of Duncan is on the Rock Island Railroad, on the west side of the Chickasaw Nation, and there are on that road only two court towns—the town of Chickasha is about 80 miles above the town of Ryan. Duncan is situated midway between them, some 38 or 40 miles from either court town. It is a town of about 3,000 inhabitants. It is quite a large town for that country, and is the largest town on that railroad in the Chickasaw Nation except Chickasha. I am told that about two-thirds of the court business done at Ryan comes from this town and vicinity, and that if there should be a court established at Duncan it will very greatly relieve the expenses of holding the courts at Ryan on that road in this, that the mileage paid to a great many of the witnesses who attend court from this town and vicinity would be saved. It does not create any additional expense to make this new court at Duncan, because the clerk's fees will pay the deputy clerk for attending to the clerk's office at this place and also for attending to his recording duties there. The judge of the district recommends Duncan as a proper place for holding this court, and has recommended it twice. The United States district attorney, I am informed, has also recommended it. There is no objection to this town having a court, so far as I know, except from rival towns in its immediate vicinity; and this town having been favorably reported from the Committee on the Judiciary of this House as a suitable court town and having passed the House, I think it is nothing but a proper and just amendment to this bill, and it should go into this bill as an amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I will yield to the gentleman from Arkansas five minutes. He wants to have an amendment read for information.

Mr. FLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to have an amendment read for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, by inserting in page 1, after the word "Weleetka," the words "Broken Arrow."

Mr. FLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I do not expect to take the five minutes the gentleman has yielded to me. I want to make a brief explanation of this amendment, as I understand the situation out there. The nearest court town to Broken Arrow is Wagoner, 26 miles distant. There is a river to cross—the Verdigris River—between there and Broken Arrow, and by rail the distance is 58 miles. It is from 27 to 42 miles to the other court towns that are created in that locality. Broken Arrow is a town of 2,500 inhabitants, located on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad, and is a growing town only three years old. It is situated in a locality where a court can be established without interfering in any way with any of the adjoining towns.

I think this is an important amendment and hope the House will adopt it.

Mr. CURTIS. I now yield to the gentleman from Missouri all the time he may desire less than an hour, so that I can retain control of the bill.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I have two or three objections to this bill. In the first place, I have objection to the method and manner of its appearance here. The subject is one which belongs to the Committee on the Judiciary and not to the Committee on Indian Affairs. It is a subject over which the Committee on Indian Affairs has no jurisdiction whatever. The bill is one which ought never to have gone to the Committee on Indian Affairs; it is one which undoubtedly, under the rules, ought to have gone to the Committee on the Judiciary. It is a question of the establishment of courts——

Mr. CURTIS. May I suggest to the gentleman that the two bills that came over from the Senate had been considered by the Committee on Indian Affairs in the Senate, and I think perhaps that is why the bills were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House? I just wanted to make that explanation.

Mr. DE ARMOND. I am making no criticism of anybody about it, Mr. Speaker, but I wish to say that in my judgment a mistake was made in the reference. What the rules are in the Senate, and whether the measures ought to have gone to the Indian Committee there or to the Judiciary Committee, it is not necessary for me to inquire or talk about, but in this House, under the rules of this House, the measures should have gone to the Committee on the Judiciary. Similar measures have gone there; similar measures are now pending there; similar measures have been reported out of that committee. To refer part of these measures to one committee and part to another committee is to bring confusion and conflict and uncertainty. So much upon that branch of the subject.

Now, it is further evident from the condition of this bill, from the amendments suggested to it by the committee, and the amendments suggested from the floor, that the whole matter has been imperfectly considered and is imperfectly understood. There is no effort made to define the districts which are to be created. That is a confession that those dealing with the bills do not know how to define them. They do not know what the districts should be.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The judge sets the bounds of the district.

Mr. DE ARMOND. I understand that is the suggestion, that the judge sets the bounds of the district. The judge has not been consulted to ascertain whether there ought to be districts or not. The judge is not behind the proposition to make these districts. There is no suggestion from the judge that they be made. There is lack of evidence as to whether the judge is in favor of or opposed to the making of them. Besides, the judge is not to determine the matter for us.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. At the town of Duncan that amendment has been recommended by both the judges.

Mr. DE ARMOND. That has not anything material to do with the subject that I have under discussion, but I am reliably informed that it is not recommended by either of them. It is a matter of dispute as to whether Duncan is recommended by either of the judges.

Mr. LACEY. I should like to ask a question and to make a suggestion. Has the gentleman considered the fact that there are two propositions involved in each of these locations? One is a clerk's office, a place where the court is held, a court town, and the other is a recording town for the recording of deeds. They are two separate and distinct propositions, one of which might go to the Committee on Territories or the Committee on Indian Affairs and the other to the Committee on the Judiciary; so that either committee might possibly have jurisdiction on a division of the question.

Mr. DE ARMOND. I do not look at it in that way. The recording district is a comparatively small thing when put side by side with or in opposition to the establishment of the court. The matter of jurisdiction I merely talk about incidentally. The bill is before the House now for its disposition, having been reported by the committee. As I was saying, that there is a lack of information upon the subject is perfectly evident from the fact that the committee does not undertake to make or define the districts. This whole scheme really may be traced to certain ambitious gentlemen, in the Territory or outside of the Territory, interested in various conflicting and rival town sites, coming to Congress and endeavoring, by getting courts located here and there, to forestall the people of the Territory when the Territory comes in as a State, in the selection and fixing of their own county seats, according to their own judgment. In that respect it is vicious legislation. It is legislation in the dark.

There is not one man in fifty in the House who knows at what particular town a new court ought to be established, or whether a court ought to be established at any one of these towns; and it is practically impossible for us to know. What we know about it is what the persons who are in favor of fixing the court at a particular town, to further their own town-site projects, say, on the one side, or what the persons who are opposed to it, in order, probably, to further the interests of another and rival town site, say, upon the other side. While there is legislation pending, as we all know, for the admission of the Indian Territory with Oklahoma as a State, when the people themselves, acting at home upon their own matters, could determine and would determine which ought to be their court towns, I do not think it wise legislation on our part to attempt to forestall them in reference to their own affairs.

Mr. CURTIS. I want to correct the gentleman's statement in reference to there being no recommendation. Three of the towns recommended by the committee were recommended by judges who preside over the district. They recommended Bartlettsville, Wilburton, and Weleetka. Both the judges and the prosecuting attorney recommended the town of Weleetka.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. And the town of Duncan was recommended by Mr. Gilbert.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Now, Mr. Speaker, legislation on this subject at this time, unless it be very well considered, unless there be an apparent necessity for, as well as an evident propriety in, the location of the court at particular towns, ought to be deferred, in view of the fact that there is reasonable ground for hoping that in a short time a State will be created down there.

The fact is that at every session of Congress there are delegations from the Indian Territory trying to further this court-town legislation, trying to oppose that court-town legislation, and nine out of ten of them have no better basis of opposition or support than a desire to further their own interest in some particular locality. It is a dangerous subject to legislate upon. Legislation upon it is very likely to result in harm instead of good. If there is to be legislation upon it, all these bills bearing upon the subject ought to go to one committee, a committee organized to deal with the particular subject-matter; and that committee, or any committee having all the bills and all the present stock of information before it, will have the greatest difficulty to determine what ought to be done and what ought not to be done, and in nine cases out of ten will err if it does anything.

In view of that, it seems to me that it would be anything but wise for the House, out of hand, to rush a bill of this kind through. This bill started in the Senate as a bill providing for a court at Wilburton; tacked on in the House committee are Bartlesville, Weleetka, and Checotah; and now come two more towns—Duncan and Broken Arrow. I have no doubt at all, without saying anything about the particular towns, that as to a majority of them there can be found in the same neighborhood better and fitter towns for the location of a court.

Mr. PALMER. Let me call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the United States judge only recommends one town—Wilburton.

Mr. DE ARMOND. I do not know; the gentlemen here say they have other recommendations.

Mr. CLAYTON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is in error about that. I had a statement from each one of the judges recommending the court at Weleetka, and I sent those telegrams to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. DE ARMOND. As to this particular town, Weleetka, of the entire bunch I think it is the least deserving, that there is the least reason for establishing a court there, and that there is the most reason, comparing it with the other towns, why a court should not be established there. There is behind it the work of a promoter. I am not finding any fault with him for being a promoter; but it is a town-site speculation, a town-site push. The House of Representatives, the Congress of the United States, ought not blindly lend itself to furthering that kind of a scheme. Why not wait until the people themselves can determine where they want the courts? I do not know where they want them; I do not care where they want them. Pick up a map and call some gentleman from any locality in the United States and I defy him to determine where the courts ought to be established. One man, perhaps, comparatively rare—a rara avis—will give you the facts on both sides relating to the merits of a particular town; he will give you all that can be urged against it. As I say, he is a rara avis rather than a man with a scheme, and he does not often appear before the committees of Congress. The most of them will have a scheme and will advance everything that can be said justly, and some things that can not be justly said, in favor of the place in which they are interested, discounting all that can be said on the other side. This bill and these amendments offer us a chance in a guessing contest, to end, if the hopes of some gentlemen be realized, in the guessing of certain speculative schemes into the statutes as law.

Are we to invite every ambitious town in the Territory to send representatives here and have a general contest for the location of these embryo county sites? Are were to rush swift and fast to establish county seats, or court towns, at the places that are the most active and send the shrewdest and most persistent "push" here, or are we to leave it to the people themselves, there being no public necessity for the establishment of these court sites, to establish them? There is no crying need for them. There is no reasonable pretense that justice will go awry or miscarry if they be not established hastily or in the dark. Why not wait? Why not at least wait until we know—and we shall probably know pretty soon—whether legislation is to go through for the establishment of a new State down there? If so, why not wait until that new State comes in to do its own business in the fixing of county seats? If statehood is to be delayed indefinitely, why not then, upon some broad and general plan—some fair plan—having to do with more than the activity and energy of a promoter, investigate and ascertain in some broad and intelligent way, not where the most can be made in speculation or what band of speculators shall be best served, but where the court towns ought to be located, with reference to the geography of the country, the business of the country, the needs of the citizens, the convenience of judges, and all the things that are involved when you come to a matter of virtually locating county seats? Now, I have no interest in the matter at all, not a particle; it does not make the least difference to me whether you make a hundred county seats down there or whether you make none; whether you do it now or never do it; but this is a species of legislation that I regard as bad legislation.

I like, for my part, when I vote upon a proposition to have an opportunity of understanding something about its merits. I may be in error concerning them—of course, frequently I am—but we are voting in the dark upon these things, not because we have discovered that it is necessary for the proper administration of justice, that it is necessary for the convenience or the interests of the people of the Territory as a mass to scatter courts here and there, not that we know what territory should be gathered around a particular court town—there is no pretense of that here. But we are to leave it to the judge; let the judge make a county around the town; we merely fix for favor a particular spot which has a lot of advocates and promoters behind it, and let the judge group around it a county, a district, a territory, to be tributary to it. For one, I am opposed to that, not in the interest of any town, not in hostility to any town, but for the sake of good legislation. I believe this matter ought to be referred—the whole subject ought to be referred—to the Judiciary Committee, to which it belongs. Not merely because I happen to be a member of that committee. I care nothing about that. I believe it ought to be referred to that committee because unquestionably it is the committee to which jurisdiction of this subject-matter belongs. One committee ought to have it; not two or a dozen. Now, if the Judiciary Committee is to be set aside with reference to matters down there, if there is to be a general plunge in the dark to suit whatever may be put forward here in the way of promotion, let that committee be entirely relieved of all duty and consideration in reference to the matter, and let it all be turned over to another committee which you choose to select.

Gather it together and do not scatter it abroad. Have some degree of responsibility and system about it, and, above all things, it seems to me you should not be in haste to determine for the people unnecessarily, blindly, without proper information, in the majority of cases probably unjustly, where their future county seats shall be. Because these gentlemen down in the Indian Territory understand well enough what is to be gained by having particular towns selected. The court meets there, they get up something they call a court-house, and they have "claims." They will be in a better position after the Territory comes in as a State, if Congress will be partial to them now as well as unjust to others now, to have their particular town selected for the county seat. Others, more modest, not pushing with a delegation, not trying to get advantage through Congress instead of relying upon the judgment of the people at home, must suffer from such crude, partial legislation. We are sowing the seeds of discontent. Why not let well enough alone, and establish no courts except where there is public necessity for them? Should we not wait until we know why we establish a court at a particular place, and know also something about what the court territory is to be? If you don't know anything about what territory is to be or should be embraced within the jurisdiction of a proposed court town, how do you know there ought to be a court there at all?

Let us find out something about what we ought to do or let us do nothing. There is no harm caused from delay in such matters as this; no injustice to anybody; no hardship upon anybody. Delay in this sort of a case is in the interest of fair play; in the interest of proper adjustment in the end.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert "Tulsa" in line 8, following the word "Weleetka."

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Now, Mr. Speaker, much of what has been said by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND] does not apply to the town of Tulsa. I have not relied wholly upon the statements that have been made by the people interested from that place here in Washington. It so happens that the Indian Territory borders my district. I have an acquaintance with that country. The town of Tulsa has between ten and twelve thousand people; has six banks, with an aggregate capital of over $400,000; has five lines of railways, and is peopled by men from every State in the Union.

Mr. STAFFORD. How far distant is the place proposed in the gentleman's amendment from any of the other places suggested here to-day?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Some of them are 15 or 20 miles from a town where there is a court of any kind.

Mr. STAFFORD. From all the places that have been suggested this afternoon?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I do not know all that have been suggested this afternoon.

Mr. STAFFORD. Are you acquainted with the geographical conditions of the entire Territory, or only those surrounding this particular town?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. In a general way; yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. How many court sites, in your opinion as a lawyer, do you think are necessary for the needs of justice?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Well, I should say there should be a court of some kind provided where there were ten or fifteen thousand people.

Mr. STAFFORD. Then, if I understand you, you would establish as many court places as there are 15,000 people of population?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Oh, I would take the courts to the people rather than have the people go to the courts, in so far as such a general policy is at all feasible.

Mr. PALMER. Then you would not approve of this court?

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman asked me whether I approve of it. I can say that the standard as to population does not at all apply to the State that I have the honor in part to represent, where, with a population of over 2,000,000, there are but six places where United States courts are held.

Mr. PALMER. You would not approve, then, a court at Checotah, with a thousand people.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I am not speaking against any court. I am addressing myself to the proposition that there ought to be a court at Tulsa, which has a population of between ten and twelve thousand people.

Mr. PALMER. What is the population of Bartlesville? They recommend one at Bartlesville, in the northern district.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I should say eight to twelve thousand.

Mr. PALMER. This man says four. Which one is right?

Mr. CURTIS. I did not say four; I did not make that report.

Mr. PALMER. How many people are at Weleetka?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I am not familiar with the population at Weleetka.

Mr. PALMER. How many at Checotah; how many at the places recommended by the amendment of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I am not responsible for the recommendation made by the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. PALMER. You are aware of the fact that the Senate bill covered only one town, Wilburton, and that is the only town recommended by the judge.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I have here a recommendation of a judge for Tulsa, although I do not believe a judge ought to fix a court town. I agree with the gentleman from Missouri on that.

Mr. PALMER. Are there any other towns in the Indian Territory that ought to be put in this bill?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Well, that is a matter that ought to be taken into consideration by the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas two minutes more time.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, my time has been taken up by other gentlemen. The town of Tulsa has not been built up by Government aid or by the location of any Government offices. It is the center of a productive agricultural country; in the midst of a country that is richly underlaid with oil and gas, and is destined to be one of the largest and wealthiest towns in the Indian Territory. It is in the center of one of the best agricultural countries, located in a valley which is richer than much of the country which support by agriculture alone large cities.

Mr. GARRETT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. If I have time, I will gladly yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GARRETT. I am not sure I understood the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri, but as I caught them he stated there were no county lines about these various towns where it is proposed to establish the court. Is that correct?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I will yield to my colleague from Kansas to answer that question.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, as I said in the opening statement, this bill was reported by the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. REID]. There were two Senate bills presented to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

One of them establishing a court at Wilburton that did not describe the boundaries, the other establishing a court at Bartlesville which did define the boundaries. The committee when it took the two bills up for consideration heard the various parties representing different towns, and I may state that all of those who came before the committee asked to have the boundaries of their residing district defined by the committee. Other towns were sending in complaints and did not want their territory disturbed. There being no counties in the Territory, the committee thought it best to refer the matter to the district judges and let them define the boundaries. I desire to say in answer to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] that the judges did recommend the court at Wilburton, at Bartlesville, and at Weleetka. I will not speak as to Checotah, because I do not know. Mr. REID has the papers in reference to Checotah, and whether the court was recommended there or not I do not know.

Mr. GARRETT. When the gentleman says, "Authorizing the judges to fix the boundaries of towns"——

Mr. CURTIS. Not the boundaries of the towns; the boundaries of the territory——

Mr. GARRETT. Over which——

Mr. CURTIS. Over which that court, held at that town, should have jurisdiction.

Mr. GARRETT. That is what I wanted to know. Is that usual and customary touching the establishment of those courts in the Indian Territory?

Mr. CURTIS. Yes; it has been done in some places. The court towns in Indian Territory have been established from time to time. Sometimes the territory was described in the bill, and sometimes it was left to the court.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. If the gentleman will permit, I will say that it is the recording district for the recording of deeds.

Mr. CURTIS. For the recording of deeds and other instruments in writing.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to ask permission now to offer my admendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] two minutes.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, I agree with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND]. I have just listened to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL]. I would say that my State has nearly 7,000,000 people in it. We have six places where we hold United States courts. If we were entitled to a court site for every city of 10,000 and upward, we would have to create over seventy-four courts.

Mr. CURTIS. Will the gentleman permit me? In Pennsylvania no doubt you have justice courts, city courts, probate courts, police courts, and circuit courts, and so forth, while in the Indian Territory they have but the one court, namely, the United States court. They have no justices of the peace or anything of that kind.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. May I ask a question?

Mr. CURTIS. I yielded to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON].

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Will they not have those courts this time next year when they become a State?

Mr. CURTIS. I hope the two Territories will be one State by that time.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Does the gentleman hope so?

Mr. CURTIS. Yes, sir.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Speaker, seriously I agree with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND]. I object to the establishment of these Federal courts without any information at all that this House ought to have. It involves clerks and offices, and if we keep on establishing courts throughout the country, a lawyer can throw his hat after a while from his office into a court-house. We are getting too many of them.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the bill. [Applause.]

CONTINUATION OF CALL OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BROWN (when the Committee on Mines and Mining was called). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Mines and Mining be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the Committee on Mines and Mining be passed without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CURRIER (when the Committee on Patents was called). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Patents be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the Committee on Patents be passed without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DE ARMOND (when the Committee on the Judiciary was called). Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Committee on the Judiciary be passed without prejudice and without losing its place on the call.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks that the Committee on the Judiciary be passed without prejudice and without losing its place on the call. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PAYNE (when the Committee on Banking and Currency was called). Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Committee on Banking and Currency be passed without prejudice.

There was no objection.

ABOLISHING THE OFFICE OF LIEUTENANT-GENERAL OF THE ARMY.

Mr. PRINCE (when the Committee on Military Affairs was called). Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill H. R. 15744.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 15744) to abolish the office of Lieutenant-General of the Army of the United States.

Be it enacted, etc., That the office of Lieutenant-General of the Army of the United States be, and the same is hereby, abolished.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That when the office of Lieutenant-General shall become vacant it shall not be hereafter filled, but said office shall cease and determine."

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I raise the question of consideration on that bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania raises the question of consideration. The question is, Will the House consider the bill?

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. DALZELL. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 88, noes 18.

Mr. DALZELL. I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

Mr. PRINCE. Upon that I call for a call of the House.

Mr. PAYNE. Well, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. PRINCE. I insist upon the call.

Mr. PAYNE. At 14 minutes to 5, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. Pending the demand for the call, the gentleman from New York moves that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. PAYNE. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 13, noes 62.

So the House refused to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The doors will be closed; the Sargeant-at-Arms will bring in absent Members; the vote will be taken on the question, and as many as are in favor of considering the bill will, when their names are called, answer "yea," and as many as are opposed will answer "nay," and those present and not voting will answer "present." The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 106, nays 38, answered "present" 13, not voting 226, as follows:

YEAS—106.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Adams, Wis. | Gardner, Mich. | Lever | Shartel |
| Aiken | Garner | Livingston | Sims |
| Ames | Garrett | Lloyd | Small |
| Bartholdt | Gillespie | McCall | Smith, Cal. |
| Beall, Tex. | Graff | McGavin | Smith, Ky. |
| Broocks, Tex. | Hamilton | McKinley, Ill. | Smith, Md. |
| Burleson | Hayes | McKinney | Smith, Tex. |
| Butler, Pa. | Heflin | McNary | Snapp |
| Campbell, Ohio | Henry, Tex. | Macon | Stafford |
| Capron | Hermann | Madden | Stanley |
| Chaney | Hinshaw | Mahon | Stephens, Tex. |
| Chapman | Hogg | Meyer | Sullivan, Mass. |
| Clark, Fla. | Holliday | Miller | Sulloway |
| Clayton | Hopkins | Minor | Tawney |
| Cooper, Wis. | Houston | Mondell | Taylor, Ala. |
| Cousins | Howell, Utah | Norris | Thomas, N. C. |
| Crumpacker | Hubbard | Olcott | Tirrell |
| De Armond | Hunt | Padgett | Wadsworth |
| Dixon, Ind. | James | Palmer | Waldo |
| Dixon, Mont. | Johnson | Patterson, S. C. | Wallace |
| Edwards | Kahn | Pollard | Watkins |
| Ellerbe | Kennedy, Nebr. | Prince | Wharton |
| Finley | Kinkaid | Randell, Tex. | Wiley, Ala. |
| Fitzgerald | Klepper | Richardson, Ky. | Williams |
| Floyd | Kline | Rives | Wood, N. J. |
| Foster, Ind. | Knowland | Rucker | |
| Fulkerson | Lacey | Shackleford | |

NAYS—38.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Barchfeld | Calderhead | Gaines, W. Va. | Payne |
| Bingham | Campbell, Kans. | Gillett, Cal. | Samuel |
| Birdsall | Cooper, Pa. | Hill, Conn. | Sibley |
| Bishop | Currier | Hoar | Smith, Iowa |
| Brooks, Colo. | Curtis | Huff | Smyser |
| Brown | Dale | Keifer | Southard |
| Burke, Pa. | Dalzell | Littauer | Southwick |
| Burke, S. Dak. | Dawes | McMorran | Sperry |
| Burton, Del. | Dunwell | Mouser | |
| Calder | Flack | Overstreet | |

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—13.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Bartlett | Foss | Howell, N. J. | Wanger |
| Bradley | Gardner, N. J. | Patterson, Pa. | |
| Butler, Tenn. | Goldfogle | Sherley | |
| Clark, Mo. | Henry, Conn. | Sherman | |

NOT VOTING—226.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Acheson | Fassett | Landis, Frederick | Rhodes |
| Adams, Pa. | Field | Law | Richardson, Ala. |
| Adamson | Fletcher | Lawrence | Rixey |
| Alexander | Flood | Lee | Roberts |
| Allen, Me. | Fordney | Le Fevre | Robertson, La. |
| Allen, N. J. | Foster, Vt. | Legare | Robinson, Ark. |
| Andrus | Fowler | Lester | Rodenberg |
| Babcock | French | Lewis | Ruppert |
| Bankhead | Fuller | Lilley, Conn. | Russell |
| Bannon | Gaines, Tenn. | Lilley, Pa. | Ryan |
| Bates | Garber | Lindsay | Schneebeli |
| Bede | Gardner, Mass. | Little | Scott |
| Beidler | Gilbert, Ind. | Littlefield | Scroggy |
| Bell, Ga. | Gilbert, Ky. | Longworth | Sheppard |
| Bennet, N. Y. | Gill | Lorimer | Slayden |
| Bennett, Ky. | Gillett, Mass. | Loud | Slemp |
| Blackburn | Glass | Loudenslager | Smith, Ill. |
| Bonynge | Goebel | Lovering | Smith, Samuel W. |
| Boutell | Goulden | McCarthy | Smith, Wm. Alden |
| Bowers | Graham | McCleary, Minn. | Smith, Pa. |
| Bowersock | Granger | McCreary, Pa. | Southall |
| Bowie | Greene | McDermott | Sparkman |
| Brantley | Gregg | McKinlay, Cal. | Spight |
| Brick | Griggs | McLachlan | Steenerson |
| Broussard | Gronna | McLain | Sterling |
| Brownlow | Grosvenor | Mann | Stevens, Minn. |
| Brundidge | Gudger | Marshall | Sullivan, N. Y. |
| Buckman | Hale | Martin | Sulzer |
| Burgess | Hardwick | Maynard | Talbott |
| Burleigh | Haskins | Michalek | Taylor, Ohio |
| Burnett | Haugen | Moon, Pa. | Thomas, Ohio |
| Burton, Ohio | Hay | Moon, Tenn. | Towne |
| Byrd | Hearst | Moore | Townsend |
| Candler | Hedge | Morrell | Trimble |
| Cassel | Hepburn | Mudd | Tyndall |
| Cockran | Higgins | Murdock | Underwood |
| Cocks | Hill, Miss. | Murphy | Van Duzer |
| Cole | Hitt | Needham | Van Winkle |
| Conner | Howard | Nevin | Volstead |
| Cromer | Hughes | Olmsted | Vreeland |
| Cushman | Hull | Otjen | Wachter |
| Darragh | Humphrey, Wash. | Page | Watson |
| Davey, La. | Humphreys, Miss. | Parker | Webb |
| Davidson | Jenkins | Parsons | Webber |
| Davis, Minn. | Jones, Va. | Patterson, N. C. | Weeks |
| Davis, W. Va. | Jones, Wash. | Patterson, Tenn. | Weems |
| Dawson | Kelliher | Pearre | Weisse |
| Deemer | Kennedy, Ohio | Perkins | Welborn |
| Denby | Ketcham | Pou | Wiley, N. J. |
| Dickson, Ill. | Kitchin, Claude | Powers | Williamson |
| Dovener | Kitchin, Wm. W. | Pujo | Wilson |
| Draper | Knapp | Rainey | Wood, Mo. |
| Dresser | Knopf | Ransdell, La. | Woodyard |
| Driscoll | Lafean | Reeder | Young |
| Dwight | Lamar | Reid | Zenor |
| Ellis | Lamb | Reynolds | |
| Esch | Landis, Chas. B. | Rhinock | |

No quorum voting.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should like to inquire if the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR] voted?

The SPEAKER. He did not.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should like to withdraw my vote, and answer "present."

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

For the session:

Mr. WANGER with Mr. ADAMSON.

Mr. SHERMAN with Mr. RUPPERT.

Mr. BRADLEY with Mr. GOULDEN.

Mr. MORRELL with Mr. SULLIVAN of New York.

Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania with Mr. PATTERSON of North Carolina.

For ten days:

Mr. BISHOP with Mr. BURGESS.

Until March 13:

Mr. DRISCOLL with Mr. HARDWICK.

Until further notice:

Mr. ALEXANDER with Mr. LAMAR.

Mr. MURDOCK with Mr. CLAUDE KITCHIN.

Mr. MANN with Mr. BARTLETT.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio with Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee.

Mr. DAVIDSON with Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. REID.

Mr. DWIGHT with Mr. LEE.

Mr. ANDRUS with Mr. SULZER.

Mr. POWERS with Mr. PUJO.

Mr. CROMER with Mr. ZENOR.

Mr. HITT with Mr. LITTLE.

Mr. WATSON with Mr. SHERLEY.

Mr. FREDERICK LANDIS with Mr. BRUNDIDGE.

Mr. DICKSON of Illinois with Mr. RAINEY.

Mr. JONES of Washington with Mr. RANSDELL of Louisiana.

Mr. GROSVENOR with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.

Mr. WILSON with Mr. LEGARE.

Until Monday, March 12:

Mr. WEEKS with Mr. SLAYDEN.

For this day:

Mr. DOVENER with Mr. BOWIE.

Mr. BENNET of New York with Mr. KELIHER.

Mr. WACHTER with Mr. LEWIS.

Mr. LE FEVRE with Mr. GRANGER.

Mr. LOVERING with Mr. BURNETT.

Mr. BROWNLOW with Mr. BRANTLEY.

Mr. BOUTELL with Mr. GRIGGS.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. FOSTER of Vermont with Mr. POU.

Mr. BANNON with Mr. LESTER.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. TALBOTT.

Mr. DEEMER with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.

Mr. LILLEY of Pennsylvania with Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota with Mr. TRIMBLE.

Mr. CASSEL with Mr. BYRD.

Mr. BURLEIGH with Mr. BOWERS.

Mr. BUCKMAN with Mr. BELL of Georgia.

Mr. BABCOCK with Mr. BANKHEAD.

Mr. MCCREARY of Pennsylvania with Mr. LINDSAY.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER with Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama.

Mr. LONGWORTH with Mr. FLOOD.

Mr. LAWRENCE with Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia.

Mr. DRAPER with Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana.

Mr. DAWSON with Mr. COCKRAN.

Mr. FRENCH with Mr. RHINOCK.

Mr. STERLING with Mr. PAGE.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH with Mr. MOORE.

Mr. SCOTT with Mr. MOON of Tennessee.

Mr. ROBERTS with Mr. MAYNARD.

Mr. OLMSTED with Mr. MCLAIN.

Mr. MUDD with Mr. MCDERMOTT.

Mr. KETCHAM with Mr. RUSSELL.

Mr. JENKINS with Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas.

Mr. HIGGINS with Mr. RIXEY.

Mr. GREENE with Mr. FIELD.

Mr. HEPBURN with Mr. UNDERWOOD.

Mr. WILEY of New Jersey with Mr. VAN DUZER.

Mr. VREELAND with Mr. TOWNE.

Mr. THOMAS of Ohio with Mr. SPIGHT.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota with Mr. SOUTHALL.

Mr. LAW with Mr. SHEPPARD.

Mr. LAFEAN with Mr. RYAN.

Mr. KNAPP with Mr. HEARST.

Mr. SCROGGY with Mr. WOOD of Missouri.

Mr. PEARRE with Mr. WEISSE.

Mr. TAYLOR of Ohio with Mr. WEBB.

Mr. WOODYARD with Mr. LAMB.

Mr. VAN WINKLE with Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN.
Mr. HULL with Mr. JONES of Virginia.
Mr. KENNEDY of Ohio with Mr. HILL of Mississippi.
Mr. HEDGE with Mr. GUDGER.
Mr. GRONNA with Mr. GREGG.
Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts with Mr. HAY.
Mr. GARDNER of Massachusetts with Mr. GLASS.
Mr. NEVIN with Mr. GILL.
Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania with Mr. GARBER.
Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota with Mr. GAINES of Tennessee.
Mr. REYNOLDS with Mr. CANDLER.

The SPEAKER. On this question the ayes are 105, the noes 39, "present" 13. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAYNE. On the next call of committees will the call rest on the Committee on Military Affairs and will it be in order for that committee to call up this bill for consideration at that time?

The SPEAKER. The Committee on Military Affairs has been called. The call will rest there until that committee has had two days, or until the bill is disposed of.

Mr. PAYNE. Then I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves that the House do now adjourn. That will have to be seconded by a majority of the Members present.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To carry that motion will mean the defeat of the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. That will determine it sooner, then.

The SPEAKER. All gentlemen will be seated. Those in favor of seconding the motion to adjourn will rise and stand until they are counted. The Chair will count all gentlemen standing.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced 61 ayes, 61 noes; that the Speaker voted in the affirmative, making 62, and that the motion was seconded.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on agreeing to the motion to adjourn.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will order tellers. As many as are in favor of the motion to adjourn will pass between the tellers, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE] will take their places.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 65, noes 63.

So the House determined to adjourn.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 28 minutes) the House adjourned until to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a statement as to useless papers encumbering his Department—to the Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Papers, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, submitting an estimate for an additional clerk in the office of the Auditor for the Navy Department—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for a skilled laborer in the office of the Surgeon-General—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for the purchase of land at the Military Academy—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for facilities for fire protection at the powder depot at Dover, N. J.—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for clerks in the office of the Paymaster-General of the Army—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of War submitting an estimate of appropriation for a submarine cable between Key West, Fla., and Guantanamo, Cuba, and the Panama Canal Zone—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of State submitting an estimate of appropriation for sending delegates to an international exhibition to be held at Christchurch, New Zealand—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a copy of a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, a draft of proposed legislation relating to the opening of the Shoshone or Wind River Indian Reservation, Wyoming—to the Committee on the Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. GILLETT of California, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15643) to authorize the board of visitors of the Government Hospital for the Insane to summon and examine witnesses under oath, and making it a misdemeanor for any such witness to refuse to attend or testify or produce books and papers when summoned, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2167); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. TAYLOR of Ohio, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 51) to create a juvenile court in and for the District of Columbia, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2169); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SIMS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16384, in lieu of H. R. 12310) regulating the speed of automobiles in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2170); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LAMAR: A bill (H. R. 16379) to grant lands to the State of Florida to assist said State in the education of its children—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. GOULDEN: A bill (H. R. 16380) to amend sections 18, 27, 28, and 29 of an act entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes"—to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

By Mr. BROOKS of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 16381) leasing and devising certain lands in La Plata County, Colo., to the P. F. U. Rubber Company—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MCKINLAY of California: A bill (H. R. 16382) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Santa Rosa, Cal.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MCKINNEY: A bill (H. R. 16383) to provide for the erection of a public building at Moline, Ill.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. SIMS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia: A bill (H. R. 16384, in lieu of H. R. 12310) regulating the speed of automobiles in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes—to the House Calendar.

By Mr. KAHN: A bill (H. R. 16385) to provide for filling in that portion of the naval station at Honolulu, Hawaii, known as the Reef—to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 16386) to fix the time of holding the circuit and district courts for the northern district of West Virginia—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MAYNARD: A bill (H. R. 16387) to repeal section 3480, Revised Statutes of the United States—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland: A joint resolution (H. J. Res.

113) providing for a survey of Sinepuxent Bay, Maryland—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. GILLETT of California: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 114) accepting the recession by the State of California of the Yosemite Valley grant and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove, and including the same, together with fractional sections 5 and 6, township 5 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo meridian, California, within the metes and bounds of the Yosemite National Park, and changing the boundaries thereof—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. SPERRY: A resolution (H. Res. 361) concerning allowance for clerk hire to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. COCKRAN: A resolution (H. Res. 362) requesting of the Postmaster-General certain information concerning a paper known as Town Topics—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. AMES: A bill (H. R. 16388) granting a pension to Thomas H. Bailey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BRANTLEY: A bill (H. R. 16389) granting a pension to Jefferson Wilcox—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BANNON: A bill (H. R. 16390) granting a pension to Katharine Partridge—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: A bill (H. R. 16391) granting an increase of pension to William Jackson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 16392) for the relief of Thomas K. Hill—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16393) for the relief of James Cummins, alias Rhod Cummins—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16394) granting a pension to Alexander Jackson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16395) granting a pension to Katherine Wheeler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16396) granting a pension to Thomas B. Hutchinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16397) granting an increase of pension to Allie Williams—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16398) granting an increase of pension to David Ross—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16399) granting an increase of pension to James H. Warford—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16400) granting an increase of pension to James McCracken—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16401) granting an increase of pension to John Dickinson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16402) granting an increase of pension to William H. C. Biggs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16403) granting an increase of pension to Martin Spriggs—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16404) granting an increase of pension to William H. Dobbins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BONYNGE: A bill (H. R. 16405) granting an increase of pension to William B. Bobbitt—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16406) granting an increase of pension to Jasper Ward—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16407) granting an increase of pension to Isaac W. Chatfield—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16408) granting an increase of pension to William Hendricks—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BOWERS: A bill (H. R. 16409) for the relief of Francisco Krebs—to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

By Mr. BURNETT: A bill (H. R. 16410) for the relief of the estate of Allen T. Estes, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 16411) granting an increase of pension to Newton Moore—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPRON: A bill (H. R. 16412) relating to the military record of Nathan Goff, jr.—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 16413) for the relief of the estate of Isabella Ann Fluker, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. DIXON of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 16414) granting a pension to Minnie M. Bowles—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16415) granting an increase of pension to Ephriam K. Pond—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16416) granting an increase of pension to James D. Gatch—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EDWARDS: A bill (H. R. 16417) for the relief of Hugh Washam—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16418) granting a pension to Thomas Burchett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16419) granting a pension to Catherine Bunch—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16420) granting a pension to Sarah F. Hatter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16421) granting an increase of pension to Laban McGahan—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16422) granting an increase of pension to Asa Goins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16423) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Roe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16424) granting an increase of pension to Perry Weddle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16425) granting an increase of pension to William T. Francis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16426) granting an increase of pension to James S. Searcy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16427) granting an increase of pension to William W. Carter—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16428) granting an increase of pension to Edwin Hicks—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FLETCHER: A bill (H. R. 16429) granting an increase of pension to Caroline M. Peirce—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULKERSON: A bill (H. R. 16430) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Otis Van Fleet—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FULLER: A bill (H. R. 16431) granting a pension to Mary Jane Lansing—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HENRY of Texas: A bill (H. R. 16432) granting an increase of pension to Marvel Ford—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HOAR: A bill (H. R. 16433) granting an increase of pension to Marius S. Cooley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 16434) granting an increase of pension to Alfred Picklesimer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUGHES: A bill (H. R. 16435) granting an increase of pension to Maurice Hungerford—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16436) granting an increase of pension to Joseph H. Webb—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KLEPPER: A bill (H. R. 16437) granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Frozier—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KLINE: A bill (H. R. 16438) granting an increase of pension to Edwin Rice—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KNOWLAND: A bill (H. R. 16439) granting an increase of pension to Patrick Bogan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LAMAR: A bill (H. R. 16440) to relinquish the interests of the United States in a certain parcel of land in the city of Pensacola, State of Florida, to A. M. McMillan, C. W. Lamar, and J. R. Saunders—to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

By Mr. LEE: A bill (H. R. 16441) granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Good—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LINDSAY: A bill (H. R. 16442) granting an increase of pension to John A. Powell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LITTLEFIELD: A bill (H. R. 16443) to correct the military record of Frederick W. Weeks—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LORIMER: A bill (H. R. 16444) granting an increase of pension to John William Black—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAHON: A bill (H. R. 16445) granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Sibley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOUSER: A bill (H. R. 16446) granting an increase of pension to George W. Rose—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PEARRE: A bill (H. R. 16447) granting a pension to John T. Walsh—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RHODES: A bill (H. R. 16448) granting a pension to William P. Gooch—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16449) granting a pension to Herman Sachse—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16450) granting a pension to Austin Shinn—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16451) granting a pension to James Ellis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16452) granting a pension to John Schwab, jr.—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16453) granting a pension to Samuel S. Andrews—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16454) granting an increase of pension to Samuel E. Carlton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16455) granting an increase of pension to John Long—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16456) granting an increase of pension to Henry Politte—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16457) granting an increase of pension to Abram M. Casteel—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16458) granting an increase of pension to Daniel W. Gillam—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16459) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Joseph A. Greenlee—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16460) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Peter Whisler—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16461) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of George Zahner—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16462) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of James Mundy—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 16463) granting a pension to Kate C. G. Ewing—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16464) granting a pension to Robert Appleby—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas: A bill (H. R. 16465) for the relief of the estate of J. H. Moseby, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16466) granting an increase of pension to Asenith Woodall—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TRIMBLE: A bill (H. R. 16467) granting a pension to Vinney Streets—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16468) granting a pension to Emma W. Coleman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16469) granting a pension to Eliza J. Ellis—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEEKS: A bill (H. R. 16470) for the relief of Edmund M. Phelan—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WILEY of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 16471) granting an increase of pension to North Ann Dorman—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3968) granting a pension to Fannie Hay Maffitt, and it was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of organizations of railway employees, for the Bates-Penrose bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Camden Grange, No. 354; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paper Hangers of America; Local Union No. 467, of Kankakee, Ill., and Rev. J. M. Adams et al., of Albion, Ill., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Northwestern Cement Products Association, for Government continuance of experiments on cement—to the Committee on Appropriation.

Also, petition of Division No. 18, Ancient Order of Hibernians, of Rhode Island, for a statue for Commodore Barry—to the Committee on the Library.

Also, petition of the Manufacturers' Association of Seattle, for bill H. R. 1345—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of the Newport News Central Labor Union, for bill S. 529—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of J. B. Clinedinst, relative to subsidy for merchant marine—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. ACHESON: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Corwin M. Holt (previously referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania: Petition of Meridian Sun Council, No. 542, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BELL of Georgia: Papers to accompany bill H. R. 16316—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of the Association of Mexican War Veterans, for increase of pensions—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky: Petition of Elk Lick Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BINGHAM: Paper to accompany bill for relief of W. V. Feltwell (previously referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Matilda Daly (previously referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petiton of the Christian Endeavor Society of Dotterer Baptist Church, of Philadelphia, Pa., for the Hepburn-Dolliver bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

By Mr. BONYNGE: Petition of citizens of Colorado, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BROOKS of Colorado: Petition of many citizens of Colorado, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BRUNDIDGE: Petition of citizens of Arkansas, against a parcels post—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BURTON of Delaware: Petition of State Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania: Petition of the State Federation Pennsylvania Women, for a national forest reserve in the White Mountains and for the Morris law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. CALDER: Petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CHAPMAN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John Shuffelbarger—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of James Nichols et al., of Illinois, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. COCKRAN: Papers to accompany public resolution presented by Mr. COCKRAN—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin: Petition of business men of Clinton, Wis., against a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of citizens of Pittsburg, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DARRAGH: Petition of citizens of Mecosta County, Mich., against a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DAWSON: Petition of Company M, Fifty-third Infantry, Iowa National Guard, for increase of appropriation for the National Guard—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DENBY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Marshall U. Gage—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of the American Wine Growers' Association, for a pure-wine law—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. DRESSER: Petition of Dubois (Pa.) business men, for the Hepburn pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. DUNWELL: Petition of the Association of Mexican War Veterans, for increase of pensions—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petitions of the National Association of Audubon Societies, for bill S. 2966, and of the Linnæan Societies of New York, for bill S. 3602—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of J. B. Clenedinst, for the ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. ELLIS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Frederick Rice—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of C. C. Carpenter et al., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Federated Union of New York, against the antipilotage bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of the Linnæan Society of New York, for bill S. 2966—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. FLETCHER: Petition of District Lodge No. 48, International Mechanics' Association, for bills S. 2633 and H. R. 10069—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. FULLER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Mary Jane Lansing—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petition of R. G. Cotton, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts: Petition of West Brookfield Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Petition of ex-Union prisoners of the war of the rebellion, for bill H. R. 14609—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, petition of Holdcraft Camp, No. 498, Sons of Veterans, against bill H. R. 8131—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, for bill S. 1345—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HAMILTON: Petition of Leonidas Grange, No. 266, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Berlamont and Bloomingdale, Mich., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Commercial Record, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HASKINS: Petitions of citizens of Orleans County, West Burke, and Waitsfield, Vt., against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of citizens of Hartford and White River Junction, Vt., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAY: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Winfield S. Bruce (previously referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions)—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of the Excelsior Homestead Progressive Association, against bill H. R. 12973—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HENRY of Texas: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Marvel Ford—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HEPBURN: Petition of citizens of Clarke County, Iowa, against bills H. R. 3022 and 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HITT: Petition of the Team Drivers' Union, against bill H. R. 12973—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HOAR: Petition of the Young People's Christian Union of Southbridge, Mass., against liquor in public buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of the Young People's Christian Union of Southbridge, Mass., for prohibition for Oklahoma as a State—to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, petition of the Young People's Christian Union of Southbridge, Mass., for the Hepburn-Dolliver bill—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, papers to accompany bill to grant an increase of pension to Marius S. Cooley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOPKINS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of James P. Hazelett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Philip Hammon—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of John Hale—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Marcus L. Chism—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Oliver Salmons—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: Petition of Daniel Webster Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Newark, N. J., favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of the Berry-Guerin Company, against bills H. R. 9973, 9974, and 9975—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOWELL of Utah: Petition of P. Peterson, of Mendon, Utah, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HUFF: Petition of the National Grange, Patrons of Industry, of Mount Chestnut, and Grange No. 133, of Pennsylvania, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KELIHER: Petition of the Massachusetts State Federation of Woman's Clubs, for forest reservations—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Nelson H. Parker et al., relative to the People's United States Bank, of St. Louis—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of the directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, relative to reform in the consular service—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. KENNEDY: Petition of Hans Nelson et al., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KLINE: Petition of citizens of Pennsylvania, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KNAPP: Petition of Natural Bridge Grange, No. 497, for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LAW: Petition of the Homeopathic Medical Society of Kings County, for bill H. R. 88—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the New York Credit Men's Association, against bill H. R. 309—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Central Federal Union, against bill H. R. 5281—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of the Linnæan Society of New York, for bill S. 2966—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LAWRENCE: Petition of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Local Union No. 627, of Great Barrington, Mass., Painters, Decorators, and Paper Hangers of America, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Williamstown, Mass., for a forest reservation in the White Mountains—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LEVER: Petition of the City Federation of Trades of South Carolina, for the ship subsidy—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of the Lancaster Bar Association, for two Federal judicial districts in South Carolina—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LITTLEFIELD: Petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of O. Gardner, master of the State Grange of Maine; Rufus Hitchcock, master of Noblesboro Grange, and F. E. Post and G. B. Young et al., of West Warren, Me., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Oliver Otis, of Rockland, Me., against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of True Blue Council, No. 14; Regal Council, and Androscoggin Valley Council, No. 20, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of J. Alton Emery and Herman F. Noyes, for the Bates-Penrose bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Frank Thompson, Frank A. Magune, Leon Murray, and S. H. Rogers, for an appropriation for a safe harbor at Delaware Breakwater—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LORIMER: Petition of Christian Endeavor Society of Downers Grove, Ill., for preservation of Niagara Falls—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LOUD: Petition of citizens of Michigan, for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER: Petition of citizens of Swedenboro, N. J., against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. McMORRAN: Petition of the Pigeon Progress and the News, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the National Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MAHON: Petition of citizens of Huntingdon County,

Pa., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Henry H. Sibley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MARSHALL: Petition of citizens of North Dakota, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MILLER: Petition of Hurricane Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PAYNE: Petition of the National Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Ellenburg Center, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PEARRE: Petition of citizens of Maryland, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Christian Endeavor Society of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, of Meyersville, Md., and the Christian Endeavor Society of Woodsboro, Md., against liquor selling in all Government buildings—to the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic.

Also, petition of citizens of Maryland, for the pure-food bill—to the Committee in Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of citizens of Maryland, for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of citizens of Maryland, for retention of the tax on imitation butter—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of citizens of Maryland, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Maryland, for the good-roads bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. RHINOCK: Petition of William Butterson and O. C. Heafer, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Emma Parham, heir of Nancy and William Whittle—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RYAN: Petition of C. C. Carpenter et al., of Ellenburg Center, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STANLEY: Petition of T. B. Young, jr., et al., for repeal of the tariff on hides—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TALBOTT: Petition of Charles J. Peltz et al., citizens of Carroll County, Md., for retention of the tax on imitation butter—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Charles J. Peltz et al., citizens of Carroll County, Md., for the Grange good-roads bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Charles J. Peltz et al., citizens of Carroll County, Md., for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Charles J. Peltz et al., citizens of Maryland, for bill H. R. 10099—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Charles J. Peltz et al., citizens of Carroll County, Md., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VAN WINKLE: Petition of C. J. Baxter and Randall Spaulding, of Montclair, N. J., for reincorporation of the National Educational Association—to the Committee on Education.

Also, petition of the Berry-Guerin Company, of Newark, N. J., against bills H. R. 9973, 9974, and 9975—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Catharine Encke—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mary L. Beardsley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of George W. Spencer—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph Murcher—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WANGER: Petition of Grange No. 451, Patrons of Husbandry, of Bucks County, Pa., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Council No. 166, Order United American Mechanics, of Doylestown, Pa., favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. WEEKS: Petition of W. B. Bullard et al. and Zoa L. Bruce et al., of the National Grange of Pennsylvania, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, March 9, 1906.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, or request of Mr. KEAN, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

SHOSHONE OR WIND RIVER INDIAN RESERVATION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting an explanatory letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, together with the draft of a proposed joint resolution extending the time fixed for the opening of the Shoshone or Wind River Indian Reservation, Wyo., as provided in the act of March 3, 1905, from June 15 to August 15, 1906; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DUBOIS. I do not see the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] in the Chamber, but I think that communication should be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, as that committee has had charge of the bill in relation to that matter and is familiar with it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report accompanying the communication would seem to indicate that the land referred to had been thrown open to settlement. Does the Senator from Idaho wish to move the reference of the communication to the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. DUBOIS. No; but I think it more properly belongs there. However, in the absence of the Senator from Wyoming, I will not make the motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Then the communication will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands, unless the Senator from Wyoming shall desire a different reference; and if so, that motion can be made later.

STATEMENT OF LAND ENTRIES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 13th ultimo, a report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office with respect to the total number of entries of land under each of the respective public-land laws under suspension on December 31, 1905, by reason of the orders of suspension theretofore made by the Secretary of the Interior or under his direction, and also the aggregate acreage embraced in the filings and entries aforesaid; which, on motion of Mr. CARTER, was, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

FINDINGS OF COURT OF CLAIMS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a certified copy of the findings of fact filed by the court in the cause of the rector, wardens, and vestry of St. John's Church, at Jacksonville, Fla., v. The United States; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate authorizing in the enrollment of the bill (S. 4229) to authorize the sale and disposition of surplus or unallotted lands of the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes, to change the words "section seven" to "section six" where they occur in line 40, page 3, of the enrolled bill.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8977) to create a new division of the western judicial district of Texas and to provide for terms of court at Del Rio, Tex., and for a clerk for said court, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 15331) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13538) to incorporate the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6385) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hastings.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 9944) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Martin.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills:

S. 17. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi A. Tripp;

S. 19. An act granting an increase of pension to Alphonso B. Holland;

S. 22. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Smith;

S. 94. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert Wimes;

S. 162. An act granting an increase of pension to David D. Griffith;

S. 165. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Russell;

S. 180. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Legro;

S. 187. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Kane;

S. 200. An act granting an increase of pension to Fredrich Behrens;

S. 203. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward E. Needham;

S. 218. An act granting an increase of pension to James White;

S. 220. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonathan F. Gates;

S. 251. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin L. Adams;

S. 325. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry B. Burton;

S. 446. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Duane;

S. 466. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Lewis;

S. 482. An act granting an increase of pension to Amos M. Runkel;

S. 492. An act granting an increase of pension to Barney Whitney;

S. 527. An act granting an increase of pension to Alfred McPherran;

S. 548. An act granting an increase of pension to William Carr;

S. 555. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Hill;

S. 589. An act granting a pension to Joseph L. Prentiss;

S. 597. An act granting an increase of pension to David M. Pearson;

S. 599. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Megrue;

S. 623. An act granting an increase of pension to Bridget Evans;

S. 641. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Conrad;

S. 655. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Bishop;

S. 656. An act granting an increase of pension to Abraham Walters;

S. 671. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Conine;

S. 672. An act granting an increase of pension to James F. Hubbard;

S. 675. An act granting a pension to Ulrika Bottcher;

S. 712. An act granting an increase of pension to Lizzie M. McLauchlan;

S. 716. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore H. Hanson;

S. 721. An act granting an increase of pension to Orange S. Mason;

S. 725. An act granting an increase of pension to William M. Smith;

S. 772. An act granting a pension to Jerusha Hayward Brown;

S. 784. An act granting an increase of pension to George L. Cooley;

S. 790. An act granting an increase of pension to William Benkler;

S. 836. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Fay;

S. 842. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. Eggleston;

S. 859. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard T. Fried;

S. 861. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas O'Connor;

S. 969. An act granting an increase of pension to Howard Ellis;

S. 1011. An act granting an increase of pension to John E. Woodsum;

S. 1023. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter Shippman;

S. 1130. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaiah Mitchell;

S. 1138. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert S. Blake;

S. 1173. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Fernald;

S. 1227. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Patterson;

S. 1228. An act granting an increase of pension to Julia L. Plimpton;

S. 1230. An act granting an increase of pension to Eugene Gaskill;

S. 1246. An act granting an increase of pension to William F. Wilson;

S. 1251. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter Burns;

S. 1273. An act granting an increase of pension to Eleanora A. Keeler;

S. 1357. An act granting an increase of pension to Orlando C. Pinkham;

S. 1399. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Jordan;

S. 1418. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi B. Cross;

S. 1420. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Tyler;

S. 1421. An act granting an increase of pension to Harvey C. Brown;

S. 1437. An act granting an increase of pension to William F. Davis;

S. 1527. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Odenheimer;

S. 1555. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Bishop;

S. 1624. An act granting an increase of pension to Peter Betz;

S. 1634. An act granting an increase of pension to Solomon R. Ruch;

S. 1645. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob G. Orth;

S. 1665. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Estes;

S. 1666. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Beard;

S. 1834. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick W. Partridge;

S. 1889. An act granting an increase of pension to Arthur Thompson;

S. 1905. An act granting an increase of pension to Edgar Tibbils;

S. 1908. An act granting an increase of pension to Frances Del Gindice;

S. 1911. An act granting an increase of pension to Gunnerus Ingebretson;

S. 1978. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Edsall;

S. 2044. An act granting a pension to Solomon F. Wehr;

S. 2080. An act granting a pension to Ruth F. Bennett;

S. 2090. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Adams;

S. 2091. An act granting an increase of pension to John P. Bambush;

S. 2096. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel R. Kent;

S. 2103. An act granting an increase of pension to Lorin R. Bingham;

S. 2142. An act granting an increase of pension to Adelle D. Irwin;

S. 2153. An act granting an increase of pension to Helen B. Read;

S. 2168. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac B. Hewitt;

S. 2182. An act granting an increase of pension to John J. Buffington;

S. 2216. An act granting an increase of pension to David W. Magee;

S. 2250. An act granting an increase of pension to John Rauch;
S. 2332. An act granting an increase of pension to Ashley A. Youmans;
S. 2346. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Reed;
S. 2344. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert C. Andrews;
S. 2393. An act granting an increase of pension to John L. Clark;
S. 2406. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Milliman;
S. 2473. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles L. Noggle;
S. 2548. An act granting an increase of pension to Jesse M. Furman;
S. 2735. An act granting a pension to Marcelina S. Groff;
S. 2840. An ace granting an increase of pension to George L. Jaquith;
S. 2863. An act granting an increase of pension to Garrett Rourke;
S. 2868. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Flick;
S. 2882. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel E. Johnson;
S. 2950. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph E. Stines;
S. 2968. An act granting a pension to George W. Hale;
S. 3029. An act granting an increase of pension to Delia A. Hooker;
S. 3031. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank Westervelt;
S. 3036. An act granting an increase of pension to John O. Thorn;
S. 3043. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry D. Hall;
S. 3121. An act granting an increase of pension to John G. Blessing;
S. 3125. An act granting a pension to Parthenia W. Baker;
S. 3132. An act granting an increase of pension to Georgia D. Brown;
S. 3187. An act granting a pension to John Harper;
S. 3189. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Rutherford;
S. 3199. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Coulton, alias Samuel Myers;
S. 3224. An act granting a pension to Nancy A. Teeters;
S. 3242. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel Woolley;
S. 3310. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard M. Ogle;
S. 3312. An act granting a pension to Oscar F. Renick;
S. 3315. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry V. Hamenstaedt;
S. 3472. An act granting an increase of pension to Lena Sherman;
S. 3473. An act granting an increase of pension to La Forrest C. Darling;
S. 3474. An act granting an increase of pension to James B. Kellogg;
S. 3475. An act granting an increase of pension to Everett S. Fitch;
S. 3492. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine Bechtol;
S. 3539. An act granting an increase of pension to Dominick Cavanaugh;
S. 3547. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen M. Davis;
S. 3575. An act granting an increase of pension to Sargent R. Emerson;
S. 3588. An act granting an increase of pension to James Lebo;
S. 3626. An act granting a pension to Catherine Coyle;
S. 3640. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver Brenton;
S. 3714. An act granting an increase of pension to James Rutle;
S. 3721. An act granting a pension to Mary C. Morgan;
S. 3751. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel D. Nash;
S. 3800. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert D. Pordner;
S. 3866. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel J. Barlock;
S. 3888. An act granting an increase of pension to Susan E. Israel;
S. 3903. An act granting an increase of pension to John McCoy;
S. 3905. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Garritt;
S. 3932. An act granting an increase of pension to David Rankin;
S. 3933. An act granting an increase of pension to Sidney R. Smith;
S. 4000. An act granting an increase of pension to Crosby Pyle Woodward;
S. 4006. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles S. Parrish;
S. 4020. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry C. Johnson;
S. 4096. An act granting an increase of pension to Norman W. Lombard;
S. 4097. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius T. Williamson;
S. 4100. An act granting an increase of pension to Carlton A. Wheeler;
S. 4131. An act granting an increase of pension to John Connor;
S. 4159. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary P. Johannes;
S. 4181. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret Hallett;
S. 4187. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel E. Skelton;
S. 4188. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank D. Smith;
S. 4223. An act granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Peirce;
S. 4226. An act granting an increase of pension to James Cain;
S. 4227. An act granting a pension to John H. McKenzie;
S. 4280. An act granting a pension to Aurelia Cotton;
S. 4286. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Davies;
S. 4319. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick C. Sturm;
S. 4337. An act granting an increase of pension to Barney McGirl;
S. 4362. An act granting an increase of pension to William Fluegel;
S. 4381. An act granting an increase of pension to John T. McGarraugh;
S. 4422. An act granting an increase of pension to Lindsay Kirby;
S. 4496. An act granting an increase of pension to Alphonso Brooks;
S. 4507. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Chandler, jr.;
S. 4595. An act granting an increase of pension to Amos McManus;
S. 4636. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry R. Pease; and
S. 4637. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick Zimmerman.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

S. 3288. An act authorizing the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania and Newark Railroad Company, or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River;
S. 4128. An act permitting the building of a dam across the Red Lake River at or near the junction of Black River with said Red Lake River in Red Lake County, Minn.;
H. R. 6385. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Hastings;
H. R. 8977. An act to create a new division of the western judicial district of Texas, and to provide for terms of court at Del Rio, Tex., and for a clerk of said court, and for other purposes;
H. R. 9944. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Martin; and
H. R. 13536. An act to incorporate The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. LODGE. I present resolutions of the legislature of Massachusetts, relative to an amendment of the Federal Constitution enabling Congress to enact laws regulating the hours of labor. I ask that the resolutions be read, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There being no objection, the resolutions were read, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In the year 1906. Resolutions relative to an amendment to the Federal Constitution enabling Congress to enact laws regulating hours of labor.

Resolved, That in the opinion of the general court of Massachusetts it is desirable that the Constitution of the United States should be so amended as to put it clearly within the power of Congress to enact laws regulating the hours of labor in the several States according to some uniform system; and the Senators and Representatives of this Commonwealth in Congress are hereby requested to use their influence to secure the adoption of the pending resolution proposing such an amendment to the Constitution.

Resolved, That properly attested copies of these resolutions be forwarded by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and also to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth.

In the house of representatives, adopted February 23, 1906.

In senate, adopted in concurrence February 28, 1906.

A true copy. Attest.

WILLIAM M. OLIN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of the Associated Charities of Cambridge, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation to restrict immigration by the illiteracy test; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the First Primitive Methodist Church of Lowell, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in all Government buildings, grounds, and ships; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented a petition of the Society of Master House Painters and Decorators of the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation to remove the duty on alcohol for use in the arts; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Littleton, Everett, Stoneham, Leominster, Fayville, and Lynn, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for an investigation of the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the New York Historical Society, of New York City, N. Y., praying for the enactment of legislation to establish a United States historical commission; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions of sundry citizens of Haverford and Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation granting separate statehood to the Indian Territory; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Tecumseh, Okla., praying for the adoption of the Gallinger amendment to the so-called "statehood bill" to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in that Territory when admitted to statehood; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the petition of L. A. Coolidge, of Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of legislation to change the name of Douglas street to Clifton street; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Petworth Citizens' Association, of Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of legislation empowering the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to regulate the street car railway schedules in that city; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, of Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of legislation providing compulsory education in the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the North Washington Citizens' Association, of Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of legislation to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education in the District of Columbia; which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. PENROSE presented a memorial of the Civic Club of Harrisburg, Pa., remonstrating against the repeal of the law for the protection of the forest reserves; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. DILLINGHAM presented a petition of Local Division No. 347, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Rutland, Vt., praying for the passage of the so-called "anti-injunction bill;" which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Burlington, Vt., praying for the enactment of legislation to restrict immigration; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of Otter Creek Division, No. 347, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of Rutland, Vt., and a petition of representatives of the railroad employees of Vermont, praying for the passage of the so-called "employers' liability bill" and also the "anti-injunction bill;" which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of the United Commercial Travelers' Association of Minnesota and the Dakotas, praying for the repeal of the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a petition of Minneapolis Lodge, No. 91, International Association of Machinists, of Minneapolis, Minn., and a petition of District No. 48, International Association of Machinists, of St. Paul, Minn., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for increased compensation for the mechanics in the Gun Factory of the Washington Navy-Yard; which were referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. GAMBLE presented a petition of the Grand Jurisdiction of Minnesota and the Dakotas, United Commercial Travelers of America, of St. Paul, Minn., praying for the repeal of the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the petition of Mrs. G. L. Gilman and 70 other citizens of Yankton, S. Dak., praying for an investigation of the charges made and filed against Hon. REED SMOOT, a Senator from the State of Utah; which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented the petition of Mrs. Etta Vosburg and 18 other citizens of Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of legislation providing compulsory education in the District of Columbia; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Union Ex-Prisoners of War Association, praying for the enactment of legislation to recognize the services of ex-prisoners who were confined in southern military prisons; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PILES (for Mr. ANKENY) presented a memorial of the Spokane Jobbers' Association, of Spokane, Wash., remonstrating against the repeal of the present bankruptcy law; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also (for Mr. ANKENY) presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Sprague, Wash., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "parcels-post bill;" which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also (for Mr. ANKENY) presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce, of Everett, Wash., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for a loan in aid of the reclamation fund; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also (for Mr. ANKENY) presented a petition of the faculty of the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash., praying for the adoption of a metric system of weights and measures; which was referred to the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures.

Mr. BULKELEY presented a memorial of the Central Labor Union of Hartford, Conn., remonstrating against the repeal of the present Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the Lumber Dealers' Association of Connecticut, praying for the enactment of legislation for the protection of the White Mountain and Appalachian forest reserves; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Thompsonville; the Connecticut Forestry Association; of Austin F. Hawes, State forester; Henry S. Graves, director of forestry school of Yale University, and sundry other citizens of Connecticut, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the establishment of the national forest reservations in the southern Appalachian and White Mountains; which were referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game.

Mr. WETMORE presented a petition of Border Grange, No. 3, Patrons of Husbandry, of Woonsocket, R. I., praying that increased appropriations be made for the support of agricultural experiment stations; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. SPOONER presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Reedsburg, Wis., remonstrating against the consolidation of third and fourth class mail matter; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a petition of sundry citizens of Wisconsin, praying for an investigation into the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BACON presented a paper to accompany the bill (S. 4289) for the relief of Mary E. Forrester and Alexander B. Duncan; which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. CARTER presented a petition of the Business Men's Association of Hamilton, Mont., and a petition of the Rock Creek Farmers' Protective Association, of Clyde Park, Mont., praying for the passage of the so-called "Hepburn railroad rate bill;" which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the board of sheep commissioners of the State of Montana, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing for the leasing of public grazing lands; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition of the Stock Growers and Business Men's Association of Meagher County, Mont., and a petition of the North Montana Roundup Association, of Montana, praying for the enactment of legislation to increase the exporting business from the United States of live stock and the products thereof to foreign countries; which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Culbertson, Mont., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the opening to settlement of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Dupuyer, Mont., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the opening to settlement of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in that State; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Big Timber, Mont., and a petition of the Methodist, Baptist, Congregational, and Presbyterian unions of Montana, praying for an investigation of the existing conditions in the Kongo Free State; which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of the Montana Business Men's Association, of Billings, Mont., and a memorial of the Gallatin Valley Club, of Bozeman, Mont., remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "Philippine tariff bill;" which were referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

Mr. SPOONER presented the petition of C. A. Lebb, of Evansville, Wis., praying for the enactment of legislation to remove the duty on linotype and composing machines and the parts thereof; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Watertown, Baldwin, Fort Atkinson, New London, Oakfield, Waterloo, Waupesha County, Neillsville, Pewaukee, Poynette, Green Lake County, Albany, Peshtogo, Coloma Station, and Kaukauma, all in the State of Wisconsin, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "parcels-post bill;" which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, I present a telegram, which I send to the desk and ask that it may be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana presents a paper and asks that it may be read. In the absence of objection, it will be read by the Secretary.

The Secretary read as follows:

[Telegram.]

SANTA FE, N. MEX., March 7, 1906.

Hon. A. J. BEVERIDGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

I firmly and unequivocally believe that the passage of the joint statehood bill without the Foraker amendment will be for the highest welfare of the people of New Mexico, and while I am very sure its passage will result in my soon stepping out of office, I am strongly and conscientiously in favor of it.

H. J. HAGERMAN,
Governor of New Mexico.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I also present another telegram, which I ask may be read, not that the names be read, because there are too many of them. I call attention to the fact that this is from Arizona.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, we are to have speeches on the statehood bill under the ten-minute rule, and I suppose, as is the custom, the time is to be fairly divided between those in favor of the bill and those opposed to it. I shall insist that evidence of this kind ought to be presented, if presented at all, under the ten-minute rule.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator will permit me to say that I have the right to present the paper to the Senate under the order of memorials and petitions, for that is all they are, but will the Senator permit me to suggest this consideration: That I would have read these telegrams yesterday in the course of my own speech but for the fact, as stated in the RECORD, according to the statement made by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] as to what would be done on yesterday, that I would begin at 2 o'clock, and the Senate will remember that I was not permitted to begin until half past 3 o'clock.

Mr. FORAKER. Exactly at 3 o'clock.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I think nearly a half hour after that.

Mr. FORAKER. And an hour this morning to make up for it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state under the rule——

Mr. TELLER. The Senator can later take ten minutes to put in those telegrams and petitions, if he chooses to do so.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made to reading the communication presented by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. In my own right, during the pendency of this order of petitions and memorials, without taking any time, I will say that I hold in my hand here telegrams, signed by scores of the best citizens of Arizona principally, and also by citizens of New Mexico, demanding the passage of the statehood bill. I merely asked that they may be read.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I want to say that I, too, have scores, even hundreds, of telegrams and letters, but I did not think of intruding them upon the Senate. Among those telegrams I have one saying that a gentleman, giving his name, but I have it not at hand now, is circulating a telegram in Arizona signed by the Senator from Indiana asking that they send 500 telegrams here in favor of joint statehood for use in connection with this bill.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, I know nothing about that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that this debate is out of order.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then I object to it, Mr. President.

Mr. BURROWS and others. Regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order, or what is called in the other body "a parliamentary inquiry."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. NELSON. I think that when a petition is presented to this body the Senator presenting it has the right to have it read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will read, for the information of Senators, the following rule of the Senate:

RULE XI.

When the reading of a paper is called for, and objected to, it shall be determined by a vote of the Senate, without debate.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I withdraw my objection to the reading of the telegrams presented by the Senator from Indiana.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection to the reading of the telegrams is withdrawn.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then I renew the objection, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. NELSON, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4726) permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River at or near Pike Rapids, in Morrison County, Minn., reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. PILES, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 15263) to authorize William Smith and associates to bridge the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River, near Williamson, W. Va., where the same forms the boundary line between the States of West Virginia and Kentucky, reported it without amendment.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2732) for the protection of wild animals in the Grand Canyon Forest Reserve, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BLACKBURN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 3593) granting an honorable discharge to Joseph P. W. R. Ross, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PATTERSON, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 13348) granting an increase of pension to Nancy F. Shelton;

A bill (H. R. 13402) granting a pension to John Reynolds;

A bill (H. R. 8202) granting an increase of pension to Henry Guy;

A bill (H. R. 6507) granting an increase of pension to James M. Busby;

A bill (H. R. 8048) granting an increase of pension to William F. Bottoms;

A bill (H. R. 10632) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Preston;

A bill (H. R. 8376) granting an increase of pension to Mary J. McConnell;

A bill (H. R. 10914) granting an increase of pension to John Hamilton;

A bill (H. R. 7770) granting an increase of pension to Burgess Cole;

A bill (H. R. 11745) granting an increase of pension to James D. Billingsley;

A bill (H. R. 12289) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Grissom;

A bill (H. R. 12391) granting an increase of pension to J. Frederick Edgell;

A bill (H. R. 13611) granting an increase of pension to William Clough;

A bill (H. R. 13643) granting an increase of pension to Davis W. Hatch; and

A bill (H. R. 7396) granting an increase of pension to John E. Ball.

Mr. BULKELEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 31) authorizing the Secretary of War to award the Congressional medal of honor to Peter B. Cupp, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the joint resolution was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2174) authorizing the Secretary of War to procure medals for the members or the legal heirs of the deceased members of the Worth Infantry and York Rifles, who were the first fully armed and equipped soldiers to do active service in response to President Lincoln's call for 75,000 volunteers, and for other purposes, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 1977) granting a pension to Emma C. Anderson;

A bill (H. R. 1967) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Baker;

A bill (H. R. 1968) granting an increase of pension to John Monroe;

A bill (H. R. 3225) granting an increase of pension to William B. Philbrick;

A bill (H. R. 1440) granting an increase of pension to Matilda E. Lawton;

A bill (H. R. 1460) granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Renell; and

A bill (H. R. 10886) granting an increase of pension to Martha S. Campbell.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am directed by the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game to submit a written report to accompany House joint resolution No. 83, for a report, etc., upon the preservation of Niagara Falls, heretofore reported by me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be received and printed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am directed by the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game, to whom the subject was referred, to report an original bill.

The bill (S. 4953) for the purpose of acquiring national forest reserves in the Appalachian Mountains and White Mountains, to be known as the Appalachian Forest Reserve and the White Mountain Forest Reserve, respectively, was read twice by its title.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. BRANDEGEE, from the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game, to whom was referred the bill (S. 34) for the purchase of a national forest reserve in the White Mountains, to be known as the "National White Mountain Forest Reserve," reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 408) for the purchase of a national forest reserve in the Southern Appalachian Mountains, to be known as the "National Appalachian Forest Reserve," reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. FOSTER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by Mr. FULTON on the 13th ultimo, proposing to appropriate $400,000 for continuing the improvement at the mouth of Columbia River, intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill, reported it with an amendment, and moved that it be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations; which was agreed to.

Mr. MORGAN, from the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1830) making appropriation for the removal of the quarantine station at San Diego, Cal., and to acquire a new site, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

IMPROVEMENT OF MOUTH OF COLUMBIA RIVER.

Mr. FOSTER. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom the subject was referred, to report a bill (S. 4952) making an appropriation for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia River; to which I call the attention of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. FULTON].

Mr. FULTON. Mr. President, as that bill carries an emergency appropriation, as the proposition is very strongly indorsed by the Engineering Department, and as the bill has been reported unanimously by the Committee on Commerce, I ask unanimous consent that it may be given immediate consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill just reported. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill was read the first time by its title, and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $400,000 be, and is hereby, appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available, and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, for continuing the improvement at the mouth of the Columbia River, Oregon and Washington, in accordance with the existing project.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. FRYE introduced a bill (S. 4954) authorizing Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen to act as master of an American vessel; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. BLACKBURN introduced a bill (S. 4955) for the relief of N. C. Pettit; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4956) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building thereon at Versailles, in the State of Kentucky; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. GALLINGER introduced a bill (S. 4957) to correct the military record of Alexander J. MacDonald; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. ALGER introduced a bill (S. 4958) granting an increase of pension to William W. Duffield; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PENROSE introduced a bill (S. 4959) to further the administration of justice; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4960) to provide for the cancellation of certificates of naturalization fraudulently procured or improperly issued, and prescribing a penalty for the use of such canceled certificate or issuing a duplicate thereof; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4961) granting an increase of pension to William Ickes; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4962) to correct the military record of Jacob Rockwell; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4963) to correct the military record of John Reighard; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4964) for the relief of Thomas F. Walter; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4965) authorizing the appointment of Harold L. Jackson, a captain on the retired list of the Army, as a major on the retired list of the Army; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4966) providing for the promotion of assistant paymasters in the Navy; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4967) to establish additional aids to navigation in Delaware Bay and River; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. ELKINS introduced a bill (S. 4968) to fix the time of holding the circuit and district courts for the northern district of West Virginia; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LODGE introduced a bill (S. 4969) granting permission to Rear-Admiral C. H. Davis, United States Navy, to accept a silver cup and salver and silver punch bowl and cups tendered to him by the British and Russian ambassadors, respectively, in the name of their Governments; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also introduced a bill (S. 4970) to amend section 3 of chapter 1140 of the United States Statutes at Large; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also (by request) introduced a bill (S. 4971) for the relief of certain claimants under the Geneva award; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PERKINS introduced a bill (S. 4972) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Hull; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. DICK. I introduce a bill for the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MILLARD], who is detained in his committee room.

The bill (S. 4973) for the relief of Albert H. Raynolds was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. CLAY introduced a bill (S. 4974) to execute the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of the estate of William M. Vaughan; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. KEAN introduced a bill (S. 4975) giving the consent of Congress to an agreement or compact entered into between the State of New Jersey and the State of Delaware respecting the territorial limits and jurisdiction of said States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. SMOOT submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,500 for the support and civilization of the Kaibab Indians in Utah, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PENROSE submitted an amendment providing that officers of the Marine Corps with creditable records who served during the civil war and were retired prior to 1904, shall receive the full benefit of the act approved April 23, 1904, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the naval appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. ELKINS submitted eight amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 12987) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission; which were ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

Mr. PERKINS submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $10,000 for the eradication of pear blight in the State of California, intended to be proposed by him to the agricultural appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 for the investigation of the hop industry of the Pacific coast, with special reference to growing, airing, and handling crops, intended to be proposed by him to the agricultural appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $5,000 for the erection of a permanent rostrum in the national cemetery at the Presidio of San Francisco, Cal., for the convenience of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $25,000 for the improvement of the grounds within the Presidio and other military reservations on the bay of San Francisco, intended to be proposed to the Army appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

POSTAGE ON CERTAIN PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS.

Mr. STONE. A few days ago I gave notice that on Wednesday, the 14th instant, after the routine morning business, I would ask permission of the Senate to call up the resolution instructing the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads to ascertain and determine whether the construction of the Post-Office Department of the law as to postage on certain publications of alumni of colleges as second-class matter, etc., is correct, etc., for the purpose of submitting some remarks thereon. I now ask unanimous consent that the time be changed from Wednesday, the 14th, to Thursday, the 15th.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Missouri is granted.

REGULATION OF RAILROAD RATES.

Mr. RAYNER. I desire to give notice that on Wednesday, the 14th instant, after the routine morning business, I shall ask leave to submit some remarks on the bill H. R. 12987, known as the "railroad rate bill."

DELAWARE RIVER AND BAY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read, and, on motion of Mr. KEAN, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In compliance with the request of the governor of the State of New Jersey, I transmit herewith, for the action of the Congress thereon, a certified copy of an act of the legislature of the State of New Jersey, entitled "An act to ratify and confirm a compact or agreement between the States of New Jersey and Delaware respecting the Delaware River and Bay, and to authorize the execution thereof."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 9, 1906.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

H. R. 15331. An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. B. F. BARNES, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts:

On March 7, 1906:

S. 587. An act granting a pension to Mary J. Chenoweth;

S. 1736. An act granting a pension to Lena S. Fenn;

S. 2377. An act granting a pension to Clara T. Leathers;

S. 8. An act granting an increase of pension to William M. Hall;

S. 75. An act granting an increase of pension to Urial J. Streeter;

S. 77. An act granting an increase of pension to Granville P. Mason;

S. 78. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary R. Blethen;

S. 79. An act granting an increase of pension to James F. Tilton;

S. 121. An act granting an increase of pension to John Cook;

S. 124. An act granting an increase of pension to Curtis B. McIntosh;

S. 125. An act granting an increase of pension to John E. Hadsall;

S. 127. An act granting an increase of pension to Anthony H. Crawford;

S. 136. An act granting an increase of pension to Sabastian Laudner;

S. 139. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick Le Hundra;

S. 176. An act granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Marsh;

S. 181. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis E. Stevens;

S. 186. An act granting an increase of pension to George P. Howe;

S. 201. An act granting an increase of pension to Lyman E. Farrand;

S. 207. An act granting an increase of pension to Marion F. Howe;

S. 213. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Doorsch;

S. 476. An act granting an increase of pension to Emily Peterson;

S. 506. An act granting an increase of pension to James Wilson;

S. 533. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Munson;

S. 566. An act granting an increase of pension to George Wiley;

S. 573. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry T. Braman;
S. 619. An act granting an increase of pension to James F. Prater;
S. 620. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth S. Law;
S. 624. A act granting an increase of pension to Abbie C. Moore;
S. 639. An act granting an increase of pension to George M. Bradley;
S. 640. An act granting an increase of pension to Hugh P. Buffon;
S. 676. An act granting an increase of pension to Joshua W. Tolford;
S. 702. An act granting an increase of pension to Richard Dearborn;
S. 703. An act granting an increase of pension to Edmund T. Connelly, alias John Marks;
S. 717. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Tuck;
S. 724. An act granting an increase of pension to George A. Parker;
S. 788. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward P. Metcalf;
S. 789. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Wolf;
S. 853. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Lander;
S. 894. An act granting an increase of pension to Florence A. Sewell;
S. 909. An act granting an increase of pension to Harvey M. D. Hopkins;
S. 968. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward Michaelis, alias Edward Michael;
S. 970. An act granting an increase of pension to William Crome;
S. 984. An act granting an increase of pension to William W. Benedict;
S. 992. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert E. Lyon;
S. 1010. An act granting an increase of pension to Joel M. Sawyer;
S. 1017. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Ryan;
S. 1037. An act granting an increase of pension to Adolphus L. Oxton;
S. 1268. An act granting an increase of pension to William Lounsberry;
S. 1298. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis W. Usher;
S. 1414. An act granting an increase of pension to Sidney G. Smith;
S. 1417. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Tilton;
S. 1433. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Willard;
S. 1463. An act granting an increase of pension to Anna Z. Potter;
S. 1518. An act granting an increase of pension to Phineas F. Lull;
S. 1536. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Brown;
S. 1538. An act granting an increase of pension to Indiana A. Paul;
S. 1670. An act granting an increase of pension to William McNabb;
S. 1731. An act granting an increase of pension to William O. Colson;
S. 1744. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph B. Papy;
S. 1753. An act granting an increase of pension to Waldo W. Paine;
S. 1798. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert K. Smith;
S. 1799. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Logan;
S. 1821. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel L. Andrews;
S. 1835. An act granting an increase of pension to James G. Doane;
S. 1840. An act granting an increase of pension to James Prettyman;
S. 1883. An act granting an increase of pension to Nellie Raymond;
S. 2089. An act granting an increase of pension to John P. Campbell, No. 2;
S. 2183. An act granting an increase of pension to George P. Trowbridge;
S. 2257. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Campbell;
S. 2327. An act granting an increase of pension to Sidney F. Mullin;
S. 2328. An act granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Franklin Bigelow;
S. 2329. An act granting an increase of pension to Knute Torgeson;
S. 2337. An act granting an increase of pension to Ellen S. Larned;
S. 2405. An act granting an increase of pension to John P. Winget;
S. 2411. An act granting an increase of pension to Carrie B. Findley;
S. 2421. An act granting an increase of pension to Herrick Hodges;
S. 2459. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander M. Scott;
S. 2482. An act granting an increase of pension to Cutler A. Chamberlin;
S. 2526. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Welch;
S. 2975. An act granting a pension to Mary L. Miller;
S. 3311. An act granting a pension to Bernhard Schaffner;
S. 3508. An act granting a pension to Mary J. Visscher;
S. 2556. An act granting an increase of pension to George B. Hunter;
S. 2557. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Longfellow;
S. 2702. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Dightman;
S. 2752. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert S. Moore;
S. 2778. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Langford;
S. 2797. An act granting an increase of pension to James Buggie;
S. 2869. An act granting an increase of pension to Rachael A. Foulk;
S. 2871. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Brunell, sr.;
S. 3039. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Smith;
S. 3120. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Driscoll;
S. 3123. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Alban;
S. 3126. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen B. Tarlton;
S. 3184. An act granting an increase of pension to Alfred T. Hawk;
S. 3240. An act granting an increase of pension to John T. Jones;
S. 3285. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary M. Hull;
S. 3291. An act granting an increase of pension to Matthew D. Raker, jr.;
S. 3309. An act granting an increase of pension to John C. Baber;
S. 3321. An act granting an increase of pension to Olney P. B. Wright;
S. 3402. An act granting an increase of pension to Jesse W. Elliott;
S. 3507. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac Van Volkenburgh;
S. 3537. An act granting an increase of pension to Anthony W. Presley;
S. 3587. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza Orr;
S. 3605. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert Smith;
S. 3630. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin L. Barber;
S. 3643. An act granting an increase of pension to Seth Raymond;
S. 3667. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha J. Brisco;
S. 4029. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha G. Archer; and
S. 1465. An act granting an increase of pension to Patrick Fallihee.

THE STATEHOOD BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12707) to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of New Mexico and Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, recurring to what I was proceeding to say when the Senate adjourned, I wish to call attention, in the first place, to the constitutional provision with respect to the admission of States into the Union. The provision is:

New States may be admitted by the Congress into the Union.

I call attention to this in support of the suggestion I made in answer to the contention of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] that if there be anything unusual about the amendment I have offered, it is because this whole proceeding is unusual.

It may be that we have the constitutional right to admit a Territory to statehood in the Union, or to join two Territories together and admit them as one State, as is here proposed, without regard to whether the Territory or the Territories in question desire to be admitted. But the language of the Constitution clearly contemplates that no such action shall be taken by the Congress until the Territory makes application therefor. And that idea of the Constitution is in harmony with the history of the admission of States into the Union. No State has been admitted into the Union since the beginning of the Government, except only upon its own application.

This proceeding is unusual therefore, in this, that instead of waiting for these two Territories to make application to be admitted into the Union, Congress is going out and, in a sense, taking them by the scruff of the neck and undertaking to compel them to come into the Union. Neither New Mexico nor Arizona is applying at this time for admission into the Union. Both are praying Congress simply to leave them alone as Territories until such time as the Congress may see fit to admit them as separate and independent States.

Assuming, however, that the Senator is right in his contention that the Congress has power to do as it may see fit with respect to the admission of a Territory to statehood into the Union, and that, therefore, it is a question upon which Congress may act without an application made—that it has the power to do that—the question remains whether or not it is good policy to do it. Is it good policy in this instance to do it? If so, it is unusual. It is unusual, Mr. President, because always heretofore, when we have undertaken to admit a Territory to statehood, we have not sought to join it with some other Territory, but we have created it, if it was not already a Territory in existence, separate and by itself as a Territory, by taking territory from some other Territory. That is the way Oklahoma was created a Territory. It was carved out of the Indian Territory. That is the way Vermont was made a State of the Union, by taking territory that was claimed by the State of New York and creating of it a separate State. Maine was carved out of Massachusetts. Ohio and Indiana and the others of the five States that originally constituted the territory lying northwest of the river Ohio, were made not by joining them together with other Territories, but by carving them out of existing territory.

This is the first time, therefore, since the beginning of the Government that we have undertaken to make a State by joining two Territories together; and what makes this case more unusual still is the fact, as the Senator from Indiana himself stated in his remarks yesterday afternoon, that this is the only instance where a Territory has been created and Congress, in the act creating the Territory, has written down a pledge that it is to remain a Territory until it shall be taken into the Union as a State. I believe in every other instance, without a single exception—certainly with very few exceptions, if any at all—Congress has, when creating a Territory, expressly provided in the organic act creating the Territory that it reserved the power to join the Territory so created for purposes of statehood with another Territory or a part of another Territory. But in this instance, for the first time, Congress did exactly the opposite. Instead of reserving the right to join Arizona for purposes of statehood with New Mexico, as is now proposed, or with any other Territory, Congress gave the solemn pledge that Arizona should continue a Territory until when, Mr. President? The language of the pledge is as follows:

That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall apply for and obtain admission as a State.

The Senator says that is not legally binding, and that is conceded, but this is the first time in the history of legislation in the American Congress of which I have any knowledge where a solemnly given pledge of the Government has been sought to be evaded on the ground that technically it is not legally binding. Everybody concedes it to be a pledge that is morally binding. It is not a pledge made simply to the five or six thousand people living in Arizona at that time, but it is a continuing pledge to every man who has become a citizen of Arizona from that day until this, given perhaps as an inducement to people to go into that Territory, become citizens, help to reclaim its lands, subject them to civilization, to cultivation, and build up what would in time become a State of this Union.

That was to continue, Mr. President, until the people of Arizona should apply for admission to statehood in the Union. Arizona is not here applying. This whole argument has proceeded on the part of those advocating this bill upon the theory that the question to be determined here is whether there shall be one State or two separate and independent States. That at one time was the proposition before the Senate. It came to us from the House. That was four years ago. The proposition now is, as it was in the last Congress, whether there shall be one State out of two Territories or whether there shall be a continuance of two Territories as Territories until such time as Congress may see fit to act with respect to them, either to give them separate statehood or to deal with them otherwise, as it may see fit.

Mr. President, I can not now make an argument. I can only call attention to the points that the Senator made, and to only very few of them. He contends, in opposition to this amendment, that certain interests are fighting in favor of it on account of advantages with respect to the matter of taxation; and he instances railroads and mines. I do not know anything about the laws of the Territory with respect to taxation of property there, except only as the Senator has stated what those laws are. But I do know that the complete answer is that which was anticipated by him, namely, that so long as they are Territories they not only must be governed by the laws created by the Territories, but also by the laws of the Congress of the United States with respect to the matter of taxation.

If in the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico the laws are unjust as to property interests and the citizens generally in the matter of taxation, the chairman of the Committee on Territories should have called attention to it, in order that we might legislate on the subject and correct any iniquity or injustice that may exist. It is true, as the Senator suggested, that now the tax laws of the Territory are made by the Territorial legislature. If the Territories be admitted to statehood, the laws will be made by the State legislature. If these interests are so powerful that they can control the legislature in one instance, they will be equally powerful, for aught that I can see, to control the legislature in the other, and more powerful to control if they are given statehood than if they continue as Territories, because if they continue as Territories these interests must control not only the legislatures of the Territories, but they must control also the Congress of the United States. It seems to me, therefore, that there is no justification for the contention the Senator makes with respect to the matter of taxation.

Now, another matter that the Senator has spoken about is the impossibility, as he terms it, of Arizona ever having a population large enough to qualify her for statehood in the Union. He tells us of the arid lands; how impossible it is to subject them to irrigation or to bring them under cultivation in any respect. And he has exhibited plats and diagrams to show us that Arizona can never in any contingency have a population to exceed about one million. Mr. President, this is not the first time in the history of this country that we have heard reports and speeches in Congress of the same general character with respect to Territories that were little known at the time when such remarks and such speeches were made.

Mr. Webster, as somebody said here the other day, had a profound knowledge of the Constitution, but seemed to be a very poor judge of real estate. He did not think there was anything in California, where to-day everything blooms and blossoms as the rose, which justified an expectation that it would ever be of any value.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Ohio to the fact that he has spoken ten minutes.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to offer an amendment to the pending bill. I do not wish to have it printed. Let it lie on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will lie on the table.

Mr. DUBOIS. I ask the Secretary to read the amendment which I have offered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Idaho requests the reading of his proposed amendment. The Secretary will read as requested.

The SECRETARY. Following the amendment on page 33, after line 14, insert the following as I and II, respectively:

I. No person shall be permitted to vote, serve as a juror, or hold any civil office who is under guardianship, idiotic, or insane, or who has, at any place, been convicted of treason, felony, embezzlement of the public funds, bartering or selling or offering to barter or sell his vote, or purchasing or offering to purchase the vote of another, or other infamous crime, and who has not been restored to the rights of citizenship, or who, at the time of such election, is confined in prison on conviction of a criminal offense; or who is a bigamist or polygamist, or is living in what is known as patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or in violation of any law of this State or the United States forbidding any such crime, or who in any manner teaches, advises, counsels, aids, or encourages any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or to live in violation of any such law, or to commit any such crime; or who is a member of or contributes to the support, aid, or encouragement of any order, organization, association, corporation, or society which teaches, advises, counsels, encourages, or aids any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal or plural marriage, or who teaches or advises that the laws of this State prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the State.

II. The legislature may prescribe qualifications, limitations, and conditions for the right of suffrage, additional to those prescribed in this article, but shall never annul any of the provisions in this article contained.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, I offer that as an amendment to the contemplated Arizona State constitution. It is the Idaho test oath, which was adopted by the people of Idaho Territory almost unanimously, and is now a part of our constitution, and it is the bulwark and safety of Idaho to-day. It can not be gotten out of our constitution, because the American citizens of that State will not allow it to be taken out, and its provisions will be invoked again in Idaho unless the Mormon leaders cease exercising political control over their followers and cease living in the polygamous relation.

It is claimed that there are not a great many polygamists in Arizona or New Mexico; that there are but very few Mormons in either one of those Territories. I saw a list in the office of the Attorney-General of the United States of polygamists in Arizona, which list comprised from fifty to one hundred men and about three times as many women, and there was a large list also of polygamists in New Mexico. This has been ascertained by special agents of the Government, and, of course, did not include all, by any manner of means, who are living in this relation in those Territories. During the past year there have been a number of convictions of polygamists in Arizona and New Mexico. I do not know the number who have been convicted, but it is considerable.

Unless this legislation is put in the pending bill and if this State is admitted without this provision in the constitution, they will be as helpless there as they are in Utah to-day. Wherever there is Mormonism there is polygamy, and if you do not have restraints of this kind beyond those which the State can afterwards impose, the vote of this compact body of Mormons alone, no matter how small, will be the balance of power. They are neither Democrats nor Republicans, but vote only and always as their church leaders dictate, and the church leaders always dictate if any attempt is made to interfere with polygamy or the political power and control of the hierarchy.

In the last campaign in Idaho, we having removed the restriction against polygamy because of the manifesto of the church that they had quit the practice of polygamy, when one party declared that we would enact laws in Idaho for the punishment of those living in polygamy, every Mormon delegate in that State convention bolted the convention, and all the members of the Mormon Church voted with the other party.

You can not touch polygamy in Utah. The president of that church testified before your Committee on Privileges and Elections that he is living with five wives now, and several apostles of the church testified before the same committee that they were living in the polygamous relation, and in substance they asked us what we were going to do about it. Practically they said, "We are a sovereign State; we elect the officers of Utah; the people of Utah are in sympathy with polygamous living, and you have no right to interfere with our domestic affairs." And what have we done since that testimony was given? The leading Mormon of my State testified before this committee that he is living now in open polygamy with three wives. Yet up to date even in Idaho we have not the power to punish him, because of the tremendous political power of this organization, which prevents the enactment of efficient statutes.

I hope the Senator from Indiana will allow this provision to go into the bill, so that it will be a part of the constitution of the new State.

The constitutionality of this "test oath" has been affirmed by every court in Idaho and unanimously by the Supreme Court of the United States. I will call attention to a portion of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Davis v. Beason, 133 U. S. Reports, page 333 and following:

Davis v. Beason. Appeal from the third judicial district court of the Territory of Idaho. No. 1261. Argued December 9, 10, 1889; decided February 3, 1890.

The provision in section 501, Revised Statutes, Idaho, that "no person who is a bigamist or polygamist, or who teaches, advises, counsels, or encourages any person or persons to become bigamists or polygamists, or to commit any other crime defined by law, or to enter into what is known as plural or celestial marriage, or who is a member of any order, organization, or association which teaches, advises, counsels, or encourages its members or devotees or any other persons to commit the crime of bigamy or polygamy, or any other crime defined by law, either as a rite or ceremony of such order, organization, or association, or otherwise, is permitted to vote at any election, or to hold any position or office of honor, trust, or profit within this Territory," is an exercise of the legislative power conferred upon Territories by Revised Statutes, sections 1851, 1859, and is not open to any constitutional or legal objections.

Bigamy and polygamy are crimes by the laws of the United States, by the laws of Idaho, and by the laws of all civilized and Christian countries; and to call their advocacy a tenet of religion is to offend the common sense of mankind.

A crime is none the less so, nor less odious, because sanctioned by what any particular sect may designate as religion.

It was never intended that the first article of amendment to the Constitution, that "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof," should be a protection against legislation for the punishment of acts inimical to the peace, good order, and morals of society.

The second subdivision of section 504, Rev. Stats., Idaho, requiring every person desiring to have his name registered as a voter to take an oath that he does not belong to an order that advises a disregard of the criminal law of the Territory, is not open to any valid legal objection.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Jeremiah M. Wilson and Mr. Franklin S. Richards (with whom was Mr. Samuel Shellabarger on the brief) for appellant.

* * * * * * *

The legislature of Idaho could not legally prescribe that a man who has never committed any crime should not have the right to register and vote, or hold office, because he belonged to a church organization that holds or teaches bigamy and polygamy as a doctrine of the church, membership in such organization not having been by law made a crime.

I. The statute disfranchising and disqualifying citizens from holding office for that reason is unconstitutional and void, because it prohibits "the free exercise of religion," and conflicts with the first amendment to the Constitution, that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." (Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S., 145, 162; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How., 393, 450.)

* * * * * * *

II. This Idaho statute violates the provision in the fourteenth article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States, that "No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

For the scope of this amendment see Sinking Fund Cases, 99 U. S., 700, 718; Cummings v. Missouri, 4 Wall., 277, 320; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S., 303, 307, 308; ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S., 339, 347; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S., 356, 369; United States v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308; S. C., 92 U. S., 542, 555; Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S., 15, 44.

III. This Idaho statute violates the provision in Article VI of the Constitution of the United States, that "No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

That this statute requires a religious test is apparent upon its face.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Justice Field, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court.

* * * * * * *

Bigamy and polygamy are crimes by the laws of all civilized and Christian countries. They are crimes by the laws of the United States, and they are crimes by the laws of Idaho. They tend to destroy the parity of the marriage relation, to disturb the peace of families, to degrade woman, and to debase man. Few crimes are more pernicious to the best interests of society and receive more general or more deserved punishment. To extend exemption from punishment for such crimes would be to shock the moral judgment of the community. To call their advocacy a tenet of religion is to offend the common sense of mankind. If they are crimes, then to teach, advise, and counsel their practice is to aid in their commission, and such teachings and counseling are themselves criminal and proper subjects of punishment, as aiding and abetting crime are in all other cases.

The term "religion" has reference to one's views of his relations to his Creator and to the obligations they impose of reverence for His being and character and of obedience to His will. It is often confounded with the cultus or form of worship of a particular sect, but is distinguishable from the latter. The first amendment to the Constitution, in declaring that Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or forbidding the free exercise thereof, was intended to allow everyone under the jurisdiction of the United States to entertain such notions respecting his relation to his Maker and the duties they impose as may be approved by his judgment and conscience, and to exhibit his sentiments in such form of worship as he may think proper, not injurious to the equal rights of others, and to prohibit legislation for the support of any religious tenents or the modes of worship of any sect.

* * * * * * *

It was never intended or supposed that the amendment could be invoked as a protection against legislation for the punishment of acts inimical to the peace, good order, and morals of society. With man's relations to his Maker and the obligations he may think they impose and the manner in which an expression shall be made by him of his belief on those subjects, no interference can be permitted, provided always the laws of society, designed to secure its peace and prosperity and the morals of its people, are not interfered with. However free the exercise of religion may be, it must be subordinate to the criminal laws of the country, passed with reference to actions regarded by general consent as properly the subjects of punitive legislation. There have been sects which denied as a part of their religious tenets that there should be any marriage tie, and advocated promiscuous intercourse of the sexes as prompted by the passions of its members. And history discloses the fact that the necessity of human sacrifices, on special occasions, has been a tenet of many sects. Should a sect of either of these kinds ever find its way into this country swift punishment would follow the carrying into effect of its doctrines, and no heed would be given to the pretense that, as religious beliefs, their supporters could be protected in their exercise by the Constitution of the United States. Probably never before in the history of this country has it been seriously contended that the whole punitive power of the Government for acts, recognized by the general consent of the Christian world in modern times as proper matters for prohibitory legislation, must be suspended in order that the tenets of a religious sect encouraging crime may be carried out without hindrance.

* * * * * * *

And in Murphy v. Ramsey (114 U. S., 15, 45), referring to the act of Congress excluding polygamists and bigamists from voting or holding office, the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Matthews, said:

"Certainly no legislation can be supposed more wholesome and necessary in the founding of a free, self-governing commonwealth, fit to take rank as one of the coordinate States of the Union, than that which seeks to establish it on the basis of the idea of the family, as consisting in and springing from the union for life of one man and one woman in the holy estate of matrimony, the sure foundation of all that is stable and noble in our civilization, the best guaranty of that reverent morality which is the source of all beneficent progress in social and political improvement. And to this end no means are more directly and immediately suitable than those provided by this act, which endeavors to withdraw all political influence from those who are practically hostile to its attainment.

It is assumed by counsel of petitioner that because no mode of worship can be established or religious tenets enforced in this country therefore any form of worship may be followed, and any tenets, however destructive of society, may be held and advocated if asserted to be a part of the religious doctrines of those advocating and practicing them; but nothing is further from the truth. While legislation for the establishment of a religion is forbidden, and its free exercise permitted, it does not follow that everything which may be so called can be tolerated. Crime is not the less odious because sanctioned by what any particular sect may designate as religion.

* * * * * * *

The judgment of the court below is therefore affirmed.

NOTE.—The constitutions of several States in providing for religious freedom have declared expressly that such freedom shall not be construed to excuse acts of licentiousness or to justify practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the State. Thus the constitution of New York of 1777 provided, as follows:

"The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever hereafter be allowed within this State to all mankind: Provided, That the liberty of conscience hereby granted shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this State." (Article XXXVIII, 2 Charters and Constitutions, 1338.) The same declaration is repeated in the constitution of 1821 (Article VII, section 3, id., 1347) and in that of 1846 (Article I, section 3, id., 1351), except that for the words "hereby granted" the words "hereby secured" are substituted.

The constitutions of California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, and South Carolina contain a similar declaration.

The only way you can strike at this organization is by striking at their political power, which they use to maintain the tenet, the unalterable tenet, of their faith—polygamy. There ought not to be in the Senate any objection to the incorporation of this provision, which has been sustained by every court in Idaho, and unanimously by the Supreme Court of the land.

It was voted into the Idaho constitution by the unanimous vote of the people of that Territory, and under that provision for ten years not a Morman voted in Idaho. There was not a member of that organization who could take an oath that he did not belong to an organization which put the ecclesiastical above the civil law, and there is not a Mormon to-day anywhere on earth who can take an oath that he puts the civil above the ecclesiastical law of his organization.

The only reason why the people of Idaho repealed the statute making that constitution effective was on the solemn pledge of this organization, signed by Joseph F. Smith, the president of the church, and all the governing officers of the church, and ratified in open conference by the members of the church, that polygamous living should cease and political dictation in affairs should cease. Yet, notwithstanding that, not only Joseph F. Smith, the president, but many of the apostles who, with him, signed this solemn covenant with the Government, testified under oath that they are living in the polygamous relation now and intend to do so, when in doing that they were violating the laws of God and man.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's ten minutes have expired.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President, I concede fully to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] the power and beauty of the speech which he has delivered to the Senate in support of this bill; but I am constrained to say that if it were placed alongside of the report which that Senator made after a personal investigation in these Territories in 1902, the speech and the report would be like Kilkenny cats—they would eat each other up.

In that report it was shown that a majority of the citizens of New Mexico were Mexicans and spoke almost entirely the Spanish language. It was shown that the proceedings of courts, stated generally, were conducted in the Spanish language. Has that ceased to be true? Apparently so, from the speech of the Senator from Indiana. It was shown that the jurors were not able to understand the English language, and that the testimony, the arguments to the jury, the charge of the court, had to be interpreted to the jury by some one who understood both English and Spanish. That was true, according to this report four years ago. Is it false now? It was shown that at political conventions speeches had to be interpreted from English into Spanish. The witnesses' names were given. Has it substantially changed? The practice may have been discontinued with some reference to evidencing fitness for statehood, but is it conceivable that in four years such a change as that could come into New Mexico?

We were told, then, Mr. President, and one strong reason against the admission of New Mexico at that time was, that there were railroad corporations and adventurers who wanted admission as a State into the Union in order to take the Territory out from under the restrictive legislation of Congress as to the indebtedness to be incurred by her counties, and leave her under the laws of a State, which they could control to exhaust the credit of their counties by the issue of bonds for railway construction and other public improvements.

Mr. President, I can not go into that. The Senator has spoken about the pledge contained in the act which organized Arizona into a Territory. Has he found any obscurity in the language of that pledge? If it were written in letters as bright as the stars it could not be any plainer than it is:

That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall, with the consent of Congress, form a State government, republican in form, as prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, and apply for and obtain admission into the Union as a State on an equal footing with the original States.

When the people of Arizona come here and lay that pledge before Congress and call attention to the fact that it is unredeemed, it is said in reply it was unconstitutional; that it does not constitute an enforceable compact.

That is not the rule, Mr. President, by which men of honor test their pledges. It is not the rule by which governments of honor test their pledges. Is it a pledge made by the Congress of the United States back in 1863, when this Territory was erected? Yes. No man can deny it. Is there doubt as to its meaning? No; none. Has it ever been repealed or modified? No; like a covenant that runs with the land, it has remained upon our statute books a plain, living, unbroken obligation; a moral obligation of this Government from the day Abraham Lincoln put his hand to it until this day.

Why was it made? It was not made to be broken. The Senator from Indiana seeks to impeach it by imputing some vice or taint to its origin. He asks the people of the United States to disregard it, solemn as it is; enacted by the Congress of the United States, as it was; recommended in each House by the Committee on Territories, as strong then as now, Mr. President; discussed in the Senate for a day; pending in the Congress for a year. He asks that it be disregarded upon the ground that its sole origin was in the dizzy brains and schemings of revelers at a midnight supper. Mr. President, the pledge of a government is not to be set aside in that way.

The Senator says no one in Arizona in all the years since then has known of its existence and he nods now his acquiescence in reaffirmation of that statement. By what authority does the Senator from Indiana assume to say that? There were doubtless hundreds of thousands of negroes in the South who never had read Abraham Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, who had never heard of it perhaps, but they knew about it somehow. It was in the air, Mr. President, and whether they knew about it or not it was a living thing that broke the shackles of slavery from them and gave them liberty as fast as our flag advanced to float over them.

This pledge has stood. It has stood for the purpose for which it was made. Why was it made? It is an insult to the memory of the men who made it to ask the Congress of the United States to disregard it because, forsooth, a band of adventurers and office seekers assembled around a champagne table in 1863 planned to divide among themselves the offices in the Territory to be created.

Who participated in the discussion of that bill in this Chamber? Wade of Ohio, Grimes of Iowa, Fessenden of Maine, Lane of Kansas; Saulsbury, who moved to strike out the antislavery clause in the bill; Collamer, Trumbull, Nesmith, Doolittle, Powell. Were not these men attending to their duties as Senators? Were they oblivious of the oath which they took and which we have taken?

They were giving their attention to the business in hand, and, Mr. President, it is no compliment to the memory of those men for fidelity or for intelligence to sweep away this plain promise as not expressing the will and promise of the Congress as being essentially the product of an "oyster supper."

Why was it made, Mr. President? Senator Doolittle, in his speech in favor of it, gave two reasons why it should be made. Let me say this language could not have been desired by men who wanted offices in Arizona. This pledge had nothing to do with that subject. This pledge was given on a higher ground than that. Mr. Doolittle stated—and they were the people they were looking after first—that there were 2,000 American white men and 6,000 Pueblo Indians there. I will finish at another time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's ten minutes have expired.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, three years ago, when the bill came over from the other body of the Legislature to create four States, we who were opposed to that bill at that time on the ground that Arizona and New Mexico were not fitted for independent statehood thought we were right. But we received little encouragement from those who are at this time urging that those States are not fit for statehood.

In connection with that bill, too, I might add that while the Committee on Territories may not be equal to some of the elder statesmen of this body, yet when we prepared that substitute, which is substantially the bill now pending, contemplating two States out of the four Territories, the Committee on Territories consulted the elder statesmen on the Republican side of this body, and we supposed in that effort we had their approval. If some of those elder statesmen to-day have seen fit to take a different tack it is not our fault.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] speaks much about "honor" in this case. Let us look at it calmly from the standpoint of a lawyer, without getting into hysterics about it. It is conceded that there is no constitutional legal inhibition against our action in this promise. All that is urged is that there is a moral obligation. I insist that that moral obligation can not go further than if it were a legal obligation that could be enforced as such.

Now, what is the language of the statute? Let me call your attention to it. Here is the section of the act establishing the Territory of Arizona. The first proviso reads as follows:

Provided, That nothing contained in the provisions of this act shall be construed to prohibit the Congress of the United States from dividing said Territory or changing its boundaries in such manner and at such time as it may deem proper.

Taking that proviso as the basis of a moral obligation, it left Congress a free hand to divide or change its boundaries to any extent it saw fit. But here comes the next proviso:

Provided further, That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall, with the consent of Congress, form a State government, republican in form, as prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, and apply for and obtain admission into the Union as a State, on an equal footing with the original States.

Every lawyer knows that where provisions in an act appear to conflict it is the duty of every lawyer and every court to so construe the provisions that all parts of the statute may remain and be in force. It is possible, and it is a fair inference, to give this statute such a construction; and taking the two provisions together and reconciling them, a fair construction is that while Congress reserved the power to divide and change the Territories it bound itself to this effect, that the people of Arizona should not be deprived of a Territorial government until they became a State. In that way you give force and effect to both provisions. The one provision states that Congress shall have full and ample power to divide and change the boundaries. The other provision states that they shall continue to enjoy a Territorial government. Now, both of those ideas can coexist, and that will be the fair legal interpretation.

I insist, Mr. President, what in a court of justice would be the fair legal interpretation of this act can not be any different from the moral obligation. As I construe the moral obligation, it amounted to this: That Congress reserved the power to change the boundaries of that Territory or to divide it, but it did not reserve the power to deprive the people of Territorial government until in some form they got into statehood.

The Senator from Wisconsin again referred to the character of these people and what he termed the "inconsistency" of the Senator from Indiana. What is it we are attempting to do? Here is an area of 150,000 acres of land, and out of that vast area there are—as it were, a small oasis in the desert—15,000 acres of land in forest reserves and that are irrigated and capable of irrigation. Only 10 per cent of that vast area is fit for agricultural and grazing purposes.

Now look at the question from an ethnological standpoint. Taking all the Mexican and native population of those two Territories, yet the fact stands out that by combining the two Territories together out of that aggregate population over two-thirds of them are Americans; and the American population will entirely dominate the Mexican element, and because of their dominating force they will be enabled to more swiftly and more thoroughly Americanize the Mexican element. If you leave New Mexico alone to wrestle with that problem, the elements there being so nearly balanced, it will be slower and more difficult. If you unite them to Arizona, the American element will be so strong and overpowering that what has occurred in many of the Northwestern States will occur there, and that is within a short time they will become Americans, not only in obedience to the laws, but in spirit and in language. That, to my mind, is one of the most important considerations that appeal to me. It is one of the most important considerations that ought to appeal to the Congress of the United States. The sooner we can develop the Mexicans in those two Territories into full-fledged American citizenship, not only in spirit, not only in habits, not only in customs, but in language, so as to make them a homogeneous people, the better for the people in those Territories and the better for the United States of America as a nation.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, the chairman of the Committee on Territories has spent some time to show the unsatisfactory condition of taxation in the Territory of Arizona, and to cure the evil existing there he proposes a State government. Under present laws the Congress of the United States can repeal any law that Arizona has made touching taxation. It can enact any law that Congress may think proper for the government of that Territory. The Senator proposes to adopt a State government with all the influences existing, which he says are pernicious, and to take it entirely out of Congressional control. If there is a bad condition there to-day, there will be a bad condition when the State is admitted.

Yesterday I undertook to find some explanation for the most remarkable bill that has ever come before Congress touching the admission of States. I asked the chairman yesterday why it was that it was necessary to depart from the custom which has existed for many years, that only the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections in a township should be given for school purposes, and in this bill there is a double amount of land given for that purpose. The Senator informed me that that was because of the anxiety to have schools.

Mr. President, in this bill the proposed new State will have a donation from the Government of the United States beyond what it has already had, for both the Territories have had the usual Territorial appropriations of land. It will have over 22,000,000 acres of land, more than any of the other States ever did have, and not for school purposes, but for all sorts of purposes, some for schools, some for penitentiaries, some for hospitals, some for schools of mines, amounting in the aggregate to more than 5,000,000 acres that do not pretend to be in the interest of schools. I allege that no three States that have ever been admitted into the Union received that amount of land before.

In addition to that, there are $5,000,000 in this bill for the new State of Arizona, which means the Territories of Arizona and the Territory of New Mexico combined. This bounty given to this proposed new State is given for some purpose and some object. I said yesterday that I thought perhaps the proprieties of the place would prevent me from expressing my honest opinion why that was put into the bill. I think it can be made apparent to anybody why it is in the bill, when it is remembered that this is an attempt not to admit Territories upon their application to be admitted as States, but to force a condition which, as the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] has said, has never existed in this country, and which in all decency ought never to exist.

Mr. President, I have voted for the admission of seven sovereign States since I have been a member of this body, and never before has there been an attempt to say to any portion of the people that they should come in when they did not wish to do so.

The Senator from Indiana says, "Why not take the counties?" Mr. President, here are two political entities—a political entity recognized for Arizona and a political entity recognized for New Mexico in this bill. This bill gives to Arizona forty-four members of the constitutional convention, and gives to New Mexico sixty-six members of that convention. It has been industriously prepared so as to let New Mexico control not only the question of whether these two Territories shall be united as a State, but the question of the disposition of all this property which we are proposing to turn over to them, worth in money to-day not less than $30,000,000. Ten million dollars are proposed to be donated by this bill that never were before put into any other bill for school purposes. You could not very well give $5,000,000 to Arizona and New Mexico, if you did not put in a like sum for Oklahoma. Does anybody here pretend that Oklahoma is either so ignorant or so poor that she needs a donation from us of $5,000,000?

Mr. President, if the people of Arizona and New Mexico were anxious to come in, as the Senator from Indiana says they are, and as I know they are not, and as he ought to know they are not, there would not be $5,000,000 put in the bill for either of those Territories.

When the Senator says here on this floor that he has had 400, or whatever number it may be, of telegrams, I will say that it is easy to get them if some man here will telegraph down there, "Send up your telegrams in support of joint statehood;" and that is what has occurred within the last few days.

Mr. President, I do not intend to be personal, and I do not intend to say who of the advocates of joint statehood sent the telegrams that went out from here. As to the reply that the Senator wants to read, if he will read all of them that have been received, I shall be glad to have him read them.

Mr. President, I have on my table here a message from a reputable mayor of a reputable city of Arizona, which came to me in the early hours of this morning, saying that the people there were unanimously opposed to joint statehood; that there had been no change in sentiment, as the Senator from Indiana represents. I defy anybody here to prove that the people of Arizona are not united against it; and the larger portion of the better people of New Mexico are equally opposed to it. If the Senator wants to accept that challenge, let the people of each Territory vote on the question, not simply as a whole, and thereby enable the great number of unlettered voters of one section to dominate the other.

The Senator said, "Why not let the counties vote?" Why, Mr. President, that is puerile; that is childish. Who ever expected counties to vote in such a case? Here is a political entity that is being destroyed and forced into union with a people dissimilar in their tastes and in their interests, who are divided from them by an almost impassable mountain range; and yet the Senator says, "Why not let the counties vote?" Mr. President, the entity does the voting; but you have taken that away from Arizona; you have said that Arizona shall have only 44 votes out of 100 in the constitutional convention, and that New Mexico shall have 66; and yet you tell us that that is treating American citizenship fairly; that it is doing the duty that is incumbent upon this Congress in the treatment of citizens who have as much interest in this country as have we or anybody else. A community full of intelligent, upright, virtuous people is to be governed by a community with which it can not affiliate; and yet the Senator says this will be the crowning glory of the men who vote for it. Mr. President, it will be the crowning disgrace, as it will be a disgrace to this Senate whenever it shall adopt the provisions of this bill as the Senator from Indiana has presented them to us.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. President, I am not presumptuous enough to believe that anything that I can say at this late stage of the debate will influence any Senator from his preconceived convictions as to his duty either upon the pending bill or upon the various amendments that have been presented to it. But some suggestions have fallen from the lips of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] that I think should be at least in part answered.

The Senator from Wisconsin assumed that this bill should not be approved by the Senate and that Arizona and New Mexico should not be admitted into the Union as a separate State because in New Mexico they speak and read the Spanish language. Mr. President, to my mind that is an argument in favor of uniting the two Territories as one State. We know that in New Mexico there is a civilization that is more than 300 years old. We also know that for more than fifty years we have had a Territorial form of government there, and have exercised all the powers of the General Government to enlighten those people according to the principles of our constitutional form of government, to establish an English-speaking people within the limits of that Territory; and yet, after fifty years under that Territorial form of government, we find that there are more Spanish-speaking people within the Territory than there are English-speaking people, and that not only do they teach the Spanish language in the schools, but that they use it in the courts.

Mr. President, how are we to meet that condition of affairs and wipe it out of existence within the limits of that Territory? We can do it by uniting the people there with the American and English-speaking people within the limits of the Territory of Arizona. As was well said by my honored friend, the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], the combination of the two Territories makes the American citizens preponderate by more than two-thirds majority. You unite the two Territories and you have an English-speaking people. They will pass laws by which courts will be administered in the English language. They can give us a school system such as we have in the older States, where it is compulsory that children shall be educated in the English language. If you keep these Territories out in the form they are now, New Mexico may go on for another fifty years with the Spanish element predominating within the limits of the Territory, and the conditions at the expiration of that period will be the same as now. But if you unite them as is proposed in this bill, within the next decade we will find English-speaking people exercising all of their legal rights in the courts there in the English language, as we find them doing to-day in the State of Wisconsin and in my own State of Illinois.

Mr. President, the Senator from Ohio has justified the amendment which he has offered here proposing that the two Territories shall have a separate vote as to whether they will be admitted as one State upon the ground that the conditions are exceptional, and that never in the history of this Government have we attempted before to unite two Territories. My answer to that is that this is the first time in the history of our country when Congress has undertaken to admit a new State into the Union where it has been found necessary, in order to do exact and equal justice to the people of all the country, that we should unite two Territories.

But I think, Mr. President, if this debate has shown anything, it has demonstrated beyond any question that the population and the condition of those Territories demand that, in justice to the people of the States of the Union, if they are to be admitted at all, they should be admitted as one State.

The Senator from Ohio in speaking of the sacredness of the Territorial boundary gives it the same character as he would to a State in the Union; but, Mr. President, the Constitution of the United States makes a marked difference between one of the sovereign States of the Republic and a Territory. Each of the sovereign States possesses rights and prerogatives that are not dreamed of within the limits of a Territory. The Territory, under the Constitution itself, is the property of the United States, and the people who live within the limits of the Territory are to be governed and controlled as Congress may dictate. In every instance where a Territory has been admitted into the Union Congress has exercised the right of determining the boundary limits of that Territory. There are few instances in the thirty or more odd States which have been admitted to this Union since the formation of our Federal Republic where we have not found it necessary to change the Territorial limits when that Territory became a State.

As I had occasion to say the other day, Mr. President, a marked example is found in the State of Illinois. The northern portion of that State belonged to the Territory of Wisconsin. That portion of Illinois that was added by amendment to the State of Illinois from the then Territory of Wisconsin has a larger population to-day than the portion of Illinois has which formed the original Territory of Illinois. It has to-day a larger population than has the present State of Wisconsin.

Now, Mr. President, did the men who were then in Congress deem it proper and just to permit the people living within the limits of the fourteen counties, that were taken from Wisconsin, to vote upon the question as to whether they should remain with Wisconsin or become a part of Illinois? Not at all. It was never dreamed of in those days. Upon the same principle, I contend that we should not permit these two Territories, which are proposed to be admitted as one State into the Union, to have two seperate elections, and the majority vote in either Territory defeat the action of Congress.

As has been well said in the debate here, if you are to provide for two elections, you might as well provide for twenty, or an election in each county of the two Territories. I trust that this amendment, which has been proposed by the Senator from Ohio, will be voted down. It possesses an element which disregards the rights of the forty-five States which to-day form the Federal Republic. It assumes that the only parties who are interested in the admission of a new State to the Union are the people living within the limits of the proposed new State; aye, not only that, but that a portion of the people within the limits of that proposed State can determine a great question which is to affect the interests of all the people of this Republic.

That is the viciousness, as I contend, of that amendment. If such a policy as that had been adopted in times past we never should have admitted any Territories as States into the Union of States. You can not find in any action of any Territory that has ever been admitted a State into the Union where some people would not oppose the Territorial limits of the proposed new State or would not object to something that was contained in the provisions made by the Congress.

Under the policy that is to be adopted here if this amendment of the Senator from Ohio should prevail, we will permit the mining interests and the railroad interests of Arizona to determine the rights of 80,000,000 people of this country.

I want to know, Mr. President, have we come to the point where a few great corporations in Arizona are to determine whether we are to have one State or two States, whether the rights of the people of the entire country are to be ignored, and a few corporations are to determine whether Arizona shall become a part of New Mexico or remain a Territory of the United States? I trust the vote which will be given here to-day will show that the rights and interests of the people of the Republic will be conserved, and that that amendment will be voted down, as it ought to be.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I take it that, whatever may happen upon what may be termed the joint statehood portion of this bill, all that part of the bill relating to Oklahoma will be retained. That being the case, Mr. President, I want to call the attention of the Senate briefly to the language of section 3, to which I have proposed two or three amendments. Subdivision 2 of section 3 reads as follows:

> Second. That the manufacture, sale, barter, giving away, or otherwise furnishing, except as hereinafter provided, of intoxicating liquors within those parts of said State now known as the Indian Territory and the Osage Indian Reservation and within any other Indian reservations existing in the Territory of Oklahoma on the 1st day of January, 1906, is prohibited for a period of twenty-one years from the date of the admission of said State into the Union.

Mr. LODGE. On what page of the bill is that?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Page 7. The expression in line 4, "within any other Indian reservations existing in the Territory of Oklahoma," appears to me to be in language that is decidedly obscure, because I believe it is true that there are several reservations in what is to become the State of Oklahoma that are not mentioned specifically in this section. There is the Kaw Reservation, and, I believe, the reservation known as the "Big Pasture," and others. The lands in some of the reservations not mentioned in this section are now in process of allotment, and if this section is adopted as it came from the committee, and the lands in the reservations that are not mentioned in the section should be allotted prior to the adoption of the constitution, it would raise a question whether the Indians residing in those reservations would come under the operation of the twenty-one-year clause referred to in section 3. So, I think the language I propose in the amendment, which will be found in print, will greatly improve the section, and I request Senators to examine it between now and the time when we are to vote on proposed amendments.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator read the proposed amendments?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The amendment which I propose to page 7, to come in after the word "other," in line 4, is as follows:

> Parts of said State which existed as Indian reservations or in which the United States maintained laws prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

On page 8 I have proposed another amendment. After the word "States," in line 9, I propose to insert a semicolon and the following language:

> And for the sale of such liquors to any apothecary who shall have executed an approved bond in a sum not less than $1,000, conditioned that none of such liquors shall be used or disposed of for any purpose other than in the compounding of prescriptions or other medicines, the sale of which would not subject him to the payment of the special tax required of liquor dealers by the United States, and the payment of such special tax by any person within the parts of said State hereinabove defined shall constitute prima facie evidence of his intention to violate the provisions of this section.

Section 3 of this bill provides for the establishment of agencies with authority to sell liquor under certain conditions. An examination of the section, I think, will convince Senators that a man engaged in the business of a druggist can not buy of those agencies. My amendment provides that they shall be able to purchase from those agencies, and, at the same time, it puts upon them the restrictions that are now in force in those States where there are prohibition or local option laws with respect to what shall constitute presumptive evidence against them for violating those laws. That is the whole purpose of the amendment. I shall offer it at the proper time. Perhaps I should say, however, that the States where the provisions contained in this amendment relative to presumptive evidence are in force are Ohio, Maine, Vermont, Tennessee, Kansas, Alabama, Texas, Virginia, North Dakota, Minnesota, and Florida. These States have laws on this subject in line with the amendment which I propose.

Mr. GALLINGER. It will be remembered, Mr. President, that when this matter was before the Senate on a former occasion I offered an amendment providing for prohibition in the entire new State, and that amendment was inserted in the bill. It will also be remembered that that bill did not become a law. I have listened with interest to the amendments which the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] proposes to offer, and I simply want to say that if those amendments shall be incorporated in the bill I will not offer an amendment, which I have had printed, proposing to extend prohibition over the entire new State. I think the amendments the Senator from North Dakota proposes will safeguard the interests of the Indians to the extent that we are under obligations to safeguard them in view of the treaty relations we have had and have now with those Indians.

Mr. President, I have been deluged during the past two months with letters from Arizona protesting against combining the two Territories into one State. In my committee room I have a mass of material which I might use during this debate, but which I do not think it well to either take the time of the Senate or to encumber the RECORD by introducing. But my attention has been called by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] to a letter which he received recently from a well-known minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Phoenix, Ariz., who discusses this question with so much care and in so convincing a way that, with the consent of the Senator from Ohio, I will put it in the RECORD. It shows, Mr. President, so conclusively the lack of foundation for the oft-repeated assertions made in this debate that the opposition to joining Arizona with New Mexico comes from the corporations of Arizona, from men who are engaged in mining, and from the railroads of that Territory, that I think it is well for us to look at the other side of the picture.

This gentleman, writing under date of December 27, 1905, to the senior Senator from Ohio, says:

PHOENIX, ARIZ., December 27, 1905.

Senator J. B. FORAKER.

DEAR SIR: I want to write you, and being a stranger, will first introduce myself. I am a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church. I came to Colorado a young man about thirty-five years ago, and have given my whole life to the upbuilding of churches and schools in this western region.

Senator TELLER will tell you all about me if you will ask him; so will Bishop Cranston, of Washington City, or almost any of the other Methodist bishops if you happen to meet them.

I came to Arizona twenty-six years ago and organized the Arizona mission of our church and have been closely identified with the people of this Territory from one end of it to the other. I am sure I know our people more generally than any other man that can be found. I have traveled it continuously all these years. I know its resources and possibilities as intimately as its people. All the best years of my life have been given to it, and I feel very keenly the great injustice that is being attempted in the effort to force us into jointure with New Mexico as a single State. I want to be understood plainly as having no feeling of antagonism toward New Mexico. I know that our people have no animosity toward our sister Territory. If we could see her made a State, we would rejoice with her in the newly acquired dignity and honor, but Arizona and New Mexico have nothing whatever in common.

Her resources are entirely different from ours. Her people are different. Her customs are different. Her laws are different. Her language is different, and everything, in fact, is diverse from us from first to last. Her legislature is always three-fourths Spanish. Everything in business, churches, schools, commerce, tastes, habits, and proclivities are shaped in a Spanish mold. We have never been associated with New Mexico in anyway. Our affiliations have been closer with California than with New Mexico. It would be more natural and fitting to link us with California than with New Mexico, if it could be done. Our business relations have nearly always been with northern and eastern people. The character of our industries brings us into closer touch with those regions than any other. Our population is American and is rapidly growing in numbers by additions of people of this class. The Spanish people of Arizona cut no figure in our affairs. They never ask for a position in our legislature. Our officials, Federal, Territorial, county, and municipal, are never Spanish, but always American.

We can see a reason for the joining of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory into a single State. It would be putting the interests of an inferior people into the hands of an American population for their direction, control, and improvement. In our case the situation is exactly the reverse, for it would put an American people under the control and dominion of a foreign vote. This alone ought to prevent the proposed consolidation. Our people have come chiefly from the East and the North and have subdued the wilderness and made it habitable and desirable for the most intelligent and thrifty American population as it exists to-day, and is rapidly increasing. At least 1,000 of our people have lost their lives at the hands of the bloodthirsty Apache Indians. In the face of all this stubborn and dangerous condition, we have succeeded in building up one of the most bright and prosperous Territories that has ever been established within the domain of the United States.

We have a thousand million dollars' worth of minerals known to exist. We have ore now uncovered for fifty years to come, and our mineral resources are the marvel of the world.

Our grazing interests are unsurpassed.

Our agricultural possibilities have never been fully realized. We have several valleys equal to the Nile.

We have forests larger than the whole area of New England, which the ax of the woodman has never touched.

So we have before us, in every respect, a large domain of great wealth.

We have 113,000 square miles in area, and New Mexico has even more. The proposed union would make a State larger than all New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio combined. It would be wretchedly unwieldly on account of its dimensions alone. It would be unwieldly also beyond calculation, for great mountain chains divide us the one from the other. To ask us to transfer our public records and business to Santa Fe, N. Mex., would be like asking Indiana and Illinois to take their records and business to New York City and subjecting the people to the great inconvenience that would result.

Besides all this the proposition is utterly unreasonable from other points of view. Our people are practically a unit against the measure. It is riding us down because of our very helplessness. It would be forcing us against our will into a union that is perfectly odious to us and distasteful, I fully believe, to a majority of the people of New Mexico. We feel that it would be just as fair to force us into this union against our will at the point of the bayonet by an invading army as to do it by an arbitrary vote of the Congress of the United States. It has never been done in the history of the American people, and it is cruel injustice to do it now. It is opposed to the whole theory of Republicanism. I was in at the organization of the Republican party. I cast my first vote for Abraham Lincoln as President. I have always believed the Republican party to be the champion of the people in carrying out their expressed will in so far as their rights would permit. If this proposed action is Republicanism, I have been mistaken in it. It is not Republicanism, but imperialism of the worst type.

Our people are not anxious for statehood in any form. All we ask is to let us remain in our present relation to the United States. Let us continue as a Territory and work out the problem of our success indefinitely till we have shown ourselves of sufficient value to the nation to be desirable as a State to be added as another star in the field of blue.

We have the appliances ready to hand to do the work before us in the development and growth of our Territory. We have our insane asylum; we have our magnificent public school system, that is not excelled in Ohio, New York, or any other State in the Union; we have our two normal schools in fine condition, our Territorial university splendidly equipped and doing effective work; we have a fine capitol building, and, in fact, everything that is needed ready to hand for every purpose desired by an intelligent, industrious people, and all we need is to be permitted to remain in our Territorial condition indefinitely and we will be content until we are worthy of admission as a single State.

* * * * * * * *

I hope you and our other friends will succeed in defeating this infamous proposition to drive us unwillingly into the obnoxious relation that has been proposed in our case.

Pardon the length of this communication and its trespass upon your time. I hope some points I have urged against joint statehood may be of some little service to you in the splendid fight you are making on our account.

Yours, truly, G. H. ADAMS.

Mr. President, I have some further observations that I may later on take occasion to submit to the Senate on another phase of this question. But I think rather important to put in the RECORD this letter from this distinguished clergyman, who has, of course, only the best interests of his people at heart, and who writes feelingly on the subject we now have under consideration.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Out of order I ask unanimous consent to introduce certain petitions, which I ask to have printed in the RECORD. They relate to the pending bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana asks unanimous consent to present out of order sundry petitions, which he asks unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. TELLER. I will not object to their being read, but I do object to their being printed in the RECORD.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. TELLER. I am willing that they shall be read. I do not object to their being read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The request was that they should be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. HEYBURN. Mr. President, just before adjournment last evening I had occasion, in reply to an inquiry of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], to call attention to a provision in the treaty with Mexico which has, and has had, much to do with the question of the contract that has been so strongly urged here as a justification for the insertion of the unusual clause in the Territorial act of Arizona. I desire this morning in my ten minutes to place the matter before the Senate a little more specifically.

In 1848 the treaty between the United States and Mexico, known as the "treaty of peace," the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, was made. In that treaty was contained the provision, in Article IX, which I read last night, but which, for the purpose of identifying it with my remarks, I will read again:

ARTICLE IX.

The Mexicans who, in the Territories aforesaid, shall not preserve the character of citizens of the Mexican Republic, conformably with what is stipulated in the preceding article, shall be incorporated into the Union of the United States, and be admitted at the proper time (to be judged of by the Congress of the United States) to the enjoyment of all the rights of citizens of the United States, according to the principles of the Constitution; and in the meantime shall be maintained and protected in the free enjoyment of their liberty and property, and secured in the free exercise of their religion without restriction.

In the organic act this treaty provision is recognized in section 1 of the act.

The next inquiry naturally is what people are referred to. It says "the people;" why, the people mentioned in the preceding section. In the preceding section the limits of the Territory are prescribed, thus defining exactly what people were referred to as being the subjects of this guaranty.

The limits of Arizona as we know them now are clearly defined and stated in the first section of the statute so far as applies to Article IX of the treaty. Let me read it, so as to see what Congress had in mind at the time. They leave no doubt as to whom this special privilege was to be conferred upon. I read from the organic act of the Territory of Arizona. It is rather an unusual provision in its arrangement and in its language. It prescribes the boundaries of the Territories definitely, and then it says:

That said government—

That is, the government prescribed in the foregoing section—

That said government shall be maintained and continued until such time as the people residing in said Territory shall, with the consent of Congress, form a State government—

The people are to form the State government, not somebody to form it for them.

The people—

form a State government, republican in form, as prescribed in the Constitution of the United States, and apply for—and apply for and obtain admission into the Union as a State, on an equal footing with the original States.

Mark you—

Such language is not common to other acts. There was a special concession, a special limitation defining the rights of these people and guaranteeing those rights to them pursuant to the ninth article of the treaty of peace with Mexico.

I was inquired of at the close of my remarks last evening how it was that this provision was not in the act creating New Mexico. A glance at the official map of the United States will answer it. We did not acquire what is now New Mexico under the treaty with Mexico. We acquired it by purchase from Texas.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Only a part of it.

Mr. HEYBURN. I am going to call attention to the treaty. We acquired it pursuant to a treaty with Texas. Texas came into the Union not as conquered territory; it came into the Union under contract, under treaty, and it stands on a different footing, and thus affords no basis whatever of comparison between it and other States.

In 1850 we entered into a treaty practically with Texas, which is a part of the act organizing the Territory of New Mexico—the act of September 9, 1850. Now, bear in mind that was only two years after the treaty of peace with Mexico. Bear in mind, while the boundaries of New Mexico and the United States are mentioned and attempted to be described in that treaty, it was not until two years after the creation of the Territory of New Mexico that those lines were definitely fixed, because the treaty provided for a survey, and it was not until the Gadsden treaty that that survey had been completed and was accepted and recognized, and that was four years after the creation of the Territory of New Mexico.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. HEYBURN. Certainly.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not want to take time. Does he think that if the original proposition to divide these two Territories into two States by an east and west line, thus making a north and a south State, had been perfected, that then this obligation would have applied, and to which one would it have applied, if either?

Mr. HEYBURN. I will answer the Senator. A great many ineffectual propositions are presented to this body and to the other and to Congress as a whole. The very fact that some person has proposed an illegal or impracticable scheme or adjustment to this body is no argument in favor of its wisdom, but rather to the contrary. It may be that on first consideration of public questions men may have failed to appreciate the limitations of their power—the things they might do. It would settle nothing to settle that question, so far as this argument is concerned.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. If the Senator says we got New Mexico from Texas, I have nothing more to say.

Mr. HEYBURN. I have. [Laughter.]

The act of 1850, which resulted in the creation of the Territory of New Mexico, was in effect a treaty with Texas. It provided that if Texas would accept certain boundaries we would pay it $10,000,000. Texas accepted; we paid the $10,000,000; and if you will look at the lines of old Texas and new on the official map of the United States, you will see just exactly how much land was included within the provisions of that combined treaty and act of Congress.

So the fact that the provision was not incorporated in the act creating the Territory of New Mexico has two answers.

First, the lines were not fixed, the survey was not completed, defining the territory we obtained from Mexico, and we did not know how much of this territory would fall within it, because it had not been surveyed and because at that time we recognized what is now New Mexico as a part of Texas. Those are the reasons.

Mr. President, I desire to expend the rest of my time upon another question. If I were in favor of this measure I would not support this bill with the school provision that is contained in it. New Mexico and Arizona, or the proposed new State, will have sections 13, 16, 33, and 36 set apart for school purposes. Those sections aggregate 15,626,577 acres. That is all they contain. But there is a prohibition against selecting any part of that in forest reserves or in any Government reserve, which includes the lands withdrawn and subject to withdrawal under the reclamation act.

Now, those who are in favor of this bill say that all the lands subject to or susceptible of home making in the proposed new State have been discovered, and they undertake to tell you how many acres there are of them, and that outside of that definite limitation there is nothing upon which prosperity or settlement or homes could rest. Then what becomes of this school fund? Where are you to found your hopes for the funds upon which the public school system of that country is to rest? Upon the $5,000,000? The school lands of every other State that has been admitted into the Union have represented a fund many times $5,000,000.

The VICE-PRESIDENT rapped with his gavel.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, some time ago I submitted an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The SECRETARY. Strike out, in section 21, page 27, the following words where they appear in lines 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15:

And shall constitute the Osage Indian Reservation a separate county and designate the county seat thereof, and shall provide rules and regulations and define the manner of conducting the first election for officers in said county.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I do not care to speak to any of the general features of this bill, although I have some views upon those general features, but shall content myself with recording them in my vote. There is one matter of detail to which I wish to invite the attention of the Senators present for a moment.

The first reading of the bill as it came from the House disclosed one feature in it which was somewhat peculiar. Whether or not the Committee on Territories of the House or of the Senate understood what the exact result of this feature would be, I am unable to state. But there is provided in the bill, on page 27, a Congressional delimitation of county boundaries. It says:

That the constitutional convention—

Which is to meet—

shall constitute the Osage Indian Reservation a separate county and designate the county seat thereof, and shall provide rules and regulations and define the manner of conducting the first election of officers in said county.

Upon the following page, page 28, section 22, it is provided:

That the constitutional convention provided for herein shall, by ordinance irrevocable, accept the terms and conditions of this act.

The result of that is to make the Osage Indian Reservation, as it now exists, for all time a county in the new State. The Osage Indian Reservation has been said to contain the richest people as a body on the face of the earth. It has an area of something like 2,500 square miles—a million and a half acres. Within that reservation are 1,800, or at the most 2,000, Osage Indians; nearly every Indian man, woman, and child having an ownership in common in that reservation of nearly a thousand acres, and, I am informed, having a further heritage in the Treasury of the United States, or funds elsewhere, of $5,000 per capita.

The Osage Indian Reservation lies upon the extreme east end of Oklahoma. Upon the eastern side of that reservation are now going on developments second to none that have ever occurred in this nation—the development of that great oil field, which is held under a great lease, covering hundreds of thousands of acres of land, by one leasing company, which in turn sublets to individual operators. I do not suppose there was anything intended by the way this bill was presented to the two committees, but when we consider these two sections of the bill, together with one which I shall presently mention, it would seem as though the most abundant opportunity that has ever occurred in this land is there for making private gain out of public acts.

As I have said, there are only from 1,800 to 2,000 Indians. That country is in the center of a populous district. It is rich in its oil-producing capacity. It is rich in its agricultural resources. I am informed that at the present time the whites outnumber the Indians two to one. Who would take control of the proposed new county? Certainly the white population, coming from political fields elsewhere——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. May I ask whether the proposition is to leave the making of that county to the legislature hereafter?

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. The proposition is to strike that provision from the bill.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Would that be its effect? I am asking for information. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM] knows more about it than I do.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. It might be done by the constitutional convention or, failing that, by the legislature of the State.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I want to get the Senator's views.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I do not believe that for the first time in its history the Congress should go on record as defining where county boundaries should run. So far as my information goes, it has never been done. I do not think it ought to be done at this time, especially in view of the fact that the provision in this bill as it came from the House puts in the hands of the inhabitants of the Osage Nation the balance of power in the constitutional convention of both of these Territories, because the bill, as it came from the House, provided for a constitutional convention of 112 members, 55 of whom should be selected from Oklahoma, 55 of whom should be selected from the Indian Territory, and 2 from the Osage Reservation, the balance of power falling in their hands to say what should or should not be done in the constitutional convention. The two delegates were to come from this very county which it is proposed shall be made a county forever in the new State.

The Senate committee very properly struck out that provision. It did wisely and well, and I trust that the Senator in charge of the bill will accept the amendment when he comes to consider what all this means; when he sees that it is a departure from every line of Congressional action ever taken; when he comes to consider that within a year or eighteen months or two years the 1,800 or 2,000 Indians in that Territory will be as helpless in the hands of a white political organization as a babe cast into the outer world, with all their vast property interests at stake, with their land, when it shall become allotted, paying all the taxes of that county. I think it would be not only a blunder, but a crime to pass this section of the bill as it has been reported from the committee.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. Mr. President, I wish to say just a word in reply to what has been said by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK]. The clause of this bill to which he has referred is contained in section 21. It was contained in the bill as it came from the House, and it provides, as he says, for the establishment of that reservation as a county and for its continuance. That has been considered by the committee and by individual members of the committee to quite a large extent, and as one of the members of the committee I have become satisfied that the purpose for which it was offered was a good one.

That whole district was purchased by this tribe of Indians with their own money; they own and hold in common the entire area, and, of course, they are under the rules and regulations of the Interior Department, and do their business through an Indian agent. It has been proposed by various persons interested in this matter to divide the reservation, and it is proposed, when the constitutional convention is held, to divide it and throw it in three or four different directions and create counties, the center of which should be certain oil towns which now lie just outside of the border of this reservation, one at Tulsa, one at another place. If this is done, it is going to divide the interests of the Indians and send them in all directions to do their business.

I have been somewhat interested in this matter to know whether it was fair toward them or not, whether it would work well or not, and to that end I caused to be addressed to the Department of the Interior a letter asking for information upon the subject. I hold in my hand the reply which I have received. Before sending it to the desk to be read, I want to add that after a good deal of consideration and consultation with other gentlemen interested in this matter and who are desirous that justice shall be done to this tribe of Indians, it has been deemed best to offer an amendment to this section of the bill, providing that this county so established shall only continue until the lands in the Osage Indian Reservation are allotted in severalty. I have prepared an amendment to that effect, which I will send to the desk and ask to have read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the proposd amendment.

The SECRETARY. After the words "separate county," in line 12, section 21, page 27, insert the following:

And provided, That it shall remain a separate county until the lands in the Osage Indian Reservation are allotted in severalty.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment will lie on the table.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. I wish to say, in connection with it, that the request for this county is made by the council of the nation. It is also seconded by all of the white inhabitants of the reservation in the five townships which have been set out. A bill has already been introduced in Congress for the allotment in severalty of the lands. I understand from the leaders of this tribe that they are very anxious to bring about the allotment at the earliest possible time; and in view of that fact it has seemed to me to be a reasonable provision of this bill that they should be held together until such time as the allotment can be made and then leave the new State of Oklahoma to do what in its wisdom seems fit in respect to the division of this territory into different counties.

I now send to the desk to have read the communication from the Department of the Interior.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, March 5, 1906.

Hon. W. P. DILLINGHAM,
United States Senate.

SIR: I inclose herewith copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Indian Affairs dated the 1st instant, in reply to yours of the 26th ultimo, addressed to him, asking his views on the Oklahoma statehood bill as affecting the Osage Reservation, especially whether the reservation should constitute but one county or more.

I concur most thoroughly in the views of the Commissioner.

Very respectfully,

E. A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary.

---

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE OF INDIAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, March 1, 1906.

The SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

SIR: I am in receipt of a letter from Senator DILLINGHAM, dated February 23, requesting an expression of my views on the Oklahoma statehood bill as affecting the Osage Reservation, especially whether the reservation shall constitute but one county or be divided into two or more counties. He refers to the previous correspondence on the subject and says that some time ago Senator BEVERIDGE addressed a note to the Department asking for its views on the proposition to include the whole of the reservation in one county; that a reply was received expressing the view that the reservation should not be divided; and that this correspondence has disappeared from the files of the committee, the supposition being that it was loaned to some member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, but inquiry having failed to discover its whereabouts.

Answering the Senator, I have the honor to say that, in my opinion, the reservation should not be divided at the present time, or until the tribal relations of the Indians are broken up. It is probable that the division of the reservation would result in much confusion in the minds of the Indians. They are familiar with the boundaries of the reservation and with Pawhuska as the seat of government. Should the reservation be divided, part of the Indians would find themselves in one jurisdiction and part in another. Experience in dealing with Indians of any large group has shown that the difficulties of administration are greatly increased by any division of civil authority, such as is contemplated by this project of cutting up the Osage Reservation. Of course, one day the Indians everywhere will have to be subject to the same changes in such respects as white citizens; and were the present plan a matter of necessity, or of vital moment to their welfare or to that of any other parties concerned, I should entertain no objection. I should feel differently about it, indeed, if the Indians themselves wished for the division.

But the Osages own their reservation. They paid for it out of their own funds and are as truly the owners of it as any white community who hold a fee simple title to a tract of land. They have considered this county question in their councils, and for two years in succession have made a strong plea that in the change of conditions which is overcoming the present Territory of Oklahoma their wish to preserve the integrity of the reservation as a single county be respected. And they have earned our additional regard for their preference by the commendable attitude they have assumed toward civilized ways, in overcoming the natural conservatism of their race, and voluntarily petitioning for the allotment of their lands in severalty.

The only interest which, as far as I can see, would be advanced by splitting their reservation into two or more counties would be the satisfaction of the local pride of a corresponding number of towns, which would thus be given a certain prestige by their erection into county seats, and of the ambitions of a corresponding number of groups of citizens who would be elected to the county offices. This pride and these ambitions may be entirely worthy in themselves, but their gratification would have to be bought at the cost of a very greatly increased expense for governmental machinery. Until the Indians become citizens and taxpayers, substantially the entire burden of the support of these political establishments would fall upon a handful of whites and very progressive Indians gathered in the towns recently opened and to be opened in the Osage Nation, and it seems to me that it would be a mistake to handicap the pending scheme of internal development by increasing this weight unnecessarily, in the absence of any counterbalancing advantages.

It is true that the argument has been raised, in favor of the proposed division, that the reservation is too large in area for a single county. But an examination of the map of 1898 will show that it is but little larger than Woods County, and not nearly so large as Woodward County; so I can not see the force of even such a plea as this, in the face of a protesting memorial like that presented by the Osages last fall, a copy of which was submitted to the Department on December 15, 1905.

In expressing this adverse opinion of the plan of division I would not be understood as hostile to the material interests of the embryo State. On the contrary, whatever it might be decided to do after the Osage Reservation had been allotted, its present owners endowed with citizenship, and its surplus lands opened to general settlement would be subject to quite another process of reasoning. Then the Indians would be in a position to cast their own votes according to their preference, and take their chances of the result in the same way that white citizens do in like situations. My argument, such as it is, concerns only the interests of the Indians, who are still helpless, except as those of us placed in charge of them may be able to influence public affairs in their behalf. In no other sense has this office any business to meddle in the matter of statehood. But, though carefully avoiding all uninvited intrusion by word or deed into this domain, I am glad to avail myself of the opportunity offered by Senator DILLINGHAM'S courteous inquiry to set forth these views, if you consider them worthy of transmittal to him.

Senator DILLINGHAM'S letter and a copy of this report are inclosed herewith.

Very respectfully, F. E. LEUPP, Commissioner.

Mr. PETTUS. I move to amend the amendment by adding the words "and until changed by the legislature of Oklahoma."

Mr. DILLINGHAM. There is no objection to that amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment as modified will lie on the table.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I do not expect to change votes by what I may say. Inasmuch, however, as the President of the United States and the other branch of Congress—one a Republican and the other a body dominated by a Republican majority—in the first instance recommended and in the second instance passed the bill under consideration, I feel strongly disinclined to take issue with both the President and the majority of my party in the other House. For a light reason I would not make such an issue; and I avail myself of the ten minutes allowed briefly to explain the reasons constraining me to cast the votes I intend to cast this afternoon.

In the first place, Mr. President, irrespective of Territorial limits, irrespective of natural resources, without regard to the pledge made by Congress in 1863, without reference to the extent of population, I can not bring myself to vote for this measure in its present condition, because I am eternally and unalterably opposed to any form of needless coercion of American citizens. From the foundations of our Government to this hour such an effort has never been seriously countenanced in any legislative body on this continent. The Constitution provides that new States may be admitted. It does not provide that new States may be organized and brought in, but that they may be admitted when they apply. The added words are clearly and undoubtedly necessary to a full and correct understanding of the true meaning of the Constitution.

Throughout the whole history of the Government, through good and through evil report, in time of war and in time of peace, our fathers adhered without deviation, variation, or sign of change to the doctrine that the people organizing States should organize them on their own motion and then apply to Congress for admission. In some instances they have organized such States without previous Territorial existence; in other cases Territories have been supplied with enabling acts; in other cases Territories have organized through constitutional conventions the framework of State government and have then come forward seeking admission.

But in this case, Mr. President, with neither New Mexico nor Arizona seeking admission, with neither the so-called "people of American birth nor the Mexicans of American birth" asking to be admitted, with both the Delegates here, I believe, protesting, certainly the Delegate from Arizona protesting against this combination of the people whose destinies we propose to arbitrarily control, it is proposed to combine them together and obliterate a political subdivision of our country that has existed for over forty-three years.

Mr. President, due regard for the future of the State we propose here to create should constrain us to be first satisfied that these people could dwell together in peace. We have in Arizona a community of people peaceful, happy, and contented, obedient to law, and satisfied to remain as they are. Then why, I pray, should they be ruthlessly torn up and their relations to their country disturbed? There is nothing violent about this. There is no despotism in it, but it involves the disposition of a people against their protest and without their consent. For such proceeding you can not find a precedent in the history of this country, but we might across the water. Never since the world began has a political entity nor a long-established geographical division embracing a home-loving population been destroyed either by legislation or force of arms without leaving lacerated and wounded parts to bleed and to suffer pain for years and years.

It may be, forsooth, that it was better for Poland to be incorporated with a great state. It might be better for New England to be put in one great State, like Texas. It might be better for Ohio and Indiana and New York to have the ideal conditions existing in Texas. But the people do not seem to think so, and the people living in the several subdivisions are the ones to be consulted under the Constitution, because they are in States.

If the principle entitled to recognition because the citizen is in a State is a wholesome and just principle, then we can only disregard it as to a citizen of a Territory by an unwarranted and harsh exercise of power simply because we have the power.

Take the case of Poland, of Hungary, and of Norway and Sweden. About 1814 Norway and Sweden were put together. Within the last twenty-four months they have gone apart. About the opening of the last century the people of Ireland were deprived of a separate and independent parliament, and they have struggled through all of the vicissitudes of their sad history from that day to this, and as we deliberate here the conscience of England seems to be upon the very verge of according to those people the rights they have struggled for so long.

No dire calamity will befall Arizona because of being united with New Mexico, but there are certain sentimental considerations connected with the government of our race which can not be ignored, and should not be ignored because we have the power to ignore them.

I believe, Mr. President, that the Congresses of the future will be true to their duty. It will not suffice to say that we must outrage the sentiments and feelings of the people of Arizona and New Mexico because, forsooth, we fear that some future Congress will be derelict in its duty and without proper justification admit these Territories separately as States.

Our whole theory of the bill in this respect providing for the admission of these Territories jointly against their will is based upon the theory that a future Congress and a future President will be derelict to sworn duty and the interests of the Republic.

Mr. President, I have unlimited confidence in all the people of all the future in this country, and I believe there will be as good a Senate in session when we are all dead and gone as we have here to-day. I believe there will be just as honest Representatives of the people to deal with this question at the other end of the Capitol when this century shall have passed away as we have there now. Let us trust the future to take care of itself. Let us discharge our duty in the present with due reference to the precedents set by the framers of the Constitution and the men who have piloted this Government through all time since the Constitution was framed. [Manifestations of applause in the galleries.]

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I was much interested in the reference made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] to that part of the report made by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] in which he refers to the illiteracy of New Mexico as compared with Arizona, and to the fact that New Mexico has not a common language.

It appears that in New Mexico about one-third of the people are illiterate, and it also appears that the majority of the people of New Mexico speak the Spanish language and do not speak the English language, and that this necessitates the use of interpreters in the courts of justice, in the schoolhouses, in the legislature, in political conventions, and in political campaigns. So it seems that New Mexico lacks that common language which, according to the theories that have been asserted in our new propaganda in the Orient, lies at the very base of self-government.

Mr. President, why have we asserted sovereignty over the Philippine Islands? What do those who believe in that policy say? For military glory. No; there is no glory in conquering a weak and defenseless people. For profit? No; we already realize that there is no money in the Philippines, but, on the contrary, they will always be a drain upon the Republic.

Why, then, have we asserted sovereignty in the Philippines? According to the statement of those who believe with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE], simply because Providence has imposed upon us a great trust, a trust for civilization, a trust for the Filipino people themselves, and that trust, it is said, is to instruct them in a common language and in the principles of self-government so that they may be fitted for independence, either absolute or qualified. In executing that trust we have killed there over 100,000 people, we have expended over $300,000,000 in money, and to-day we are indulging there in an expenditure, military and naval, in those islands of $20,000,000 annually. Not content with that, but with a view to putting the islands upon a prosperous basis which will aid them in acquiring a common language and capacity for self-government, we have inaugurated measures looking to an annual subsidy to those islands, through the relaxation of our tariff, of from fourteen to thirty million dollars annually, involving a loss to the American Treasury within the next twenty years of from three hundred million to five hundred million dollars.

Now, if we can assert sovereignty over the Philippines in order to instruct them in a common language and in the principles of self-government—if we can expend hundreds of millions of dollars there in order to accomplish that sentimental purpose, I ask whether it would not be better before we give New Mexico self-government to spend some money in instructing the people there in a common language, which stands at the basis of self-government? Would it not be better for the Senator from Indiana to strike out all from the bill relating to the union of New Mexico and Arizona in joint statehood and leave remaining there simply the appropriation of $5,000,000 to the cause of education? Let that money be expended in training the Mexican children in English as well as industry, as it is proposed to do through agricultural and manual training schools in the Philippines, and an amazing progress will be made in five years.

Here we have a population over one-half Mexican, over one-half speaking the Spanish language, over one-third illiterate, and yet the Senator from Indiana, whilst denying the people of the Philippine Islands self-government because of their lack of a common language, proposes to force self-government upon the people of New Mexico, almost equally lacking in a common language, through this method of joint statehood.

In addition to that he submits the question to a vote, not of the Territory having the higher intelligence, but to the vote of the Territory having the lesser intelligence. The Territory that has the greater percentage of illiterates is, because of its greater population and larger vote, to control the decision.

Mr. President, the United States Government annually appropriates six or seven hundred million dollars for our schools of agriculture and the mechanic arts—about $40,000, I believe to each State and Territory. Forty thousand dollars per annum is the amount that we expend in New Mexico in instructing her people in a common language and the principles of self-government. Twenty million dollars per annum is the amount which we spend in the Philippine Islands, and we contemplate even larger sacrifices. Should not the infant peoples in New Mexico appeal to us as much as the infant people of the Philippines, 7,000 miles away? They are at our very threshold; nay, more, they are in our very home. New Mexico is a State in embryo, to be admitted into full statehood when her population, her wealth, her capacity for self-government, fit her for the burdens of statehood. And upon us devolves not simply a sentimental trust, involving the expenditure of vast sums of money in foreign countries, but the sacred duty to see to it that we train these people in our own country in a common language and in the science of self-government before we thrust upon them an undesired sovereignty, which couples together two peoples lacking in a common language and lacking in all that constitutes homogeneity and race sympathy.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, a man would be stone if his whole nature did not respond in sympathy with the most earnest and patriotic utterances made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] in reference to national honor and in reference to the proposition that it is the duty of the nation to stand by its contracts as firmly and earnestly and as honestly as a man of the greatest integrity should be in honor bound to stand by his own agreements.

I wish to ask the Senator from Wisconsin, if that be a true proposition as applied to the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, by what reason or philosophy can you deny application of the same principle to the Indian Territory. If we have entered into obligations which bind the national conscience and the national honor to carry out an agreement made with the Territory of Arizona, why have we not bound the nation by the same ties of integrity, by the same standard of honor to carry out an agreement made, iterated, and reiterated again in a dozen different agreements with the people of the Indian Territory? If we are compelled by a law of national honor to segregate the Territory of Arizona and make it a separate State, are we not by the same code of honor bound to separate the Indian Territory and make it also a separate State? Have we bound ourselves by any agreement with these people? Let me call attention to a few of the provisions of some of the treaties that have been made with the Indians of that Territory. While the agreements have been made with the Indians of the Territory, the assumption is true, the legal proposition is true, as also laid down by the Senator from Wisconsin, that it is presumed every white man who has entered that Territory since these agreements were made came there with a knowledge that the Government in honor bound would carry out all those agreements.

There are but 24,000 full-blood Indians in the Indian Territory. There are about 90,000, I believe, part-blood Indians, mostly white. There are nearly 600,000 white settlers there. We have entered into an agreement with those white settlers and with every person within those Territorial boundaries that we would at some time in the future make a State, not out of Oklahoma and Indian Territory combined, but the whole trend of the ideas and the discussion between the Dawes Commission and the Indian tribes—which was afterwards entered in the statute books of the country—carries out the proposition that we were bound to admit them, if at all, as separate States.

The Choctaws, replying to the proposition of the Dawes Commission, on the 16th day of November, 1896, accepted the proposition with regard to the proposed Territorial government of the Indian Territory with a counter proposition. Here is the proposition which they make to us:

> Seventh proposition to be modified so that tribal government of the Choctaw Nation will continue in existence until after the lands are divided, citizens put in possession of their lands, agreement otherwise put into execution, and a reasonable time for the Choctaws to adjust themselves to the new lines and their changed condition, after which time the United States may create a State out of the Indian Territory.

That was the first settlement, the first agreement.

Mr. SPOONER. Will the Senator allow me to ask if that was not afterwards modified by various treaties?

Mr. McCUMBER. It was afterwards modified by various treaties; but every one of those treaties had in view the same thing, the admision of the people of this Territory as a single State.

Let us take it further. On the 18th of December, 1896, the United States Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes entered into another agreement. This was the agreement:

> This stipulation is made in the belief that the tribal governments so modified will prove so satisfactory that there will be no need or desire for change until the lands now occupied by the Five Civilized Tribes shall in the opinion of Congress be prepared for admission as a State of the Union.

Not that they should be "prepared" with some other State or some other Territory, because, following again in the convention, this proposition was laid down and accepted, and it is the eighth:

> Eighth. When the change of government takes place we will ask that the proposed agreement provides admission as a State of the Union, with constitutional provisions irrepealable, protecting the property rights and the political privileges of our people. The constitution to be made by our own people—> with absolute prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Not by some one else—

On June 28, 1898, we have this further provision:

> This stipulation is made in the belief that the tribal governments so modified will prove so satisfactory that there will be no need for further change till the lands now occupied by the Five Civilized Tribes shall, in the opinion of Congress, be prepared for admission as a State of the Union.

That relates to the lands occupied by the Five Civilized Tribes, and by no one else.

Now, Mr. President, we come from that proposition right down to this. I can ask the Senator from the State of Indiana, do you believe that the State of Indiana is sufficient in territorial size, and has it the requisite number of square miles necessary——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. We want all the territory we can get, and everything else that is proper.

Mr. McCUMBER. That is understood; and there is no question but that you would like to get here more than I believe you will be able to get; but, Mr. President, I stand here and say that the State of Indiana has a sufficient number of acres and a sufficient number of square miles to make a good State, and it has made a good State. If that be true, then I want to know why the State of Sequoyah, the Indian Territory, containing almost the same number of square miles, and the Territory of Oklahoma, containing 3,000 square miles more than the State of Indiana, having the same character of soil, having prospects that are even brighter—I believe there is no man who has looked upon that Territory, with its wonderful prospects, who has looked at the number of rivers, which are more numerous than those in any other portion of the United States, unless he be one bunch of egotism, who would ever deny that that will make a greater State than the State of Indiana, and will make a greater State than many of the other States. If that is true, then tell me why and under what theory you advance the proposition that, because one borders on the Wabash and the other is trans-Mississippi, one law shall apply to one and another law shall apply to the other; that you shall have no standard except the standard of power; and you do because there are enough of the smaller States that have the power to say to the West, to say to that country beyond the Mississippi, "We are going to insist on your having bigger States than we have in the East, because, although you have got within territorial limits as small as ours resources to make a greater State than our States, notwithstanding that we will deny you the representation that you are entitled to."

Mr. FULTON obtained the floor.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. FULTON] is recognized.

Mr. FULTON. Mr. President, I am aware that the Committee on Territories has given to the pending measure most earnest and painstaking consideration. The members of the committee have been, I am well convinced, actuated by a sincere and patriotic purpose to adopt such policy and recommend such action as will best serve the interests of the people immediately concerned and the public at large. Actuated by such motives, a majority has recommended the admission of the two Territories as one State, regardless of the preferences, or, indeed, the wishes of the inhabitants of either Territory. Against such action the people of Arizona largely protest. I regret my inability to concur in the judgment of the majority of the committee in that respect. For me to refuse to support this amendment would be to do violence to my deliberate judgment and convictions. It seems to me that in this proposition is involved one of the vital and fundamental principles of our form of government, namely, that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

It is true that over territory belonging to the United States, and not within an organized State, the power of Congress, subject to the limitations contained in the Federal Constitution, is supreme and plenary. Nevertheless, it is our duty to exercise that power wisely, justly, and in conformity to that great principle upon which popular government rests, the will of the people.

Arizona is, and since 1863 has been, an organized Territory of the United States. It is contended that when her Territorial boundaries were established and her Territorial government was organized by Congress, the promise was made her that when fitted for statehood she should be admitted to membership in the sisterhood of States, with her present boundaries preserved. Touching that contention, I am not disposed to enter upon a discussion. Just what the true interpretation of the language constituting the alleged promise is, and how far it is morally binding on a subsequent Congress, are questions concerning which much may be logically and plausibly urged on both sides. This much is, however, quite clear to my mind, that the general policy of Congress heretofore has been to consult the wishes of the inhabitants of organized Territories as largely as possible, touching the time and manner of admitting them to statehood. Guided by that policy, adopted and adhered to with practical uniformity in the past, the people of Arizona were justified in believing that when they should reach that state of development in population, morals, and industries which would justly entitle them to admission as a State, they would be admitted with their Territorial boundaries constituting the boundaries of their State, if they so desired, and certainly they were justified in believing that without their consent such boundaries would not be appreciably changed.

Believing this and relying on this, as justly they might, they entered upon the great work of State building. Under our system the Territorial government is the childhood, the youth of statehood. Out of Territory grows, develops, and finally emerges the full-fledged and completed State. They adopted laws suitable to their conditions, founded homes, erected schoolhouses, churches, and public buildings; laid out and constructed their highways, willingly assuming the obligations and burdens that such works necessarily entail, in order that they might qualify themselves to assume the proud position of membership in the great family of the States of the Union. I can well understand how bitter must be the disappointment, how grievously wronged they feel, when told that the statehood to which they have looked forward so longingly has come, but that it does not mean a continuation of growth and development along the lines they had chosen. That, in truth, it means the disarrangement of their boundaries; the supplanting of their laws and statutes by the laws of another community; the transfer of their seat of government to a point beyond the confines of their present territory, and the abandonment of their public buildings, grounds, and edifices, with all the associations and memories that cluster around them and endear them to their hearts. We all know how powerful is that sentiment we call love of home and country. It is the most potent and enduring passion that dwells in the human heart. The first, the deepest, and the strongest affection of every patriotic American citizen is for his country. Second to that, and second only to that, is his love for his State. It is a worthy and commendable sentiment, and one that should be at all times respected and considered by those who are charged with the administration of government. These people who compose the citizenry of Arizona to-day associate her lofty mountains, her broad prairies and beautiful valleys with the many years of earnest toil and endeavor which they have devoted to building deep and strong the foundations for the future State that was to be their joy and their pride. Shall we, without consulting their wishes, commit the destiny of that community to other hands.

Mr. President, I can not consent, by my vote, to put that great wrong upon any people.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, on February 28, 1906, I submitted a proposed amendment to the pending bill. As it is very short indeed, I will read it for the information of the Senate. It is as follows:

After the word "described," in line 16, page 28, insert the words "excepting all that portion of Arizona Territory lying north and west of the Colorado River, which shall be annexed to and form a part of the State of Utah, said State consenting thereto."

Mr. President, this is not the first time that this question has been before this body or before the Congress of the United States. I myself, when it was first discussed, felt a great deal like many of the Senators here may feel perhaps, that Utah was asking of Arizona a thing that was unjust, and that perhaps Utah was trying to secure from Arizona a part of the land that the people of that Territory had called home so long. I wish to disabuse the mind of every Senator here, if such an idea has ever entered into his mind, that Utah in this particular is not asking for an unjust thing nor for any financial advantage or for any commercial gain, but is asking that this part of the Territory of Arizona—a strip about 70 miles by 100, on an average—be annexed to the State of Utah, so that the people living within that strip and the people living in the southern part of Utah can protect themselves against lawlessness.

I wish to call attention here to the map, so that it can be seen just what territory is proposed to be taken from the Territory of Arizona. Commencing at the Colorado River at this point [indicating], the amendment proposes that all that part of Arizona Territory lying west here [indicating] of the Colorado River and north of the river along here [indicating] to the point of Nevada there [indicating] be annexed to the State of Utah. Up to 1866 the same degree of latitude constituting the southern boundary of the State of Utah constituted the southern boundary of the State of Nevada, but at that time these 11,643 acres of land [indicating], lying all north of the Colorado River, were annexed to Nevada. I see no good reason, Mr. President, why that same line, the Colorado River, should not be the southern boundary line of the State of Utah, the same as it is the natural boundary line of Nevada and also of the State of California.

During the month of August of this year I went all over the particular part of the Territory which the amendment proposes to annex to Utah, and I wish to impress upon Senators the fact that, so far as the land itself is concerned, it is absolutely worthless, and will be as long as time lasts, for there is not a stream of water in the whole strip but the little stream that comes from Kanab here [indicating], in the State of Utah, which waters the land for about thirty families at Fredonia. In that whole strip there are only about forty-seven people in Coconino County over the age of 21, and about twenty-nine in Mohave County over the age of 21. It is impossible for many more people than that number to live upon that strip.

I have heard it said that there are valuable mines there, and I know of one place at Coconino, midway in the Buckskin Mountains, running north and south, where some mining promoters erected a mill and found some blankets of low-grade copper ore in a sand formation and tried to work it to advantage and profit, but it was absolutely impossible to do so, and the mine is abandoned to-day.

The people living here close to the line [indicating] at Littleton and the people living at Fredonia all came from the State of Utah. Their interests are with the people of Utah; they receive their mail from Utah; they always read the Utah papers, and all their interests, financial and of every other nature, are connected with the State of Utah. I wish to call attention to the fact that I have here petitions from every person, with the exception of one, living within the strip asking that they be annexed to Utah. The people living there desire it; the people living in the southern part of Utah desire it, and I believe that it should be done. Therefore I have offered this amendment.

Of the people who live in these two little places [indicating] I doubt if half a dozen of them ever went to their county seat. Flagstaff, the county seat of Coconino County, is 227 miles from Fredonia, and the journey is over the roughest, sandiest, rockiest road that it is possible to imagine, and the people of Fredonia can not and will not go there, for they have to go up to Lees Ferry here [indicating] and then down to the southern part of the county. It is almost impossible for a poor man to make the journey on account of the expense. About the only man who goes from Arizona into the strip is the tax collector and assessor.

There is upon this strip of land what is called the "Kaibab Plateau," and outside of that plateau there is not enough agricultural land in the whole place to keep, I was going to say, a hundred people. It is true that the Buckskin Mountains or the Kaibab Plateau is a timbered region and is to-day within the limits of a forest reserve, and, so far as the people of Arizona are concerned, never will the time come when they can take that timber from that reservation and remove it to Arizona.

I feel that the only reason Arizona will have to complain, if she complains at all—and I doubt very much whether she will, and I can say none of the people living in this strip are complaining—will be inspired from pride alone.

I recognize the pride that a man has for his country; I recognize the pride a man has for his State; I recognize the pride he has for his county; but I wish to say to Senators here that in this particular case I can not see what Arizona will lose or what Utah will gain except that it will enable them to protect themselves against lawlessness, for that land may be designated truly a "No man's land."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I want to give notice that when the proper time comes I will move to lay the amendment of the Senator from Utah on the table.

Mr. BURROWS. On page 28 of the bill I propose an amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all of the bill from section 23 to section 41, both inclusive.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will lie on the table for the present.

Mr. BURROWS. The purpose of this amendment, Mr. President, is to eliminate from the pending proposition the only question about which there is any serious controversy. The remainder of the bill, providing for the admission of Oklahoma and the Indian Territory as one State, has no opponents that I am aware of in this Chamber. These two ought to be admitted as a single State. There can be no question about that.

As to the admission of Arizona and New Mexico, there is very serious opposition. I shall not myself repeat in any way the arguments which have been made against the admission of these two Territories, but I desire to read in support of what has been said as to the qualification of the people of these Territories for admission, an extract from a letter which I hold in my hand. It is dated, Taos, N. Mex., and is as follows:

As to statehood: Let me say that I am a Republican—a member of the Territorial Republican committee from this county for years; have lived here over sixteen years, and do not know of anybody outside of officeholders who think we need statehood. We (this county) have 3,500 registered voters and do not have 500 resident taxpayers. All the records of the county and probate courts are kept in Spanish, and if an American comes in here to do any business with the courts of the county, he has to hire at his own expense an interpreter. All the justices of the peace are Mexicans. A large majority of them can not talk English and don't care to learn. Even the district attorney and district court have to use translators and interpreters.

We have been a part of the Union since 1847, and 90 per cent of our adult population can not talk English, can not write or read it, and do not want to understand it.

We could not be worse off in a foreign country.

But independent of this objection, which ought to be decisive, personally I have a very serious objection to these two Territories being admitted to statehood, because, and for the reason, as stated by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS], there exists in these two Territories to-day a criminal class, who, if the State was admitted into the Union, would, I am apprehensive, escape merited justice. Those Territories to-day are under the Government of the United States, and when they are admitted into the Union the United States Government is powerless to lay its hand upon an offender who transgresses the law of the State and shocks the civilization of the age.

Now, in what I have to say—and I shall be very brief—I beg not to be understood as making any suggestion in the remotest degree to any other matter which will possibly come before the Senate at an early day. I speak only of the pending bill.

The Senator framing this bill recognizes this when, on page 31, he puts in this clause:

First. That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship; and that polygamous or plural marriages and the sale, barter, or giving of intoxicating liquors to Indians are forever prohibited.

The trouble with that provision is that it does not reach the disease. It prohibits plural marriages, but it does not forbid polygamous cohabitation. It does not reach the case where parties go to another and possibly a foreign jurisdiction and there consummate a plural marriage and then come back into the Territory and live in polygamous cohabitation. That is the monstrous offense which this bill does not prohibit and which the moment these Territories are admitted to statehood the National Government would be powerless to punish. That polygamous cohabitation exists in these two Territories is not open to question. I read from a page of testimony taken in another matter:

The CHAIRMAN. When you went through Arizona what places did you visit in Arizona?

Mr. WOLFE. St. Joseph, Woodruff, Snowflake, St. Johns, Thatcher, St. Davids.

The CHAIRMAN. State to the committee if you know of the existence of Mormon settlements at those places.

Mr. WOLFE. Those were all Mormon settlements.

The CHAIRMAN. What, if anything, do you know about the existence of polygamy or polygamous cohabitation at those places?

Mr. WOLFE. It was more open than it was in Utah—that is, I did not see any among the young people. The settlements there seemed to have been settled many years ago, and those who were living there were men who had taken plural wives in the early days of the church and were living with them openly.

In confirmation of this I wish to read an extract from a letter written by a gentleman whose name I am requested to withhold, but a gentleman of high standing and in the Army of the United States:

I have been greatly surprised from my investigation at the number of Mormons in Arizona and New Mexico and the difficulty one finds in getting non-Mormons who are acquainted with the facts to give any information, except on the promise of secrecy in regard to the source of information. I have been told by intelligent and well-educated men that they would be run out of the country by the Mormons if it became known they had given any information in regard to this matter.

A man of good education and intelligence, and for whom I can vouch, from Taos, Taos County, N. Mex., says the following facts can be very easily substantiated.

The following counties in northern New Mexico, Taos, Colfax, Rio Anita, and San Juan, are more or less Mormon, and in some localities they control everything. The town of Fruitland is entirely Mormon. There are also large numbers in the Blue Water Valley in McKinley and Valencia counties.

Many Mormons whom he personally knows are living in polygamy and he has offered to make a list of such, giving number of wives and children, if his report is treated as strictly confidential. This gentleman is very much opposed to statehood for New Mexico, largely on account of the number of Mormons, but he says he can give many other reasons why New Mexico should not be admitted as a State.

Now, in regard to Arizona, there seems to be no question that there are many more Mormons in Arizona than in New Mexico. One of the men who gave me the following facts is in business in Arizona and has to travel extensively. He recently gave enough facts to the grand jury and secured the conviction of a number of Mormons for living in polygamy.

The following towns are largely or entirely Mormon, and it is to be presumed that the country surrounding the settlements are largely the same. St. Johns, Snowflake, and Concho are Mormon towns. A few live at Solomonville and Duncan. In addition, Ramah, Springville, a town of 500; St. Joseph, a town of 100, and Pine Top are all Mormon. My informant tells me that there are quite a number living in polygamy, but he thinks they are largely the older ones who were doing so before the manifesto. However, there are some of the younger ones who practice polygamy, as some have recently been convicted of the offense. It is very hard to get any evidence against them, as a colony of Mormons will take up an entire district, and practically exclude all others. Strangers who come to their settlements are viewed with suspicion.

Mr. President, I hold in my hand a letter from the Attorney-General of the United States in response to an inquiry made by me as to the existence of this crime in New Mexico and Arizona, and what steps had been taken by the General Government to suppress it.

This is his reply in part——

The VICE-PRESIDENT rapped with his gavel.

Mr. BURROWS. If I may be indulged just a moment, I will read what the Attorney-General says.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Is the Senator's time up?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. BURROWS. The answer is brief, and it will take but a moment to read it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I call attention to the fact that I was not permitted, nor was any other Senator on this side permitted, an extra second.

Mr. BURROWS. If objection is made, I will request that it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. FORAKER. Nobody on the opposing side has denied to the other side an extra second.

Mr. BURROWS. It will consume but a moment of time.

Mr. FORAKER. If there has been any enforcement of the agreement, it has been through the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana object to the request of the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No; but in withholding objection I merely wish to call attention to the facts as I have stated them.

Mr. BURROWS. This letter is dated December 29, 1905:

The Department was advised by telegram, on December 27, 1905, that the prosecutions in Arizona have resulted in sixteen convictions and three acquittals under the Edmunds Act. Twelve convictions out of the sixteen were for unlawful cohabitation.

* * * * * * *

The Attorney-General closes by saying:

The district attorney advised the Department, on December 26, 1905, by telegram, that during the year 1905 fifteen persons have been convicted under the Edmunds Act and twelve cases dismissed.

That is in Arizona. Then the letter proceeds:

It will therefore be observed that the investigation conducted by the Department in the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, since the matter was first called to the attention of the Department by you, has resulted in thirty-one convictions in these two Territories, in the majority of the cases upon the charge of unlawful cohabitation.

Very respectfully.

WILLIAM H. MOODY, Attorney-General.

I object, therefore, in the light of these facts, while these prosecutions are going on to suppress these crimes, to taking the hand of the National Government off from these violators of the law, but insist that they shall be kept in a Territorial condition until they are purged of this iniquity.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I should like to have the letter I send to the desk, which I received from a gentleman of my acquaintance in Arizona, read for the information of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota asks that the letter which he sends to the Secretary's desk be read. Is there objection?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I do not know that I shall object, but I again call attention to what has occurred in this debate. A Senator who has occupied his ten minutes in debate now asks that a letter be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. FORAKER. I am sure that no one who is in favor of the amendment I have offered wants to take one extra minute of time. The Senator from Indiana has now called attention twice to the fact that more than the allotted ten minutes has been taken by two Senators who have addressed the Senate. That certainly is no fault of ours. The Senator can take extra time if he so desires, and I presume the Senator from North Dakota offered the letter at this time because it appeared there was no one else ready at the moment to address the Senate. If there should be anyone else prepared to go on, I am sure there would be no objection to giving way and allowing him to be heard. But the Senator from North Dakota was recognized by the Chair, and I presume he is entitled to speak again under the rule——

Mr. LODGE. On another amendment.

Mr. FORAKER. If it be to another amendment.

The remarks I am making are only made in order that we may have an understanding about it. There is no disposition on our side to take any more time than we are entitled to—none whatever. If the Senator from Indiana wants additional time or has anyone ready to speak, or if anyone desires to speak, there is no objection to his being heard to the fullest extent that he wishes to be heard. The Senator from North Dakota was about to speak to an entirely different amendment from the one upon which he addressed the Senate a few moments ago. I was intending to speak briefly on another matter myself, if I am entitled to speak under the rule, which I presume I am if it is to be another amendment.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the reading proceed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read, as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

PHOENIX, ARIZ., January 29, 1906.

Hon. H. C. HANSBROUGH,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: The passage of the Hamilton bill by Congress has cast a gloom over Arizona, and our hope now lies in the belief that the members of the United States Senate, with their spirit of fairness and sense of justice, will at least so amend the bill as to eliminate Arizona and New Mexico entirely, or, if that can not be done, then to pass the Foraker amendment and allow Arizona to vote separately upon the question of jointure. We would like statehood if it could be obtained separate and alone, but if we are not allowed that, then we ask to be allowed to remain a Territory until such time as we can demonstrate our fitness to become one of the States of this great Union. I am not one of the passive or indifferent ones in this matter, but firmly and honestly believe that no calamity that could come to this progressive Territory of ours would have the disastrous effect upon our future well-being and development as would the uniting of this Territory with

New Mexico as one State. In protecting the rights of American citizenship and in the interests of fairness, save us if possible from this threatened alliance, so utterly obnoxious to our people, and give us a chance to vote upon the question so vital to us.

Very respectfully and courteously, yours,

P. P. PARKER.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I ask that the two telegrams I send to the desk, one from Kingman, Ariz., and the other from Nogales and Phoenix, be read. I shall not ask that any more be read because I do not want to consume the time, although I have a great number of others.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator asks for the reading of the telegrams he sends to the desk. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

KINGMAN, ARIZ., March 7, 1906.

Senator A. J. BEVERIDGE,
Washington, D. C.:

Confident jointure will be to Arizona's best interest. We beg the Senate pass House bill without amendment.

J. H. Riley, J. A. Carrow, Jerome Tracy, John E. Jamison, Thos. McMahon, Edgar H. Brennan, Allen E. Ware, J. W. Gerritt, Geo. Sullivan, H. Amos, J. H. Book, G. W. Brown, O. D. M. Gaddis, Frank O'Dea, J. W. Ward, E. M. Carson, F. E. Carrow, John Pemberthy, J. R. Russell, Tom Murphy, J. C. Noble, C. G. Krok, W. E. Sauls, M. Force, L. Ekstein, Col. Jno. F. Firch, C. E. Sherman, J. A. Tarr, Wm. O'Dea, W. H. Taggart.

NOGALES, ARIZ., March 8, 1906.

Hon. A. J. BEVERIDGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

For the best interests of all industries in Arizona and to relieve the depressing effect upon business occasioned by Territorial conditions, we urge the passage of the joint-statehood bill without amendment. The Foraker amendment would imperil every interest by giving the floating and irresponsible voter as much voice as the heaviest taxpayer.

M. H. McCord, W. S. Wright, Con. O'Keefe, Earl L. Griswold, H. M. Chapman, Eben L. Crowell, C. P. Stewart, W. W. Carpenter, J. M. Miller, W. S. Scoville, A. L. Peck, R. D. George, L. Ephraim, Milton Bohall, E. Titcomb, Geo. P. Jones.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish merely to say that these are samples, but not copies, of a vast number of other telegrams addressed to myself and other members of my committee from the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. FORAKER. If I may, under the rule, address the Senate again, I will occupy a few minutes of the Senate's time.

In the first place, I think I have as big a pile of telegrams from Arizona as the Senator from Indiana can possibly have. I do not know how gentlemen happened to telegraph me on the subject; I did not ask anybody to; but I do have some information as to how the telegrams referred to by the Senator from Indiana happened to have been sent to him.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Then the Senator has more information than I have.

Mr. FORAKER. That may be true.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It is true, on this subject.

Mr. FORAKER. Oh, certainly. I would not presume to have as much information as the Senator from Indiana has on any other subject.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is very courteous, Mr. President, and quite unexpected.

Mr. FORAKER. I will read the following telegram:

Hon. MARK A. SMITH,
The Occidental, Washington, D. C.:

Say to FORAKER, telegrams sent here to Tom Schultz to-day urging that telegrams be sent by anybody who will sign them to BEVERIDGE, urging joint statehood. We know of no one of standing favoring joint statehood.

BROWN, SMITH & BELCHER.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Will the Senator permit me right here?

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; certainly, if it is not taken out of my time.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will not object to the Senator or any other Senator taking time. In the first place, I have no doubt that all the telegrams that have been pouring into both sides have been sent in the usual way by those who are interested. That is the first thing; and the second thing to which I wish to call the particular attention of the Senator from Ohio is that the telegram which he has just read is to his Democratic helper—the Democratic Delegate from Arizona in the House of Representatives.

Mr. FORAKER. If it does the Senator from Indiana any good to refer to Mr. SMITH as a Democratic helper of mine, let him have the benefit of it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I want it.

Mr. FORAKER. But why should the heathen rage? [Laughter.]

Mr. BEVERIDGE. And why should the wicked flee when no man pursueth? [Laughter.]

Mr. FORAKER. I will read another telegram addressed to my Democratic helper, so called:

TUCSON, ARIZ., ———, ——.

Hon. MARCUS A. SMITH,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

John B. Wright on streets last evening declaring he had telegram from BEVERIDGE saying he intended making speech on Friday—

I will not read all there is here—and saying 500 telegrams could be used to good effect.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, the Senator will permit me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish to say that that statement is just as correct as, no doubt, all the rest of the information is which comes from that source. No telegram has been sent by me to anyone in the Territories asking for anything. It is entirely false, as the Senator should know. I assume that the telegram read is a very fair sample of the accuracy of the information that is furnished to the Senator from that source.

Mr. FORAKER. The record will speak for itself.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. It will.

Mr. FORAKER. I am reading these telegrams to show how the telegrams happened to be sent here. I have a pile of telegrams on my desk——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. How were they received?

Mr. FORAKER. They are not from railroads; they are not from mines or mining interests. They are from all kinds and classes and conditions of people.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. So are these to me.

Mr. FORAKER. They speak with one voice. They are from boards of trade, chambers of commerce, from mayors, from city councils. They say with one voice that the people of Arizona are overwhelmingly opposed to being forced into joint statehood with New Mexico. The Senator from Indiana may have telegrams.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Here they are. [Exhibiting.] [Laughter.]

Mr. FORAKER. I have never asked that I be telegraphed to. We are not going to settle this matter upon the number of telegrams received, whether asked for by the Senator from Indiana or asked for by somebody on our side or not. We are going to settle this matter upon the merits of the case.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. We ask nothing better than that.

Mr. FORAKER. Certainly; except a few votes thrown in. [Laughter.]

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator then admits that we have the merits.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Where the merits are the votes will come in time—in the end.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, the Senator had four hours in this debate——

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I will not interrupt the Senator again.

Mr. FORAKER. And I should like to proceed uninterruptedly for two or three minutes; that is all. I should like to put in about three or four hundred telegrams.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I should like to put in a thousand. [Laughter.]

Mr. FORAKER. Well, put in a thousand. It will have a good effect in making you feel good, it may be, but not otherwise.

I wish to say just one other word that I was cut off from saying when the Chair announced this morning that my time had expired. I was about proceeding to call attention to the fact that what is predicted now with respect to Arizona for the future as a place to sustain population is not very reliable in view of past experience. Nearly every portion of new country that has been settled up in the far-distant sections has been reported on adversely in the beginning. I referred to the fact this morning that as to California it was thought to be not desirable. We all know that we frittered away the control of the mouth of the St. Lawrence because our commissioners had no proper appreciation of the value of that territory. We all know that we frittered away the northwestern section of our country for the same reason. But I did not know until this morning, when a gentleman called my attention to it, that we came very nearly losing the State of Michigan on the same account. I have before me an official report, made in 1815 by the surveyors of the Government, at the head of which was Edward Tiffin, afterwards governor of Ohio, and one of the most distinguished men of our State. They were sent up there to make a survey and report upon the character of land, with a view to making provision there for the soldiers of the war of the Revolution and the war of 1812. It is a long report. The result of it is summed up in the last paragraph, as follows:

> On approaching the eastern part of the military lands toward the private claims on the strait and lake the country does not contain so many swamps and lakes, but the extreme sterility and barrenness of the soil continues the same—taking the country altogether, so far as has been explored, and to all appearances, together with the information received concerning the balance, it is as bad—there would not be more than one acre out of a hundred, if there would be one out of a thousand, that would in any case admit of cultivation.

So much for the State of Michigan in 1815, after a careful exploration by these surveyors. They were exploring the northern part of Michigan, and they said, according to all the reports they could get as to the remainder of Michigan, it was equally as bad, and there was not in all the State of Michigan more than one acre out of a hundred, perhaps not more than one acre out of a thousand, that would ever be subjected to cultivation. They were mistaken.

When you and I were in school—I will not say how many years ago, but I will say forty years ago—everyone who was in a school studying geography can remember that what is now the western part of the State of Kansas was put down as the Great American Desert. We were all taught that it was a desert like unto the Sahara and there would never be any residences there; that it never could be subjected to cultivation; that it could never be made to support a population. But to-day nobody can find where the American desert was located. It is all one fertile, rich, productive country.

So it may be with Arizona and New Mexico. There are many fertile valleys now. There is much arid land, as it is called, but by means of irrigation and otherwise these troublesome conditions of nature are being overcome. Population is increasing; wealth is multiplying. Nowhere in the country will you find more intelligent or capable people to overcome adverse conditions of nature than you will find in the Territory of Arizona.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. DICK. Mr. President, it was my pleasure and honor to open this debate, and I have listened with a very great deal of interest to the arguments which have been made. The burden of the morning's discussion has been to the effect that the bill is a most unusual one. I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the bill itself is not the only unusual matter concerning it. It has attached to it a most unusual amendment, and reference has been made repeatedly to a most unusual pledge, and we have received a lot of most unusual information.

Attention has been called to the fact that New Mexico came from Texas, and we are referred to the map of the United States to prove it. The inaccuracy of that statement is proven by the showing that the boundaries of Texas originally went through the very center of New Mexico.

Then we are impressed with the unusual information that to confer citizenship in a State to men who have enjoyed citizenship in a Territory is like unto the persecutions and the conditions that have obtained in Ireland and in Poland. I had never expected to hear in the Senate of the United States that the conferring of citizenship upon any man in this splendid Republic of ours was to be classed as an unusual and unmitigated outrage.

What this bill aims to do, we confess, is to grant the full benefits of citizenship to all the remaining inhabitants of this splendid country of ours.

Mr. President, I have been waiting with a great deal of concern and expectant interest for some explanation of the amendment which is before us, the purpose of which is to submit this proposition to the people of Arizona and New Mexico. In the debate a few days ago the Senator from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] called attention to it, and when attention was called thereto there was nobody on this floor who was ready to adopt it as his child, and the parent still goes unidentified.

Mr. President, an appeal lies upon the Clerk's desk, sent here by citizens of Arizona of the best class, representing all the avenues of business and occupation, wherein they say——

Mr. FLINT. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. DICK. For a moment.

Mr. FLINT. I will ask the Senator if he was ever in Arizona, or has a personal acquaintance with the people who signed the telegram?

Mr. DICK. I know some of the people who signed the telegram, and I have passed through Arizona. I may not be as familiar with the country as the Senator from California, so far as personal observation is concerned, but I have gone into this subject with a great deal of care and study. I submitted in my remarks the other day my reasons for voting with the committee on this proposition. I made statements, every one of which is based upon official information, and none of which is the product of the imagination of an enthusiastic mind, nor one that would for a moment depreciate the quality of the citizens of those Territories nor the conditions which exist there.

But, Mr. President, it is shown in this memorial from these representative people that they desire to be fairly dealt with, and this amendment, they clearly show, does not deal with them fairly. They ask to have this question submitted at a general election, that they may have time for a campaign, time for an educational campaign, time to carry to the people the reasons for its adoption, time enough for a campaign of education such as would be granted any constituency that was to pass upon any great question.

Mr. President, it is not true that Arizona and New Mexico are here protesting against admission. More than fifty bills have been presented in previous Congresses for the admission of these Territories. Seventeen bills have passed one body or the other, and some of them both bodies, but failed in conference, to admit New Mexico as a State. Bills have been passed for the admission of Arizona and bills have been passed for the admission of New Mexico. This question in one form or another has been before the American Congress for forty years. We are not outraging anybody. The people of these Territories are much alike in character, in nationality, in industry and occupation, and if we pass the pending bill we grant to them the great blessing of full American citizenship.

Mr. CLARK of Montana. Mr. President, I have listened with interest and pleasure for two days to the able discussion of the statehood question, but I fail to discover in the arguments presented any evidence of an emergency that would warrant the extraordinary measures comprised in the pending bill, so far as they relate to joint statehood for Arizona and New Mexico. I do not find that the interests of the Government or the interests of those two Territories demand for their protection any such hasty and, in my opinion, ill-advised legislation.

An allusion has been made by the Senator from Indiana to insufficient and inadequate taxation of railroad and mining property. As to the railroads, I can not speak with accuracy, but I do know that the mining properties in which I am interested bear their full proportion of the burdens of taxation. While there is no law imposing a tax on the net proceeds of the products of the mines, as in Montana and some of the other Western States, yet there is an arbitrary assessment of the mines which does equalize the matter, as in the other States referred to the mines are not assessed at all except for the surface improvements. Even if the contention made were true, I fail to see how it would be remedied by a change from Territorial to State government. Whatever may have been said, the fact still remains that the people of Arizona do not want joint statehood with New Mexico, and to force it upon those people would be a flagrant act, which can not be justified by any rule or principle of equity or fairness.

We hear about the much-lauded "square deal," which is said to govern the acts of this Administration, but I am sure it will not apply to this proposition. It is a violation of the principle of home rule, which has always been contended for by the American people and has been hoped for by the people of Ireland in their long strugle against their alleged aggressors.

We may concede that Congress has the power to deal with any territory as it may see fit; but that power has never yet, in the history of this Government, been exercised in an arbitrary manner. I do not believe that a Senator on this floor can point to a single instance since the formation of this Government where Territories have been ruthlessly dragged into the Union of States. The rule has invariably been that the Territories first knocked at the door of Congress before any steps were taken to confer the privileges of statehood upon them. The usual procedure has been to call a constitutional convention in the Territory to frame a constitution, which was submitted to a vote of the people of the Territory for ratification, and then formal application was made to the Congress for admission. In other instances, at the request of the Territories, Congress has passed enabling acts and framed organic laws under which the Territorial government proceeded to create a constitution, which was submitted to the people of the Territory, as before, for ratification. In every instance the consent of the people, or a majority thereof, of the particular Territory concerned was essential as a condition precedent to being received into the Union. Each Territory has always, as far as I know, been treated as a distinct organization in this respect, to decide as to its own destiny. It did not require the consent of an adjacent and separate Territory; no interference of this kind has ever been permitted. In this instance, under the provisions of the bill, we have the extraordinary and astounding proposition presented to the people of Arizona by which this well and long established privilege is denied them, and they are not permitted an exercise of their wishes in determining this momentous question, but are to be placed at the mercy of a neighboring people, largely more numerous, who have the power, by reason of their predominance, to accept or reject statehood for them, as they might see fit to do, thus depriving the people of Arizona of their obviously sacred rights.

I confess, Mr. President, I can not conceive how any Senator on this floor with a proper regard for the rights of American citizenship, in the dawn of the twentieth century, can uphold such a monstrous doctrine. It is claimed sometimes that might makes right, but the Government of the United States, recognized throughout the world as the highest example of republican government, insuring the greatest blessings of liberty to its subjects, can not afford to inflict a cruel and moral wrong that will surely bring upon it the reproach of the civilized world. Mr. President, we are here attempting to do something in direct opposition to all theory and practice and precedent in dealing with Territorial organizations. Ever since the formation of this Government the practice has been invariably to divide instead of to consolidate and enlarge Territories. We have been carving new States out of old ones rather than joining old ones to form new and larger ones. We have never heard of this proposition before, and it is not in the line of progress and can not be justified by any system of reasoning.

Mr. President, I am in favor of the elimination of both Arizona and New Mexico from the bill and of allowing statehood to be conferred upon Oklahoma and the Indian Territory jointly, as it appears they so desire.

Doing this, I do not relinquish my convictions, which I advocated last session on the floor of this Chamber, when I contended for separate and independent statehood for all four of the Territories. I still believe they are all entitled to it by every reason of precedent and general policy, and the day is not far distant when this privilege and honor will be accorded to all of them, but now that it is to be denied to Arizona and New Mexico, except through an unholy alliance which I am obliged to condemn, I have no desire whatever to prevent Oklahoma and Indian Territory from being admitted into the Union of States; but I will never consent to the joint statehood of Arizona and New Mexico.

Mr. President, it is contended here that a majority of the people of Arizona are not opposed to this measure. I deny this with a full knowledge of the prevailing sentiment in that Territory. There are numerous politicians and some citizens who prefer joint statehood rather than to remain in a Territorial condition, but they are comparatively few in number. The conservative business interests of the Territory are against it. Numerous meetings of local and of general character have been held in which the strongest resolutions have been passed opposing this combination, and these assemblages comprised the leading and most prominent people of all the various avocations, professions, and industrial pursuits in the Territory.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. BEVERIDGE obtained the floor.

Mr. CULBERSON. I desire to ask if amendments are in order at this time?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I hope the Senator will not present an amendment now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana is recognized. Amendments are in order if the Senator from Indiana yields the floor.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator can offer his amendments after 4 o'clock.

Mr. CULBERSON. Very well.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, it is perhaps not altogether inappropriate that the last word on behalf of the opponents of this measure should be an explanation from me of certain conditions in Arizona. I have noted throughout this debate that every word that is an argument and every word that is not an argument has concerned a local matter. I have listened for one national note to be struck by the opponents of this measure, and I have listened in vain.

Mr. President, as we who support this measure began with a national note, so we shall close with a national note. From ocean to ocean let there henceforth be no more unrepresented American citizens beneath the flag. I have heard this evening what I anticipated when the amendment was offered—the cheap catchwords about coercion and the consent of the governed.

Mr. President, where in this measure is there any "coercion?" We propose to submit it to the people—to all of the people—who live within the boundaries of the proposed State, letting the majority of all the people who live there decide their destiny and their eternal relationship with the rest of the Republic, but not permitting a majority of a small minority living in one portion of the proposed new State to do that.

We have gone on here in the debate this afternoon to the logical conclusion of the position taken by Senators who were in favor of the amendment of the Senator from Ohio. We have heard, first, that these Territories are "entities," a proposition never advanced by any Senator or Representative in any debate in either House of Congress in the whole history of the Republic, a proposition which when applied to the States as the old states rights proposition the Senator from Ohio bravely fought against in the ranks forty-five years ago.

And now, in the address of the Senator from Montana, it is carried further. We have Arizona a territory and New Mexico a territory and other states and territories under this flag compared to foreign and antagonistic peoples, to Poland on the one hand, to Russia on the other hand. Arizona is compared to Ireland on the one hand, New Mexico to England upon the other hand.

Is not that proposition, Mr. President, enough to arouse every drop of patriotism in the blood that flows in the veins of every American citizen? Has it come to this in this debate that to sustain your position you must compare States in the American Union, territories beneath the Stars and Stripes, to foreign peoples and antagonistic nationalities?

Yet, Mr. President, to this conclusion the opponents of this measure have been driven. We repudiate it. We repudiate it in the name of every soldier who ever fought for a united nationality. We repudiate it in the name of every drop of blood that has been shed in defense of the principle that all the people beneath our flag are fellow-citizens and brothers.

Mr. President, we have heard a great deal said about a pledge being made to Arizona and about national honor. Ah, when an end is desired it is not hard to find an excuse; and I have always observed that when the excuse is found it is presented with the fervor of one who lacks confidence. A pledge, Mr. President! Where did the pledge come from? Who knew about it? The Senator asked me if I had heard anyone deny that it exists. I asked two Senators on this floor who pretend to be familiar with the conditions, if they had ever heard anybody who asserted that he had gone to Arizona under the faith of this pledge. I asked the Senator from Wisconsin this afternoon, and he has not answered me, whether he himself, able and alert lawyer that he is, ever heard about this language before it was presented by the industry of the then Senator from California, Mr. Bard, last year.

All other arguments that we heard in the beginning of this debate have been abandoned. We do not hear any more argument about physical difficulties. We do not hear any more argument about race antagonisms and race prejudices. We do not hear any more argument about differences in laws and institutions. Those arguments were based upon a misstatement of facts, known to be such by those who gave those arguments, and when the truth has been established they are abandoned.

The Senator from Ohio said something about the mistake Webster made concerning Washington and Oregon, or the mistake that was made concerning Kansas. At that time no surveys had been made. Now every foot has been surveyed. Arizona and New Mexico are as thoroughly known to science to-day as is Ohio. In the days when Webster spoke of Oregon it was not so.

So always in this debate, with the opponents of this bill, it has been a question about locality, or, as the Senator from Montana put it, about business interests. Well, I should like to hear something about the Nation.

After all, Mr. President, the Nation is the chief consideration. After all, the equal popular government under the flag is the supreme concern of this Congress. After all, the American people, as a people, not as a bundle of communities, is the noble plane upon which such vast business as this should be considered and determined. And upon this consideration we again earnestly and solemnly ask the Senate to approve this measure which has come to us from the House of Representatives, the immediate agents, directly coming from the American people.

Mr. President, we ask this—the Committee on Territories asks this—not in the name of a community, but in the name of the Republic; not in the name of an entity that never was suggested before, but in the name of the Republic; not in the name of a pledge that was illegal and born in fraud and of which nobody ever knew until now, but in the name of the Republic; not in the name of business "interests," but in the name of the whole American Republic, whose interests now and forever are involved in this bill. [Applause in the galleries.]

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 4 o'clock having arrived, the Senate will proceed to vote upon amendments under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. NELSON. I ask that the committee amendments be considered first. The bill has already been read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota asks that the amendments of the committee be first considered. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Secretary will state the first amendment reported by the Committee on Territories.

The first amendment of the Committee on Territories was, in section 2, page 2, line 16, after the word "and," to strike out "twelve" and insert "ten;" in line 18, after the word "Territory," to strike out "and two shall be elected by the electors residing in the Osage Indian Reservation, in the Territory of Oklahoma;" in line 23, before the word "districts," to strike out "fifty-six" and insert "fifty-five;" in line 24, after the word "be," to strike out "except that such" and insert "which;" in line 25, after the word "include," to strike out "as one district;" on page 3, line 1, after the word "and," to strike out "two Delegates" and insert "one Delegate;" in line 2, after the word "from," to strike out "said Osage district, in such manner as may be provided by the said governor, chief justice, and secretary of the Territory of Oklahoma" and insert "each of said districts;" in line 4, after the word "and," insert "the Commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes;" in line 5, after the word "tribes," to strike out "the" and insert "and two;" in line 6, after the words "United States," to strike out "court of appeals" and insert "courts;" in line 7, after the word "Territory," to insert "to be designated by the President, who shall constitute a board, which;" in line 13, before the word "Indian," to strike out "court of appeals for the" and insert "courts in;" in line 14, after the word "proclamation," to strike out "in which such apportionment shall be fully specified and announced;" and in line 17, before the word "months," to strike out "four" and insert "six;" so as to read:

SEC. 2. That all male persons over the age of 21 years, who are citizens of the United States, or who are members of any Indian nation or tribe in said Indian Territory and Oklahoma, and who have resided within the limits of said proposed State for at least six months next preceding the election, are hereby authorized to vote for and choose delegates to form a constitutional convention for said proposed State; and all persons qualified to vote for said delegates shall be eligible to serve as delegates; and the delegates to form such convention shall be 110 in number, 55 of whom shall be elected by the people of the Territory of Oklahoma, and 55 by the people of Indian Territory; and the governor, the chief justice, and the secretary of the Territory of Oklahoma shall apportion the Territory of Oklahoma into fifty-five districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, which apportionment shall include the Osage Indian Reservation, and one delegate shall be elected from each of said districts; and the Commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes, and two judges of the United States courts for the Indian Territory, to be designated by the President, who shall constitute a board, which shall apportion the said Indian Territory into fifty-five districts, as nearly equal in population as may be, and one delegate shall be elected from each of said districts; and the governor of said Oklahoma Territory, together with the judge senior in service of the United States courts in Indian Territory, shall, by proclamation, order an election of the delegates aforesaid in said proposed State at a time designated by them within six months after the approval of this act, which proclamation shall be issued at least sixty days prior to the time of holding said election of delegates.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 3, line 20, after the word "delegates," to strike out the following:

That the judges of the United States court of appeals for the Indian Territory shall, for the purpose of said election, establish and define the necessary election precincts and appoint three judges of election for each precinct, not more than two of whom shall be of the same political party, which judges may appoint the necessary clerk or clerks; that the said judges of election, so appointed, shall supervise the election in their respective precincts, and canvass and make due return of the vote cast to the judges of the United States court of appeals for the Indian Territory, who shall constitute the ultimate and final canvassing board of said election and whose certificates of election shall be prima facie evidence as to the election of delegates, and the election for delegates in the Territory of Oklahoma shall be conducted, the returns made, the result ascertained, and the certificates of all persons elected to such convention issued in the same manner as is prescribed by the laws of said Territory regulating elections for Delegates to Congress. That the election laws of the Territory of Oklahoma, as far as applicable and not in conflict with this act, including the penal laws of said Territory of Oklahoma relating to elections and illegal voting, are hereby extended over the Indian Territory for the purposes of the elections provided for in this act.

And insert:

The election for delegates in the Territory of Oklahoma and in said Indian Territory shall be conducted, the returns made, the result ascertained, and the certificates of all persons elected to such convention issued in the same manner as is prescribed by the laws of the Territory of Oklahoma regulating elections for Delegates to Congress. That the election laws of the Territory of Oklahoma now in force, as far as applicable and not in conflict with this act, including the penal laws of said Territory of Oklahoma relating to elections and illegal voting, are hereby extended to and put in force in said Indian Territory until the legislature of said proposed State shall otherwise provide, and until all persons offending against said laws in the election aforesaid shall have been dealt with in the manner therein provided. And the United States courts of said Indian Territory shall have the same power to enforce the laws of the Territory of Oklahoma, hereby extended to and put in force in said Territory, as have the courts of the Territory of Oklahoma: Provided, however, That said board to apportion districts in Indian Territory shall, for the purpose of said election, establish and define the necessary election precincts, and appoint three judges of election for each precinct, not more than two of whom shall be of the same political party, which judges may appoint the necessary clerk or clerks; that said judges of election, so appointed, shall supervise the election in their respective precincts, and canvass and make due return of the vote cast, to said board, which shall constitute the ultimate and final canvassing board of said election, and they shall issue certificates of election to all persons elected to such convention from the various districts of the Indian Territory, and their certificates of election shall be prima facie evidence as to the election of delegates.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 3, after the word "located," to insert "permanently;" so as to read:

Said capital may, after said year, be located permanently by the electors of said State at an election to be provided for by the legislature.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, section 3, line 3, after the word "person," to strike out "in" and insert "connected with;" and in line 4, after the word "sale," to insert "or other disposition;" so as to read:

And any person connected with any such agency who shall be convicted of making any sale or other disposition of liquor contrary to these provisions shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one year and one day.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, section 5, line 25, after the word "hundred," to insert "and fifty;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the sum of $150,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the defraying of the expenses of the elections provided for in this act, and said convention, and for the payment of the members thereof, under the same rules and regulations and at the same rates as are now provided by law for the payment of the Territorial legislature of the Territory of Oklahoma, and the disbursements of the money appropriated by this section shall be made by the secretary of the Territory of Oklahoma.

Mr. FORAKER. To that amendment, Mr. President, there is objection.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate disagree to the proposed amendment.

Mr. PATTERSON. I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment which has just been stated. Upon that question the yeas and nays are requested by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON].

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. FORAKER. In what shape is the proposition presented to the Senate, Mr. President? For instance, what does a vote in the affirmative mean?

Mr. FRYE. There can only be one motion, and that is to agree.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee. An affirmative vote is in favor of the reported amendment and a negative vote against it.

Mr. HOPKINS. This, as I understand, is an amendment proposed by the Committee on Territories to the bill, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. FORAKER. And those opposed to it will vote "nay?"

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Yes.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ELKINS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] on all the amendments to this bill and therefore withhold my vote. I shall not make this announcement again to-day.

Mr. FRYE (when his name was called). On all amendments to this bill and the bill itself I am paired with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], who is detained from the Chamber by ill health. I shall not repeat this announcement.

Mr. KITTREDGE (when his name was called). I am paired on this and all votes on the bill with the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT]. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote with the committee on all amendments and for the bill. I ask that this announcement may extend to all the votes for the day.

Mr. MCENERY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New York [Mr. DEPEW]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. NELSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY]. That pair has been transferred to the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], leaving those Senators paired on all amendments and on the bill itself. I shall not make a further announcement of this transfer of pairs to-day. I vote "yea."

Mr. MILLARD (when his name was called). My colleague

[Mr. BURKETT] is necessarily absent. He is paired with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN]. I shall not announce that fact again to-day.

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. I do not know how he would vote on this proposition if present, and therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY]. I do not know how he would vote on this amendment, if present, and I therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. SPOONER. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK], who is absent; but I feel at liberty, from the advice I have received from his colleague and others, to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. CULBERSON. I desire to say that my colleague [Mr. BAILEY] is absent on account of illness in his family. He has a general pair, as has been already stated, with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS]. If my colleague were present, he would vote "nay" on this proposition. This statement I hope will suffice for all the votes on amendments and on the bill.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 40, as follows:

YEAS—31.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Allee | Crane | Hemenway | Nelson |
| Allison | Cullom | Hopkins | Penrose |
| Ankeny | Dick | Kean | Piles |
| Beveridge | Dillingham | Knox | Proctor |
| Brandegee | Dolliver | La Follette | Smoot |
| Bulkeley | Fulton | Lodge | Warner |
| Burnham | Gamble | Long | Wetmore |
| Clapp | Hale | Millard | |

NAYS—40.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Alger | Dryden | Latimer | Pettus |
| Bacon | Dubois | McCreary | Rayner |
| Blackburn | Flint | McCumber | Scott |
| Burrows | Foraker | Mallory | Simmons |
| Carter | Foster | Martin | Spooner |
| Clark, Mont. | Frazier | Morgan | Stone |
| Clark, Wyo. | Gallinger | Newlands | Sutherland |
| Clay | Gearin | Nixon | Taliaferro |
| Culberson | Hansbrough | Patterson | Teller |
| Daniel | Heyburn | Perkins | Tillman |

NOT VOTING—18.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aldrich | Carmack | Gorman | Overman |
| Bailey | Clarke, Ark. | Kittredge | Platt |
| Berry | Depew | McEnery | Warren |
| Burkett | Elkins | McLaurin | |
| Burton | Frye | Money | |

So the committee amendment was rejected.

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President, I hope the Presiding Officer will regulate these proceedings so that we can understand what we are doing. The reading at the desk is so rapid that we can not find the places in the bill where amendments are proposed until they are disposed of.

The next amendment was, on page 13, section 6, line 12, after the word "Representatives," to strike out "to the Sixtieth Congress;" so as to make the clause read:

And the said Representatives, together with the governor and other officers provided for in said constitution, shall be elected on the same day of the election for the ratification or rejection of the constitution; and until said officers are elected and qualified under the provisions of such constitution and the said State is admitted into the Union, the Territorial officers of Oklahoma Territory shall continue to discharge the duties of their respective offices in said Territory.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, section 7, line 5, after the word "be," to strike out "paid quarterly and;" so as to read:

Said appropriation of $5,000,000 shall be held and invested by said State, in trust, for the use and benefit of said schools, and the interest thereon shall be used exclusively in the support and maintenance of said schools.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 8, after the word "lands," to insert "exclusive of the appraised value of improvements;" so as to read:

Provided, That before any of the said lands shall be sold, as provided in sections 9 and 10 of this act, the said lands and the improvements thereon shall be appraised by three disinterested appraisers, who shall be nonresidents of the county wherein the land is situated, to be designated as the legislature of said State shall prescribe, and the said appraisers shall make a true appraisement of said lands at the actual cash value thereof, exclusive of improvements, and shall separately appraise all permanent improvements thereon at their fair and reasonable value, and in case the leaseholder does not become the purchaser, the purchaser at said sale shall, under such rules and regulations as the legislature may prescribe, pay to or for the leaseholder the appraised value of said improvements, and to the State the amount bid for the said lands, exclusive of the appraised value of improvements.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 13, page 20, line 23, after the word "Muscogee," to strike out "one term at Vinita."

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I hope that amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. What is the request of the Senator?

Mr. WARNER. That the bill as it stood coming from the other House, making one term of court at Vinita, shall remain.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. Debate is not in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee, which has been stated.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Does the Senator from Missouri offer that as an amendment?

Mr. WARNER. I want the Senate to disagree to the committee amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee, which has been stated.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, the committee wish to withdraw that amendment at the request of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. WARNER].

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment reported by the Committee on Territories was, in section 13, on page 21, after the word "Oklahoma," to insert "City and;" so as to read: "One term at Oklahoma City and one term at Enid."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the same section, on page 21, line 2, after the word "Enid," to strike out "and one term at Lawton."

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I hope that amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. Debate is not in order, Mr. President, and I object to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the only question before the Senate is——

Mr. LONG. I ask for a vote upon that amendment, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee, which has just been stated.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Territories was, on page 21, line 12, after the word "January," to strike out "and at Vinita on the first Monday in March."

Mr. KEAN. Let that amendment be disagreed to.

Mr. WARNER. I also ask that that amendment be disagreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment, which has just been stated.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, in section 13, on page 21, line 15, after the word "Oklahoma," to insert "City."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 13, on page 21, line 16, before the word "at," to insert the word "and;" and in the same line, after the word "June," to strike out "and at Lawton on the first Monday in October."

Mr. LONG. I ask that that amendment may be disagreed to.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, in section 13, page 22, line 8, after the word "in," to strike out "the Territory of Oklahoma," and insert "other districts of the United States;" and in line 9, after the words "that the," to strike out "statutes" and insert "laws."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 15, on page 23, line 20, after the word "within," to strike out "six" and insert "three."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 16, on page 24, line 20, after the word "transfer," to strike out "except as to time and parties."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 25, on page 31, line 9, after the words "race or color," to insert "except as to Indians not taxed."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 25, on page 33, line 18, before the word "location," to insert "permanent."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 36, one page 42, line 3, after the word "State," to insert "by the Commission provided for in section 35, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 41, on page 47, line 10, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five;" so as to read:

That the sum of $175,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, etc.

Mr. FORAKER. I ask that that amendment may be disagreed to.

Mr. PATTERSON. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Several SENATORS. That is not necessary.

Mr. PATTERSON. Very well, then; I withdraw the call.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, in section 41, on page 48, line 1, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five."

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. FORAKER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] has an amendment which he desires to offer to perfect the bill.

Mr. FORAKER. My amendment is to perfect the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from Ohio will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 28 it is proposed to strike out section 23 of the bill and insert the following:

SEC. 23. That within thirty days after the approval of this act the governors of the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, respectively, shall each by proclamation order a special election to be held on the twelfth Tuesday after the approval of this act. Said elections shall be conducted in all respects, including the qualifications and registration of voters, and the result ascertained and certified as near as practicable in accordance with the laws of said Territories, respectively, governing the election of a Delegate in Congress. The sole question to be submitted to the electors of each of said Territories at such special election shall be stated on the ballot in substance and form as follows:

"Shall Arizona and New Mexico be united to form one State?"

☐ Yes. ☐ No.

Electors desiring to answer in the affirmative shall place a cross mark in the square to the left of the word "Yes," and those desiring to answer in the negative shall place a cross mark in the square to the left of the word "No" in the form above prescribed. The governors of the respective Territories shall certify and transmit, as soon as may be practicable, the results of said election each to the other and likewise to the Secretary of the Interior, and if it appears from the returns thus certified that a majority of the electors in each of said Territories who voted at such special election voted in favor of the union of New Mexico and Arizona as one State, then, and not otherwise, the inhabitants of that part of the area of the United States now constituting the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico as at present described may become the State of Arizona as hereinafter provided; but if in either of said Territories a majority of the electors voting at such special election shall appear by such certified returns to have voted against the union of said Territories, then, and in that event, all succeeding sections of this act shall thereafter be null and void and of no effect.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Ohio, which has just been reported.

Mr. FORAKER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. CARTER. I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment. I move to amend the amendment by inserting after the word "sections," in line 24 on page 2, the words "excepting section 41."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment of Mr. FORAKER on page 2, line 24, after the word "sections," by inserting "excepting section 41."

Mr. FORAKER. I accept the amendment of the Senator from Montana to my amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio as amended, on which the yeas and nays are demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCENERY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. DEPEW]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. If he were present, he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY], who is detained at home through illness. If he were present, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay." I will say that I shall not again announce this pair, as the Senator from Mississippi and I will be paired upon every vote pertaining to this bill.

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 42, nays 29, as follows:

YEAS—42.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Alger | Dryden | Latimer | Rayner |
| Bacon | Dubois | McCreary | Scott |
| Blackburn | Flint | McCumber | Simmons |
| Bulkeley | Foraker | Mallory | Spooner |
| Burrows | Foster | Martin | Stone |
| Carter | Frazier | Morgan | Sutherland |
| Clark, Mont. | Fulton | Newlands | Taliaferro |
| Clark, Wyo. | Gallinger | Nixon | Teller |
| Clay | Gearin | Patterson | Tillman |
| Culberson | Hansbrough | Perkins | |
| Daniel | Heyburn | Pettus | |

NAYS—29.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Allee | Cullom | Kean | Piles |
| Allison | Dick | Knox | Proctor |
| Ankeny | Dillingham | La Follette | Smoot |
| Beveridge | Dolliver | Lodge | Warner |
| Brandegee | Gamble | Long | Wetmore |
| Burnham | Hale | Millard | |
| Clapp | Hemenway | Nelson | |
| Crane | Hopkins | Penrose | |

NOT VOTING—18.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aldrich | Carmack | Gorman | Overman |
| Bailey | Clarke, Ark. | Kittredge | Platt |
| Berry | Depew | McEnery | Warren |
| Burkett | Elkins | McLaurin | |
| Burton | Frye | Money | |

So Mr. FORAKER's amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I offer the amendment I send to the desk, which I think will be accepted by the committee.

The SECRETARY. On page 17, at the end of section 8, it is proposed to add the following:

Where any part of the specific sections of land granted by this act to the State of Oklahoma have been heretofore duly located and claimed, under the United States mining laws, by citizens of the United States or those who have declared their intention to become such, and where the lands so located are found to be valuable for minerals, such mineral claims may be perfected under the mining laws and the State may select an equal quantity of other land in lieu thereof, in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 28, 1891, entitled "An act to amend sections 2275 and 2276 of the Revised Statutes of the United States providing for the selection of lands for educational purposes in lieu of those appropriated for other purposes."

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The committee will accept the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. PILES. I offer the amendments which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments proposed by the Senator from Washington will be stated in their order.

The SECRETARY. On page 3, in line 1, after the word "reservation," insert:

And shall appoint an election commissioner for, establish voting precincts in, and appoint the judges for election in the Osage Reservation.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. The committee will accept the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 12, it is proposed to amend the committee amendment already agreed to——

Mr. GALLINGER. That can not be done until the bill comes into the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment is not now in order.

The SECRETARY. The next amendment also proposes to amend a committee amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is likewise out of order at this stage of the bill.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 24, after the word "delegates," strike out the period and insert a colon and the following:

Provided further, That in said Indian Territory and Osage Indian Reservation nominations for delegate to said constitutional convention may be made by convention, by the Republican, Democratic, and People's Party, or by petition in the manner provided by the laws of the Territory of Oklahoma; and certificates and petitions of nomination in said Indian Territory shall be filed with the districting and canvassing board, who shall perform the duties of election commissioner under said laws, and shall prepare, print, and distribute all ballots, poll books, and election supplies necessary for the holding of said election under said laws.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is of opinion that the proposed amendment is out of order, the committee amendment having been agreed to in Committee of the Whole. It will be in order when the bill is reported to the Senate.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is it not in order if the committee accepts it?

Mr. GALLINGER. No; the committee has no such right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The committee has no right to accept it at this time.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Is it not in order if the committee accepts it?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Not unless it is done by unanimous consent.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Very well. Let it be offered in the Senate.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend——

Mr. PILES. These amendments are simply to perfect the bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. Debate is out of order.

Mr. FORAKER. I should like to have the amendment read again.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read at the request of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. KEAN. If the amendment is not in order, it ought not to be read again.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the rereading of the proposed amendment.

Mr. TELLER. It is absolutely impossible to know what is going on, with the noise there is in the Chamber. I insist that the Secretary suspend until we can have order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will withhold stating the amendments until the Senate is in order. [After a pause.] The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 12, line 23, after the word "shall," insert the following words:

With the exception of that part of recording district No. 12 which is in the Cherokee and Creek nations.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Accepted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The SECRETARY. On page 13, line 4, after the word "Nation," insert a comma, and the following:

That part of recording district No. 12 which is in the Cherokee and Creek nations; that part of recording district No. 25 which is in the Chickasaw Nation.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Accepted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer an amendment to come in after the word "other," in line 4, on page 7.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, line 4, after the word "other," it is proposed to strike out "Indian reservations existing in the Territory of Oklahoma" and to insert:

Parts of said State which existed as Indian reservations or in which the United States maintained laws prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be read as it will read if amended.

The Secretary read as follows:

Second. That the manufacture, sale, barter, giving away, or otherwise furnishing, except as hereinafter provided, of intoxicating liquors within those parts of said State now known as the Indian Territory and the Osage Indian Reservation and within any other parts of said State which existed as Indian reservations or in which the United States maintained laws prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors, on the 1st day of January, 1906, is prohibited for a period of twenty-one years from the date of the admission of said State into the Union, and thereafter until the people of said State shall otherwise provide by amendment of said constitution and proper State legislation.

Mr. GALLINGER. That makes it right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I have some more amendments to offer to this section. I suggest to the committee to strike out the colon at the end of line 23, on page 7, and insert a semicolon, and to strike out the words "Provided, That," at the beginning of line 24, and insert the word "and," so as to perfect it.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, line 23, at the end of the line, strike out the colon and insert a semicolon; and in line 24 strike out the words "Provided, That" and insert the conjunction "and."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer an amendment to come in after the words "United States" in line 9 of page 8.

The SECRETARY. On page 8, after line 9, strike out the period after the words "United States" and substitute a semicolon, and insert the following:

And for the sale of such liquors to any apothecary who shall have executed an approved bond, in a sum not less than $1,000, conditioned that none of such liquors shall be used or disposed of for any purpose other than in the compounding of prescriptions or other medicines, the sale of which would not subject him to the payment of the special tax required of liquor dealers by the United States; and the payment of such special tax by any person within the parts of said State hereinbefore defined shall constitute prima facie evidence of his intention to violate the provisions of this section.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer another amendment.

The SECRETARY. After the word "purposes," in line 13, page 8, insert the words:

Except sales to apothecaries as hereinabove provided.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota is agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. I offer the amendment I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 29, line 6, amend by striking out the word "thirty," and in lieu thereof insert "one hundred and twenty;" so that it will read:

And such governors, respectively, shall, within one hundred and twenty days after the approval of this act by the President, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. I propose the amendment I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 29, line 11, strike out the words "approval of this act as" and insert "issue of proclamation."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I desire to offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 20, section 13, line 24, after the word "Vinita" insert "one term at Tulsa."

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I could not hear the amendment. I ask that it be again stated.

The Secretary again stated the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I offer another amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "March," page 21, line 12, insert "and at Tulsa on the first Monday in April."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. CULBERSON. On behalf of my colleague, who is, as I have stated, unavoidably absent, I move to amend by inserting in line 24, page 20, after the words "South McAlester," the words "one term at Chickasha."

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, there are now more amendments of this kind than the committee can agree to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas will be stated.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, I understand that debate is not in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is not in order.

Mr. CULBERSON. Else I would be glad to answer the suggestion of the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the amendment be stated.

Mr. CULBERSON. The amendment I have proposed is to add——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator will please restate his amendment.

Mr. CULBERSON. On page 20, line 24, after the words "South McAlester," to insert "one term at Chickasha."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Texas will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 20, line 24, after the words "South McAlester," it is proposed to insert "one term at Chickasha."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. CULBERSON. On page 21, line 14, after the word "October," I move to insert:

And Chickasha on the first Monday in November.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DUBOIS. On page 33, after line 14, I move to insert as VI and VII, respectively, what I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Idaho will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 33, after line 14, it is proposed to insert the following:

VI. No person shall be permitted to vote, serve as a juror, or hold any civil office who is under guardianship, idiotic, or insane, or who has, at any place, been convicted of treason, felony, embezzlement of the public funds, bartering or selling or offering to barter or sell his vote, or purchasing or offering to purchase the vote of another, or other infamous crime, and who has not been restored to the rights of citizenship, or who, at the time of such election, is confined in prison on conviction of a criminal offense; or who is a bigamist or polygamist, or is living in what is known as patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or in violation of any law of this State or the United States forbidding any such crime, or who in any manner teaches, advises, counsels, aids, or encourages any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or to live in violation of any such law, or to commit any such crime; or who is a member of or contributes to the support, aid, or encouragement of any order, organization, association, corporation, or society which teaches, advises, counsels, encourages, or aids any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal or plural marriage, or who teaches or advises that the laws of this State prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the State.

VII. The legislature may prescribe qualifications, limitations, and conditions for the right of suffrage additional to those prescribed in this article, but shall never annul any of the provisions in this article contained.

Mr. DUBOIS. On that amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. NELSON. There is no objection to the amendment. There is no occasion to take a vote on it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there a second to the demand for the yeas and nays?

Mr. BURROWS. There is no objection to it.

Mr. LODGE. There is no objection to it. The amendment is agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. TELLER. Some days ago the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. BAILEY] offered an amendment. He is called away and requested me to offer it for him.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado, on behalf of the Senator from Texas, proposes an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Beginning with the word "and," in the first line on page 6, it is proposed to strike out all down to and including the word "legislature," in line 4 on page 6, as follows:

And shall not be changed therefrom previous to A. D. 1915, but said capital may, after said year, be located permanently by the electors of said State at an election to be provided for by the legislature.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Let it be read again.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. TELLER. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there a second to the demand for the yeas and nays?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. TELLER. I desire to offer another amendment. On page 6, line 2, I move to strike out "fifteen" and insert "ten;" so as to read:

Shall not be changed therefrom previous to A. D. 1910.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BURROWS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment submitted by the Senator from Michigan will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all of the bill from and including section 23.

Mr. BACON. I suggest to the Senator that that will exclude the section the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] previously indicated.

Mr. BURROWS. I will modify the amendment so as to except section 41.

Mr. CARTER. There is no need of that.

Mr. BURROWS. Section 41 is not needed now, I understand.

Mr. LODGE. None of it is needed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the proposed amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 21 of the bill strike out section 23 and all of the remainder of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 35, nays 36, as follows:

YEAS—35.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Alger | Daniel | Heyburn | Pettus |
| Bacon | Dubois | Latimer | Rayner |
| Blackburn | Flint | McCreary | Simmons |
| Bulkeley | Foraker | Mallory | Spooner |
| Burrows | Foster | Martin | Stone |
| Carter | Frazier | Morgan | Taliaferro |
| Clark, Mont. | Gallinger | Newlands | Teller |
| Clay | Gearin | Patterson | Tillman |
| Culberson | Hansbrough | Perkins | |

NAYS—36.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Allee | Cullom | Hopkins | Nixon |
| Allison | Dick | Kean | Penrose |
| Ankeny | Dillingham | Knox | Piles |
| Beveridge | Dolliver | La Follette | Proctor |
| Brandegee | Dryden | Lodge | Scott |
| Burnham | Fulton | Long | Smoot |
| Clapp | Gamble | McCumber | Sutherland |
| Clark, Wyo. | Hale | Millard | Warner |
| Crane | Hemenway | Nelson | Wetmore |

NOT VOTING—18.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aldrich | Carmack | Gorman | Overman |
| Bailey | Clarke, Ark. | Kittredge | Platt |
| Berry | Depew | McEnery | Warren |
| Burkett | Elkins | McLaurin | |
| Burton | Frye | Money | |

So Mr. BURROWS's amendment was rejected.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. On page 27, line 11, after the word "Congress," I move to strike out the following words:

and shall constitute the Osage Indian Reservation a separate county and designate the county seat thereof, and shall provide rules and regulations and define the manner of conducting the first election for officers in said county.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I offered an hour ago an amendment to that portion of the section which it is now moved to strike out. I wish to know which takes precedence.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Senator's amendment. He has a right to perfect the text.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Was the amendment sent to the desk before 4 o'clock?

Mr. DILLINGHAM. It was.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Then it could not have been offered. It was a proposed amendment, and it lies on the desk to be offered by the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER (to Mr. DILLINGHAM). Offer it now.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. I will offer the amendment at the present time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is now in order. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont will be stated.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I inquire the parliamentary status of the two amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the part proposed to be amended by the amendment of the Senator from Vermont is proposed to be stricken out by the amendment of the Senator from Wyoming. In such a case the friends of a measure have a right to perfect the text proposed to be stricken out before the question is put on striking it out. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Vermont will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 27, line 12, after the words "separate counties," insert:

And provide that it shall remain a separate county until the lands in the Osage Indian Reservation are allotted in severalty and until changed by the legislature of Oklahoma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question now recurs on the motion of the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] to strike out the clause as amended. The proposed amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the words "Representatives to Congress," in line 11, page 27, strike out as amended the following:

And shall constitute the Osage Indian Reservation a separate county and shall provide that it shall remain a separate county until the lands in the Osage Indian Reservation are allotted in severalty and until changed by the legislature of Oklahoma and designate the county seat thereof, and shall provide rules and regulations and define the manner of conducting the first election for officers in said county.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. By a reservation made at this time can a separate vote be taken on this amendment in the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment can be renewed in the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I desire to make that reservation.

Mr. BURROWS. When the bill reaches the Senate, I desire a separate vote on the amendment I offered.

Mr. FRYE. There is no need of reserving that right before the bill is in the Senate. It is a right which inheres. A Senator can demand a separate vote on any amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

Mr. TELLER. I wish to renew the amendment in the Senate which I offered on behalf of the Senator from Texas [Mr. BAILEY], which is to strike out the first, second, third, and fourth lines on page 6.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 6 of the bill strike out lines 1, 2, 3, and 4, in the following words:

And shall not be changed therefrom previous to A. D. 1915, but said capital may, after said year, be located permanently by the electors of said State at an election to be provided for by the legislature.

So as to make the clause read:

The capital of said State shall temporarily be at the city of Guthrie, in the present Territory of Oklahoma.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado. [Putting the question.] In the opinion of the Chair the ayes have it.

Mr. LONG. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Colorado may explain the amendment. [Cries of "No!" "No!"]

Mr. GALLINGER. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection. The Chair will again put the question.

Mr. HALE. Let us have the yeas and nays on it.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCOTT (when his name was called). Mr. President, there is so much confusion I plead ignorance. Is the vote on striking out the four top lines on page 6? Is that the amendment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the amendment.

Mr. SCOTT. I vote "yea."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 39, nays 31, as follows:

YEAS—39.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Bacon | Foster | Mallory | Rayner |
| Blackburn | Frazier | Martin | Scott |
| Carter | Fulton | Millard | Simmons |
| Clark, Mont. | Gearin | Morgan | Spooner |
| Clark, Wyo | Hale | Newlands | Stone |
| Clay | Hansbrough | Nixon | Sutherland |
| Culberson | La Follette | Overman | Taliaferro |
| Daniel | Latimer | Patterson | Teller |
| Dubois | McCreary | Perkins | Tillman |
| Foraker | McCumber | Pettus | |

NAYS—31.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Alger | Clapp | Gamble | Nelson |
| Allee | Crane | Hemenway | Penrose |
| Allison | Cullom | Heyburn | Piles |
| Ankeny | Dick | Hopkins | Proctor |
| Beveridge | Dillingham | Kean | Smoot |
| Brandegee | Dolliver | Knox | Warner |
| Bulkeley | Dryden | Lodge | Wetmore |
| Burnham | Gallinger | Long | |

NOT VOTING—19.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aldrich | Burton | Flint | McLaurin |
| Bailey | Carmack | Frye | Money |
| Berry | Clarke, Ark. | Gorman | Platt |
| Burkett | Depew | Kittredge | Warren |
| Burrows | Elkins | McEnery | |

So Mr. TELLER'S amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, I now ask for a vote on my amendment.

Mr. PILES. I renew my amendments to the committee amendment.

Mr. FORAKER. They have been agreed to, I understand; and if so, they do not have to be voted upon again.

Mr. PILES. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington has proposed certain amendments which will now be stated.

Mr. PILES. I did not understand that they were agreed to.

Mr. FORAKER. Were not those amendments agreed to, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Some amendments proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. PILES] have been agreed to, but the amendments of the Senator to the committee amendments which had been agreed to were decided out of order by the Chair, but they are now in order, the bill being in the Senate. They will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed by Mr. PILES, on page 5, section 2, line 12, in the amendment of the committee, after the word "election," to insert:

Appoint an election commissioner for each district, who shall distribute all ballots and election supplies to the several precincts in his district, receive the election returns from the judges in the precincts, and deliver the same to the canvassing board therein named.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. PILES] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 18, after the word "cast," it is proposed to insert "to the election commissioner for said district, who shall deliver said returns, poll books, and ballots."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. PILES] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 24, after the word "delegates," it is proposed to strike out the period and insert a colon and the following words:

Provided further, That in said Indian Territory and Osage Indian Reservation, nominations for delegates to said constitutional convention may be made by convention by the Republican, Democratic, and People's Party, or by petition in the manner provided by the laws of the Territory of Oklahoma; and certificates and petitions of nomination in said Indian Territory shall be filed with the districting and canvassing board, who shall perform the duties of election commissioner under said laws, and shall prepare, print, and distribute all ballots, poll books, and election supplies necessary for the holding of said election under said laws.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. PILES], which has just been stated.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STONE obtained the floor.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, I now renew my amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] has been recognized.

Mr. STONE. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 2, on page 2, it is proposed to strike out the following words in lines 20, 21, and 22:

governor, the chief justice, and the secretary of the Territory of Oklahoma.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

President shall appoint an election board, to be composed of three citizens of the Territory of Oklahoma, not more than two of whom shall be of the same political party, who shall take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and faithfully discharge their several duties as members of said board, and who shall meet at such time and place as the President shall designate and organize by electing from their membership a chairman and secretary of the board; and said board.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment?

Mr. GALLINGER. There is objection, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question, then, is on agreeing to the amendment, which has just been stated.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] has proposed further amendments, which will be stated.

Mr. STONE. If the amendment which has been read has been disagreed to, I will withdraw the remainder of the amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments are withdrawn.

Mr. BURROWS. I now renew my amendment, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan proposes an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out, beginning with section 23, on page 28, the remainder of the bill, as follows:

SEC. 23. That within thirty days after the approval of this act the governors of the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, respectively, shall each by proclamation order a special election to be held on the twelfth Tuesday after the approval of this act. Said elections shall be conducted in all respects, including the qualifications and registration of voters, and the result ascertained and certified as near as practicable in accordance with the laws of said Territories, respectively, governing the election of a Delegate in Congress. The sole question to be submitted to the electors of each of said Territories at such special election shall be stated on the ballot in substance and form as follows:

"Shall Arizona and New Mexico be united to form one State?"

☐ Yes. ☐ No.

Electors desiring to answer in the affirmative shall place a cross mark in the square to the left of the word "Yes," and those desiring to answer in the negative shall place a cross mark in the square to the left of the word "No" in the form above prescribed. The governors of the respective Territories shall certify and transmit, as soon as may be practicable, the results of said election each to the other and likewise to the Secretary of the Interior, and if it appears from the returns thus certified that a majority of the electors in each of said Territories who voted at such special election voted in favor of the union of New Mexico and Arizona as one State, then, and not otherwise, the inhabitants of that part of the area of the United States now constituting the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico as at present described may become the State of Arizona as hereinafter provided; but if in either of said Territories a majority of the electors voting at such special election shall appear by such certified returns to have voted against the union of said Territories, then, and in that event, all succeeding sections, excepting section 41, of this act shall thereafter be null and void and of no effect.

SEC. 24. That all qualified electors of said Territories, respectively, as described in this act, are hereby authorized to vote for and choose delegates to form a convention for said Territories; such delegates shall possess the qualifications of such electors. The aforesaid convention shall consist of 110 delegates, 66 of which delegates shall be elected to said convention by the people of the Territory of New Mexico and 44 by the people of the Territory of Arizona; and the governors, chief justices, and secretaries of each of said Territories, respectively, shall apportion the delegates to be thus elected from their respective Territories, as nearly as may be, equitably among the several counties thereof in accordance with the population; and such governors, respectively, shall, within one hundred and twenty days after the approval of this act by the President of the United States, by proclamation, in which such apportionment shall be fully specified and announced, order an election of the delegates aforesaid in their respective Territories, to be held on the tenth Tuesday after the issue of the proclamation aforesaid; and the proper officials, as now provided by law in each of said Territories, respectively, shall immediately upon the issuance of such proclamations make, or cause to be made, as the case may be, in time for the election, a supplemental or general registration, as may be necessary, of the male citizens of the United States over the age of 21 years who shall have resided in said Territories, respectively, for six months, in the county for ninety days, and in the precinct, ward, or election district where they are to vote thirty days next preceding the date fixed for said election, whose names shall be placed upon or added to the great registers, or registration lists, as the case may be, exhibiting the names of the qualified voters of said Territories, respectively. And the persons so qualified shall be entitled to be so registered and to vote for delegates to the constitutional convention. Such election for delegates shall be conducted, the returns made, and the certificates of persons elected to such convention issued, as near as may be, in the same manner as is prescribed by the laws of said Territories, respectively, regulating elections therein of members of the legislature, save that not more than two judges of each of the election boards holding elections under this act shall be of the same political party: Provided, That the secretary, or other proper officer, of the Territory of Arizona, into whose hands the result of said election in the Territory of Arizona finally comes, shall immediately transmit and certify the same to the secretary of the Territory of New Mexico, at Santa Fe. Persons possessing the qualifications entitling them to vote for delegates to the constitutional convention under this act shall be entitled to vote on the ratification or rejection of the constitution submitted to the people of said Territories hereunder, and on the election of all officials whose election is taking place at the same time, under such rules or regulations as said convention may prescribe, not in conflict with this act: Provided, That said registration lists shall answer for both or all such elections.

SEC. 25. That the delegates to the convention thus elected shall meet in the hall of the house of representatives of the Territory of New Mexico, in the city of Santa Fe therein, on the fifth Monday after their election, but they shall not receive compensation for more than sixty days of service, and after organization shall declare on behalf of the people of said proposed State that they adopt the Constitution of the United States, whereupon the said convention shall be, and is hereby, authorized to form a constitution and State government for said proposed State. The constitution shall be republican in form, and make no distinction in civil or political rights on account of race or color, except as to Indians not taxed, and shall not be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States and the principles of the Declaration of Independence. And said convention shall provide, by ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the people of said State—

First. That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship; and that polygamous or plural marriages and the sale, barter, or giving of intoxicating liquors to Indians are forever prohibited.

Second. That the people inhabiting said proposed State do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated and ungranted public lands lying within the boundaries thereof and to all lands lying within said limits owned or held by any Indian or Indian tribes, except as hereinafter provided, and that until the title thereto shall have been extinguished by the United States the same shall be and remain subject to the disposition of the United States, and such Indian lands shall remain under the absolute jurisdiction and control of the Congress of the United States; that the lands and other property belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands and other property belonging to residents thereof; that no taxes shall be imposed by the State on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States or reserved for its use; but nothing herein, or in the ordinance herein provided for, shall preclude the said State from taxing, as other lands and other property are taxed, any lands and other property owned or held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relations and has obtained from the United States or from any person a title thereto by patent or other grant, save and except such lands as have been or may be granted to any Indian or Indians under any act of Congress containing a provision exempting the lands thus granted from taxation, but said ordinance shall provide that all such lands shall be exempt from taxation by said State so long and to such extent as such act of Congress may prescribe.

Third. That the debts and liabilities of said Territory of Arizona and of said Territory of New Mexico shall be assumed and paid by said State, and that said State shall be subrogated to all the rights of indemnity and reimbursement which either of said Territories now has.

Fourth. That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools, which shall be open to all the children of said State and free from sectarian control; and that said schools shall always be conducted in English: Provided, That nothing in this act shall preclude the teaching of other languages in said public schools.

Fifth. That said State shall never enact any law restricting or abridging the right of suffrage on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, and that ability to read, write, and speak the English language sufficiently well to conduct the duties of the office without the aid of an interpreter shall be a necessary qualification for all State officers.

Sixth. No person shall be permitted to vote, serve as a juror, or hold any civil office who is under guardianship, idiotic, or insane, or who has, at any place, been convicted of treason, felony, embezzlement of the public funds, bartering or selling or offering to barter or sell his vote, or purchasing or offering to purchase the vote of another, or other infamous crime, and who has not been restored to the rights of citizenship, or who, at the time of such election, is confined in prison on conviction of a criminal offense; or who is a bigamist or polygamist, or is living in what is known as patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or in violation of any law of this State or the United States forbidding any such crime, or who in any manner teaches, advises, counsels, aids, or encourages any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal, plural, or celestial marriage, or to live in violation of any such law, or to commit any such crime; or who is a member of or contributes to the support, aid, or encouragement of any order, organization, association, corporation, or society which teaches, advises, counsels, encourages, or aids any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal or plural marriage, or who teaches or advises that the laws of this State prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the State.

Seventh. The legislature may prescribe qualifications, limitations, and conditions for the right of suffrage additional to those prescribed in this article, but shall never annul any of the provisions in this article contained.

Sixth. That the capital of said State shall temporarily be at the city of Santa Fe, in the present Territory of New Mexico, and shall not be changed therefrom previous to A. D. 1915, but the permanent location of said capital may, after said year, be fixed by the electors of said State, voting at an election to be provided for by the legislature.

SEC. 26. That in case a constitution and State government shall be formed in compliance with the provisions of this act, the convention forming the same shall provide by ordinance for submitting said constitution to the people of said proposed State for its ratification or rejection at an election to be held at a time fixed in said ordinance, which shall not be less than sixty days nor more than six months from the adjournment of the convention, at which election the qualified voters of said proposed State shall vote directly for or against the proposed constitution and for or against any provisions thereof separately submitted. The returns of said election shall be made by the election officers direct to the secretary of the Territory of New Mexico at Santa Fe; who, with the governors and chief justices of said Territories, or any four of them, shall meet at said city of Santa Fe on the third Monday after said election and shall canvass the same; and if a majority of the legal votes cast on that question shall be for the constitution the said canvassing board shall certify the result to the President of the United States, together with the statement of the votes cast thereon, and upon separate articles or propositions, and a copy of said constitution, articles, propositions, and ordinances. And if the constitution and government of said proposed State are republican in form, and if the provisions in this act have been complied with in the formation thereof, it shall be the duty of the President of the United States, within twenty days from the receipt of the certificate of the result of said election and the statement of the votes cast thereon and a copy of said constitution, articles, propositions, and ordinances from said board, to issue his proclamation announcing the result of said election, and thereupon the proposed State shall be deemed admitted by Congress into the Union, under and by virtue of this act, under the name of Arizona, on an equal footing with the original States, from and after the date of said proclamation.

The original of said constitution, articles, propositions, and ordinances, and the election returns, and a copy of the statement of the votes cast at said election, shall be forwarded and turned over by the secretary of the Territory of New Mexico to the State authorities.

SEC. 27. That until the next general census, or until otherwise provided by law, said State shall be entitled to two Representatives in the House of Representatives of the United States, which Representatives, together with the governor and other officers provided for in said constitution, and also all other State and county officers, shall be elected on the same day of the election for the adoption of the constitution; and until said State officers are elected and qualified under the provisions of the constitution, and the State is admitted into the Union, the Territorial officers of said Territories, respectively, shall continue to discharge the duties of their respective offices in said Territories.

SEC. 28. That upon the admission of said State into the Union there is hereby granted unto it, including the sections thereof heretofore granted, four sections of public land in each township in the proposed State for the support of free public nonsectarian common schools, to wit: Sections Nos. 13, 16, 33, and 36, and where such sections or any parts thereof have been sold or otherwise disposed of by or under the authority of any act of Congress other lands equivalent thereto, in legal subdivisions of not less than one quarter section and as contiguous as may be to the section in lieu of which the same is taken; such indemnity lands to be selected within said respective portions of said State in the manner provided in this act: Provided, That the thirteenth, sixteenth, thirty-third, and thirty-sixth sections embraced in permanent reservations for national purposes shall not at any time be subject to the grants nor to the indemnity provisions of this act, but other lands equivalent thereto may be selected for such school purposes in lieu thereof; nor shall any lands embraced in Indian, military, or other reservations of any character be subject to the grants of this act, but such reservation lands shall be subject to the indemnity provision of this act: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall repeal or affect any act of Congress relating to the Casa Grande Ruin as now defined or as may be hereafter defined or extended, or the power of the United States over it, or any other lands embraced in the State hereafter set aside by Congress as a national park, game preserve, or for the preservation of objects of archæological or ethnological interest; and nothing contained in this act shall interfere with the rights and ownership of the United States in any land hereafter set aside by Congress as national park, game preserve, or other reservation, or in the said Casa Grande Ruin as it now is or may be hereafter defined or extended by law, but exclusive legislation, in all cases whatsoever, shall be exercised by the United States, which shall have exclusive control and jurisdiction over the same; but nothing in this proviso contained shall be construed to prevent the service within said Casa Grande Ruin, or national parks, game preserves, and other reservations hereafter established by law, of civil and criminal processes lawfully issued by the authority of said State; and said lands shall not be subject at any time to the school grants of this act that may be embraced within the metes and bounds of the national park, game preserve, and other reservation, or the said Casa Grande Ruin, as now defined or may be hereafter defined; but other lands equivalent thereto may be selected for such school purposes hereinbefore provided in lieu thereof.

SEC. 29. That 300 sections of the unappropriated nonmineral public lands within said State, to be selected and located in legal subdivisions, as provided in this act, are hereby granted to said State for the purpose of erecting legislative, executive, and judicial public buildings in the same, and for the payment of the bonds heretofore or hereafter issued therefor.

SEC. 30. That the lands granted to the Territory of Arizona by the act of February 18, 1881, entitled "An act to grant lands to Dakota, Montana, Arizona, Idaho, and Wyoming for university purposes," are hereby vested in the proposed State to the extent of the full quantity of 75 sections, and any portion of said lands that may not have been selected by said Territory of Arizona may be selected by the said State. In addition to the foregoing, and in addition to all lands heretofore granted for such purpose, there shall be, and hereby is, granted to said State, to take effect when the same is admitted to the Union, 300 sections of land, to be selected from the public domain within said State in the same manner as provided in this act, and the proceeds of all such lands shall constitute a permanent fund, to be safely invested and held by said State, and the income thereof be used exclusively for university purposes. The schools, colleges, and universities provided for in this act shall forever remain under the exclusive control of the said State, and no part of the proceeds arising from the sale or disposal of any lands herein granted for educational purposes shall be used for the support of any sectarian or denominational school, college, or university.

SEC. 31. That nothing in this act shall be so construed, except where the same is so specifically stated, as to repeal any grant of land heretofore made by any act of Congress to either of said Territories, but such grants are hereby ratified and confirmed in and to said State, and all of the land that may not, at the time of the admission of said State into the Union, have been selected and segregated from the public domain, may be so selected and segregated in the manner provided in this act.

SEC. 32. That 5 per cent of the proceeds of the sales of public lands lying within said States which shall be sold by the United States subsequent to the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said State to be used as a permanent fund, the interest of which only shall be expended for the support of the common schools within said State. And there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000,000 for the use and benefit of the common schools of said State. Said appropriation shall be paid by the Treasurer of the United States at such time and to such person or persons as may be authorized by said State to receive the same under laws to be enacted by said State, and until said State shall enact such laws said appropriation shall not be paid. Said appropriation of $5,000,000 shall be held inviolable and invested by said State, in trust, for the use and benefit of said schools.

SEC. 33. That all lands herein granted for educational purposes may be appraised and disposed of only at public sale, the proceeds to constitute a permanent school fund, the income from which only shall be expended in the support of said schools. But said lands may, under such regulations as the legislature shall prescribe, be leased for periods of not more than ten years, and such common school land shall not be subject to preemption, homestead entry, or any other entry under the land laws of the United States, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, but shall be reserved for school purposes only.

SEC. 34. That in lieu of the grant of land for purposes of internal improvement made to new States by the eighth section of the act of September 4, 1841, which section is hereby repealed as to the proposed State, and in lieu of any claim or demand by the said State under the act of September 28, 1850, and section 2479 of the Revised Statutes, making a grant of swamp and overflowed lands to certain States, which grant it is hereby declared is not extended to the said State, and in lieu of any grant of saline lands to said State, save as heretofore made, the following grants of land from public lands of the United States within said State are hereby made, to wit:

For the establishment and maintenance and support of insane asylums in the said State, 200,000 acres; for penitentiaries, 200,000 acres; for schools for the deaf, dumb, and the blind, 200,000 acres; for miners' hospitals for disabled miners, 100,000 acres; for normal schools, 200,000 acres; for State charitable, penal, and reformatory institutions, 200,000 acres; for agricultural and mechanical colleges, 300,000 acres: Provided, That the two national appropriations heretofore annually paid to the two agricultural and mechanical colleges of said Territories, respectively, shall, until the further order of Congress, continue to be paid to said State for the use of said respective institutions; for schools of mines, 200,000 acres; for military institutes, 200,000 acres.

SEC. 35. That all lands granted in quantity or as indemnity by this act shall be selected, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, from the unappropriated public lands of the United States within the limits of the said State, by a commission composed of the governor, surveyor-general, and attorney-general of said State; and no fees shall be charged for passing the title to the same or for the preliminary proceedings thereof.

SEC. 36. That all mineral lands shall be exempted from the grants made by this act; but if any portion thereof shall be found by the Department of the Interior to be mineral lands, said State, by the Commission provided for in section 35, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized and empowered to select, in legal subdivisions, an equal quantity of other unappropriated lands in said State in lieu thereof.

SEC. 37. That the said State, when admitted as aforesaid, shall constitute two judicial districts, to be named, respectively, the eastern and western districts of Arizona, the boundaries of said districts to be the same as the boundaries of said Territories, respectively, and the circuit and district court of said districts shall be held, respectively, at Albuquerque and Phoenix for the time being, and the said districts shall, for judicial purposes, until otherwise provided, be attached to the ninth judicial circuit. There shall be appointed for each of said districts one district judge, one United States attorney, and one United States marshal. The judge of each of said districts shall receive a yearly salary the same as other similar judges of the United States, payable as provided for by law, and shall reside in the district to which he is appointed. There shall be appointed clerks of said courts, who shall keep their offices at said Albuquerque and Phoenix in said State. The regular terms of said courts shall be held in said districts, at the places aforesaid, on the first Monday in April and the first Monday in November of each year, and one grand jury shall be summoned in each year in each of said circuit and district courts. The circuit and district courts for said districts, and the judges thereof, respectively, shall possess the same powers and jurisdiction and perform the same duties required to be performed by the other circuit and district courts and judges of the United States, and shall be governed by the same laws and regulations. The marshal, district attorney, and clerks of the circuit and district courts of said districts, and all other officers and persons performing duties in the administration of justice therein, shall severally possess the powers and perform the duties lawfully possessed and required to be performed by similar officers in other districts of the United States, and shall, for the services they may perform, receive the fees and compensation now allowed by law to officers performing similar services for the United States in the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, respectively.

SEC. 38. That all cases of appeal or writ of error heretofore prosecuted and now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States upon any record from the supreme court of either of said Territories, or that may hereafter lawfully be prosecuted upon any record from said courts, may be heard and determined by said Supreme Court of the United States. And the mandate of execution or of further proceedings shall be directed by the Supreme Court of the United States to the circuit or district courts, respectively, hereby established within the said State or to the supreme court of such State, as the nature of the case may require. And the circuit, district, and State courts herein named shall, respectively, be the successors of the supreme courts of the said Territories as to all such cases arising within the limits embraced within the jurisdiction of such courts, respectively, with full power to proceed with the same and award mesne or final process therein; and that from all judgments and decrees of the supreme courts of the said Territories mentioned in this act, in any case arising within the limits of the proposed State prior to admission, the parties to such judgment shall have the same right to prosecute appeals and writs of error to the Supreme Court of the United States or to the circuit court of appeals as they shall have had by law prior to the admission of said State into the Union.

SEC. 39. That in respect to all cases, proceedings, and matters now pending in the supreme or district courts of the said Territories at the time of the admission into the Union of the said State, and arising within the limits of such State, whereof the circuit or district courts by this act established might have had jurisdiction under the laws of the United States had such courts existed at the time of the commencement of such cases, the said circuit and district courts, respectively, shall be the successors of said supreme and district courts of said Territories, respectively; and in respect to all other cases, proceedings, and matters pending in the supreme or district courts of the said Territories at the time of the admission of such Territories into the Union, arising within the limits of said State, the courts established by such State shall, respectively, be the successors of said supreme and district Territorial courts; and all the files, records, indictments, and proceedings relating to any such cases shall be transferred to such circuit, district, and State courts, respectively, and the same shall be proceeded with therein in due course of law; but no writ, action, indictment, cause, or proceeding now pending, or that prior to the admission of the State shall be pending, in any Territorial court in said Territories shall abate by the admission of such State into the Union, but the same shall be transferred and proceeded with in the proper United States circuit, district, or State court, as the case may be: Provided, however, That in all civil actions, causes, and proceedings in which the United States is not a party transfers shall not be made to the circuit and district courts of the United States except upon cause shown by written request of one of the parties to such action or proceeding filed in the proper court; and in the absence of such request such cases shall be proceeded with in the proper State courts.

SEC. 40. That the constitutional convention shall by ordinance provide for the election of officers for a full State government, including members of the legislature and two Representatives in Congress, at the time for the election for the ratification or rejection of the constitution, one of which Representatives shall be chosen from a Congressional district comprised of the present Territory of Arizona, to be known as the First Congressional district, and the other from a Congressional district comprised of the remainder of said State, to be known as the Second Congressional district; but the said State government shall remain in abeyance until the State shall be admitted into the Union as proposed by this act. In case the constitution of said State shall be ratified by a majority of the legal voters of said Territories voting at the election held therefor as hereinbefore provided, but not otherwise, the legislature thereof may assemble at Santa Fe, organize, and elect two Senators of the United States in the manner now prescribed by the laws of the United States; and the governor and secretary of state of the proposed State shall certify the election of the Senators and Representatives in the manner prescribed by law, and when such State is admitted into the Union, as provided in this act, the Senators and Representatives shall be entitled to be admitted to seats in Congress and to all rights and privileges of Senators and Representatives of other States in the Congress of the United States; and the officers of the State government formed in pursuance of said constitution, as provided by the constitutional convention, shall proceed to exercise all the functions of State officers; and all laws of said Territories in force at the time of their admission into the Union shall be in force in the respective portions of said State until changed by the legislature of said State, except as modified or changed by this act or by the constitution of the State; and the laws of the United States shall have the same force and effect within the said States as elsewhere within the United States.

SEC. 41. That the sum of $150,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for defraying all and every kind and character of expense incident to the elections and conventions provided for in this act; that is, the payment of the expenses of registration and holding the election for members of the constitutional convention and the election for the ratification of the constitution, at the same rates that are paid for similar services under the Territorial laws, respectively, and for the payment of the mileage for and salaries of members of the constitutional convention at the same rates that are paid the said Territorial legislatures under national law, and for the payment of all proper and necessary expenses, officers, clerks, and messengers thereof, and printing and other expenses incident thereto: Provided, That any expense incurred in excess of said sum of $150,000 shall be paid by said State. The said money shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and shall be forwarded, to be locally expended in the present Territory of Arizona and in the present Territory of New Mexico, through the respective secretaries of said Territories, as may be necessary and proper, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, in order to carry out the full intent and meaning of this act.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Is the bill still in Committee of the Whole, Mr. President, or is it in the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is in the Senate.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS].

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. OVERMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE], but I transfer that pair to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK], who is absent, and vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 37, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—37.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Alger | Dubois | McCreary | Scott |
| Bacon | Flint | Mallory | Simmons |
| Blackburn | Foraker | Martin | Spooner |
| Bulkeley | Foster | Morgan | Stone |
| Burrows | Frazier | Newlands | Taliaferro |
| Carter | Gallinger | Overman | Teller |
| Clark, Mont. | Gearin | Patterson | Tillman |
| Clay | Hansbrough | Perkins | |
| Culberson | Heyburn | Pettus | |
| Daniel | Latimer | Rayner | |

NAYS—35.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Allee | Cullom | Hopkins | Nixon |
| Allison | Dick | Kean | Penrose |
| Ankeny | Dillingham | Knox | Piles |
| Beveridge | Dolliver | La Follette | Proctor |
| Brandegee | Dryden | Lodge | Smoot |
| Burnham | Fulton | Long | Sutherland |
| Clapp | Gamble | McCumber | Warner |
| Clark, Wyo. | Hale | Millard | Wetmore |
| Crane | Hemenway | Nelson | |

NOT VOTING—17.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Aldrich | Carmack | Gorman | Platt |
| Bailey | Clarke, Ark. | Kittredge | Warren |
| Berry | Depew | McEnery | |
| Burkett | Elkins | McLaurin | |
| Burton | Frye | Money | |

So Mr. BURROWS's amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further amendments, the question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee on the Whole and such amendments as have been amended in the Senate.

The amendments made as in Committee of the Whole were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States."

REGULATION OF RAILROAD RATES.

Mr. TILLMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12987) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The motion was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from South Carolina if it is his purpose to take up the rate bill for consideration to-morrow? It is now the unfinished business.

Mr. TILLMAN. I should prefer not, because we have all been under a strain, and I am especially under a strain, and would like to get a little opportunity to do something else besides attend the sessions of the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. I only desired to know the wishes of the Senator in that regard. In view of his statement, I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day, it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 12, 1906, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 9, 1906.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF TERRITORIAL SUPREME COURT.

John L. Pancoast, of Oklahoma, to be associate justice of the supreme court of the Territory of Oklahoma. (A reappointment, his term expiring May 12, 1906.)

SURVEYOR-GENERAL.

Alpheus P. Hanson, of Wyoming, to be surveyor-general of Wyoming, his term having expired March 1. (Reappointment.)

REGISTERS OF LAND OFFICE.

George B. Robberts, of Oklahoma, to be register of the land office at Mangum, Okla., vice John A. Oliphant, removed.

Andrew J. Ross, of Oklahoma, to be register of the land office at Alva, Okla., vice Albert R. Museller, term expired.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

George D. Orner, of Oklahoma, to be receiver of public moneys at Alva, Okla., vice Willis H. Cofield, whose term will expire April 16.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Col. William Stanton, United States Army, retired, to be placed on the retired list of the Army with the rank of brigadier-general from March 7, 1906.

Lieut. Col. Alexander Rodgers, Fifteenth Cavalry, to be colonel from March 7, 1906, vice Stanton, Sixth Cavalry, retired from active service.

Maj. Francis H. Hardie, Thirteenth Cavalry, to be lieutenant-colonel from March 7, 1906, vice Rodgers, Fifteenth Cavalry, promoted.

Capt. Joseph T. Dickman, Eighth Cavalry, to be major from March 7, 1906, vice Hardie, Thirteenth Cavalry, promoted.

First Lieut. Reginald E. McNally, detailed in Signal Corps, to be captain of cavalry from March 7, 1906, vice Dickman, Eighth Cavalry, promoted.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY.

Col. John W. Bubb, Twelfth Infantry, to be brigadier-general, vice Miller, to be retired from active service.

Lieut. Col. Lorenzo W. Cooke, Twenty-sixth Infantry, to be brigadier-general from March 9, 1906, vice Carr, retired from active service.

Lieut. Col. Joseph M. Califf, Artillery Corps, to be brigadier-general, vice Cooke, to be retired from active service.

Lieut. Col. Henry S. Turrill, deputy surgeon-general, to be brigadier-general, vice Califf, to be retired from active service.

Lieut. Col. Crosby P. Miller, deputy quartermaster-general, to be brigadier-general, vice Turrill, to be retired from active service.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 9, 1906.

PROMOTION IN THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

Second Assistant Engineer Lorenzo Chase Farwell to be a first assistant engineer with the rank of second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from February 21, 1906.

POSTMASTERS.

IOWA.

Arthur E. Curry to be postmaster at Shelby, in the county of Shelby and State of Iowa.

Lauren E. Hulse to be postmaster at Keota, in the county of Keokuk and State of Iowa.

Alfred E. Kincaid to be postmaster at Walnut, in the county of Pottawattamie and State of Iowa.

Ephraim G. Swift to be postmaster at State Center, in the county of Marshall and State of Iowa.

Cornelius Van Zandt to be postmaster at Wilton Junction, in the county of Muscatine and State of Iowa.

NEW YORK.

F. Bronner to be postmaster at Richfield Springs, in the county of Otsego and State of New York.

John Dwyer to be postmaster at Sandy Hill, in the county of Washington and State of New York.

NORTH CAROLINA.

John W. C. Long to be postmaster at Statesville, in the county of Iredell and State of North Carolina.

OHIO.

William S. Cappeller to be postmaster at Mansfield, in the county of Richland and State of Ohio.

Charles E. Hard to be postmaster at Portsmouth, in the county of Scioto and State of Ohio.

John B. Strobel, to be postmaster at Ironton, in the county of Lawrence and State of Ohio.

PENNSYLVANIA.

George D. Bonfoey to be postmaster at Sayre, in the county of Bradford and State of Pennsylvania.

Annie H. Leaf to be postmaster at Fort Washington, in the county of Montgomery and State of Pennsylvania.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, March 9, 1906.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read, corrected, and approved.

ADJOURNMENT OVER.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

CARNEGIE FOUNDATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF TEACHING.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 13538) entitled "An act to incorporate the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching," with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

HENRY HASTINGS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 6385) "An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Hastings," with a Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

THOMAS J. MARTIN.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 9944) "An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Martin," with a Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

JAMES W. CALVERT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following Senate bill passed by the House and returned to the House on the request of the House, of which the Clerk will report the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 143) granting an increase of pension to James W. Calvert.

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the vote be reconsidered by which the House passed the Senate bill, and that the bill lie on the table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Hampshire moves that the vote whereby the House passed the Senate bill be reconsidered, and that the bill lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LITTAUER, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, reported the bill (H. R. 16472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. FITZGERALD reserved all points of order.

Mr. LITTAUER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that twice the usual number of copies of this bill and the accompanying report be printed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks that twice the usual number of copies of the bill and report be printed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. LITTAUER. I am informed that there has been a large demand this morning, which will take up the usual number of copies from the document room.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand the gentleman reports the legislative bill to the House?

Mr. LITTAUER. Yes; that is the bill I am talking about.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To that I have no objection. What I wish to inquire is if anybody has reserved points of order?

Mr. LITTAUER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] has reserved points of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

THE INDIAHOMA UNION SIGNAL.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following privileged report, and ask for its adoption.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution No. 352.

Resolved, That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish to the House the following information, if not incompatible with the public interest:

First. If a newspaper published at Shawnee, Okla., and known as "The Indiahoma Union Signal," has been at any time admitted to the mails as second-class matter; and if so, when and for what length of time the said publication was admitted to the mails as second-class matter.

Second. If said newspaper, The Indiahoma Union Signal, has been excluded and denied admission to the mails as second-class matter; if so, when said newspaper was so denied admission to the mails as second class, and the facts upon which it was decided to exclude said newspaper from the mails as second-class matter; and to furnish to the House the decision and order of the Post-Office Department excluding said newspaper, The Indiahoma Union Signal, from the mails as second-class matter, and also the record in the Post-Office Department upon which such decision is based.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, I think the report ought to be read.

The SPEAKER. It will be read in the time of the gentleman from Indiana.

The Clerk read as follows:

Report on House resolution No. 352.

The Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads has had under consideration House Resolution No. 352, seeking to direct the Postmaster-General to furnish the House of Representatives certain information with respect to the admission to the mail at second-class rates of the publication entitled, "The Indiahoma Union Signal," published at Shawnee, Okla.

The conditions upon which a publication shall be admitted to the second class under the act of March 3, 1879, and regulations of the Department in obedience to that statute, are as follows:

"First. It must regularly be issued at stated intervals, as frequently as four times a year, and bear a date of issue, and be numbered consecutively.

"Second. It must be issued from a known office of publication.

"Third. It must be formed of printed paper sheets, without board, cloth, leather, or other substantial binding, such as distinguish printed books for preservation from periodical publications.

"Fourth. It must be originated and published for the dissemination of information of a public character, or devoted to literature, the sciences, arts, or some special industry, and having a legitimate list of subscribers: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as to admit to the second-class rate regular publications designed primarily for advertising purposes, or for free circulation, or for circulation at nominal rates."

This statute, as well as the practice of the Department in passing upon the many problems relative to the admission of publications to the second-class privilege, has been construed and upheld by the courts.

To establish a precedent of calling upon the Postmaster-General to furnish the House with a report upon each individual case which grows out of the execution of this statute would very greatly enlarge the work of the Department and burden the records of Congress without serving any real advantage to the service. If the information were to be used by some committee of the House in connection with its consideration of some legislation affecting this general subject, or some flagrant abuse were known to have been committed, there would be some reason for requiring the information.

In the judgment of the committee neither one of these conditions exists in respect to the publication mentioned in the resolution, and the adoption of the resolution would only lend to the establishment of a precedent upon which might be predicated numerous other resolutions referring to numerous other instances, no one of which would have in itself sufficient merit to justify a departure from the usual practice in determining the case.

The committee recommends that the resolution lie on the table.

Mr. OVERSTREET. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution do lie on the table. I merely wish to add that this is a unanimous report from the committee.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana, that the resolution do lie on the table.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. OVERSTREET, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ALLOTMENT OF LANDS TO INDIANS.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 11946) to amend section 6 of an act approved February 8, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and the Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes," which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of an act approved February 8, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and the Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes," be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. That at the expiration of twenty-five years or thereafter, if the period has been extended by the President, and when the lands have been conveyed to the Indians by patent in fee, as provided in section 5 of this act, then each and every allottee shall have the benefit of and be subject to the laws, both civil and criminal, of the State or Territory in which they may reside; and no Territory shall pass or enforce any law denying any such Indian within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law. And every Indian born within the territorial limits of the United States to whom allotments shall have been made and who has received a patent in fee simple under the provisions of this act, or under any law or treaty, and every Indian born within the territorial limits of the United States who has voluntarily taken up within said limits his residence, separate and apart from any tribe of Indians therein, and has adopted the habits of civilized life, is hereby declared to be a citizen of the United States, and is entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of such citizens, whether said Indian has been or not, by birth or otherwise, a member of any tribe of Indians within the territorial limits of the United States without in any manner impairing or otherwise affecting the right of any such Indian to tribal or other property: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, and he is hereby authorized, whenever he shall be satisfied that any Indian allottee is competent and capable of managing his or her affairs, at any time cause to be issued to such allottee a patent in fee simple, and thereafter all restrictions as to sale, incumbrance, or taxation of said land shall be removed."

With the following amendments:

Page 1, line 6, strike out "twenty-five years or."

Page 2, line 1, strike out "thereafter, if the period has been extended by the President."

Page 2, line 2, before the word "and" insert "the trust period."

At the end of the bill add: "Provided further, That until the issuance of fee simple patents all allottees to whom trust patents shall hereafter be issued shall be subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from South Dakota if the Committee on Indian Affairs has reported this bill; and if not, what committee did it come from?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that the Committee on Indian Affairs has made a unanimous report on this bill, and it has the favorable report of the Department. It provides, first, to change the present Indian allotment law, so that an Indian when he takes an allotment does not become a citizen until he gets a fee simple patent. It also provides that the Secretary of the Interior may grant a fee simple patent when, after investigation, he becomes satisfied that the Indian has reached such a state of advancement and civilization that he is capable of managing his own affairs, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] will recall that yesterday this matter was discussed in explanation of why there were so many of these individual cases in the Indian appropriation bill. The practice of the committee has been to put in such cases as might be recommended by the Department, and only such cases, and my recollection is that this provision was in one or more appropriation bills and passed the House at the last session, but that it went out in the Senate.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that the present Secretary of the Interior is holding up numerous applications for patents at the present time and is not issuing them, no demands having been made, and the allottees are entitled to them, and does he not think this might result in indefinitely preventing these people from becoming citizens of the State in which they live if the bill is passed?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I think not, Mr. Speaker; and as I indicated to the gentleman yesterday, I think the original allotment law did not contemplate that citizenship would go with the mere allotment of land. Of course this bill will not affect the status of any Indian allottee who has taken an allotment prior to this time.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The gentleman will admit it affects his citizenship. He can not become a citizen until the Secretary of the Interior will permit him to become a citizen by issuing to him a patent.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It does not affect the status as to citizenship of Indians who have taken allotments previous to the time when this becomes a law.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then what reason have you that this should become a law?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. For this reason: Take it in my State, for instance, the Indians that have not yet received allotments and to whom allotments are now being made are the Indians in the remote portions and reservations that are commonly known as "blanket Indians," and they do not possess one single qualification entitling them to citizenship, and yet it is desirable that the lands be allotted to them. If citizenship goes with allotment, then I do not think there will be any allotment to any such Indians in the future.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would like to make an inquiry. This bill, if I understand it correctly, makes two changes in the present law. First, it gives to the Secretary of the Interior power to issue patents, regardless of the twenty-five-year restriction, whenever he deems it proper.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes, sir.

Mr. FITZGERALD. And, secondly, it changes the law so that the mere allotment of land to an Indian does not confer citizenship upon him.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It leaves him subject only to the jurisdiction of the United States until he gets his fee simple patent.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Are those the only two changes?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Those are the only changes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Under the law as it now stands the Secretary of the Interior does not have authority to issue fee simple patents to Indians whom he may conclude are entitled to them?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. That is true.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And if this bill should become a law Congress would still have the power to issue patents in special cases notwithstanding the authority conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Congress would certainly have that power.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I observed in the Indian appropriation bill that was up for consideration yesterday a number of pages of authority granted to the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents to numerous Indians. Those provisions occupied several pages in the bill, and it struck me that this kind of a law ought to be enacted in order to avoid the necessity of Congressional action in relation to these several cases. I suppose the recommendation of the Committee on Indian Affairs is guided almost entirely by the recommendations of the Interior Department?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Entirely so; and all such provisions as appear in the Indian appropriation bill might go out on a point of order. Now I yield to the gentleman from Wyoming.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I just came into the House and did not hear the discussion on the bill. As I understand it, at the present time all Indian patents are issued with a nonalienation clause, and that for the time within which the lands are not alienable the Indians, under this bill, would not become citizens.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Not Indians who may take allotments after the passage of this act. It does not affect the status of any Indian who has taken an allotment when it has been approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. MONDELL. However, it will give the Secretary of the Interior power to withhold indefinitely final patents in fee simple and enable him to deprive them of citizenship.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Not at all. Mr. Speaker, because of the absence of this change in the law they can not obtain a fee simple patent until the expiration of twenty-five years and unless Congress by special act grants them that privilege. The practice has been that in such cases we have granted the privilege on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. MONDELL. Under existing law, Mr. Speaker, the Indian becomes a citizen, as interpreted by the court, when he receives his allotment. I believe I am correct in that statement.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. That is the holding in the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Heff.

Mr. MONDELL. Now, under this legislation the Indian remains the ward of the Government for twenty-five years after he takes his allotment, unless in the meantime the Secretary of the Interior sees fit to make him a citizen by granting him a patent in fee simple.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Except that Congress may grant that privilege if it sees fit.

Mr. CURTIS. And, further, the agreement might provide that the title should become absolute or a fee simple title should pass, say, in ten years.

Mr. MONDELL. Yes; but——

Mr. CURTIS. The main advantage of this bill is that under existing law the Supreme Court has held that after a patent has issued (the court said the word "patent" was not happily chosen to express the thought which, it is clear, all parts of the section being considered, Congress intended to express), notwithstanding the Indian does not secure a title in fee for twenty-five years, he becomes a citizen of the United States, and that the State courts have full jurisdiction over him, but not over his property. They can not assess and tax the lands, nor can a State enact a law which will prevent the Government, at the time agreed, conveying the allottee the land in fee. Now, this bill, if enacted, will leave him under the control of the Government until he secures a patent conveying the fee, whether he gets it under an agreement or whether it is issued to him under the law by the Secretary of the Interior. The Supreme Court held that the Indians to whom allotments were made under the act of 1887 were still wards of the nation, in a condition of pupilage or dependency.

Mr. MONDELL. In other words, Mr. Speaker, this legislation retains the Indian in his condition as a ward of the nation without rights of citizenship for twenty-five years after he receives his allotment. Whereas under present conditions he becomes a citizen upon receiving his allotment. Is not that a fair statement of the situation?

Mr. CURTIS. That is true, unless, as I said a moment ago, the agreement provides that the fee should pass in a shorter time.

Mr. MONDELL. If there is some special provision in a particular piece of legislation. Generally this puts off for twenty-five years the time in which an Indian may become a citizen of the United States.

Mr. CURTIS. Yes, sir—that is, by the mere taking of an allotment.

Mr. MONDELL. I understand.

Mr. CURTIS. He may become a citizen of the United States any minute he desires by leaving the reservation and taking up a residence apart from any tribe of Indians and adopting the habits of civilized life.

Mr. MONDELL. Under this law, however, if he does accept an allotment—and of course every Indian residing on a reservation will take an allotment, or ought to do so—he can not become a citizen within twenty-five years unless the Secretary of the Interior in the meantime shall issue him a patent in fee simple.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, let me say to the gentleman he does not become a citizen on taking an allotment until it is approved by the Secretary of the Interior. So the Secretary of the Interior now has it within his power to withhold citizenship; yet the Indian may take an allotment.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, is a point of order pending?

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Speaker, I reserved the point of order against the bill.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Montana for a question.

Mr. DIXON of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE] if the purpose of the bill is not to prevent the blanket Indians by wholesale becoming citizens by allotment, and still allow the intelligent Indians on application to become citizens by allotment?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. That is the purpose of the law, and, further, to protect the Indians from the sale of liquor.

Mr. CURTIS. It is a very great improvement over existing law.

Mr. DIXON of Montana. I thoroughly concur.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It is in accordance, in my opinion, with what the original allotment law contemplated, and what was considered to be the law until the decision of the Supreme Court last April held otherwise.

Mr. DIXON of Montana. I know a case where the reservation assumed to be open where, under the decision of the Supreme Court, there is no way on earth to prevent the wholesale sale of whisky to those allotted Indians. Under this bill it will stop the sale of it to the blanket Indians.

Mr. FINLEY. Where are the Indians located who will be affected by this bill?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mostly in the reservations of the country, if not entirely in the reservations.

Mr. FINLEY. Within all the States and Territories? What Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The South Dakota Indians probably more than any others. I understand the application of the present law has been held not to apply to Territories.

Mr. FINLEY. Will this bill apply to Indians in the Indian Territory?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I think it would; yes, sir; though I am not sure that I am familiar with the general allotment law as to whether it applies to Indians within the Indian Territory or not.

Mr. FINLEY. In the Indian Territory?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I have said I thought it would, but that I am uncertain.

Mr. FINLEY. Then to that extent it would affect the Indian Territory Indians, would it not?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It would affect no Indian who had taken his allotment.

Mr. FINLEY. To what extent have the Indians in the Indian Territory not taken allotments?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I will yield to the gentleman from Kansas, who is more familiar with that than I am.

Mr. CURTIS. So far as the Indian Territory is concerned, all the Indians have been made citizens of the United States, and they are citizens now. The allotments have all been made to the Seminoles; nearly all to the Creeks. They are being made to the Chickasaws, the Choctaws, and the Cherokees.

Mr. FINLEY. How many Indians in the Indian Territory have received their allotment?

Mr. CURTIS. That would be very hard to say. There are about 4,000 allotments yet to be made to the Choctaws and Chickasaws, but the patents have not been delivered to those who have been allotted in those two tribes; nearly 7,000 patents have been delivered to members of the Cherokee tribe; nearly all patents have been delivered to the members of the Creek tribe, and allotments are complete among the Seminole tribe.

Mr. FINLEY. Would not the passage of this bill have the effect of delaying it?

Mr. CURTIS. It would not have that effect in the Indian Territory, because they were not included in the act of 1887; and the Government has made special agreements with the five tribes in the Indian Territory, and this law would in no way affect them.

Mr. FINLEY. I understood the gentleman from South Dakota to say a moment ago that it would apply to the Indians in the Indian Territory.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I stated I did not know, and I yielded to the gentleman from Kansas, who did.

Mr. CURTIS. This law never applied to the Indian Territory.

Mr. FINLEY. Then I understand it does not apply to the Indians in the Indian Territory?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It seems not.

Mr. KEIFER. I wish to ask the gentleman a question or two.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to know what there is in the bill that he has prepared that excludes it from general operation upon the Indian tribes in the Indian Territory.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The gentleman from Kansas has just explained, I thought, that particular point.

Mr. KEIFER. A general law is likely to apply generally. Is there any reservation in this bill?

Mr. CURTIS. Not in this bill; this is simply an amendment to section 6 of the act of 1887. The act of 1887 excludes the Indians of the Indian Territory. Now, there is nothing in this bill bringing them within its terms. Therefore the two acts would be construed together, and under the rules of law it would be held that the original act not applying to the Indians in the Indian Territory, this act amending it would not apply to them. Now we have special agreements with the five tribes, under which allotments are being made to them. We have a bill pending, which will go to conference within a day or two, providing for final settlement of all their affairs. We have special provisions in the various agreements in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors which have not been put in other agreements with Indians in the United States, and they have always been dealt with separately and distinctly. The agreements provide the conditions under which the deeds or patents shall be issued, which shall be subject to alienation and when they may be alienated; that homesteads shall not be disposed of for certain periods. As this bill only affects Indians with whom agreements are hereafter to be made, it can not under any circumstances apply to the members of the Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. MONDELL. I fail to find any feature in your bill, from a hasty examination of it, that limits its provisions——

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Read the first line of the bill——

Mr. MONDELL (continuing). To future agreements with Indians.

Mr. CURTIS. I have heard the bill read, and, as I understand it, it only applies to agreements hereafter to be made.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It only amends section 6 of the act of 1887.

Mr. KEIFER. The gentleman from Kansas makes a clear statement as to the existing law as to how it would apply, but the general rule is——

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that we can not hear.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KEIFER. Not for any particular time. I was going to say to the gentleman from Kansas that the general rule is that a general law will repeal or supersede another general law unless there is some reservation against it, and it looks to me as though now, to avoid confusion, you better put some reservation in this bill if there is none there now.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Let me state to the gentleman from Ohio that we have this proviso on the bill:

Provided further, That until the issuance of fee-simple patents all allottees to whom trust patents shall hereafter be issued shall be subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States.

Now, we certainly can not legislate to change the status of any citizen whose status has been fixed, and the Supreme Court in the Heff case state that we have not that right without the consent of the citizen to be affected and the consent of the State within which he resides.

Mr. KEIFER. I have no objecion to that statement, but it does not cover the objection. It applies only to conditions that are already fixed; but there are cases that are to come, of applications to be made, allotments to be made in the future, and this may embarrass conditions existing in the Indian Territory; and no matter whether there is a reservation in the act of 1887 or not, there is no reservation in this, and that is what I suggest—that the gentleman put in such a reservation. I am not opposing the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. A very few words would cover it, simply providing that the provisions of this act shall not extend to the Indians in the Indian Territory.

Mr. KEIFER. I suggest that had better be put in, so as to avoid any confusion.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I think the gentleman from Ohio entirely misunderstands this bill. The act of 1887—the general allotment act—which is known as the "Dawes Act," authorized the President to allot lands to Indians, excepting from the operations of the act the lands of the Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. KEIFER. That has been stated over and over again; but this bill does not except from that, and that is the trouble. The gentleman comes in without having heard the discussion——

Mr. FITZGERALD. If the gentleman will wait a moment, he will find out that I not only have heard the discussion, but that I understand this, which he does not.

Mr. KEIFER. That is the gentleman's ipse dixit about it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. This bill which is now offered amends one section of the general allotment act. Does the gentleman contend that one section of that act, by being amended, repeals the reservation contained in the first part?

Mr. KEIFER. Certainly not. It does not affect that so far as it relates to the original act; but it does take the place, probably, of the act and gives a general application.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] for the purpose of suggesting an amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I suggest the following amendment:

Provided further, That the provisions of this act shall not extend to the Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. LACEY. In the Indian Territory.

Mr. CURTIS. In the Indian Territory.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. FINLEY. One moment. I understood the gentleman from South Dakota to say as to these blanket Indians that parties could go in under the laws of the United States and sell them intoxicating liquors. Is that true?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Under the decision in the Heff case, if liquor is sold to an Indian and the Indian happens to be an allottee, the person selling the liquor to him can not be prosecuted under the laws of the United States which prohibit the sale of liquor to the Indians.

Mr. FINLEY. To what extent will this bill cut off the present or prospective right of suffrage from the blanket Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I can only answer that question by guessing at the number of Indians who have not taken their allotments, and I have endeavored to get that information.

Mr. FINLEY. Will it cut off the right of suffrage from any of the blanket Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes; I think it will.

Mr. CURTIS. None who have it now.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It will not affect any who now enjoy that privilege.

Mr. FINLEY. But it will prevent the extension of the privilege to blanket Indians in the future until such time as they receive their patents.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. FINLEY. And the gentleman is of the opinion that the blanket Indians as a rule are unfit for the exercise of suffrage?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I most certainly am of that opinion.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. In what respect will it prevent the sale of whisky on the reservations to these Indians?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I do not know that it will have any particular effect, because if liquor is sold now on the reservations it is a violation of the law.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I would like to ask the gentleman if he can not frame an amendment that would protect them from being sold whisky when they are at the Capitol. [Laughter.]

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I do not think they have any right to sell liquor here or anywhere else to the Indians. I will yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. STEENERSON. I understand the object of this bill is to apply to those Indians who hereafter, after the passage of this proposed act, shall be allotted lands in severalty?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. STEENERSON. That the mere allotment of lands to such Indians in severalty shall not operate to make them citizens within the meaning of the liquor law?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. That is right.

Mr. STEENERSON. It can not affect those who already enjoy the high privilege of purchasing liquor?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Certainly not.

Mr. STEENERSON. I understand further that in the proviso to this bill it is provided for granting lands in fee without any restriction; that that provision is not limited. That applies to all Indians anywhere that have allotments?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. It does.

Mr. STEENERSON. And is operative whether allotment has already been made or will be made in the future?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Yes. Now I will yield to the gentleman from Wyoming.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from South Dakota in what manner this bill affects the status of Indians to whom allotments have been made at this time and who have heretofore enjoyed the privileges of citizenship?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I will answer the gentleman's question by stating that it does not affect such Indians any more than it affects the Members of this House so far as the question of citizenship is concerned.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, Mr. Speaker, that is a pretty strong statement. The Indian to whom allotment has been made has heretofore been held to be a citizen and granted the right to vote in certain localities. I do not understand that he has been allowed that privilege in all of the States. That privilege has not been exercised in the past by reason of any legislation clearly denominating him a citizen, as I understand it, but by interpretation. Now, we provide in this statute that during the trust period, which is twenty-five years, the Indian may not exercise the rights of citizenship and is not subject to the laws of the State or Territory in which he resides.

The gentleman from South Dakota is a lawyer, I believe, and I am not, but in my mind there is some question—and I want to know if that matter has been carefully considered—as to whether by any possibility this statute could affect the status of Indians who have heretofore been considered, by reason of being an allottee, entitled to the rights of citizenship.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. That question has been carefully considered. I think the gentleman is confused in his mind by the belief that because an Indian has the right to vote within a State that therefore he is a citizen; but a man may be a citizen of a State and not be a voter.

Mr. MONDELL. I am not confused on that point. It is true, however, that many Indians have been considered citizens, some of whom have exercised the right of franchise and some of whom have not. I simply want to be satisfied that this legislation would not affect the status of these men who have heretofore been exercising the rights of citizenship.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I am positive, Mr. Speaker, that it does not.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. This bill does not affect the status of the voter. That is one of the rights of citizenship; that is fixed by the State itself. In Indiana we allow a man to vote who is not a citizen of the United States. An alien who has lived in the State one year, who has declared his intentions to become a citizen, can vote at all elections, but he will not be a citizen for five years; so the question of the voting status of Indians under the law as it exists can not be affected by this bill one way or the other.

Mr. MONDELL. I want to call attention to the fact that Indians have been allowed to vote on the theory that they were citizens and therefore entitled to vote.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is in your own State under the State law?

Mr. MONDELL. By reason of the fact of their being citizens of the United States.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. No Congress could take away a right to vote that is granted in your State by any kind of legislation that it could pass.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, upon the statement of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE] that in the opinion of the members of the committee the bill does not affect the status of Indians to whom allotments have heretofore been made, I have no objection to the legislation.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] I think has not been reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add, at the end of the bill, the following: "And provided further, That the provisions of this act shall not extend to the Five Civilized Tribes."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BURKE of South Dakota, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PUBLIC HEALTH AND MARINE-HOSPITAL SERVICE.

Mr. WANGER. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to report a substitute for the bill (H. R. 14316) to further enlarge the powers and authority of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, and to impose further duties thereon; and I ask unanimous consent that the minority may have until and including Thursday next to file their views.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the minority may have until and including Thursday next to file their views on the bill just reported by him. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

DAM ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 15649) extending the time for the construction of a dam across the Mississippi River, authorized by the act of Congress approved March 12, 1904; which I send to the desk, and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subject to all the other provisions contained in the act of Congress entitled "An act permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River between the counties of Wright and Sherburne, in the State of Minnesota," approved March 12, 1904, the time limitations for the construction and completion of the dam authorized by said act are hereby extended until December 31, 1908.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PRINCE. Is it in order now to call for the regular order?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. PRINCE. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the regular order.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message, in writing, from the President of the United States was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. BARNES, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On March 8, 1906:

H. R. 10697. An act providing for the issuance of patents for lands to Indians under the Moses agreement of July 7, 1883; and

H. R. 14344. An act for the relief of Col. Medad C. Martin.

On March 9, 1906:

H. R. 7961. An act for the relief of G. F. Tarbell.

COMPACT BETWEEN NEW JERSEY AND DELAWARE RESPECTING DELAWARE RIVER AND BAY.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In compliance with the request of the governor of the State of New Jersey I transmit herewith, for the action of the Congress thereon, a certified copy of an act of the legislature of the State of New Jersey, entitled "An act to ratify and confirm a compact or agreement between the States of New Jersey and Delaware respecting the Delaware River and Bay, and to authorize the execution thereof."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 9, 1906.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bills on the Private Calendar in order for to-day may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that bills under the order for to-day may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ALFRED W. MORLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15059) granting an increase of pension to Alfred W. Morley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alfred W. Morley, late of Company F, Seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY C. CARR.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14855) granting an increase of pension to Henry C. Carr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry C. Carr, late musician, Third Regiment New York Volunteer Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, after the word "Volunteer," insert the word "Light."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM C. HEARNE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14874) granting an increase of pension to William C. Hearne.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William C. Hearne, late of Company E, Twenty-first Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ABRAM W. DAVENPORT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6110) granting an increase of pension to Abram W. Davenport.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abram W. Davenport, late of Company H, Tenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANCIS M. SIMPSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14131) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Simpson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Francis M. Simpson, late of Company G, Fourth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "Volunteer," insert the words "State Militia."

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. PITCHFORD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7951) granting an increase of pension to William H. Pitchford.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William H. Pitchford, late of Company H, Twelfth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $75 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

NATHAN PARISH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9126) granting an increase of pension to Nathan Parish.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nathan Parish, late of Company K, Seventy-sixth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARION L. HOLVENSTOT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8137) granting an increase of pension to Nina Holvenstot.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nina Holvenstot, dependent child of William E. Holvenstot, late of Company B, Third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Nina" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Marion L."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Marion L. Holvenstot."

CARRIE A. CONLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9924) granting a pension to Carrie A. Conley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Carrie A. Conley, widow of Isaiah Conley, late captain Company G, One hundred and first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 9 strike out the word "twenty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

In same line, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Carrie A. Conley."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Carrie A. Conley."

JOHN K. MILLER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8062) granting an increase of pension to John K. Miller.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John K. Miller, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

NATHANIEL H. RONE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14840) granting an increase of pension Nathaniel H. Rone.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nathaniel H. Rone, late of Company I, Sixth Regiment Missouri State Militia Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the word "Volunteers" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Volunteer Cavalry."

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY H. FORMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13803) granting a pension to Henry H. Foreman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry H. Foreman, late of Company E, First Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Foreman" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Forman."

In line 8, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Forman."

MARTIN CALLAHAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4209) granting an increase of pension to Martin Callahan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martin Callahan, late of Company A and captain of Company F, Ninth Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "of Company A and."

In same line, after the word "captain," strike out the word "of."

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HELEN H. HULBERT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2341) granting a pension to Helen H. Hulbert.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Helen H. Hulbert, widow of William Lawrence Hulbert, late captain, major, and lieutenant-colonel, One hundred and seventeenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Lawrence" and insert in lieu thereof the letter "L."
In line 7 strike out the words "major, and lieutenant-colonel" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Company G."
In line 9 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."
In same line, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that she is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Helen H. Hulbert."

MARY E. FIFIELD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2780) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Fifield.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary E. Fifield, widow of Henry L. Fifield, late of Company B, Eleventh Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIAS CLAUNCH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6946) granting an increase of pension to Elias Claunch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elias Claunch, late of Company A, Seventh Regiment Missouri State Militia Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M. JONES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9053) granting an increase of pension to John M. Jones.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John M. Jones, late of Company I, Twentieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

IRA GRABILL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8328) granting an increase of pension to Ira Grabill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ira Grabill, late of Company F, Eighty-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FIRMAN F. KIRK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7515) granting an increase of pension to Firman F. Kirk.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Firman F. Kirk, late private Company C, First Rifles (Thirteenth Regiment) Pennsylvania Reserve Infantry (Forty-second Volunteers), and sergeant Company C, One hundred and ninetieth Regiment Pennsylvania Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "private" and insert in lieu thereof the word "of."
In same line and in line 7 strike out the words "First Rifles (Thirteenth Regiment)," and insert in lieu thereof the words "Thirteenth Regiment."
In line 7, before the word "Infantry," insert the word "Volunteer."
In same line and in line 8 strike out the words "(Forty-second Volunteers)."
In same line strike out the word "sergeant."
In line 9, before the word "Infantry," insert the word "Volunteer."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM SMITH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8316) granting an increase of pension to William Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Smith, late of Company I, One hundred and sixty-second Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HIRAM LONG.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8665) granting an increase of pension to Hiram Long.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Hiram Long, late of Company A, One hundred and twenty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EDMUND CHAPMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10326) granting an increase of pension to Edmund Chapman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edmund Chapman, late of Company A, Ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY L. DAVENPORT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12187) granting an increase of pension to Mary L. Davenport.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary L. Davenport, widow of Simeon J. Davenport, late first lieutenant Company E, Eighth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 9 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS PATTERSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6128) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Patterson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Patterson, late of Company A, Tenth Iowa Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Iowa," insert the word "Regiment."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM BLAIR.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6407) granting an increase of pension to William Blair.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Blair, late of Company D, Eighth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the word "Volunteers" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Volunteer Infantry."

In the same line strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CARNER C. WELCH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8206) granting an increase of pension to Carner C. Welch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Carner C. Welch, late of Company D, Seventy-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC PLACE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13866) granting an increase of pension to Isaac Place.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaac Place, late of Company E, Ninth Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the word "captain."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SABINE VANCUREN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15029) granting an increase of pension to Sabine Van Curen.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sabine Van Curen, late of Company F, Ninety-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "Van Curen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Vancuren."

In same line, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Sabine Vancuren."

ANTHONY EMES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15028) granting an increase of pension to Anthony Emes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Anthony Emes, late of Company K, One hundred and seventy-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Drafted Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

RUTH J. M'CANN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14834) granting an increase of pension to Ruth J. McCann.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ruth J. McCann, widow of Capt. Thomas K. McCann, who was assigned to duty as assistant quartermaster, the Third Brigade, Third Division, Department of West Virginia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "captain."

Strike out all of lines 7 and 8 and insert in lieu thereof the words "late captain and assistant quartermaster, United States Volunteers."

In line 9 strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC N. SEAL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15249) granting an increase of pension to Isaac N. Seal.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaac N. Seal, late of Company F, Fifty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the word "Cavalry" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Infantry."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SUMNER P. WYMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14369) granting an increase of pension to Sumner P. Wyman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sumner P. Wyman, late of Company B, First Regiment Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "Heavy," insert the word "Volunteer."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GABRIEL Y. PALMER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14337) granting an increase of pension to Gabriel Y. Palmer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Gabriel Y. Palmer, late of Company F, Thirty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 dollars per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ZACUR P. POTT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14143) granting an increase of pension to Zacur P. Pott.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Zacur P. Pott, late of Company M, First Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, after the word "Cavalry," insert the word "and captain Company C, One hundred and ninety-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LUCINDA GAIN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12884) granting a pension to Lucinda Gain.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lucinda Gain, widow of Harrison Gain, late private Company E, Seventh Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "private" and insert in lieu thereof the word "of."

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

In line 9, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that she is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Lucinda Gain."

JOSIAH F. ALLEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13198) granting an increase of pension to Josiah F. Allen.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Josiah F. Allen, late of Company I, One hundred and twelfth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty" and insert the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ABRAM J. BOZARTH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13597) granting an increase of pension to Abram J. Bozarth.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abram J. Bozarth, late captain Company K, Twenty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLOTTE A. M'CORMICK.

The next penson business was the bill (H. R. 12099) granting a pension to Charlotte A. McCormick.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charlotte A. McCormick, widow of the late Maj. Gen. Charles C. McCormick, and pay her a pension at the rate of $80 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "the late Major-General."

In line 7, before the word "and," insert the words "late colonel Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry."

In line 8 strike out the word "eighty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN HENDERSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11563) granting an increase of pension to John Henderson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Henderson, late of Company E, Two hundred and sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AUGUSTUS D. KING.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13822) granting an increase of pension to Augustus D. King.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Augustus D. King, late of Company A, Twenty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $100 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the words "one hundred" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN R. MABEE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13170) granting an increase of pension to John R. Mabee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John R. Mabee, late of Company B, Twenty-eighth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty-six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. WARD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10622) granting an increase of pension to J. H. Ward.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of J. H. Ward, late of First Regiment Potomac Home Brigade Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $16 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "J." and insert in lieu thereof the word "James."

In same line, before the word "First," insert the words "Company H."

In line 8 strike out the word "sixteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to James H. Ward."

BENJAMIN BOTNER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12509) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Botner.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Benjamin Botner, late of Company A, Seventh Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS H. WILSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11484) granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. Wilson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas H. Wilson, late of Company C, Fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Fifth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Thirty-fourth."

In line 7 strike out the word "Reserve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SALLIE W. MASON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12182) granting a pension to Sallie W. Mason.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sallie W. Mason, widow of Daniel W. Mason, late of Company, Third Regiment Arkansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "late," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant and adjutant."

In line 7 strike out the word "Company."

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "seventeen."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT R. MATTHEWS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11168) granting an increase of pension to Robert R. Mathews.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Robert R. Mathews, late of Company G, One hundred and thirtieth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and Company M, Twenty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Mathews" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Matthews."

In lines 8 and 9 strike out the words "Twenty-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Third Provisional Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry."

In line 9 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Robert R. Matthews."

MATILDA ROCKWELL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10923) granting an increase of pension to Matilda Rockwell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Matilda Rockwell, widow of Henry S. Rockwell, late of Company E, Nineteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPHINE HOORNBECK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11509) granting an increase of pension to Josephine Hoornbeck.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Josephine Hoornbeck, widow of Robert Hoornbeck, late of Company K, Fifty-sixth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twelve" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SARAH F. GALBRAITH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10293) granting an increase of pension to Sarah F. Galbraith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah F. Galbraith, widow of Robert Galbraith, late colonel of the Fifth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the words "colonel of the" and insert in lieu thereof the word "lieutenant-colonel."

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LUCIUS A. WEST.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10490) granting an increase of pension to Lucius A. West.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lucius A. West, late of Company M, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSIAH H. SEABOLD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11409) granting an increase of pension to Josiah H. Seabold.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Josiah H. Seabold, late of Company F, Fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LEWIS LOWRY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11690) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Lowry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lewis Lowry, late of Company K, First Regiment Nebraska Volunteer Infantry, and First Regiment Nebraska Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the word "captain."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out the words "Infantry, and First Regiment Nebraska Volunteer."

In line 9 strike out the word "thirty-six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MINNIE IRWIN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12194) granting an increase of pension to Minnie Irwin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Minnie Irwin, widow of Edward Irwin, late of Company D, Thirty-eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "and," insert the words "and Company A, Twenty-third Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps."

In line 8 strike out the word "twelve" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight."

In same line and in line 9 strike out the words "in lieu of that she is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Minnie Irwin."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EMILIE SCHELDT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6058) granting an increase of pension to Emilie Scheldt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Emilie Scheldt, widow of Julius Scheldt, late lieutenant of Company E, Thirty-seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "lieutenant," insert the word "second."

In same line, after the word "lieutenant," strike out the word "of."

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifteen."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. HANNAH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6888) granting an increase of pension to John W. Hannah.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John W. Hannah, late of Company A, One hundred and twenty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," insert the words "Company E, Sixteenth Regiment, and captain."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. NORTRIP.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 552) granting an increase of pension to William H. Nortrip.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William H. Nortrip, late of Company I, Ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID B. OTT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3456) granting an increase of pension to David B. Ott.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David B. Ott, late of Company I, Thirty-first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH RUPERT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2267) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Rupert.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph Rupert, late of Company H, Twelfth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Twelfth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Sixteenth."

In line 7 strike out the words "United States" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Illinois."

In the same line strike out the word "Infantry" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Cavalry."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WARREN B. TOMPKINS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11716) granting an increase of pension to Warren B. Tompkins.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Warren B. Tompkins, late of Company E, Seventy-fifth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES H. FRIEND.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1027) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Friend.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles H. Friend, late of Company F, Second Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MORRIS B. DRAKE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1468) granting an increase of pension to Morris B. Drake.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Morris B. Drake, late of Company K, Twenty-third Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES HULL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2396) granting an increase of pension to Charles Hull.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles Hull, late of Company G, Fourteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN B. CRAIG.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12578) granting an increase of pension to John B. Craig.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John B. Craig, late of Company H, Sixth Regiment Missouri State Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7, after the word "Militia," insert the words "Volunteer Cavalry."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES F. RUNNELS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12498) granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Runnels.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles F. Runnels, late of Company, First Regiment Maine Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "Company," insert the letter "M."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY G. BOLLINGER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5917) granting an increase of pension to Henry G. Bollinger.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry G. Bollinger, late captain of Camden County, Mo., Militia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Camden," strike out the word "of."
In line 7, before the word "Militia," insert the word "Volunteer."
In same line strike out the words "Volunteer Infantry."
In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS F. UNDERWOOD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3281) granting an increase of pension to Thomas F. Underwood.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas F. Underwood, late of Company D and Company L, Second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "and," insert the words "second lieutenant."
In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN L. DECKER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14761) granting an increase of pension to John L. Decker.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John L. Decker, late of Company K, Third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "K" and insert in lieu thereof the letter "A."
In same line strike out the word "Third" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Fifty-fourth."
In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID DAVIS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6142) granting an increase of pension to David Davis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David Davis, late of Company C, Thirtieth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Thirtieth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Thirteenth."
In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD V. MILES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12541) granting an increase of pension to Edward V. Miles.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edward V. Miles, late of Company F, Second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE L. JANNEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4691) granting an increase of pension to George L. Janney.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George L. Janney, late of Company B, Thirty-sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MILO G. GIBSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3197) granting an increase of pension to Milo G. Gibson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Milo G. Gibson, late of Company C, One hundred and second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. GILDERSLEEVE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2984) granting an increase of pension to William H. Gildersleeve.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William H. Gildersleeve, late captain Company E, Seventh Regiment Wisconsin Veteran Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the word "Veteran."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DORA A. WEATHERSBY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3541) granting a pension to Dora Weathersby.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Dora Weathersby, widow of Howard Lee Weathersby, late of Company H, First Regiment Mississippi Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Insert the initial "A." after "Dora" in the claimant's Christian name in the title and the body of the bill.

In line 6 change the Christian name "Lee" to the initial "L.;" and in the same line, after "late," insert "musician."

In line 7 strike out "of Company H."

In line 8 strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve."

Add to the end of the bill "and $2 per month additional on account of each of the minor children of said Howard L. Weathersby until they reach the age of 16 years."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES B. BARRY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4598) granting an increase of pension to James B. Barry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James B. Barry, late of Capt. Eli Chandler's Company, First Regiment Texas Rangers, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out "Capt. Eli Chandler's;" and in the same line, after "Company," insert "K."

In line 7 strike out "Rangers;" and in the same line, after "Texas," insert "Mounted Volunteers."

In line 8 strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN G. DAVIS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5725) granting an increase of pension to John G. Davis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John G. Davis, late of Company C, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, Mexican war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "Mexican;" and in the same line, after "war," insert "with Mexico."

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CATE E. COBB.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5726) granting an increase of pension to Cate E. Cobb.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Cate E. Cobb, widow of Gaston D. Cobb, late surgeon of First North Carolina Regiment (Mexican war) Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving under certificate No. 2827.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out "of."

In line 7, after "First," insert "Regiment;" and in the same line strike out "Regiment (Mexican war)."

In line 8, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

In lines 9 and 10 strike out "under certificate No. 2827."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN Q. WARD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8530) granting a pension to Benjamin Q. Ward.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Benjamin Q. Ward, late of Company —, ——— Regiment ——— Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out "—, ——— Regiment ——— Volunteer Infantry" and insert "A, Light Artillery, Santa Fe Battalion, Missouri Mounted Volunteers."

In line 8 strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty."

Add to the end of the bill the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Q. Ward."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH D. HOPPIN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9296) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth D. Hoppin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth D. Hoppin, widow of Curtis B. Hoppin, late major, Fifteenth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $75 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "seventy-five and insert "thirty-five."

Add to the end of the bill the words, "and $2 per month additional on account of each of the minor children of said Curtis B. Hoppin until they reach the age of 16 years."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SILAS H. BALLARD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10450) granting an increase of pension to Silas H. Ballard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Silas H. Ballard, late of Captain Curtis's company A, Raiford's battalion, Alabama Volunteers, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out "A."

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALPHENIS M. BEALL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10562) granting a pension to Alpheuis M. Beall.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alpheuis M. Beall, late of Company F, Florida Volunteer Infantry, Seminole Indian war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Alphenis M. Beall."

In lines 6 and 7 strike out "Company F, Florida Volunteer Infantry, Seminole."

In line 6 change the claimant's Christian name to "Alphenis," and in the same line, after "late of," insert "Captain Snell's independent company, Florida Mounted Volunteers."

In line 7, before the word "Indian," insert "Florida."

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "sixteen," and add to the end of the bill the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS J. CHAMBERS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10785) granting a pension to Thomas J. Chambers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas J. Chambers, late of Company E, First Regiment Washington Territory Volunteers, Indian war of 1855, and to pay him a pension at the rate of $8 a month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "of eighteen hundred and fifty-five."

In line 7, after "Territory," insert "Mounted;" and in the same line, after "Volunteers," insert "Oregon and Washington Territory."

In line 8 strike out "to."

In line 9 strike out "a" and insert "per."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LEVI N. LUNSFORD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13526) granting an increase of pension to Levi N. Lunsford.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Levi N. Lunsford, late of Company H, Second Regiment North Carolina Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH B. BUSBEE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13537) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Busbee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth B. Busbee, widow of Quentin Busbee, late purser of the ship Germantown, naval service of the United States, war with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "of the," and after "Germantown" strike out "naval service of the United States" and insert "United States Navy."

In line 7, before the word "ship," insert "United States."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC N. PERRY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14113) granting an increase of pension to Isaac N. Perry.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaac N. Perry, late of Company E, First Regiment North Carolina Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARQUIS M. DE BURGER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14437) granting an increase of pension to Marquis M. De Burger.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Marquis M. De Burger, late of Company I, First Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

In line 8 strike out "thirty," and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL P. NEWMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14824) granting an increase of pension to Samuel P. Newman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Samuel P. Newman, late of Company G, Sixth Regiment United States Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out "Sixth" and insert "First."

In line 7 strike out "United States Infantry" and insert "South Carolina Volunteer Infantry."

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM WOODS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14823) granting an increase of pension to William Woods.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Woods, late of Company A, Florida Battalion Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out "Battalion Volunteer Infantry," and in the same line, after "Florida," insert "Volunteers."

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. CREAGER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14909) granting a pension to John W. Creager.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John W. Creager, late of Company K, First Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

Add after "and," in line 7, the words "Company G, Twenty-eighth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to John W. Creager."

ALEXANDER M. TAYLOR.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15251) granting an increase of pension to Alexander M. Taylor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alexander M. Taylor, late of Company K, First Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out "K" and insert "E."
In line 7 strike out "Volunteer Infantry," and in the same line, after "United States," insert "Voltigeurs, war with Mexico."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL ALLBRIGHT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15252) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Allbright.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Samuel Allbright, late of Company K, Eleventh Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "Volunteer;" and in the same line, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BALOS C. DEWEES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15253) granting an increase of pension to Balos C. Dewees.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Balos C. Dewees, late of Company E, Eleventh Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "Volunteer;" and in the same line, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

IRWIN O'BRYAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15304) granting an increase of pension to Irwin O'Bryan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Irwin O'Bryan late of Company C, Col. W. C. Young's regiment, Texas Mounted Volunteers, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out "C, Col. W. C. Young's regiment."
In line 6, after "late of," insert "Captain Montague's."
In line 7, before the word "Texas," insert "Third Regiment."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM LUCAS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15385) granting an increase of pension to William Lucas.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Lucas, late of Company F, Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

NANCY N. ALLEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15393) granting an increase of pension to Nancy N. Allen.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nancy N. Allen, widow of Abraham Allen, late of Troops F, H, and I, United States Dragoons, and pay her a pension at the rate of $16 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 change "Troops" to "Troop."
In line 7 strike out "F, H, and," and in the same line, after "Dragoons," insert "Texas and New Mexico Indian war."
In line 8 strike out "sixteen" and insert "ten."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY H. TILLSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15536) granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Tillson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry H. Tillson, late of Company A, First Regiment Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN H. ISOM.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15553) granting an increase of pension to Susan H. Isom.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Susan H. Isom, widow of Lucas D. Isom, late of Company A, Third Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "late," insert "first lieutenant."
In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM VAN KEUREN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13823) granting an increase of pension to William Van Keuren.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Van Keuren, late of Company D, New York Regiment Mounted Rifles, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "D" and insert in lieu thereof the words "M, First Regiment."
In line 7 strike out the word "Regiment" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Volunteer."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HELEN AUGUSTA MASON BOYNTON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13884) granting a pension to Helen Augusta Mason Boynton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Helen Augusta Mason Boynton, widow of Henry V. Boynton, late brigadier-general, United States Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the letter "V," insert the letter "N."
In line 7, after the word "late," insert the words "lieutenant-colonel, Thirty-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and."
In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CATHERINE SUMMERS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14078) granting a pension to Nathaniel Sumners.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nathaniel Sumners, idiotic son of Nathaniel Sumners, late of Company K, Ninth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "Nathaniel Sumners" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Catherine Summers."
In same line strike out the words "idiotic son" and insert in lieu thereof the word "widow."
In same line, before the word "late," strike out the word "Sumners" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Summers."
In line 8 strike out the word "him" and insert in lieu thereof the word "her."
In same line strike out the word "twelve" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."
In line 9, after the word "month," insert the following: "in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Nathaniel Summers, helpless and dependent child of said Nathaniel Summers, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: And provided further, That in the event of the death of Catherine Summers the name of said Nathaniel Summers shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $12 per month from and after the date of death of said Catherine Summers.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Catherine Summers."

WILLIAM A. BLOSSOM.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14454) granting an increase of pension to William A. Blossom.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William A. Blossom, late of Bissell's engineer regiment of the West, Missouri Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "Bissel's engineer regiment" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Company F, Engineers."
In line 7 place parentheses about the words "Missouri Volunteers."
In line 8 strike out the word "thirty-six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES RATTRAY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14878) granting an increase of pension to Charles Rattray.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles Rattray, late of Company I, Fifty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "late," strike out the words "of Company I" and insert in lieu thereof the word "major."
In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-five."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ESTHER M. LOWE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14442) granting an increase of pension to Ester M. Lowe.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ester M. Lowe, widow of Frank E. Lowe, late of Company D, One hundred and twenty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Ester" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Esther."
In line 7 strike out the letter "D" and insert in lieu thereof the words "H, Thirty-second Regiment, and first lieutenant Company A, and adjutant."
In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Esther M. Lowe."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT C. PATE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13341) granting an increase of pension to Robert C. Pate.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Robert C. Pate, late captain Company C, Thirty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ARGYLE Z. BUCK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15622) granting an increase of pension to Argyle Z. Buck.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Argyle Z. Buck, late of Company F, One hundred and tenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty-six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. WISE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15392) granting an increase of pension to John W. Wise.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John W. Wise, late of Company H, Eighth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN L. BLINN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15414) granting an increase of pension to John L. Blinn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John L. Blinn, late of Company A, Ninety-third Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant."
In line 7, before the word "Infantry," insert the word "Volunteer."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN S. MILES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14258) granting an increase of pension to John S. Miles

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John S. Miles, late of Company H, Forty-second Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

PETER C. KRIEGER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14489) granting an increase of pension to Peter Krieger.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Peter Krieger, late of Company D, Forty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "Peter," insert the letter "C."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Peter C. Krieger."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN WILLIAMS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14235) granting an increase of pension to John Williams.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Williams, late of Company H, Fifteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "H" and insert in lieu thereof the words "C, First Battalion."

In line 7, after the word "Infantry," insert the words "and Company H, One hundred and seventy-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN MOULES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10404) granting an increase of pension to John Moules.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Moules, late of Company F, Fifteenth Regiment New York Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "Heavy," insert the word "Volunteer."

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LORENZO D. MASON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12880) granting an increase of pension to Lorenzo D. Mason.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lorenzo D. Mason, late of Company M, Second Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN UNDERWOOD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13723) granting an increase of pension to John Underwood.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Underwood, late of Company A, Second Regiment Volunteer Reserve Corps, and Company I, Eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Second" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Twenty-second."

In line 7 strike out the word "Volunteer" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Veteran."

In same line and line 8 strike out the words "and Company I, Eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT G. SHUEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12122) granting an increase of pension to Robert G. Shuey.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Robert G. Shuey, late of Company H, Twenty-second Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARION W. STARK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11076) granting a pension to Marion W. Starks.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Marion W. Starks, widow of Daniel S. Starks, late a pilot on United States steamboat W. H. Brown, United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "widow," strike out the word "Starks" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Stark."

In same line, before the word "late," strike out the word "Starks" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Stark."

In same line strike out the word "a."

In line 7 strike out the words "on United States steamboat" and insert in lieu thereof the words "U. S. S. Alps and."

In line 8 strike out the word "twelve" and insert in lieu thereof the word "eight."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Marion W. Stark."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL HORN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13336) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Horn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Samuel Horn, late of Company B, Tenth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LUCY A. PENDER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11702) granting an increase of pension to Lucy A. Pender.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lucy A. Pender, widow of Charles H. Pender, late of Company F, First Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LEVI B. NOULTON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11143) granting an increase of pension to Levi B. Noulton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Levi B. Noulton, late of Company K, Fifth Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE HOLDEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12205) granting an increase of pension to George Holden.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George Holden, late of Company D, Forty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Forty-ninth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Forty-seventh."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN WILHELM.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11206) granting an increase of pension to John Wilhelm.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Wilhelm, late of Company I, Forty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY G. KLINK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12992) granting an increase of pension to Henry G. Klink.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry G. Klink, late of Company L, Sixth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of ——— dollars per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8, before the word "dollars," insert the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN T. COOK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15199) granting an increase of pension to John T. Cook.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John T. Cook, late of Company A, One hundred and forty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "Company A" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Captain Coyugham's company."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. HAYTER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15552) granting an increase of pension to George W. Hayter.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George W. Hayter, late second-class fireman, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "second-class fireman" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of the U. S. S. Princeton and Wachusetts."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS E. MYERS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10879) granting an increase of pension to Thomas E. Myres.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas E. Myres, late of Company I, Twenty-second Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Myres" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Myers."

In same line strike out the word "Twenty-second" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Second."

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Thomas E Myers."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM CUMMINGS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12192) granting an increase of pension to William Cummings.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Cummings, late of the United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "United," insert the words "U. S. S. Petrel."

In line 7 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSHUA BARNES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13217) granting a pension to Joshua Barnes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joshua Barnes, late of Engineer Corps, Seventy-first Regiment New York State Militia Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "Corps," insert the word "Company."

In line 7 strike out the word "Volunteers" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Infantry."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE M. APGAR.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11597) granting a pension to George M. Apgar.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George M. Apgar, late of Company D, Eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $25 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "and," insert the words "and Company L, Ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry."

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

In same line, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to George M. Apgar."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH E. BARBER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12241) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth E. Barber.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth E. Barber, widow of Benjamin P. Barber, late of Company D, First Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH J. VINCENT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10252) granting a pension to Joseph J. Vincent.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph J. Vincent, late hospital steward, Twelfth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

In same line, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Vincent."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANKLIN G. MATTERN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8578) granting an increase of pension to Franklin G. Mattern.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Franklin G. Mattern, late of Company D, One hundred and forty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $35 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN D. ATWATERS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7807) granting an increase of pension to John D. Atwater.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John D. Atwater, late of Company E, Ninety-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Atwater" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Atwaters."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to John D. Atwaters."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW LA FORGE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8565) granting an increase of pension to Andrew La Forge.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Andrew La Forge, late captain Company I, Fifteenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committe was read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "captain," insert the words "of Company B and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARQUIS L. JOHNSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8942) granting an increase of pension to Marquis L. Johnson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Marquis L. Johnson, late of Company I, Fifty-first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the word "captain."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ABIGAIL TOWNSEND.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9888) granting a pension to Abigail Townsend.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abigail Townsend, widow of James Townsend, late of the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "United," insert the words "U. S. S. Vermont."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FARRIE M. ALLIS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9093) granting an increase of pension to Farrie M. Allis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Farrie M. Allis, widow of Jerrie P. Allis, late of Company G, One hundred and fourteenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "of Company" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant Companies."

In line 7, after the letter "G," insert the words "and F."

In lines 8 and 9 strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HARIET P. SANDERS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9813) granting a pension to Harriet P. Sanders.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Harriet P. Sanders, widow of Wilbur F. Sanders, late first lieutenant in the Sixty-fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and acting assistant adjutant-general of the staff of Gen. James W. Forsyth, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Harriet" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Hariet."
In line 7 strike out the words "in the" and insert in lieu thereof the words "and adjutant."
In same line, before the word "Ohio," insert the word "Regiment."
In same line strike out the word "and" and all of line 8.
In line 9 strike out the words "W. Forsyth."
In same line strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Hariet P. Sanders."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JONATHAN SHOOK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10019) granting an increase of pension to Jonathan Shook.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jonathan Shook, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment, and Company A, Fifteenth Regiment, Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES W. HENDERSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7609) granting an increase of pension to Charles Henderson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles Henderson, late of Company H, Fifteenth Regiment New York Engineers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Henderson," insert the letter "W."
In the same line, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant."
In line 7, before the word "Engineers," insert the word "Volunteer."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Henderson."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BOTTOL LARSEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8042) granting an increase of pension to Bottol Larsen.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Bottol Larsen, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE C. SACKETT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10300) granting an increase of pension to George C. Sackett.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George C. Sackett, late of Company C, First Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL GREENLEE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3978) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Greenlee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Samuel Greenlee, late of Company A, One hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7, after the word "Infantry," insert the words "and Company I, Sixth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS WOLCOTT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4352) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wolcott.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Wolcott, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN LINES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5403) granting an increase of pension to John Lines.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Lines, late of Company E, Third Regiment New York Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARSHALL U. GAGE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4717) granting a pension to Marshall U. Gage.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Marshall U. Gage, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of —— dollars per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 8, before the word "dollars," insert the word "thirty."
In same line, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."
Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Marshall U. Gage."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN DEARDOURFF.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4766) granting an increase of pension to John Deardourff.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Deardourff, late of Company C, Fiftieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AUGUSTUS JOYEUX.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6465) granting an increase of pension to Augustus Joyeux.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Augustus Joyeux, late of Company E, Seventh Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

A. LOUISA S. M'WHINNIE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4261) granting an increase of pension to Louise S. McWhinnie.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Louise S. McWhinnie, widow of James McWhinnie, late of Company H, Twentieth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of —— dollars per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Louise" and insert in lieu thereof the words "A. Louisa."

In line 8, before the word "dollars," insert the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read "A bill granting a pension to A. Louisa S. McWhinnie."

WILLIAM A. LINCOLN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6775) granting an increase of pension to William A. Lincoln.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William A. Lincoln, late of Company F, First Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant Company D, and captain."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS G. M'LAUGHLIN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3223) granting an increase of pension to Thomas G. McLaughlin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas G. McLaughlin, late of Company B, Thirty-seventh Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DECATUR HARMON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2640) granting a pension to Decatur Harmon.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Decatur Harmon, late of Company K, Eighty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Decatur Harmon."

HANNAH A. SAWYER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2195) granting a pension to Hannah A. Sawyer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Hannah A. Sawyer, widow of Horace A. Sawyer, late of Company H, First Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Hannah A. Sawyer."

JOHN G. WALLACE.

The next pension buisness was the bill (H. R. 1241) granting an increase of pension to John G. Wallace.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John G. Wallace, late of Company C, Sixth Regiment, and of Company E, Twenty-seventh Regiment, and other commands of the Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "Company C, Sixth Regiment."

In line 7 strike out the words "and of."

In same line strike out the words "and other."

In line 8 strike out the words "commands of the."

In line 9 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANKLIN G. HAWKINS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 523) granting an increase of pension to Frank G. Hawkins.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frank G. Hawkins, late of Company G, One hundred and eighty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Frank" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Franklin."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Franklin G. Hawkins."

SUMNER F. HUNNEWELL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 533) granting an increase of pension to Sumner F. Hunnewell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sumner F. Hunnewell, late of Company I, Twenty-fifth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY A. WHEELER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1655) granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Wheeler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry A. Wheeler, late of Company I, Twelfth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE BUDDEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13153) granting an increase of pension to George Budden.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George Budden, late of Company A, Twentieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES C. BRIANT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8823) granting an increase of pension to Charles C. Briant.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles C. Briant, late captain Company K, Sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LYDIA M. EDWARDS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14241) granting an increase of pension to Lydia M. Edwards.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lydia M. Edwards, widow of Robert H. Edwards, late of Company C, One hundred and tenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANKLIN SIMPSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14918) granting an increase of pension to Franklin Simpson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Franklin Simpson, late of Company H, Ninety-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES BUCKLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15491) granting an increase of pension to James Buckley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James Buckley, late of Company H, Third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AMELIA NICHOLS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14327) granting an increase of pension to Amelia Nichols.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Amelia Nichols, widow of Franklin P. Nichols, late second lieutenant Company A, Seventh Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 9 strike out the word "twenty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "fifteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SARAH J. MERRILL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14639) granting an increase of pension to Sarah J. Merrill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah J. Merrill, widow of Capt. George S. Merrill, late of Company B, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of —— dollars per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Captain."
In same line, after the word "late," insert the word "captain."
In line 7 strike out the word "of."
In same line strike out the word "Volunteer," and insert in lieu thereof the word "Militia."
In line 8, before the word "dollars," insert the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES M. PUMPELLY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14497) granting an increase of pension to Charles M. Pumpelly.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles M. Pumpelly, late of Company A, Sixteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH WESTON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14560) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Weston.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth Weston, dependent mother of Clark W. Weston, late of Company I, Ninth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EDMOND R. HAYWOOD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14375) granting an increase of pension to Edmond R. Haywood.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edmond R. Haywood, late of Company D, First Battalion Arkansas Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY WEST.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14559) granting an increase of pension to Henry West.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry West, late of Company G, Twenty-third Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

RHODA KENNEDY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15449) granting a pension to Rhoda Kennedy.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Rhoda

Kennedy, mother of Charles Kennedy, late of Company M, First Regiment United States Colored Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "mother," insert the word "dependent."
In line 7, before the word "Artillery," insert the words "Volunteer Heavy."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JERRY W. TALLMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15691) granting an increase of pension to Jerry W. Tallman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jerry W. Tallman, late of Company E, Forty-eighth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "late," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. MOOMAW.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13110) granting an increase of pension to James M. Mooman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James M. Mooman, late of Company B, Seventieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Mooman" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Moomaw."
In line 8 strike out the word "thirty-six" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to James M. Moomaw."

MARTHA A. REMINGTON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11622) granting a pension to Martha A. Remington.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martha A. Remington, widow of Thomas J. L. Remington, late major Seventy-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, after the word "late," insert the words "captain Company A, and."
In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN HORNBEAK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11926) granting an increase of pension to John Hornbeak.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Hornbeak, late of Company, Sixth Provisional Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "of Company" and insert in lieu thereof the word "major."
In line 7 strike out the words "Volunteer Infantry."
In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH B. FONNER, ALIAS JOHN HAVENS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11873) granting a pension to Joseph B. Fonner.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph B. Fonner, late of Company L, Nineteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "late," insert the words "alias John Havens."
In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Joseph B. Fonner, alias John Havens."

ZADICK CARTER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12533) granting an increase of pension to Zadick Carter.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Zadick Carter, late of Company A, First Regiment Eastern Shore Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Eastern," insert the word "Loyal."
In line 7 strike out the word "Shore."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AUGUST BAUER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10816) granting an increase of pension to August Bauer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of August Bauer, late of Company F, One hundred and fortieth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $35 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH DOUGAL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11868) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Dougal.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph Dougal, late of Company E, Fifteenth Regiment, and Company K, Tenth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LUKE M'LONEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11856) granting an increase of pension to Luke McLoney.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Luke McLoney, late of Company H, One hundred and seventy-seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID H. ALLEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11866) granting an increase of pension to David A. Allen.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David A. Allen, late of Company I, Second Regiment California Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "A." and insert in lieu thereof the letter "H."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to David H. Allen."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE E. KING.

The next business business was the bill (H. R. 11667) granting an increase of pension to George E. King.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George E. King, late of Company B, Third Regiment Delaware Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN N. BOYD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10907) granting an increase of pension to John N. Boyd.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John N. Boyd, late of Company K, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JACOB KELLER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10753) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Kellar.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jacob Kellar, late of Company K, One hundred and sixty-ninth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Kellar" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Keller."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Jacob Keller."

CLARK A. WINANS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10230) granting an increase of pension to Clark A. Winans.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Clark A. Winans, late of Company C, One hundred and fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JESSE SILER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9839) granting an increase of pension to Jesse Siler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jesse Siler, late of Company A, Eighth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY HARES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15007) granting an increase of pension to Henry Hares.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Hares, late of Company B, Seventy-fifth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Company" and insert in lieu thereof the words "Companies I and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. POSEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14890) granting an increase of pension to James H. Posey.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Posey, late of Company D, Sixteenth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and of Company D, District of Columbia Union Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the word "captain."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out the words "and of Company D, District of Columbia Union Volunteer Infantry."

In line 9 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY PORTER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7331) granting a pension to Henry Porter.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Porter, late of Company B, Twenty-sixth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Henry Porter."

MARGARETT CARROLL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5486) granting a pension to Maggie Carroll.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Maggie Carroll, widow of Henry L. Carroll, lieutenant Company B, First Battalion Georgia Volunteer Infantry, at the rate of $8 per month, to commence on the date of soldier's death, August 13, A. D. 1904, who died of disease contracted while in the service of the United States.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Maggie" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Margarett."

In same line, before the word "lieutenant," insert the words "late first."

In line 7, after the word "Infantry," insert the words "and pay her a pension."

In line 8 strike out the word "eight" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

In same line strike out the words "to commence on the date" and all of lines 9, 10, and 11.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Margarett Carroll."

JAMES M. MILLER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7681) granting an increase of pension to James M. Miller.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James M. Miller, late of Company —, Twenty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "Company," insert the letter "B."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANKLIN J. KECK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7738) granting an increase of pension to Franklin J. Keck.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Franklin J. Keck, late of Company I, First Regiment Volunteer Infantry, and late of Company G, One hundred and twenty-eighth Regiment Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out the words "of Company I, First Regiment Volunteer Infantry, and late."

In line 8, before the word "Volunteer," insert the word "Pennsylvania."

In line 9 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARTIN V. CANNEDY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8315) granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Cannedy.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martin V. Cannedy, late of Company H, One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $75 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "seventy-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ARTHUR M. LEE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8722) granting an increase of pension to Arthur M. Lee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Arthur M. Lee, late of Company —, Eighteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the words "of Company" and insert in lieu thereof the words "first lieutenant."

In line 8 strike out the word "fifty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "forty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time and passed.

MOSES B. DAVIS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8725) granting an increase of pension to Moses B. Davis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Moses B. Davis, late of Company E, Fifteenth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JULIUS BEIER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7876) granting an increase of pension to Julius Beier.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Julius Beier, late of Company C, Twenty-ninth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "C" and insert in lieu thereof the letter "E."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. HILL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3660) granting an increase of pension to James H. Hill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Hill, late of Company E, Second Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY O. ARNOLD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7225) granting an increase of pension to Mary O. Arnold.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary O. Arnold, widow of Marion Arnold, late of Battery H, First Regiment Ohio Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Battery" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Company."

In line 7, after the word "Ohio," insert the word "Volunteer."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANK OSTERBERG.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 6488) granting an increase of pension to Frank Osterberg.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frank Osterberg, late of the United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "late," insert the words "alias William McKay."

In same line, before the word "United," insert the words "U. S. S. Dacotah, Alleghany, and Cyane."

In line 7, after the word "month," insert the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Frank Osterberg, alias William McKay."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM H. LEWIS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4946) granting an increase of pension to William H. Lewis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William H. Lewis, late of Company E, Thirteenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty-six."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM MOORE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4888) granting an increase of pension to William Moore.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Moore, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Company," strike out the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the words "second lieutenant."

In line 8 strike out the word "forty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FANNIE E. MORROW.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4633) granting an increase of pension to Fannie E. Morrow.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Fannie E. Morrow, widow of Dr. S. Morrow, late assistant surgeon Company A, One hundred and thirty-first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "S" and insert in lieu thereof the letter "F."

In line 7 strike out the words "Company A."

In line 9 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twelve."

Mr. SULLOWAY. Mr. Speaker, since that bill was reported evidence has come before the committee which warrants me in moving to amend the committee amendment by striking out "twelve" and inserting "sixteen."

The amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendments as amended were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read a third time, and passed.

ANDREW J. BENSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2765) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Benson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Andrew J. Benson, late of Company D, First Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CARDER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3007) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Carder.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Carder, late of Company A, Sixth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the letter "A" and insert in lieu thereof the letter "G."

In same line strike out the word "Sixth" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Second."

In line 7 strike out the word "Infantry" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Cavalry."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN A. MALONE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10396) granting an increase of pension to John A. Malone.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John A. Malone, late of Company I, Twenty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANCIS W. PRESTON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9406) granting an increase of pension to Francis W. Preston.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Francis W. Preston, late of Company I, Thirteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHANNA WALGWIST.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7806) granting an increase of pension to Johanna Walquist.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Johanna Walquist, widow of John S. Walquist, late of Company K, Ninety-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Anna C. Walquist, helpless and dependent daughter of said John S. Walquist, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: And provided further, That in the event of the death of Johanna Walquist the name of Anna C. Walquist shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $12 per month from and after the date of the death of said Johanna Walquist.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "Johanna," strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Walgwist."

In same line, before the word "late," strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the words "alias Jonas Walgwist."

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty" and insert the word "twenty-four."

In line 10 strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Walgwist."

In line 11, before the word "the," strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the words "alias Jonas Walgwist."

In line 13 strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Walgwist."

In line 14 strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Walgwist."

In line 17 strike out the word "Walquist" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Walgwist."

Amend title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Johanna Walgwist."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ANNIE E. PETERS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7823) granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Peters, widow of John A. Peters.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Annie E. Peters, widow of John A. Peters, late landsman, United States steamers North Carolina, Potomac, and Metacomet, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out the words "landsman, United States steamers" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of U. S. S."

In line 8, before the word "and," insert the words "United States Navy."

In same line strike out the word "twenty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen."

Amend title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Peters."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET BECKER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 8930) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Becker.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Margaret Becker, widow of John P. Becker, late captain Company K, Second Regiment Louisiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "twenty-five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EDSON J. HARRISON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3484) granting an increase of pension to Edson J. Harrison.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edson J. Harrison, late of Company B, Thirty-fourth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LUCIUS R. SIMONS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3233) granting an increase of pension to Lucius R. Simons.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lucius R. Simons, late of Troop L, Tenth Regiment of Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the word "Troop" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Company."

In same line, after the word "Regiment," strike out the word "of."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM R. DUNCAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1897) granting an increase of pension to William R. Duncan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William R. Duncan, late of Company G, Third Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $60 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "sixty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "thirty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SIOTHA BENNETT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2082) granting an increase of pension to Siotha Bennett.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Siotha Bennett, widow of Clarence E. Bennett, late lieutenant-colonel First Regiment California Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ZACHARIAH GEORGE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12532) granting an increase of pension to Zachariah George.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Zachariah George, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment United States Colored Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

KATHERINE F. WAINWRIGHT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1322) granting an increase of pension to Katherine F. Wainwright.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Katherine F. Wainwright, widow of George A. Wainwright, late major of the First Regiment New Hampshire Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, before the word "major," insert the words "first lieutenant Company A, and."

In same line strike out the words "of the."

In line 7, after the word "New Hampshire," insert the word "Volunteer."

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-five."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELLEN M. BRANT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2090) granting an increase of pension to Ellen M. Brant.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ellen M. Brant, widow of Uriah Brant, late captain Company H, Seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, after the word "late," insert the words "first lieutenant and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY SANBORN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 3344) granting an increase of pension to Henry Sanborn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Sanborn, late of Second Regiment United States Sharpshooters, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "Second," insert the words "Company F."

In same line, after the word "States," insert the word "Volunteer."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CORA F. MITCHELL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2034) granting a pension to Cora F. Mitchell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Cora F. Mitchell, dependent daughter of Seth W. Mitchell, late of Company C,

Thirty-eighth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6, before the word "dependent," insert the words "helpless and."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES H. CONLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1913) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Conley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles H. Conley, late of Company B, Twenty-eighth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out the word "thirty" and insert in lieu thereof the word "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LEVI A. TRIPP.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 17) granting an increase of pension to Levi A. Tripp.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Levi A. Tripp, late of Company C, Thirtieth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALPHONSO B. HOLLAND.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 19) granting an increase of pension to Alphonso B. Holland.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alphonso B. Holland, late of Company G, Second Regiment District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry, and Companies H and K, Twenty-ninth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW SMITH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 22) granting an increase of pension to Andrew Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Andrew Smith, late of Company G, Thirty-third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALBERT WINES.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 94) granting an increase of pension to Albert Wines.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Albert Wines, late of Company I, First Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID D. GRIFFITH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 162) granting an increase of pension to David D. Griffith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David D. Griffith, late of Company H, Twenty-first Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY RUSSELL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 165) granting an increase of pension to Henry Russell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Russell, late of Company M, Eleventh Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH W. LEGRO.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 180) granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Legro.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph W. Legro, late of Company D, Twenty-second Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. KANE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 187) granting an increase of pension to James H. Kane.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Kane, late first lieutenant Company I, First Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FREDRICH BEHRENS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 200) granting an increase of pension to Fredrich Behrens.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Fredrich Behrens, late of Company B, Twenty-first Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD E. NEEDHAM.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 203) granting an increase of pension to Edward E. Needham.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edward E. Needham, late of Company E, Thirty-second Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES WHITE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 218) granting an increase of pension to James White.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James White, late of Battery H, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JONATHAN F. GATES.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 220) granting an increase of pension to Jonathan F. Gates.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jonathan F. Gates, late of Company C, Twenty-seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARTIN L. ADAMS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 251) granting an increase of pension to Martin L. Adams.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martin L. Adams, late of Company C, Twenty-sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY B. BURTON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 325) granting an increase of pension to Henry B. Burton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry B. Burton, late of Company B, One hundred and second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY C. DUANE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 446) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Duane.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary C. Duane, widow of Daniel J. Duane, late first lieutenant Company A, Third Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Frank Duane, imbecile and dependent child of said Daniel J. Duane, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: And provided further, That in the event of the death of Mary C. Duane, the name of the said Frank Duane shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $12 per month from and after the date of death of said Mary C. Duane.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. LEWIS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 466) granting an increase of pension to James H. Lewis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Lewis, late of Company A, Second Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AMOS M. RUNKEL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 482) granting an increase of pension to Amos M. Runkel.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Amos M. Runkel, late of Company K, Ninety-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BARNEY WHITNEY.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 492) granting an increase of pension to Barney Whitney.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Barney Whitney, late of Company F, Seventy-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALFRED M'PHERRAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 527) granting an increase of pension to Alfred McPherran.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alfred McPherran, late of Company C, One hundred and twenty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM CARR.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 548) granting an increase of pension to William Carr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Carr, late of Company D, First Regiment Nebraska Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY H. HILL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 555) granting an increase of pension to Henry H. Hill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry H. Hill, late sergeant-major, and second lieutenant Company B, Fourteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH L. PRENTISS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 589) granting a pension to Joseph L. Prentiss.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph L. Prentiss, late acting medical cadet and acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID M. PEARSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 597) granting an increase of pension to David M. Pearson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David M. Pearson, late of the First Independent Battery Kansas Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY A. MEGRUE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 599) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Megrue.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary A. Megrue, widow of Ambrose R. Megrue, late captain Company M, Fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGET EVANS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 623) granting an increase of pension to Bridget Evans.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Bridget Evans, widow of James Evans, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. CONRAD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 641) granting an increase of pension to James M. Conrad.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James M. Conrad, late of Company H, Forty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES E. BISHOP.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 655) granting an increase of pension to Charles E. Bishop.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles

E. Bishop, late of Company B, First Regiment District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ABRAHAM WALTERS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 656) granting an increase of pension to Abraham Walters.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Abraham Walters, late of Company E, Ninety-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES CONINE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 671) granting an increase of pension to Charles Conine.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles Conine, late of Company E, Nineteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES F. HUBBARD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 672) granting an increase of pension to James F. Hubbard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James F. Hubbard, late of Company K, Second Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ULRIKA BOTTCHER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 675) granting a pension to Ulrika Bottcher.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ulrika Bottcher, widow of John Bottcher, late of Company B, Forty-fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LIZZIE M. M'LAUCHLAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 712) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie M. McLauchlan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lizzie M. McLauchlan, widow of George H. McLauchlan, late of U. S. S. Ohio, San Jacinto, and Sassacus, United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THEODORE H. HANSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 716) granting an increase of pension to Theodore H. Hanson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Theodore H. Hanson, late of Company K, Twenty-fifth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ORANGE S. MASON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 721) granting an increase of pension to Orange S. Mason.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Orange S. Mason, late of Company H, Eleventh Regiment, and Company B, Eighth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM M. SMITH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 725) granting an increase of pension to William M. Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William M. Smith, late of Company B, Twenty-second Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JERUSHA HAYWARD BROWN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 772) granting an increase of pension to Jerusha Hayward Brown.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jerusha Hayward Brown, widow of Edward M. Brown, late lieutenant-colonel Eighth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month, such pension to be in lieu of that she is now receiving under special act of Congress approved June 9, 1896.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE L. COOLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 784) granting an increase of pension to George L. Cooley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George L. Cooley, late of Company F, Tenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM BENKLER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 790) granting an increase of pension to William Benkler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Benkler, late of Company C, Third Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES A. FAY.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 836) granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Fay.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles A. Fay, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM A. EGGLESTON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 842) granting an increase of pension to William A. Eggleston.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William A. Eggleston, late of Company E, Fifteenth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and Company A, First Regiment Vermont Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

RICHARD T. FRIED.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 859) granting an increase of pension to Richard T. Fried.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, anthorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Richard T. Fried, late of Company A, Forty-sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS O'CONNOR.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 861) granting an increase of pension to Thomas O'Connor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas O'Connor, late of Company D, Second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HOWARD ELLIS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 969) granting an increase of pension to Howard Ellis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Howard Ellis, late of Company H, Second Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN E. WOODSUM.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1011) granting an increase of pension to John E. Woodsum.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John E. Woodsum, late of Company K, Eighth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

PETER SHIPPMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1023) granting an increase of pension to Peter Shippman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Peter Shippman, late of Company I, Third Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and captain Company I, One hundred and thirteenth Regiment United States Colored Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ISAIAH MITCHELL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1130) granting an increase of pension to Isaiah Mitchell.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaiah Mitchell, late of Company G, One hundred and fifteenth Regiment United States Colored Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALBERT S. BLAKE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1138) granting an increase of pension to Albert S. Blake.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Albert S. Blake, late captain Company M, Second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. FERNALD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1173) granting an increase of pension to James M. Fernald.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James M. Fernald, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY J. PATTERSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1227) granting an increase of pension to Henry J. Patterson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry J. Patterson, late of Company G, Third Regiment, and Company F, Fifth Regiment, Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JULIA L. PLIMPTON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1228) granting an increase of pension to Julia L. Plimpton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Julia L. Plimpton, widow of Emory M. Plimpton, late captain Company M, Fourth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EUGENE GASKILL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1230) granting an increase of pension to Eugene Gaskill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eugene Gaskill, late of Company L, Eighth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM F. WILSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1246) granting an increase of pension to William F. Wilson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William F. Wilson, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

PETER BURNS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1251) granting an increase of pension to Peter Burns.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Peter Burns, late of Company H, Second Regiment Pennsylvania Reserves Volunteer Infantry, and United States ships Wabash, Saratoga, and Vermont, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ORLANDO C. PINKHAM.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1357) granting an increase of pension to Orlando C. Pinkham.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Orlando C. Pinkham, late of Eighth Unattached Company, Massachusetts Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY JORDAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1399) granting an increase of pension to Henry Jordan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Jordan, late lieutenant-colonel Seventeenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LEVI E. CROSS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1418) granting an increase of pension to Levi E. Cross.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Levi E.

Cross, late of Company A, Eighth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SARAH A. TYLER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1420) granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Tyler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah A. Tyler, widow of William H. H. Tyler, late of Company G, Third Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HARVEY C. BROWN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1421) granting an increase of pension to Harvey C. Brown.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Harvey C. Brown, late of Company D, Fifth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM F. DAVIS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1437) granting an increase of pension to William F. Davis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William F. Davis, late of Company G, Second Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M. ODENHEIMER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1527) granting an increase of pension to John M. Odenheimer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John M. Odenheimer, late first lieutenant Company L, Sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY C. BISHOP.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1555) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Bishop.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary C. Bishop, widow of John Bishop, jr., late second lieutenant Company G, and first lieutenant Company E, Twenty-ninth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

PETER BETZ.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1624) granting an increase of pension to Peter Betz.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Peter Betz, late of Company H, One hundred and twenty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SOLOMON R. RUCH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1634) granting an increase of pension to Solomon R. Ruch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Solomon R. Ruch, late of Company A, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JACOB G. ORTH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1645) granting an increase of pension to Jacob G. Orth.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jacob G. Orth, late of Company D, Twenty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN C. ESTES.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1665) granting an increase of pension to John C. Estes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John C. Estes, late of Company L, Fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. BEARD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1666) granting an increase of pension to George W. Beard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George W. Beard, late acting third assistant engineer, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK W. PARTRIDGE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1834) granting an increase of pension to Frederick W. Partridge.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frederick W. Partridge, late acting master, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EDGAR TIBBILS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1905) granting an increase of pension to Edgar Tibbils.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edgar Tibbils, late of Company F, Second Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANCESCO DEL GINDICE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1908) granting an increase of pension to Francesco Del Gindice.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Francesco Del Gindice, late musician, band, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GUNNERUS INGEBRETSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1911) granting an increase of pension to Gunnerus Ingebretson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Gunnerus Ingebretson, late of Company E, Eighteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS EDSALL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1978) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Edsall.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Edsall, late of Company E, Ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SOLOMON F. WEHR.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2044) granting a pension to Solomon F. Wehr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Solomon F. Wehr, late acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

RUTH F. BENNETT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2080) granting a pension to Ruth F. Bennett.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ruth F. Bennett, widow of Thomas Bennett, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and Company E, Twenty-second Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps, and pay her a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SARAH E. ADAMS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2090) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Adams.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah E. Adams, widow of George H. Adams, late of Company A, Eleventh Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN P. BAMBUSH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2091) granting an increase of pension to John P. Bambush.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John P. Bambush, late of Company K, Thirty-fourth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LORIN R. BINGHAM.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2103) granting an increase of pension to Lorin R. Bingham.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lorin R. Bingham, late of Company D, Second Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HELEN B. READ.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2153) granting an increase of pension to Helen B. Read.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Helen B. Read, widow of Ira B. Read, late first lieutenant Company D and captain Company E, One hundred and first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $17 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ISAAC B. HEWITT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2168) granting an increase of pension to Isaac B. Hewitt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Isaac B. Hewitt, late acting first assistant engineer, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN J. BUFFINGTON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2182) granting an increase of pension to John J. Buffington.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John J. Buffington, late of Company E, First Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID W. MAGEE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2216) granting an increase of pension to David W. Magee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David W. Magee, late of Company F, First Regiment Indiana Volunteers, war with Mexico, and lieutenant-colonel Eighty-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and colonel Forty-seventh Regiment Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN RAUCH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2250) granting an increase the pension of John Rauch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Rauch, late of Company E, One hundred and second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ASHLEY A. YOUMANS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2332) granting an increase of pension to Ashley A. Youmans.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pensions laws, the name of Ashley A. Youmans, late of Company G, Ninth Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALBERT C. ANDREWS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2344) granting an increase of pension to Albert C. Andrews.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Albert C. Andrews, late of Company H, Thirty-second Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $55 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. REED.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2346) granting an increase of pension to John W. Reed.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John W. Reed, late of Company G, One hundred and thirty-seventh Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN L. CLARK.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2393) granting an increase of pension to John L. Clark.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John L. Clark, late of Battery C, First Regiment Illinois Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS MILLIMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2406) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Milliman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Milliman, late of Company E, Seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and Company B, One hundred and sixty-sixth Regiment Ohio National Guard Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES L. NOGGLE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2473) granting an increase of pension to Charles L. Noggle.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles L. Noggle, late of Twelfth Independent Battery Wisconsin Light Artillery, and first lieutenant, Second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JESSE M. FURMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2548) granting an increase of pension to Jesse M. Furman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Jesse M. Furman, late of United States gunboat Essex, United States Navy, and Company B, First Regiment Vermont Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE L. JAQUITH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2840) granting an increase of pension to George L. Jaquith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George L. Jaquith, late of Company G, Twenty-first Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and Company G, Forty-seventh Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Militia Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GARRETT ROURKE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2863) granting an increase of pension to Garrett Rourke.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Garrett Rourke, late of Company E, Twenty-fourth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. FLICK.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2868) granting an increase of pension to George W. Flick.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George W. Flick, late of Company H, Ninety-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL E. JOHNSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2882) granting an increase of pension to Samuel E. Johnson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Samuel E. Johnson, late of Company D, Thirteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and first lieutenant and adjutant, Sixty-sixth Regiment United States Colored Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH E. STINES.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2950) granting an increase of pension to Joseph E. Stines.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph E. Stines, late of Company C, Second Regiment North Carolina Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANK WESTERVELT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3031) granting an increase of pension to Frank Westervelt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frank Westervelt, late of Company B and hospital steward Fifth Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY D. HALL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3043) granting an increase of pension to Henry D. Hall.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry D. Hall, late of Company A, First Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and first lieutenant and captain, United States Revenue Marine Service, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN O. THORN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3036) granting an increase of pension to John O. Thorn.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John O. Thorn, late of Company F, Thirtieth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and One hundred and fourteenth Company, Second Battalion Veteran Reserve Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN G. BLESSING.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3121) granting an increase of pension to John G. Blessing.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John G. Blessing, late of Company A, Sixty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

PARTHENIA W. BAKER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3125) granting an increase of pension to Parthenia W. Baker.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Parthenia W. Baker, widow of Alpheus W. Baker, late second lieutenant Company H, Twenty-third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $15 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGIA D. BROWN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3132) granting an increase of pension to Georgia D. Brown.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Georgia D. Brown, widow of George M. Brown, late captain Company M, and major First Regiment Maine Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN HARPER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3187) granting a pension to John Harper.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Harper, late unassigned, One hundred and forty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH RUTHERFORD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3189) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Rutherford.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth Rutherford, widow of Hugh Rutherford, late of Company I, Eighty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW J. COULTON, ALIAS SAMUEL MYERS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3199) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Coulton, alias Samuel Myers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Andrew J. Coulton, alias Samuel Myers, late of Company G, Third Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

NANCY A. TEETERS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3224) granting a pension to Nancy A. Teeters.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nancy A. Teeters, widow of John Teeters, late of Company A, Eighty-fourth Regiment, and Company F, Eighty-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DANIEL WOOLLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3242) granting an increase of pension to Daniel Woolley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Daniel Woolley, late of Company C, Eighty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

RICHARD M. OGLE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3310) granting an increase of pension to Richard M. Ogle.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Richard M. Ogle, late of Company F, Twenty-third Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

OSCAR F. RENICK.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3312) granting a pension to Oscar F. Renick.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Oscar F. Renick, acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY V. HAMENSTAEDT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3315) granting an increase of pension to Henry V. Hamenstaedt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry V. Hamenstaedt, late of Company A, Second Regiment Missouri Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LENA SHERMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3472) granting an increase of pension to Lena Sherman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lena Sherman, widow of Buren R. Sherman, late second lieutenant and captain Company E, Thirteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LA FORREST C. DARLING.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3473) granting an increase of pension to La Forrest C. Darling.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of La Forrest C. Darling, late of Company I, Twelfth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES B. KELLOGG.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3474) granting an increase of pension to James B. Kellogg.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James B. Kellogg, late of U. S. S. Ohio, Princeton, and Mohican, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

EVERETT S. FITCH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3475) granting an increase of pension to Everett S. Fitch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Everett S. Fitch, late first lieutenant Company C, Fifth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CATHARINE BECHTOL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3492) granting an increase of pension to Catharine Bechtol.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Catharine Bechtol, widow of John W. Bechtol, late of Company D, Twentieth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DOMINICK CAVANAUGH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3539) granting an increase of pension to Dominick Cavanaugh.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Dominick Cavanaugh, late of Company E, First Regiment Oregon Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

STEPHEN M. DAVIS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3547) granting an increase of pension to Stephen M. Davis.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Stephen

M. Davis, late of Company A, Second Regiment North Carolina Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SARGENT R. EMERSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3575) granting an increase of pension to Sargent R. Emerson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sargent R. Emerson, late of Company C, Thirteenth Regiment, and Company E, Seventeenth Regiment, Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES LEBO.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3588) granting an increase of pension to James Lebo.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James Lebo, late of Company C, Ninth Regiment Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CATHERINE COYLE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3626) granting a pension to Catherine Coyle.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Catherine Coyle, widow of Andrew Coyle, late of Company D, Twelfth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

OLIVER BRENTON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3640) granting an increase of pension to Oliver Brenton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Oliver Brenton, late of Company F, Third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES RUTH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3714) granting an increase of pension to James Ruth.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James Ruth, late captain Company F, Sixth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY C. MORGAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3721) granting a pension to Mary C. Morgan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary C. Morgan, widow of William J. Morgan, late captain Company C, One hundred and sixteenth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DANIEL D. NASH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3751) granting an increase of pension to Daniel D. Nash.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Daniel D. Nash, late major, One hundredth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALBERT D. CORDNER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3800) granting an increase of pension to Albert D. Cordner.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Albert D. Cordner, late of Battery G, First Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SAMUEL J. BURLOCK.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3866) granting an increase of pension to Samuel J. Burlock.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Samuel J. Burlock, late of Company F, Eighth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M'COY.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3903) granting an increase of pension to John McCoy.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John McCoy, late of Battery H, Second Regiment United States Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. GARRITT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3905) granting an increase of pension to James M. Garritt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James M. Garritt, late of Company B, Sixth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DAVID RANKIN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3932) granting an increase of pension to David Rankin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of David Rankin, late first lieutenant Company H, Sixty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SIDNEY R. SMITH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3933) granting an increase of pension to Sidney R. Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sidney R. Smith, late of Company L, Eleventh Regiment New York Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CROSBY PYLE WOODWARD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4000) granting an increase of pension to Crosby Pyle Woodward.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Crosby Pyle Woodward, late of Company E, One hundred and twenty-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES S. PARRISH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4006) granting an increase of pension to Charles S. Parrish.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles S. Parrish, late major Eighth Regiment and colonel One hundred and thirtieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY C. JOHNSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4020) granting an increase of pension to Henry C. Johnson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry C. Johnson, late captain Company K, Thirty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

NORMAN W. LOMBARD.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4096) granting an increase of pension to Norman W. Lombard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Norman W. Lombard, late of Company C, Fourth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JULIUS T. WILLIAMSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4097) granting an increase of pension to Julius T. Williamson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Julius T. Williamson, late of Companies B and A, Fifth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CARLTON A. WHEELER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4100) granting an increase of pension to Carlton A. Wheeler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Carlton A. Wheeler, late of Company D, Third Battalion Rifles, Massachusetts Militia Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN CONNOR.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4131) granting an increase of pension to John Connor.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Connor, late of Company K, First Regiment United States Artillery, and hospital steward, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY P. JOHANNES.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4159) granting an increase of pension to Mary P. Johannes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary P. Johannes, widow of John G. Johannes, late lieutenant-colonel Eighth Regiment and colonel Eleventh Regiment Maryland Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET HALLETT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4181) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Hallett.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Margaret Hallett, widow of William P. Hallett, late captain Company I, Thirteenth Regiment New York Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

NATHANIEL E. SKELTON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4187) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel E. Skelton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nathaniel E. Skelton, late of Company A, Twenty-third Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FRANK D. SMITH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4188) granting an increase of pension to Frank D. Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frank D. Smith, late of Company D, Second Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN F. PEIRCE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4223) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Peirce.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Benjamin F. Peirce, late of Company C, Forty-ninth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES CAIN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4226) granting an increase of pension to James Cain.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James Cain, late of Company L, Seventh Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AURELIA COTTEN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4280) granting a pension to Aurelia Cotten.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Aurelia Cotten, dependent mother of Theodore L. Cotten, late of Company B, Seventh Regiment, and Company C, Fourteenth Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry; Isaac S. Cotten, late of Company A, Twenty-seventh Regiment, and Company K, Twelfth Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry; Gaylord M. Cotten, late of Company I, Third Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and Charles M. Cotten, late of Company I, Third Regiment, and Company F, Second Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS J. DAVIES.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4286) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Davies.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas J. Davies, late of Company D, Second Regiment New York Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK C. STURM.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4319) granting an increase of pension to Frederick C. Sturm.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frederick C. Sturm, late captain Twenty-fifth Independent Battery Indiana Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

BARNEY M'GIRL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4337) granting an increase of pension to Barney McGirl.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Barney McGirl, late of Company I, Second Regiment Kansas Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM FLUEGEL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4362) granting an increase of pension to William Fluegel.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of William Fluegel, late of Company E, First Battalion Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN T. M'GARRAUGH.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4381) granting an increase of pension to John T. McGarraugh.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John T. McGarraugh, late of Company E, Fourteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LINDSAY KIRBY.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4422) granting an increase of pension to Lindsay Kirby.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lindsay Kirby, late of Company E, One hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ALPHONSO BROOKS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4496) granting an increase of pension to Alphonso Brooks.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Alphonso Brooks, late of Third Independent Battery, Iowa Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH CHANDLER, JR.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4507) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Chandler, jr.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph Chandler, jr., late of Company G, Eleventh Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and Company F, Third Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY R. PEASE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4636) granting an increase of pension to Henry R. Pease.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry R. Pease, late of Company F, Twenty-fifth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and captain Company A, Eighty-fourth Regiment United States Colored Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

FREDERICK ZIMMERMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4637) granting an increase of pension to Frederick Zimmerman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Frederick Zimmerman, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ARTHUR THOMPSON.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1889) granting an increase of pension to Arthur Thompson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Arthur Thompson, late of Company D, Eleventh Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and captain and assistant quartermaster, United States Volunteers, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

H. EDWARD GOETZ.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 1895) granting a pension to H. Edward Goetz.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of H. Edward Goetz, late captain Company C, Third Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELLEN HARRIMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2202) granting a pension to Ellen Harriman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ellen Harriman, widow of Dustin R. Harriman, late chief quartermaster, in the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of —— dollars per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Dustin R. Harriman," insert "alias Edward Harriman."

In line 7 strike out "in the."

In line 8, after "rate of," insert "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

RUFUS G. CHILDRESS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 2697) granting an increase of pension to R. G. Childress.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of R. G. Childress, late of J. S. Bagger's company, Mounted Texas Volunteers, commanded by Capt. Pat Calhoun, United States Army, Indian war of 1854–55, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 change the claimant's initial "R." to "Rufus," and in the same line, after "late of," insert "Captain;" also in line 6 change "Bagger's" to "Bogges's," and in the same line, after "Mounted," insert "Battalion."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "commanded by Captain Pat Calhoun, United States Army," and insert in lieu thereof "Texas and New Mexico."

In lines 8 and 9 strike out "of eighteen hundred and fifty-four and eighteen hundred and fifty-five."

In line 10 strike out "twenty-four" and insert "sixteen."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Rufus G. Childress."

WILLIAM C. SHORT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 4593) granting a pension to William C. Short.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension rolls, the name of William C. Short, late of Captain Long's company, Colonel Hays's regiment, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In lines 6 and 7 strike out "Colonel Hay's regiment" and insert "First Regiment Texas Mounted Volunteers."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS HOWARD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5252) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Howard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Howard, late of Company A, Second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 change "twenty-five" to "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HORACE D. MANN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5485) granting a pension to Horace D. Mann.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Horace D. Mann, late of Company M, Third United States Infantry, Spanish-American war, at the rate of $12 per month, to commence on the 4th day of May, A. D. 1903.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Third," insert "Regiment."
In line 7, before "Infantry," insert "Volunteer." In same line strike out "Spanish-American;" and in the same line, after "war," insert "with Spain, and pay him a pension."
In lines 8 and 9 strike out "to commence on the 4th day of May, A. D. 1903."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

CAROLINE NEILSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 5936) granting an increase of pension to Caroline Neilson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Caroline Neilson, widow of Thomas N. Neilson, late sergeant and captain in Stuart's Maryland Militia, war of 1812, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 strike out the initial "N."
In line 7, after "geant," insert "of Capt. J. H. Stewart's company, Maryland Militia Volunteers;" and in the same line strike out "and captain in Stuart's Maryland Militia."
In line 9 strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SUSIE M. GERTH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7495) granting a pension to Susie M. Gerth.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Susie M. Gerth, widow of Reinbold Gerth, late of Company B, Fifth Regiment United States Cavalry, war with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 6 change "Reinbold" to "Reinhold."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS F. DOWLING.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 7588) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Dowling.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Dowling, late of Company E, Third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of ——— dollars per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Thomas," insert the initial "F."
In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Spain," and strike out all in the bill after said words.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting a pension to Thomas F. Dowling.

CHARLES R. HILL.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 9661) granting a pension to Charles R. Hill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charles R. Hill, late of Company G, Sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "twenty-four" and insert "ten."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE M. FRAZER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10448) granting an increase of pension to George M. Fraser.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George M. Frazer, late of Captain Baylor's company, Lane's battalion of the Texas Cavalry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "of the;" and in the same line, after "Texas," insert "Volunteer."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ARTHUR R. DREPPARD.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 10900) granting an increase of pension to Arthur R. Dreppard.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Arthur R. Dreppard, late of Company M, Ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Spain."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "eighteen."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN CLARK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 11691) granting an increase of pension to John Clark.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Clark, late of Company K, Fourteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LOUIS GROSSMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 12651) granting a pension to Louis Grossman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Louis Grossman, late of Company D, Fifteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "twelve" and insert "eight."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES H. GRIFFIN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13079) granting an increase of pension to James H. Griffin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James H. Griffin, late of Company A, First Regiment North Carolina Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the word "Volunteer" and insert the word "Volunteers."

In the same line, after the word "Volunteers," insert the words "war with Mexico," and in the same line strike out the word "Infantry."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM J. HAYS.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 13255) granting an increase of pension to W. J. Hayes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of W. J. Hayes, late of Capt. A. D. Johnson's company, Florida Seminole Indian war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $16 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Change the initial "W." where it appears in the title and body of the bill to "William."

Change the claimant's surname where it appears in the title and body of the bill to "Hays."

In line 6 strike out "A. D. Johnson's" and insert after "Captain" the words "Johnston's," and before the word "company" insert "independent."

In line 7 insert after "Florida" the words "Mounted Volunteers, Florida Indian war," and in the same line strike out "Seminole Indian War."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CHEEK.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14472) granting a pension to Thomas Cheek.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Cheek, late of United States Navy, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "late," strike out "of" and insert "second-class boy, ship Iroquois;" and in the same line strike out "war with Spain."

In line 7 strike out "thirty" and insert "six."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AUGUSTA N. MANSON.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14532) granting a pension to Augusta N. Manson.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Augusta N. Manson, widow of George W. Manson, late of Company D, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, and grant her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Augusta N. Manson."

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

In line 8 strike out the word "grant" and insert "pay," and add to the end of the bill the words "in lieu of that she is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS CHAPMAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14547) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Chapman.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas Chapman, late of Company L, Palmetto Regiment, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Company L," insert "First Regiment South Carolina Volunteers," and in the same line strike out "Palmetto Regiment."

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

HENRY GILHAM.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14655) granting a pension to Henry Gilham.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Henry Gilham, late of Company D, Second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Henry Gilham."

In line 6 strike out "D" and insert "H."

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."

In lines 7 and 8 strike out "pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month."

After the word "and," in line 7, insert "Company E, Fifty-first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and captain Company G, One hundred and twentieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH A. JONES.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14718) granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Jones.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph A. Jones, late of Company D, Palmetto Regiment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Regiment," insert "South Carolina Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico."

In line 7 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY A. WITT.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14875) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Witt.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary A. Witt, widow of William E. Witt, late of Company F, Third Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee ware read, as follows:

In line 7, after "Infantry," insert "war with Mexico."
In line 8 strike out "twenty" and insert "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES NUNAN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 14951) granting an increase of pension to James Nunan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll the name of James Nunan, a soldier of the Mexican war, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

After the word "roll," in line 4, insert "subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws."
In line 5, after the word "Nunan," insert "late of Company H, Third Regiment Kentucky Volunteers, war with Mexico."
In line 5 strike out "a soldier of the Mexican war."
In line 6 strike out "forty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN GREEN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15110) granting an increase of pension to John Green.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Green, late of Company E, First Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "fifty" and insert "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN J. MERIDETH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15192) granting a pension to John J. Meredith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John J. Meredith, late of Second Independent Company Illinois Volunteers, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Change the claimant's surname where it appears in the title and body of the bill to "Merideth."
In line 6, after "late of," insert "the."
In line 7, after "Illinois," insert "Mounted."
In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."
Add to the end of the bill the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH J. MARTIN.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15198) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth J. Martin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elizabeth J. Martin, widow of Isaac A. Martin, late of Company C, First Regiment North Carolina Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out "Volunteer Infantry" and insert "Volunteers."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WESLEY SMITH.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15276) granting an increase of pension to Wesley Smith.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Wesley Smith, late of Company D, First Regiment Kentucky Mounted Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 7 strike out the words "Volunteer Infantry" and insert the word "Volunteers."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M. LOVE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15347) granting an increase of pension to John M. Love.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John M. Love, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Love," insert "late of Company K, First Regiment Tennessee Volunteer Cavalry, war with Mexico."
In line 7 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY C. MOORE.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15382) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Moore.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary C. Moore, widow of W. H. Moore, late of Company A, North Carolina Militia, in the Indian war of 1837, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6 change the initial "W." to "William;" and in the same line after "late of," insert "Captain Killian's."
In line 7 strike out "A." and after "Militia" insert "Volunteers, Cherokee Indian disturbances."
In lines 7 and 8 strike out "in the Indian war of 1837."
In line 9 strike out "thirty" and insert "twelve."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARY PALMER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15870) granting a pension to Mary Palmer.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary Palmer, widow of Stephen Palmer, late of Captain Morgan's company of Iowa Mounted Volunteers, war with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

In line 6, after "Stehpen," insert the initial "J.;" and in line 7, after "Morgan's," insert "independent;" and in the same line strike out "of" and "Mounted."
In line 8 strike out "twenty" and insert "eight."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

VOLNEY P. LUDLOW.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15893) granting an increase of pension to Volney P. Ludlow.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Volney P. Ludlow, late of Company C, Fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In line 8 strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. CARLEY.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15940) granting a pension to James M. Carley.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of James M. Carley, late of Company B, Fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The amendments recommended by the committee were read, as follows:

Amend the title so as to read: "Granting an increase of pension to James M. Carley."

In line 8 change "twenty-four" to "twenty," and add to the end of the bill the words "in lieu of that he is now receiving."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

LYDIA A. KELLER.

The next pension business was the bill (H. R. 15941) granting a pension to Lydia A. Keller.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lydia A. Keller, widow of William Keller, late of Company C, One hundred and ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; Company A, Seventy-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; Fourth Regiment United States Infantry; and Company I, Sixteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

In lines 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11 strike out "late of Company C, One hundred and ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; Company A, Seventy-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; Fourth Regiment United States Infantry, and Company I, Sixteenth Regiment United States Infantry," and insert in lieu thereof "late ordnance sergeant, United States Army."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ELEANORA A. KEELER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 1273) granting an increase of pension to Eleanora A. Keeler.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Eleanora A. Keeler, widow of George W. Keeler, late lieutenant Captain O'Neil's Company E, Second Regiment Oregon Mounted Volunteers, Oregon and Washington Territory Indian war, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time and passed.

NATHANIEL R. KENT.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2096) granting an increase of pension to Nathaniel R. Kent.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Nathaniel R. Kent, late of Company E, First Regiment District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ADELLE D. IRWIN.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2142) granting an increase of pension to Adelle D. Irwin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Adelle D. Irwin, widow of David A. Irwin, late first lieutenant, Fourth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

MARCELINA S. GROFF.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2735) granting a pension to Marcelina S. Groff.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Marcelina S. Groff, widow of J. J. Groff, late scout and guide, United States Army, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 per month additional on account of the minor child of said J. J. Groff until he reaches the age of sixteen years.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE W. HALE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 2968) granting a pension to George W. Hale.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of George W. Hale, late of Company B, First Regiment United States Infantry, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

DELIA A. HOOKER.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3029) granting an increase of pension to Delia A. Hooker.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Delia A. Hooker, widow of Ambrose E. Hooker, late captain, Ninth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SUSAN E. ISRAEL.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 3888) granting an increase of pension to Susan E. Israel.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Susan E. Israel, widow of Jeptha M. Israel, late first lieutenant Company K, First Regiment North Carolina Volunteers, war with Mexico, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

JOHN H. M'KENZIE.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4227) granting a pension to John H. McKenzie.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John H. McKenzie, late scout and guide, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

AMOS M'MANUS.

The next pension business was the bill (S. 4595) granting an increase of pension to Amos McManus.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Amos McManus, late of Company C, Palmetto Regiment South Carolina Volunteers, war with Mexico, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SULLOWAY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the several bills were passed was laid on the table.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, Mr. RYAN was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Dean Wilson, Fifty-ninth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION, ETC.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to an order of the House made on March 5, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15442) to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Speaker, I submit this is the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CAPRON). The Chair will state the bill presented by the gentleman from Colorado has been made privileged, and the motion to take up this bill would come in before the regular order.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, the bill I desire to call up is practically unfinished business. A roll call is in progress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman state for the information of the Chair the particular bill to which he refers?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes, sir. H. R. 15744—to abolish the office of Lieutenant-General of the Army of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that is unfinished business, the Chair is informed, under the call of committees; and the Chair will state that the call of committees would be in order at this time were it not for the privileged motion which has been presented by the gentleman from Colorado. The gentleman from Colorado moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 15442, the title of which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Colorado, that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill the title of which the Clerk has read.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15442) to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States, Mr. LAWRENCE in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill may be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, in presenting this bill to the committee I do not believe that it will be necessary for me to dwell upon the importance of the subject. I think, perhaps, all members of the committee are fully convinced that the naturalization laws need revision and amendment. We have at the present time, with only a few slight amendments, naturalization laws as they were written by James Madison in 1795. Under the Constitution Congress is authorized to establish a uniform rule of naturalization. The naturalization laws at the present time do not prescribe a uniform system of naturalization nor establish any code of procedure in such cases. The evils and the abuses, the crimes and the frauds that have been committed against the naturalization laws of the country constitute, I think, the strongest argument that could possibly be advanced for an entire revision of those laws. The bill which we present to-day does not change the fundamental law in reference to naturalization except in two particulars, to which I will address myself a little later, but it does provide for a general and a uniform sysem of naturalization to be enforced throughout the United States. I might say, Mr. Chairman, that the naturalization frauds have in the past two years attracted more attention than heretofore. A special prosecuting attorney was appointed by the Department of Justice to investigate naturalization frauds. In the short period of two years he filed criminal complaints in 791 cases, and secured convictions in 685 of those cases. During the same period of time he brought civil proceedings to cancel some fraudulent certificates of naturalization, and in that time he succeeded in having 1,916 fraudulent certificates of naturalization canceled.

The bill that is presented to-day undertakes to correct the abuses that have grown up under our lax and careless system of naturalization, or perhaps I ought to say that have grown up because we have no system of naturalization which is uniform throughout the country. The bill comes before the committee with the unanimous report in its favor from the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. There were a number of bills on the general subject of naturalization presented to that committee by different Members of the House.

Last year the President, by an Executive order, appointed a Commission to examine the naturalization laws of the country and to make report to the House of the changes that were deemed advisable to be made in those laws. That committee consisted of Mr. M. D. Purdy, on behalf of the Department of Justice; Mr. Gaillard Hunt, on behalf of the Department of State, and Mr. Richard K. Campbell, on behalf of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

That Commission made an exhaustive report, which was transmitted to Congress by the President on the 1st of March, 1905. In that report is contained two drafts of proposed bills upon this subject. The report of this Commission and the draft of the bills submitted by the Commission have had the careful consideration of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, and this bill is in a large measure based upon the drafts of the bill prepared by that Commission. After we had considered the bills submitted by the Commission and the other bills introduced by the different Members of the House, the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization appointed a subcommittee consisting of five of its members to take all of these various bills, together with the report of the Commission, and out of those bills draft such a bill as would meet with the approval of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. The bill presented to-day is the bill that that subcommittee prepared, submitted to the full Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, and received its unanimous support.

Perhaps I can not do better than to give a general outline of the provisions of the bill. As I said a few moments ago, it does not seek to change the fundamental principles that have governed in naturalization cases from the foundation of the Government, except in two particulars. Those two particulars, Mr. Chairman, are, first, that before an alien can become naturalized, if this bill shall be enacted into a law, it will be necessary that he shall satisfy the court that he is able to write either in his own language or in the English language, and able to read, speak, and understand the English language. That is the new qualification required of the alien for naturalization. You understand, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that this bill deals solely with naturalization. It does not touch the subject of immigration. That question is now being considered by the committee and it is hoped and expected that it will be able to report a bill at this session of Congress upon that subject.

Mr. McNARY rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BONYNGE] yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McNARY]?

Mr. BONYNGE. I do.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, the gentleman says a man must be able to read either in his own language or in the English language.

Mr. BONYNGE. No; he must be able to write either in his own language or in the English language, and read, speak, and understand the English language.

Mr. McNARY. I know that the law in the State of Massachusetts is that a man, in order to vote, must be able to read and write in the English language. It works very well. I would like to ask the gentleman if he knows any other State in the Union in which that requirement—being able to read and write the English language—is a prerequisite for voting?

Mr. HAYES. I want to state that my own State of California has exactly the same requirement in its constitution. A man must be able to read and write the English language.

Mr. McNARY. I would like to ask any gentleman here how many other States there are that have it? I wish to get information on that subject, and the reason I am asking the question seems to be pertinent. We find that Massachusetts has the requirement and we find that California has. I am informed, and I believe—and if I am not correct I would like to have the gentleman correct me—that very few States have that requirement.

Mr. BONYNGE. Compartively few of them. I believe that there are more than the two that have been named.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Washington and Wyoming have it. There are several Western States that have that same qualification.

Mr. McNARY. The point I want to make is, does the gentleman think it right to require of a man who wants naturalization a superior knowledge and education to that required of an American citizen in order to have the right to vote? In other words, three or four States in the American Union have this provision. Now, does he think it fair to ask of a foreigner a superior knowledge and superior education to that which they ask of American citizens in forty four or five out of the forty-eight States in order that they may have the right to vote?

Mr. BONYNGE. I can best answer that question by saying that the question as to who shall be entitled to vote in any specific State is not within the jurisdiction of this Congress to determine. It is a question to be decided by the States. We are dealing with the question of naturalization. We have authority over that subject, and it is the view of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization that before a man should be naturalized as an American citizen he should have these qualifications. We admit him, Mr. Chairman, to our shores, and we give him all the privileges and advantages that this country affords him. We let him live here for a period of five years. During the course of that time we believe that if he thinks well enough of citizenship in the American Republic, he can qualify himself to meet those requirements; and we believe that if he does not do so, he ought not to be admitted as a citizen of the United States.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him this question right in that connection? Suppose an alien comes here and is excluded from the privilege of becoming a citizen by this law, because he can not write the English language. Now, he remains here five years. Suppose at the end of that time he is able to write, and read, and speak the English language. Will he then have the right to become a citizen?

Mr. BONYNGE. He can become a citizen right away.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. At once?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly, at the end of five years' residence.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. On a single application?

Mr. BONYNGE. If he has previously declared his intention two years before the expiration of the five years.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Is he permitted to make that declaration if he can not read and write and speak the English language at that time?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HINSHAW. Then, after making his declaration of intention, which he can do after thirty days' living in this country, he becomes a voter?

Mr. BONYNGE. Under the laws of nine States of the Union.

Mr. HINSHAW. But he can not become a full-fledged citizen, notwithstanding the fact that he is able to vote, until after he is able to read and write and has been here five years?

Mr. BONYNGE. After five years' residence.

Mr. HINSHAW. Then wherein does the naturalization under your bill make him any better citizen after all this time that he has been allowed to vote?

Mr. BONYNGE. That is a matter for the various States to regulate for themselves. We can only regulate the subject of naturalization. So it resolves itself into this one question, Mr. Chairman—whether or not that qualification is deemed a requisite by the Members of this House for citizenship in the American Republic. That is a question that has to be determined by this House. And when we reach the section of the bill it will of course be open to discussion and amendment. Let me say this to the gentleman, that I do not think we ought to have a discussion of the various sections of the bill in detail at this time. When we read the bill section by section all these sections will be open for amendment. There will be no attempt to cut off the right of amendment. I want, as far as I can, to give a general outline of the provisions of the bill, and welcome any questions that will help to make clear what the bill provides for, but I do not want to go into a general discussion of the details of the measure at the present time.

Mr. McNARY. I want to ask the gentleman a question or two about a matter in which I am a little rusty myself, and possibly the gentleman or perhaps other gentlemen may be able to answer them for me. I will ask the gentleman two questions. First, as to whether or not this can be done in nine States, as I understood——

Mr. BONYNGE. I understand that is the number.

Mr. McNARY. I understand that when these men have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States they have the right to vote for municipal officers and city officers, and also have the right to vote for Members of Congress and in the election of a President of the United States.

Mr. BONYNGE. I think so.

Mr. McNARY. They have that right?

Mr. BONYNGE. I believe so, in those States which make that provision.

Mr. McNARY. They have the same right that each and very full-fledged American citizen has in that respect?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. McNARY. May I ask the gentleman if he can name those nine States?

Mr. BONYNGE. I do not think that I can state them all. I think Wisconsin is one, Arkansas is another, and Indiana, and Nebraska. Maybe some other members of the committee can answer for their own States. The statement was made to the committee that there were nine. I did not charge my mind with the nine so as to be able to name them specifically.

Mr. McNARY. Does the gentleman consider it fair to require a man in States like Massachusetts, New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, or other States to spend five years and become a citizen, be able to read and write the English language, speaking or reading fluently before he can vote, while in other States men are allowed to vote even for President of the United States without becoming citizens at all? In the course of my political experience I have met men who have lived in Minnesota or in the Dakotas, who had to be naturalized in Massachusetts after having voted for Members of Congress and for the election of President of the United States in those States. Does your committee think it fair to impose rules in regard to naturalization of that character, which will cause men in certain sections of the country to wait a long time before they can vote for any office, while men in other sections are allowed to vote for Members of Congress and President of the United States without being citizens at all?

Mr. BONYNGE. I can only answer that by saying to the gentleman that I think his argument might well have been addressed with force to those who provided that the States should have the regulation of the suffrage question, and if the subject had been delegated to Congress to prescribe the qualifications of voters in the different States, then it would be a question for us to consider; but I do not consider that it is now for us to determine that question at all, nor does the argument address itself to us upon the subject of naturalization.

Mr. McNARY. Except as to the weight of the argument, suggesting a great discrimination.

Mr. BONYNGE. We make no discrimination. The Constitution allows the State to prescribe the qualifications of their own voters; but to Congress has been delegated the duty of establishing a rule of naturalization.

Mr. McNARY. That I clearly understand.

Mr. BONYNGE. So it is for us to determine whether or not——

Mr. McNARY. I ask the gentleman whether he admits that in nine States of the American Union there is practically no need of final naturalization at all and no compliance with the terms of the Constitution in that respect, and that practically men do not need to be naturalized, and yet can vote municipal, State, and national tickets without becoming naturalized?

Mr. BONYNGE. Practically so.

Mr. McNARY. And this law practically will not run in those States at all.

Mr. BONYNGE. It will run in those States. They can not become naturalized. Under the laws of those States they will be able to vote. If I were in one of those States I would seek to change the law, but as a member of this committee and as a Member of this House I can not do it.

Mr. McNARY. The law practically will not run in those States as regards voting.

Mr. BONYNGE. It will run, as far as naturalization is concerned.

Mr. McNARY. Practically it will not run.

Mr. BONYNGE. It will run as far as we can make it run. We exhaust our power on the subject.

Mr. STEENERSON. I desire to correct the gentleman from Massachusetts in regard to the qualifications of voters in the State of Minnesota. No one can vote in the State of Minnesota unless he is a citizen of the United States.

Mr. McNARY. How long has that provision been in force?

Mr. STEENERSON. That has been a provision of the constitution for some years—ten or twelve years.

Mr. BONYNGE. I believe the nine States are mentioned in the report.

Mr. McNARY. A man who was a native of Canada told me that he had voted, I think, in Minnesota or Dakota; my recollection is that he said Minnesota. That was more than ten or twelve years ago, and I think the gentleman will find that up until a comparatively short time they allowed men to vote in Minnesota for all these offices without naturalization.

Mr. HINSHAW. Does the gentleman mean that a man can not vote in Minnesota until he has been five years in the United States and has taken out his final papers?

Mr. STEENERSON. I mean that; yes.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is the law in most of the States.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I want to ask the gentleman, if it be true, as it certainly is, that States have absolutely fixed the qualifications for voters and can authorize aliens to vote, if the importance of this national legislation has not been unduly magnified?

Mr. BONYNGE. It is not alone the right to vote that gives to the question its importance. There are many ways in which the subject of naturalization assumes importance. We have been called upon in many instances to protect those who have had certificates of naturalization that were forgeries when issued. It has great importance in our international relations. The right of citizenship confers other privileges than the mere right of voting.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Of course I realize that it confers other high privileges besides that of voting, but it seemed to me that those who were the most ardent for this legislation—and I do not mean that they are misguided—magnify its importance, believing that it would have a controlling influence upon those entitled to vote, whereas it can have no influence at all except as States may see fit to adopt it.

Mr. BONYNGE. Except as we may establish a standard which States will adopt as their own, and that is for them to determine. I think the gentleman from Iowa must admit that it will correct abuses in many States.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. I have no question about that.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Colorado yield to the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. I will state to the gentleman that until within the last seven or eight years a resident of Minnesota could vote upon having declared his intention to become a citizen and taken out what is known as his "first papers." That was prior to seven or eight years ago. Subsequent to that time a man must not only declare his intention and remain there five years, but take out the final papers before he can vote. Such is the law at the present time.

Mr. McNARY. Was that change made in 1896?

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. That was changed in 1896.

Mr. McNARY. Then my information, Mr. Chairman, was right.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. My information on the subject is quite positive, because I had to do with the matter as attorney and clerk of the city for the last ten years.

Mr. BONYNGE. In answer to the question in what States aliens are permitted to vote, my colleague on the committee, Mr. HAYES, has called my attention to a report made by the Commission, in which the names of those States are given. They are Arkansas, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Texas, Oregon, and Wisconsin.

Mr. YOUNG. If the gentleman will allow me a statement, I wish to say that that statement as to Michigan is an entire mistake. In 1896 we changed the constitution, and since that time we require that every voter shall be a full citizen of the United States.

Mr. BONYNGE. What the gentleman from Michigan says only goes to show that if we change these limitations, the various States will change their qualifications for voters. In my own State up to a few years ago an alien was permitted to vote after he had taken out his first papers. We have changed that, and now we have heard that Minnesota and Michigan have also changed their laws in that respect. I presume it will not be long before other States in the category will adopt the rule prevailing in most of the States.

Mr. HINSHAW. If the gentleman will allow me.

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. HINSHAW. The bill as proposed by the gentleman here might change the State law. The State of Minnesota requires simply that a man shall live there five years and take out his final papers; but this bill will require that he shall be able to read and write the English language.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; to become naturalized.

Mr. HINSHAW. Therefore he could not become naturalized in Minnesota until he had complied with this law, and therefore he could not vote until he could read and write.

Mr. BONYNGE. The object of the bill is to have uniform rules in regard to naturalization.

Mr. HINSHAW. And therefore it would change the law in Minnesota.

Mr. BONYNGE. Not at all; the law deals with different subjects. In this bill we are dealing with naturalization, and the law the gentleman is speaking of in Minnesota is dealing with the voting qualifications.

Mr. HINSHAW. The gentleman does not quite apprehend my point. Since in Minnesota a man can not vote until he has had his final papers, and under this proposed law of yours he can not have his final papers until he can read and write, therefore he must in the State of Minnesota, under this administration of the law, be able to read and write before he can get his final papers and be able to read and write before he can vote.

Mr. BONYNGE. But this bill does not change the law. It says that he shall read and write before he procures his final papers. We can not deal with his qualifications as a voter. This bill does not affect that law at all.

Mr. HINSHAW. I am not objecting to the bill. I think it is a good one.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask a question or two in regard to section 5.

Mr. BONYNGE. We are not taking it up in that order at the present time. I was trying to give a general outline of the provisions of the bill.

Mr. ROBERTS. It is for that very purpose that I desire to ask the question, to ascertain whether there is any change made in existing law with regard to the procedure of a young man under 18 years of age who is seeking to become naturalized?

Mr. BONYNGE. No, sir.

Mr. ROBERTS. If he comes under 18, he can then be naturalized——

Mr. BONYNGE. By the naturalization of his father; but we have made some provisions which will correct many of the abuses that have occurred in naturalization of those who acquire their naturalization through the naturalization of their parents, to which I shall call attention a little later.

Mr. ROBERTS. As I read that section it seemed to me, under its wording, if the young man were under 18 years he must when he becomes 18 make his original declaration, and then later take out his final papers. Is that the correct interpretation?

Mr. BONYNGE. No; he would not be required to do that if he is under 18 years of age.

Mr. ROBERTS. Whereabouts in the bill is that provision for those cases?

Mr. BONYNGE. My colleague says that I am in error in that respect, that he will be required, after reaching 18 years of age, to make his declaration of intention.

Mr. ROBERTS. That is a change of existing law.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; to that extent.

Mr. ROBERTS. So that under this bill all aliens, whether they come to this country under or over 18, must file the original declaration and then supplement that by what is called "the second papers."

Mr. BONYNGE. No; I think my colleague is in error in reference to that. If he is under 18 years of age, he will become naturalized by the naturalization of his parents.

Mr. ROBERTS. But suppose he has no parents?

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, then he would have to, certainly.

Mr. ROBERTS. Am I in error in stating that at present the alien under 18 is naturalized by taking out simply the one set of papers?

Mr. BONYNGE. If he comes without his parents?

Mr. ROBERTS. Yes; but if he is under 18?

Mr. BONYNGE. He takes out only the one set of papers, I believe.

Mr. ROBERTS. And this changes that in that respect?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; he would have to file his declaration and proceed.

Mr. ROBERTS. He is under the same requirement if he comes without his parents under 18 years of age as though he were over 18 years of age?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes. I did not understand the gentleman in the first instance.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BONYNGE] if he does not think this bill, if it becomes a law, will operate unfairly? I have in mind, for instance, immigrants in my section of Minnesota from Canada.

We have many immigrants, say, over 40 years of age, who come from Ontario, Canada, who all speak the English language. We have just as good citizens coming from the Province of Quebec, also in Canada, only a few miles from where the first immigrants started, who do not speak the English language, and they may be of such mature age, say 40 or 45, with a family, that they can not acquire the English language sufficiently to become naturalized. Will not the operation of this law be this—that the man who happens to come from Ontario, where the English language is prevalent, will be able to become naturalized and a voter; whereas his neighbor, only a few miles away, born almost in the same neighborhood, having been brought up under the laws of Canada, comes to the United States, settles in Minnesota or any other State, but is unable to acquire the English language in the five years prescribed, will labor under the disadvantage of not being able to become naturalized, although in every respect as to morality, industry, intelligence, and education he may be the equal of the other? Does it not seem as though it might operate a little unfairly in cases of that kind?

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, I have no doubt that there will be some desirable immigrants who can not comply with the provisions of this act and who will be excluded from naturalization, but who would make good citizens; however, on the whole, considering the welfare of all the people of the United States, we believe the educational qualification to be required of all the immigrants. I think I have stated enough in reference to that qualification to have the committee understand that that is the new qualification provided for by the bill, and when we reach the section of the bill that includes this provision it will then be open for discussion upon its merits.

I now desire to proceed to outline the other provisions of the bill. The other additional qualification that is required from the alien is that he shall in his petition for naturalization declare that it is his intention to reside permanently in the United States. We have made that requirement for this reason: A great many cases have been called to our attention where immigrants have remained here simply long enough to get their certificates of naturalization and then have returned to a foreign country, intending to reside permanently in their own country, but to claim the protection of the United States. We think before we should naturalize an alien in this country it ought to be his intention to reside permanently with us. Those are the two additional qualifications for naturalization that we have in this bill. The rest of the bill, Mr. Chairman, is in effect either administrative or provides a code of procedure, stating the method which an alien shall adopt to become naturalized. We provide that the Bureau of Immigration shall be converted into the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization. The purpose of doing that, Mr. Chairman, is that there shall be one central body, having the records of all the immigrants who land upon our shores and general supervision of the subject of naturalization. This particular provision has been recommended to Congress by several of our Presidents—by President Arthur, President Cleveland, and, I think also, by President Roosevelt. Some have recommended that the Bureau should be under the Department of State, but after considering the matter fully, the committee thought it would be best that it should be under the Department of Commerce and Labor, where the Bureau of Immigration now is. The reasons that controlled us in making that selection are, first, that immigration and naturalization are very closely connected, and all of the records and the statistics relating to immigration being in the Bureau of Immigration, under the Department of Commerce and Labor, it would be more available for the new Bureau of Naturalization if those two were connected.

In addition to that we save the expense of establishing a new bureau by consolidating this work which is so intimately connected under the one Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization. Now, in reference to the courts that shall have jurisdiction of the naturalization of aliens. Under the present law the courts in the different States, many of them of very limited jurisdiction, exercise jurisdiction in naturalization cases. I believe that naturalization should be a grave judicial proceeding; that the immigrant should be impressed with the importance of the procedure, and we have provided by this bill that jurisdiction in naturalization cases should be confined to the Federal courts and to the courts in the different States having a seal, a clerk, and jurisdiction in actions at law when the amount in controversy is unlimited. In general, it may be said that that means the highest nisi prius courts in the different States and courts that have unlimited jurisdiction in actions at law. The commission recommended that naturalization should be confined to Federal courts. The committee did not adopt that suggestion for this reason, that it would in some States require the immigrant to travel many hundred miles to go to the place where the Federal court is held. It would concentrate the business so much in the Federal courts that it would practically block naturalization of aliens, so we felt if we gave to the various State courts having unlimited jurisdiction and to the Federal courts that there would be enough courts in the different States to handle this business and at the same time it would be handled by courts of greater dignity and of more importance.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Colorado yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. This provision of the bill would exclude a class of courts in the State of Massachusetts, which courts have a clerk and a seal, but the jurisdiction of which is limited to one and two thousand dollars, respectively. These courts are called "district" and "police" courts in the State outside the city of Boston, and called "municipal courts" in the city of Boston. In the city of Boston they discharge the bulk of the legal business transacted in that city, although the superior court and the supreme court sit there regularly. Now——

Mr. BONYNGE. Let me say, if the gentleman will pardon me, if they transact the bulk of the legal business in that city their time must be pretty well occupied, and it must relieve your other courts, so your other courts could give better attention to naturalization cases than if these lower courts were to have jurisdiction in such cases.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. That ought to be so, and that is a plausible answer, but the fact is both the nisi prius courts and the courts of the grade of which I speak are extremely busy; but we are able to get the courts of the grade I speak of—that is, the grade next below the nisi prius court—to sit in the evening for the purpose of naturalizing aliens, and I am certain that——

Mr. BONYNGE. Is not that usually done just before election?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. BONYNGE. We want to correct that very practice, I will say to the gentleman.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I do not know how the gentleman will be able to correct it. That is the time when the people become active and when the desire to get men naturalized arises, and I do not know of any way that you can compel men to become naturalized at other seasons of the year.

Mr. BONYNGE. I will call the gentleman's attention to one of the provisions of the bill that I think will correct it. We provide in this bill that no courts shall naturalize aliens within thirty days of any general election held in the State.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I think there is a question of policy involved in that, but it will be time enough to discuss that when we reach it. What I wanted to point out to the gentleman is this: That the superior courts in the State of Massachusetts, in my judgment, will never sit in the evening for the purpose of naturalizing aliens.

Mr. BONYNGE. I hope they will sit during the regular business hours of the day.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. And the result will be that you will erect by national law another bar to the becoming of citizens by aliens, which, in my judgment, is not desirable.

Mr. BONYNGE. It is not sought to make any bar against the naturalization of aliens, but only to protect and guard the procedure and have it open and before the public.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. But this is the condition: I have seen, for example, in the United States district courts 2,000 prospective citizens huddled together, waiting to have their papers passed upon. I have heard the judge declare that he would hear 50 or 100 cases, after which all the rest would be dismissed. Perhaps 1,500 men, who each had lost a half day's pay, would be obliged to go home discouraged with the result of that day's work, and would not come again. Now, if these men were honestly entitled to naturalization, it seems to me in that instance justice was not done, because it ought to be the policy in this country to enlarge the number who will become good citizens.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes, sir; and that policy will still be preserved. I do not think you will have a rush of 2,000 after this bill goes into effect, at one particular time. They will not have the inducement to apply for naturalization at any specific time after this bill goes into effect, if it does, but that naturalization will take place at different times throughout the year.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Oh, no. The gentleman will find, and I would be willing to predict it, that if he prevents naturalization for a period of thirty days prior to election that the great bulk of the naturalization will be done in the thirty-five or thirty-four or thirty-one days prior. In other words, the men will wait until the last minute, and you will have just the same crowding and confusion.

Mr. BONYNGE. They have such a law as that in several States. In New Jersey, my colleague says, that law is in effect, and I think there is a similar provision in the State of New York.

Mr. PAYNE. In New York it is ninety days. And that has worked well in my part of the State, and there is no rush like there used to be for naturalization just before election. There is no rush period of ninety days before election. But I do not know how it is in other States, but in my own State the provision has worked well as a corrective of that evil.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I would like to ask if these abuses of the naturalization laws have not occurred when men go by hundreds and thousands at the same time to be naturalized?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And under circumstances where no court can give proper investigation to the rights of applicants for citizenship as to their identity. And has not that practice created more criticism, and more just criticism, against our naturalization system than any other single thing?

Mr. BONYNGE. The gentleman is exactly correct, and it is to correct that evil we have made this provision.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Then, the purpose of this is to correct the very evil the gentleman from Massachusetts is defending?

Mr. McNARY. Now, on this matter of identification, let me ask the gentleman here whether the identification of the alien can not be fixed and determined in the local court, where a man is known, and where the witnesses are known, better than in the United States court, or a court of larger jurisdiction, where it would be utterly impossible for the judge to have knowledge of the man or of his witnesses?

Mr. BONYNGE. Undoubtedly that is true, and accordingly the bill contains this provision that the naturalization jurisdiction of all courts herein specified, both State and Federal, shall relate only to the respective jurisdictions of said court.

Mr. McNARY. To carry out the point made by my colleague, if you take a district like Suffolk County, which has 600,000 population, now how would the judge have any knowledge of the men and witnesses in any such situation as that?

Mr. BONYNGE. They will under other provisions of the bill, I think; because, without going into all these details at this time, let me say to the gentleman from Massachusetts that it will be necessary, if this bill be enacted into law, that the alien shall produce first the certificate of registry from the Bureau of Immigration, which will contain his identification, a description of the man. A certificate is given to him when he lands in this country, and he must produce that with his petition for naturalization and attach it to his petition. The man will also have a declaration of intention, which will likewise contain a description of the man. He must produce his two witnesses in open court, and I think under the provisions of this bill we have guarded as safely as it is possible for us to do by legislation against one man entering under another man's name, or frauds of that character.

Mr. McNARY. Let me ask, what are the costs?

Mr. BONYNGE. Eleven dollars for naturalization.

Mr. McNARY. How much for the certificate from the Immigration Bureau?

Mr. BONYNGE. Nothing.

Mr. McNARY. How much for his first declaration?

Mr. BONYNGE. One dollar.

Mr. McNARY. For the final?

Mr. BONYNGE. He pays $5 when he files his petition, and when he gets his certificate $5 more; $11 in all.

Mr. McNARY. Now, the ordinary rates in the courts in Massachusetts would be $1 for the first declaration, $2 for the final, and if the clerk makes out the papers and the man does not get a friend to make out the papers, then he would pay the clerk $2 more, which makes it $5. Now, you have increased the cost by this bill from $6 to $8. Now, one point I want to make is that it seems to me that this bill, so far as I have been able to get it now, is somewhat like the Chinese-restriction act in its character of its certificates.

Mr. BONYNGE. Not at all.

Mr. McNARY. Well, perhaps that might not be the purpose; but it looks so.

Mr. BONYNGE. I will say to the gentleman, if he will permit me here, that the fees provided for by this bill for naturalization in the United States are less than those charged by any other important nation on the face of the globe. In England they pay $30 for naturalization.

Mr. McNARY. I would like to ask the gentleman whether there is any other country that naturalizes anything like the great number that this country does?

Mr. BONYNGE. There is no country; none but this.

Mr. McNARY. Certainly no European country does. Does the gentleman know what are the naturalization laws in the Argentine Republic or Chile, which correspond more nearly to the general character of development and civilization of this country?

Mr. BONYNGE. No; I can not answer that question.

Mr. McNARY. That is a fair comparison. No European country can be used as a fair comparison.

Mr. BONYNGE. The reason for these fees is that there will be much more work required of the clerk, and we have got to provide for paying those fees. That is a matter of detail which hardly affects the general outline of the bill that I am attempting to give to the committee.

Mr. McNARY. Now, let me ask the gentleman this question: Does the clerk get the fees or do they go to the Government?

Mr. BONYNGE. The fee goes to pay the additional expense. The clerk gets one half and the other half goes to the Government.

Mr. McNARY. Now, we have wiped out the fees in most cases to United States clerks.

Mr. BONYNGE. I think not.

Mr. McNARY. I think so in Massachusetts.

Mr. BONYNGE. That may be done in Massachusetts.

Mr. McNARY. We have wiped out the clerk's fees in the district and circuit courts of the United States in Massachusetts.

Mr. BONYNGE. I do not dispute the gentleman's statement, so far as Massachusetts is concerned.

Mr. PAYNE. Now, with us, in the United States courts, the clerk is covering in the fees now.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is true.

Mr. WALDO. He is covering in all over $3,000.

Mr. BONYNGE. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want very briefly to state the procedure that all aliens will have to adopt if this bill is enacted into law in order to become naturalized citizens.

I have mentioned the fact that the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization will have general control of the entire subject. I have named the courts that will have jurisdiction in such cases. Now I wish to state what will be required of the aliens.

In answer to some questions that have been addressed to me I have also mentioned the fact that the immigrant will be given a certificate when he lands upon our shores, which will contain his description, the vessel, if he came by a vessel, that brought him to our shores, and other facts to identify him. At any time he may make his declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States. That declaration he can make before the clerk of any of the courts authorized to exercise jurisdiction in naturalization cases.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. I should like to ask the gentleman if there is any provision in the bill whereby an alien who arrived here thirty or forty years ago can become naturalized when he has no such certificate?

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, yes; certainly.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. There is such a provision?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes. The provision that he shall produce that certificate only applies since 1900, since which time the Bureau of Immigration has been issuing such certificates. If he landed upon our shores prior to 1900, it is not required of him that he produce a certificate, because no such certificate was given to him, and it would therefore be unreasonable to ask it of the people who came before that time.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. Does the gentleman not think that in many instances an immigrant may have lost his certificate?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly, but he can procure a certified copy from the records.

Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania. Is this certificate equivalent to a declaration of his intention?

Mr. BONYNGE. No; that certificate is given to him when he lands upon our shores for purposes of identification.

Mr. PATTERSON of Pennsylvania. It establishes a date.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; it establishes the date, the identity of the person, the vessel upon which he came, if he came by a vessel. At any time thereafter he may make his declaration of intention to become a citizen, and that he can do on oath before the clerk of any court authorized by this act to naturalize aliens, or before the deputy clerk. When he makes that declaration he also declares that it is his bona fide intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce allegiance to all foreign potentates or powers. In that declaration shall be contained the name, the age, the occupation, the personal description, the place of birth, the last foreign residence and allegiance, the date of arrival, the name of the vessel, if any, in which he came to the United States, and his present place of residence in the United States, all of which is required of him for identification purposes, and is, I think, a good provision.

After having made his declaration of intention to become a citizen, at any time within five years thereafter he may file his petition in writing in any of the courts authorized by this act to exercise jurisdiction in such cases to become a citizen of the United States. That petition must be in duplicate. It is required that he shall set forth in that petition all of the facts which would qualify him for naturalization.

The bill provides for certain specific forms for all these proceedings. These forms are furnished by the Bureau of Naturalization to the different courts of the country, and are in blank form, so that the alien or the clerk can fill out the answers to the questions.

Mr. McNARY. What do these blanks cost the alien?

Mr. BONYNGE. Nothing. They are furnished by the Bureau of Naturalization to the courts, and by the clerk are furnished to the alien.

That petition must be filed under the provisions of this bill at least ninety days before it is acted upon by the court. The object of requiring ninety days to elapse between the filing of the petition and the consideration of the petition by the court is to enable the clerk of the court to comply with other provisions of this act, which require him to furnish to the Bureau of Naturalization at Washington a statement of the petitions on file in his court for naturalization, setting forth the names and such information as the Bureau may ask for.

Mr. BURNETT. The gentleman stated, as I understood, that at any time within five years he may file the petition. The gentleman, I think, is in error. It is any time not less than two years nor more than five years.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is true; not less than two nor more than five years; because prior thereto he would not have been in the country for the required time prescribed in the present statute, which provision is not changed in this bill. There must be five years' residence.

Mr. McNARY. Except in the case of the eighteen-year provision. In that case he must stay longer—at least seven years.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Will my friend allow an interruption?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Has the time been extended that is now required for residence in the country—five years?

Mr. BONYNGE. No; five years.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Is there a provision in this bill like the present law which would enable a minor coming to this country to get naturalized?

Mr. BONYNGE. With his parents?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. With or without his parents, to secure second papers, to secure his full citizenship without obtaining the first papers?

Mr. BONYNGE. He would have to make a declaration of intention after he arrived at the age of 18 years, if he came here without his parents. If he came here with his parents, the naturalization of his parents would naturalize him.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. And the old provision of the law has been done away with?

Mr. BONYNGE. In that respect it has.

Mr. HINSHAW. May I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. HINSHAW. What is the minimum time that must elapse between a declaration of intention and the procuring of the final papers?

Mr. BONYNGE. Two years.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. BONYNGE. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to ask the gentleman in regard to two features of the bill.

Mr. BONYNGE. Probably I will reach them in the regular order.

Mr. ROBERTS. I want to know if there had been any change of the existing law as proposed in this bill in regard to the penalty for fraud in procuring naturalization.

Mr. BONYNGE. We have made elaborate provisions in regard to that matter.

Mr. ROBERTS. Have you changed existing law in regard to the penalties?

Mr. BONYNGE. In what particular case? We have five or six sections in this bill dealing with crimes and frauds against naturalization.

Mr. ROBERTS. I see that section 25 prescribes the penalty for all frauds——

Mr. BONYNGE. No; there are several sections prescribing different penalties for different offenses, whether it is the fraud of the clerk of the court or the fraud of the immigrant or the fraud of other officers.

Mr. ROBERTS. I am speaking of the frauds of those who had assisted in procuring naturalization. Section 25 provides that any person who procures——

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, I do not like to refuse to answer the gentleman from Massachusetts, but I do not see how an answer to that question, or going into these details of the matter, can in any way assist this committee in getting a general idea of the provisions of the bill. It will be very pertinent when we reach the section for discussion.

Mr. ROBERTS. The gentleman will pardon me, but I understood the gentleman to say that he wanted to give a comprehensive idea of the bill.

Mr. BONYNGE. A general summary of its provisions.

Mr. ROBERTS. It seems to me, then, that in doing that the gentleman might point out where it changed existing law.

Mr. BONYNGE. I probably will soon reach that section of the bill to which the gentleman refers. I am now on the subject of what the alien shall do to become naturalized.

Mr. ROBERTS. I beg the gentleman's pardon; I supposed the gentleman had left that subject.

Mr. SPERRY. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. SPERRY. Will this cut out the court of common pleas in any State?

Mr. BONYNGE. That depends upon what the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas may be. What is the jurisdiction of a court of common pleas that the gentleman has in mind? Is it a court of unlimited jurisdiction in actions at law?

Mr. SPERRY. I think it is.

Mr. BONYNGE. Then it will not cut it out.

Mr. SPERRY. If it is limited, then it will cut it out?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes. I think that answers the gentleman. The bill also provides, Mr. Chairman, that the United States, through its attorneys, shall have an opportunity, if cause exists therefor, to oppose the naturalization of an alien. After the clerk of the court where the petition has been filed notifies the Bureau of Naturalization at Washington of the filing of the petition, if that Bureau finds any good, substantial reason from the records it has on file to oppose the naturalization of a particular alien, either because he is not the person he represents himself to be or that he did not arrive in the country at the time he says in his petition that he did arrive, or for any other reason or cause that he is not entitled to naturalization, the Bureau may call on the United States district attorney for the district where the court is located and in which the petition is filed to oppose the naturalization of that alien. Appeals are provided for from the decision of the court either by the alien or by the United States Government.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Will the gentleman allow me a question on the subject of appeals?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I do not know of any case in our entire system of government where appeals are required or provided by law from the State courts to the Federal courts from ordinary proceedings. I suppose there is no question about the right to provide for an appeal from a nisi prius court directly to a Federal court where the decision involves the right under the Federal statute, as it does in naturalization.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And the committee has worked that out.

Mr. BONYNGE. I think the provision is perfectly legal, and I believe it can be sustained.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Chairman, I understand the bill provides for an appeal directly from the State courts to the Federal courts on the granting or the withholding of citizenship.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; it arises under a Federal statute.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think that is a competent exercise of power, although I do not know of its ever having been exercised in the history of this country before.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Mr. Chairman, I did not read the provisions of the bill to which the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BONYNGE] refers, and therefore I would ask him whether in the bill he has made provision for the manner of appeal?

Mr. BONYNGE. We have limited the time within which it may be taken, that is all. It will be governed by the general provisions for appeals.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Is it not stated to what court the appeal is to be taken?

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, yes; "to have the right of appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals of the proper circuit and in such case as is described by section 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891," which provides certain cases where the question arises under a treaty or involves a constitutional question.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Suppose that the proceedings be initiated in the State courts, as, for instance, in the State of New York, in the supreme court, that court having jurisdiction of naturalization matters under the provisions of this act, and appeal be taken, there is nothing in the bill now before us which provides expressly that the appeal shall be taken from the State court to the Federal court, I take it.

Mr. BONYNGE. In this bill?

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. The gentleman says an appeal shall be taken to the circuit court.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Does not that make it rather vague?

Mr. BONYNGE. That in any naturalization proceeding in any court exercising jurisdiction under this act either party shall have the right of appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended so that he may be permitted to conclude his remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Colorado may be extended in order that he may be permitted to conclude his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, it is required by the provisions of this bill that the hearing in naturalization cases be in open court; that the applicant shall appear in person before the court and produce his two witnesses in open court. We do that for the purpose of preventing the frauds that have so often been perpetrated in these cases and to impress the alien also with the importance of the proceeding to which he is a party. The oath of allegiance must be taken by the alien in open court. We have elaborate provisions in the bill for keeping all records in such proceedings, requiring the clerks to keep a duplicate of the declaration of intention, and also a stub of the certificate of naturalization, so that there shall be a complete record in every court of all aliens naturalized by that court, and in the Bureau of Naturalization, at Washington, there shall be a complete record of the naturalization of all aliens who may became naturalized under the provisions of this bill after it goes into effect. We have also provided in reference to the certificate of naturalization that it shall be upon safety paper furnished by the Bureau of Naturalization and that those certificates shall be consecutively numbered. These provisions are all intended to prevent the sale of these certificates to people who are not entitled to them. It came to the attention of the committee, and it has been stated many times in the press, that certificates of naturalization have been sold not only in the United States, but sold in foreign countries to people who have never been upon our shores, and that immigrants have landed upon our shores carrying with them fraudulent, counterfeit, and false certificates of naturalization that were sold to them upon the other side of the globe. These matters that we have provided for the keeping of record and the care of the certificates are to prevent such cases as those.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. Chairman, I have read that statement a number of times, that certificates of naturalization have been sold to people, and I have seen it in the newspapers. This committee has heard gentlemen on this whole subject. Can they give any definite statements as to such a practice or whether or not such certificates have been sold or who sold them and to what people?

Mr. BONYNGE. I can give the gentleman a few cases, if he will pardon me for a moment until I refer to the report of the Assistant Attorney-General, who had some people convicted for doing that very thing. Joel Marx made a report to the United States Attorney-General. Mr. Marx was the special assistant United States attorney appointed to prosecute frauds against the naturalization laws. He mentioned some of these cases:

These cases are included in the inclosed tabulated statement, the particulars of which are as follows: Robert Bunoro and Joseph Capparelli were engaged in making and uttering forged certificates of citizenship, which found ready sale in Italy, to enable immigrants to gain admission into the United States, which, upon investigation, were found to be forgeries. The entire certificate, including the copy of the seal of the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, had been forged.

Mr. McNARY. What happened to those men?

Mr. BONYNGE. I think they are among those that were convicted by the prosecution.

Mr. McNARY. And sentenced?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; sentenced. I believe he states what the sentence is. I will read a little further:

In April, 1903, Bunoro and Capparelli were arrested and the entire outfit for the printing of these certificates, including the forged seal of the United States district court, were captured. They were indicted on June 26, 1903, and upon conviction were sentenced to serve a term of eighteen months in the State prison at Sing Sing, N. Y.

Mr. McNARY. Is not there existing law sufficient to deal with those cases?

Mr. BONYNGE. Sufficient to punish after the crime has been committed, but not sufficient to prevent the perpetration of the wrong. It is far more important, I will say to the gentleman from Massachusetts, that we should prevent the commission of a crime than that we should catch the criminal after he has committed it and put him in jail, and in order to prevent the commission of crime we have provided these safeguards in the issuing of certificates of naturalization, and I can not conceive what possible objection anybody can have to saying that the certificates of naturalization that are issued should be given to the people who are entitled to them and that they shall not be used for fraudulent purposes. That is all we have sought to do by this bill and by these provisions to which I have just called to your attention.

Mr. McNARY. Let me call the gentleman's attention to the fact that nobody is objecting to it, but the gentleman misses the point of my request. I asked him whether the law is not sufficient now and he admits it is sufficient.

Mr. BONYNGE. To punish the criminal.

Mr. McNARY. To apprehend and punish. There is no law sufficient to do any more in this or any other country and the gentleman can not quote one. If it is possible for people to forge naturalization certificates now it is just as possible to forge the certificates of which the gentleman speaks. Why not? You can duplicate the seal, can you not?

Mr. BONYNGE. We are trying to provide similar safeguards to those that are in force in regard to the issuance of our money. Of course, counterfeit money is sometimes circulated, but we have minimized the amount of danger just as far as we possibly could.

Mr. McNARY. Does the gentleman think, from his observations on that committee, there were any large number of such cases as he has indicated?

Mr. BONYNGE. I think there were a large number of cases.

Mr. McNARY. Where?

Mr. BONYNGE. There were 1,916 fraudulent certificates canceled in two years that came to the attention of this special United States attorney. I think everyone who has examined the question carefully could not fail to be convinced there were a great many other cases which were not detected. These provisions not only minimize the possibility of the commission of such crime, but they help the detection of the crime after it had been committed.

Mr. McNARY. Were any such cases shown outside of New York City?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. McNARY. Where?

Mr. BONYNGE. There were some in different sections of the country.

Mr. McNARY. But you do not recall where.

Mr. BONYNGE. No; I do not recall each of these specific cases to mind. It would be impossible to carry those 1,916 cases in my mind.

Mr. McNARY. Well, I asked that question because I have heard of no such accusation made anywhere except against New York City, and what I want to get at was, if no such practice prevails anywhere else we are practically reorganizing the whole law on the subject because in New York City cases arise that ought to be met by the officers of the Government there.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman permit?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. We have had just such cases in the city of Philadelphia, where they have been brought into court and convicted.

Mr. McNARY. Did the gentleman get convictions of the fraudulent registration of thousands upon thousands of votes in the city of Philadelphia?

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. I answered the gentleman in good faith, and when I have been able to overturn his statement then he gets off the question.

Mr. McNARY. No; the point I wanted to add is this: That a few cases of fraudulent naturalization is not by any means as bad an offense against American citizenship as sixty or a hundred thousand fraudulent registrations done by American citizens in one city.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. The gentleman may consider it legitimate debate when he makes a statement on one question and it is knocked out to try to drag up something else, and when we are discussing a bill we are supposed to discuss it in good faith.

Now, I wish to state further, in answer to the gentleman's question, that in New York City it is necessary for a street vender to be a naturalized citizen, and it was testified before our committee that hundreds of forged naturalization papers were sold almost openly to these venders in order that they could get their license.

Mr. McNARY. I would like to ask the gentleman whether or not—I simply and solely hurt his vanity a little bit by talking of Philadelphia—whether or not, to state it frankly before the people of this body, he believes the crime of naturaiization is at all comparable with the 60,000 or 100,000 fraudulent registrations discovered by the mayor of Philadelphia?

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. I will answer the gentleman. He picks out Philadelphia, I suppose, as a Democrat, as a Republican city. I will take New York as a Democratic city, and I will tell him the difference between Philadelphia and New York. When there was a change we accepted the votes of the people and abided by the result, but in New York they did not dare to open the ballot boxes nor count the votes. [Applause.]

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield for a discussion of questions that have absolutely no reference to the bill before the committee. The question as to whether we punish people who commit election frauds is a separate and distinct question. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McNARY] ought not to expect that in a naturalization bill we are going to correct all the crimes and all the evils that may exist anywhere throughout the United States. It is not very practical to say that one crime is worse than another, and that because one crime may happen to be a little worse than another we ought not attempt to prevent the commission of the crime of lesser degree. We are dealing with the crimes against the naturalization laws. We are seeking to prevent them. We are seeking, in case they are committed, to provide for their detection and their punishment. I think it is a purpose that ought to meet with the unanimous support and the approval of all members of the committee. [Applause.]

Mr. JAMES rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Colorado yield to the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. BONYNGE. I do.

Mr. JAMES. What is the amount that the clerk now receives for certifying these papers of naturalization?

Mr. BONYNGE. At the present time?

Mr. JAMES. Yes, sir.

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, that varies in every State of the Union. There are hardly two States alike.

Mr. JAMES. The amount that he will receive under this bill if it becomes a law is $8, is it not?

Mr. BONYNGE. The clerk?

Mr. JAMES. Yes.

Mr. BONYNGE. No; he gets $5 in each case. Eleven dollars is the cost to the alien, and $5 of that amount goes to the clerk for his additional service and $5 to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. JAMES. Does not the gentleman think that is an unusually large amount to pay to the clerk for that sort of service?

Mr. BONYNGE. It is the cheapest anywhere in any government on earth.

Mr. JAMES. That may be true. How long does it take a clerk to make out these papers? They are furnished him by the Government?

Mr. BONYNGE. He has to keep a record, and he has to keep the records bound. There will be considerable clerical work involved.

Mr. JAMES. He does not have to pay for the binding of the records, does he?

Mr. BONYNGE. He makes a return to the Bureau of Naturalization when these petitions are filed. He will be in correspondence with that Bureau to a very considerable extent.

Mr. JAMES. Can he not certify all of these papers in two minutes?

Mr. BONYNGE. I do not think so; not at all. The average of naturalizations in the United States is 100,000 a year.

Mr. JAMES. I understand that, but could he not attend to all the work necessary to naturalize one man in an hour?

Mr. BONYNGE. To naturalize one man in an hour?

Mr. JAMES. Yes; and certify all the papers.

Mr. BONYNGE. He does not do it all at one time.

Mr. JAMES. I understand; but put all of his work together, and could not he naturalize two in an hour?

Mr. BONYNGE. I do not think he could.

Mr. JAMES. He could do one in an hour, anyhow?

Mr. BONYNGE. I do not know how long it would take, but what it requires of him is attending to first the declaration of intention. Suppose he fills out that blank and explains it to the alien. Then in two years or three years afterwards, when that alien comes back, he makes out his petition for him.

Mr. JAMES. That is all furnished by the Government.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; but the blanks have to be filled out.

Mr. JAMES. I understand.

Mr. BONYNGE. He may be called upon to issue subpœnas; he has to enter an order of the court in each of these cases. After a declaration of intention has been made and after the petition has been filed, he is required to send a statement to the Bureau at Washington.

Mr. JAMES. Now, the point I was making is, that it appears to me that it is an exorbitant charge that you allow the clerk to make.

Mr. BONYNGE. Now, if the gentleman thinks so, when that provision of the bill is reached, I have no doubt he will offer an amendment to cut it down, and we will discuss the amendment whether it shall be adopted or whether the opinion of the committee shall prevail.

Mr. JAMES. If a man in good faith wants to become a citizen of this country, it ought to be possible for him to do so without the clerk collecting from him an exorbitant fee in order to obtain the right to become an American citizen.

Mr. BONYNGE. We do not desire that he should collect an exorbitant fee. All we want the clerk to have is a sufficient compensation for the work he performs. If in the opinion of the majority of the committee the amount we have named is more than he should have, it is for them to correct it by an amendment. We think it is not. We think when you come to consider the entire provisions of the bill and know what is required to be done by the clerk that you will agree with us that the amount asked the alien is not unreasonable. He is not required to pay it all at one time. The first dollar is paid when he makes the declaration of intention. He is not required to make any additional expense until he files his petition, which he may do not less than two years nor more than five years after the declaration of intention. Then he will pay $5. When he gets his certificate of naturalization—and only in case he gets a certificate—he will pay the additional $5.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman explain what additional expense the clerk will be put to in issuing these certificates for which he is to receive compensation?

Mr. BONYNGE. There is no petition now required to be filed in the court at all. The clerk is not required to keep a duplicate of the declaration of intention. He is not required to make a special order and enter the order upon the records of the court. He is not required now to send any statement of the business done in naturalization to any bureau in Washington.

Mr. STAFFORD. That is not the point. That is additional labor rather than additional expense. My question was, What additional expense is the clerk put to for which he will receive $5?

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, I did not understand the gentleman's question. The additional expense is not given to the clerk. He does not get $5 for each certificate. The clerk gets one-half of the $10. He gets $5 for all the services from the time the alien makes his declaration of intention until the certificate itself is issued.

Mr. STAFFORD. What additional expense will the clerk have by reason of the work required in this bill?

Mr. BONYNGE. We believe that the clerk will be required, especially in many of the large cities in the country, to have additional clerical force to transact that business, and that additional clerical force he is required to pay out of these fees that we allow to him.

Mr. STAFFORD. As the officers and clerks of the courts are now constituted, is there not provision made by law for the payment of salaries of assistants to the clerks in the performance of the labor connected with the duties of their respective offices?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. STAFFORD. And will not that work be done in these cases and no additional expense whatever incurred by the clerks of court.

Mr. BONYNGE. I think not. I think that in many cases he will require additional clerical force. So far as the State courts are concerned we can not compel the State courts to exercise jurisdiction in naturalization. They may or they may not, just as they see fit. But if they do, they must do it in accordance with the provisions of our law. But we have no control over the State courts, so that we could not compel them to exercise jurisdiction in these cases; and if we put on the clerks additional labor in our State courts, and additional expenses, we must provide for that additional expense.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I understood the gentleman to say that from the time the alien filed his petition to be naturalized until his certificate was issued the clerk received $5.

Mr. BONYNGE. No; the alien pays $5 when he files his petition for naturalization, and then when he gets his certificate he pays the other five.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I understood you to say that the fee that went to the clerk was for his services, because he is clerk; to wit, $5, and that the excess over and above that was to pay for the extra labor that would be occasioned.

Mr. BONYNGE. He gets one-half of all fees that are paid into his court.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Where does the other half go?

Mr. BONYNGE. To the Treasury of the United States, to maintain this Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and provide for the clerks, assistants, and help necessary at Washington, and the agents that that Bureau will employ.

Mr. JAMES. How many aliens were naturalized in New York City last year?

Mr. BONYNGE. I have heard the number stated, but I can not give it from memory. The total in the United States was approximately 100,000.

Mr. JAMES. How many, would you say, in New York City?

Mr. BONYNGE. I will ask my colleague [Mr. HAYES] whether he remembers what number were naturalized in New York City last year. The statement was made before our committee, but I am unable to say from memory.

Mr. HAYES. The gentleman from the southern district of New York, who appeared before our committee, stated that in the neighborhood of 5,000 were naturalized in the southern district of New York.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is the southern judicial district.

Mr. JAMES. Does that include Brooklyn?

Mr. HAYES. I suppose it would.

Mr. BONYNGE. No; I think not.

Mr. JAMES. Say 10,000 in New York City.

Mr. BONYNGE. I suppose the gentleman is endeavoring to arrive at how much the clerk can get. Let me call attention to the fact that there is a limit of $3,000 beyond which he can not go.

Mr. JAMES. What is the limit?

Mr. BONYNGE. Three thousand dollars.

Mr. JAMES. Then you limit him to $3,000 in a place like New York.

Mr. BONYNGE. He can not go beyond that, unless the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, upon the petition of the clerk, finds that it is necessary that he should have additional compensation for an increased force beyond that which the $3,000 would provide for.

Mr. JAMES. What becomes of the rest of the fees received? Where do they go?

Mr. BONYNGE. To the Government.

Mr. JAMES. When he has already received as much as $3,000 for this naturalization of aliens, then the balance over and beyond that goes to the Government?

Mr. BONYNGE. Goes to the Government of the United States.

Mr. JAMES. But you then leave it within the power of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to pay him an additional amount?

Mr. BONYNGE. Provided the clerk can satisfy the Secretary of Commerce and Labor that the business of his office requires an additional force which can not be compensated for with the $3,000.

Let me state the object of that. It was made upon the earnest solicitation of the member of the committee from New York City, and I suppose, to a certain extent, the same would also be true of Boston and Chicago and other large cities, that the additional work that would be required by the provisions of this bill would make necessary the employment of a number of clerks. We do not seek to prevent naturalization in any case where the alien is entitled to it. We have not sought to throw bars or obstacles in the way of naturalization. We want to provide the machinery by which those entitled to naturalization shall have the opportunity to be naturalized and not to delay them in their naturalization.

Mr. JAMES. There is no limit fixed upon what the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may allow for these services?

Mr. BONYNGE. No.

Mr. JAMES. It is possible for him to allow an additional amount of $40,000, where there are 10,000 aliens naturalized, is it not?

Mr. BONYNGE. I suppose it is possible that he might steal all the money that came into his hands.

Mr. JAMES. Oh, no; but I am saying he could take the gentleman's speech as a basis, as to the extraordinary labor he had to perform, and show that to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and upon that he could say, "I have naturalized 10,000 or 12,000 people, and this additional amount ought to be allowed." Could he not take the gentleman's own speech as a basis for such a request as that?

Mr. BONYNGE. I should like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky whether he thinks, if he were making an application as clerk of a court for an additional allowance, that he would base his application upon the statement made in debate that additional labor would be required, a statement which is true, without also showing to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor what labor was required of him and what clerks he had, or do you not believe that it would be necessary to show within the requirements of this bill that there was an increase of labor that would justify the Secretary of Commerce and Labor in making an additional appropriation to that clerk?

Mr. JAMES. I might rely upon a speech of a Member of Congress, if he had the reputation that my friend from Colorado has and had given the matter the study and attention that he seeems to have given it—I might rely on that to a great extent. But we have seen where judges of the United States courts have certified that they expended $10 where they did not expend but two——

Mr. BONYNGE. We have heard a good deal of talk about that.

Mr. JAMES. And this committee ought to have guarded this by providing a maximum amount above which the Secretary of Commerce and Labor could not go.

Mr. BONYNGE. We think that we have guarded it sufficiently, but if the gentleman from Kentucky thinks that it is not guarded sufficiently, I have no doubt with the eminent ability that the gentleman from Kentucky possesses he will be able, when that section of the bill is reached, to offer an amendment which will absolutely prevent the dire consequences that are disturbing the gentleman's mind.

Mr. JAMES. I will accept that as a retort courteous to my inquiry.

Mr. HINSHAW. Will the gentleman permit me?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. HINSHAW. In section 2, on page 4, it says "not less than two years nor more than five after he has made such declaration of intention, he shall make and file in duplicate a petition in writing." Thus, if a man, after he has taken out his first papers, allows more than five years to pass before applying for the second, he must begin again and take out his first papers.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; the declaration of intention has served its purpose and no longer is of value to the alien.

Mr. HINSHAW. If he must go back and take out new first papers then he must allow two more years to pass.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; but he has had five years' time since he made the first declaration to apply for his final papers. He was entitled to them two years after he made the declaration of intention. We extended the time three years. Now, if he does not think enough of American citizenship within five years after he made the declaration to take out his final papers, we do not think that we require anything in the nature of hardship if he has to begin over again.

Mr. HINSHAW. There is nothing to bar him from beginning again and taking out his first papers?

Mr. BONYNGE. No; he can begin over again and take out his first papers.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I believe I have generally given an outline of the bill. There are sections in the bill defining crimes against naturalization and prescribing penalties therefor. There are also sections prescribing the forms to be used in all naturalization proceedings. I believe I have in this way given a general outline and a summary of the provisions of the bill. If there is any member of the subcommittee or of the Committee on Naturalization and Immigration that desires to add anything to what I have said, I would be glad to yield to him.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I would like to ask my friend about the provision in section 9:

SEC. 9. That no alien shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted as a citizen of the United States who can not write in his own language or in the English language, and who can not read, speak, and understand the English language.

This section provides an educational test.

Mr. BONYNGE. That was discussed before the gentleman came on the floor, and it will be reached for general discussion when the sections in the bill are read for amendment. I have explained to the committee that this bill did prescribe an educational qualification for naturalization.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I do not particularly object to this paragraph, but you say "who can not read and understand the English language." This is construed by a great many newspapers printed in German and other languages as a discrimination in favor of the inhabitants of Great Britain who come here, against the people coming from Germany, France, Scandinavia, and other countries. In other words, you find in this country a great many communities of German-speaking people, or of people who speak Swedish, Scandinavian——

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. And Dutch.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. And Dutch, Italian, and Hungarian, and while in theory it is eminently desirable for them to acquire the English language, and we should do everything possible to hasten the moment when they shall have acquired that language, as a matter of fact they are living together and do not come in contact with people speaking the English language, so that they are unable to acquire a knowledge of that language. They read the newspapers printed in their own language, they are in every sense of the word good Americans, they conduct themselves as loyal citizens of the country, and the only difference between them and us is a difference in tongue. That is, it is not the difference of mind or of heart or of brain, but a difference of a twist of the tongue; that is all.

Now, I say that this discrimination is possibly unjust, and it will work a hardship to a great many.

Mr. BONYNGE. I will say to the gentleman this: He has stated, as I recall his language, that it is well for us to do everything in our power to hasten the day when they will learn to speak the English language.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Yes.

Mr. BONYNGE. So that they can read our laws and understand them in the language in which our laws are written. Does not the gentleman believe that such a provision as this in a naturalization bill will hasten the day when they will learn to speak and understand the English language? They will come to this country and will want to become citizens. We will want those people to become citizens of the United States, and we will give them the five years, and they will receive notice that if they want to enjoy all the privileges of our citizenship they must in those five years' time learn enough of our language to be able to speak and understand it.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. In theory this is right, but let me state the practice to the gentleman. An immigrant is usually a man who is past the school age—that is, he is in most cases a person of, say, from 15 to 30 or 35 and 40. When he sets foot upon the soil of this country he will have to hustle, to use a usual term, for a living. He has to work from morning until night. If he happens to live in a large city he will have the benefit of evening schools and can acquire the English language there. but if he happens to live in country districts where such schools do not exist and where he is obliged to work from morning to night and where he merely associates with his own people—that is, the people who speak his language, it will be almost impossible for him to acquire a knowledge of the English language which is required here, and what would be the actual and practical effect of that? It is that we keep from citizenship, we prevent from being identified with our institutions men who are entirely willing to become American citizens, men who are fit and competent to become American citizens but for that lack of knowledge of the English language.

Mr. BONYNGE. Does the gentleman believe that immigrants assimilate with us better if they understand the English language than if they do not?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. That is a question. I would say to the gentleman this, that you take, for instance, a good American newspaper printed in the German language. That paper educates its readers in every possible way in American ideas and up to American ideals. It teaches them what the law is in this country, what our institutions are, and what it is to become a good American citizens, so that if a man reads a German paper and not an English paper at all, it is just possible that he may become just as good an American citizen, is it not?

Mr. BONYNGE. Certainly. I do not intend to be understood as saying that because he does not speak the English language he will not become a good American citizen; but I think if he understands the English language, whether he understood it when he came to this country or not, if he acquires a knowledge of the English language he will more readily assimilate with us than if he retained his own language and lived wholly with his own people.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I agree with that. I would much prefer him to know the English language.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Does not the present bill prevent the naturalization of an alien who can not read, speak, and understand the English language? That is the language of the bill.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes. The gentleman means if this bill should become enacted into law that a person could not be naturalized unless he could read, speak, and understand the English language?

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Yes. Who shall determine whether he can speak and understand the English language?

Mr. BONYNGE. The court. He has to appear in court. We have to leave it to the discretion of the court.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Does not the gentleman from Colorado realize the fact that there are at present a large number of excellent American citizens, thoroughly American in spirit, comprehending the purpose of our institutions and voting intelligently at the polls, who do not write the English language and who do not as fully understand the English language as many of those who are brought up and educated in the public schools of this country?

Mr. BONYNGE. I have no doubt there are a great many of them.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. That being so, why should not such persons, being aliens otherwise entitled to naturalization under the provisions of this bill, be allowed to come in and be enrolled into citizenship of this country?

Mr. BONYNGE. I have no doubt, I will say to the gentleman from New York, as I believe I did in answer to some other gentleman who asked practically the same question, that there may be some who will be excluded under the provisions of this bill who would otherwise make good citizens, but on the whole I believe that it is better for our citizenship that those who acquire it should have an understanding of the English language, which is the language of the country, and we do not think it is any hardship because the opportunity will be afforded to all of them during the five years to acquire that knowledge. We do not require that they shall learn to write in our language during the five years. I think that would be unreasonable, but we do require that the alien must either write in his own language or in the English language. That is in the alternative so far as writing is concerned. He must speak, read, and understand the English. I think the gentleman will agree with me, as did the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT], that a man who speaks, reads, and understands the English language is more apt to be in sympathy with our institutions and to assimilate better than one who does not.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. But would you shut the door to the thousands upon thousands of aliens who are fully in accord with our institutions and with everything that pertains to good citizenship, but who unfortunately have not been able to acquire the use of the English language so as to understand it and so as to speak it and read it?

Mr. BONYNGE. I will say to the gentleman from New York I do not believe that anybody who sincerely desires to acquire that knowledge within five years, living in this country, could not qualify himself under the provisions of this bill for naturalization. It is true that in the past they have not, because the inducement to them has not existed. If we hold out to them this inducement and say to them, "Before you are entitled to citizenship in the United States you must acquire this knowledge," I believe there will be very few of them at the end of five years who sincerely and earnestly want to fit themselves for American citizenship who will not be entitled to have it.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Now, you take the large number of foreign publications, or, rather, as my friend from Missouri said, the American papers printed in foreign languages. Take the German, Scandinavian, Norwegian papers, and hundreds of other papers published throughout this country in foreign languages. Persons of the character I have mentioned read these papers. They inform themselves of what is going on in the community. They read the editorials in those papers, as well written as you find editorials in many of the papers printed in English and——

Mr. BONYNGE. I have no doubt of that at all, but let me say to the gentleman, do you not believe the tendency would be to have more papers printed in the English language among the people you have described if we had this provision in our bill instead of having those papers printed in the language of those people?

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. I think not. On the other hand, I think that instead of holding out an inducement to these thousands upon thousands of people otherwise qualified, holding out to them an opportunity to come in and assimilate with us and become good citizens, you simply shut the door upon them. Many of them are workmen, they are laboring people toiling from morn until night, and some late into the hours of night for a living. To get the instruction necessary to qualify for citizenship under the pending bill is very hard under present conditions, and they do not have the same opportunity as the young people—as, for instance, the boys and the girls—to acquire a knowledge of the English language, so as to speak and understand it as this measure evidently contemplates. The result is that these toiling masses, perfectly willing to enter into the spirit of American citizenship, who love this country, who adore the flag, will be kept out because you have shut upon them the door of opportunity. Is not that so?

Mr. BONYNGE. We do not feel it is so. We feel every one who did desire could in the course of five years qualify himself for citizenship.

Mr. COCKRAN. I would like to ask the gentleman from Colorado if there be an educational test on the right to exercise suffrage in the State of Colorado?

Mr. BONYNGE. No, sir.

Mr. COCKRAN. Under this bill a more severe test is placed on admission to citizenship than on the exercise of its highest right.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes, sir; because we can not deal with the subject of the qualification of voters in the respective States through Congressional action. That subject is relegated to the different States, as the gentleman from New York well understands.

Mr. COCKRAN. Certainly. Now, I would like to ask the gentleman from Colorado, because I have not heard his explanation of the bill, what evil affecting the security of the Government or the prosperity of the nation does he expect to remedy by this measure imposing a severer test on mere admission to citizenship than his own State and the other States of the Union, with one or two exceptions, have found it necessary to impose on the right of suffrage?

Mr. BONYNGE. If the provisions of this bill should be enacted into law, those who apply for naturalization without having this qualification will not be able to vote even in my own State, because they must have their final papers, and they could not receive their final papers without meeting the requirements of this bill.

Mr. COCKRAN. But in some States——

Mr. BONYNGE. In some States they would.

Mr. COCKRAN. So we would have this spectacle under the operation of this measure, that men whom this law, in effect, denounces as unfit for citizenship and who could not become citizens would be helping control the governments of States.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is true now in some States. A man is allowed to vote on his first papers, and in other States it is required that he shall have his final papers. We can not make a uniform rule, unfortunately, regarding the qualifications of voters.

Mr. COCKRAN. That is quite true; but the gentleman realizes the fact that under existing law there could not be a condition in which a man is excluded even from admission to citizenship and at the same time be exercising the sovereign power of citizenship by voting for Members of this House or any other officers that are chosen by suffrage?

Mr. BONYNGE. That is a matter that the State has entire control of. It is for each State to determine whether they shall permit them to do so or not. We are here, as I think I said before the gentleman was on the floor, dealing with the subject of naturalization. In the end, upon this proposition it must be determined by a solution of this question, namely, Is this requirement beneficial; is it necessary; does it raise the standard of our citizenship? We can not determine whether or not this qualification should be required for all naturalization, by deciding whether or not a State will permit a person without that qualification to vote, but we must meet it as an independent question. There is an argument to be made upon both sides of the proposition. I realize that. The argument should be confined to the subject of naturalization, for this is the subject we are dealing with, whether or not this qualification is a good qualification and required of an applicant for naturalization.

Now, when that section of the bill is before the committee I can well understand that there will be strong arguments made against it, and, I think, very strong arguments in its favor. We listened to the arguments on both sides. We believed, as a committee, that the stronger argument was in favor of requiring this qualification. The Committee of the Whole House may differ with us. We hope to be able to convince them that the conclusion we arrived at was right.

Mr. COCKRAN. It is to get the conclusions of the committee and the reasons which led to them before the Committee of the Whole that I propound these questions.

Mr. BONYNGE. The gentleman was not present, I think, when I stated that my object this afternoon was not to discuss or go into an argument in detail in regard to the different provisions of the bill, but, in opening the question, to put before the Committee of the Whole in a general way the provisions of the bill—to summarize it—so that they will have a general understanding of its provisions, and then when we take up the bill section by section to argue and discuss these provisions.

Mr. COCKRAN. With that statement, of course, Mr. Chairman, further questioning on that head would be inopportune and premature. But I might ask this question: I see that the alien is required to write some language?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. COCKRAN. And then to read, speak, and understand the English language?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. COCKRAN. Well, of course a man who can write any language and can read, speak, and understand the English language would be able to write the English language.

Mr. BONYNGE. Not necessarily.

Mr. COCKRAN. I confess I am not able to discover the distinction.

Mr. BONYNGE. I think a German might be able to write in his German characters and not be able to write the English language, and yet be able to read and speak the English language.

Mr. COCKRAN. That may be a possibility. If the gentleman's mind can grasp that a German able to write his own language could read and understand——

Mr. BONYNGE. I have mentioned only one, but I think there are others.

Mr. COCKRAN. I will not pause to discuss that, but does the bill provide any machinery by which examination into a man's knowledge of the English language can be conducted?

Mr. BONYNGE. No, sir; it leaves it to the court. He must satisfy the court. That is what is required of the alien—that he must satisfy the court.

Mr. COCKRAN. Does it prescribe how well he must speak it?

Mr. BONYNGE. No, sir.

Mr. COCKRAN. Must he speak it grammatically?

Mr. BONYNGE. No, sir.

Mr. COCKRAN. Does not the gentleman think that he ought to make provisions against encouraging assaults on the national tongue by untrained minds?

Mr. BONYNGE. I think not.

Mr. COCKRAN. One word more. The general purpose of this measure, as I understand it, is to modify the naturalization laws in three respects——

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, no; it is to provide a uniform system of naturalization, and adds two essential qualifications to the right of naturalization.

Mr. COCKRAN. Yes; I understand.

Mr. BONYNGE. And add two new qualifications for the right of naturalization.

Mr. COCKRAN. One is to do away with the right of a person who comes here under 18 years of age to take out final papers without a prior declaration of intentions.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is not one of the qualifications. I am sorry that the gentleman did not do me the honor to be present when I endeavored to explain the bill.

Mr. COCKRAN. Which was a loss of which I am keenly sensible, due entirely to the fact that I supposed the House was engaged in pension bills, and was not aware that this bill was being considered. Now I am endeavoring to recover the loss.

Mr. BONYNGE. I will be very glad to answer any questions the gentleman desires to ask, so far as it is possible for me to do so.

Mr. COCKRAN. This bill does aim to take away the right of a person coming under 18 years of age to be naturalized without a prior declaration of intentions?

Mr. BONYNGE. The bill does this: When an alien comes here under 18 years, without his parents, he will be required to make his declaration of intention after he reaches the age of 18 years.

Mr. COCKRAN. And it imposes an educational qualification.

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; to the extent of these sections that I have referred to.

Mr. COCKRAN. And it raises the cost of naturalization from $3——

Mr. BONYNGE. There is no uniform cost.

Mr. COCKRAN. From $3 to $11?

Mr. BONYNGE. In some States, I believe, it runs as high as $10 at the present time.

Mr. COCKRAN. It fixes another amount than the one usually exacted?

Mr. BONYNGE. It fixes a uniform rate that will be enforced all over the United States, instead of having, as now is the case, a few dollars in one State and up to $10 in others.

Mr. COCKRAN. These are the three modifications or changes of the naturalization law?

Mr. BONYNGE. Not at all, I will state to the gentleman. It is necessary to repeat, of course, in order to answer the question the gentleman has propounded. It establishes what courts shall have jurisdiction.

Mr. COCKRAN. Yes.

Mr. BONYNGE. It also provides a uniform procedure from the inception of the application for naturalization until it is consummated in the final issuance of the certificate. It attempts to guard against frauds and crimes that have been committed against our naturalization laws, and prescribes penalties for the commission of such crimes. It establishes a Bureau of Naturalization in Washington, which will be required to keep an accurate record of the naturalization certificates issued throughout the United States, and it authorizes the United States Government, through the United States attorneys, in cases where cause may exist, to oppose a petition for naturalization. It provides a procedure for the cancellation of certificates of naturalization that may be obtained through fraud of any kind. It provides that the alien should live at least one year in the State in which he makes the application for naturalization. It provides that the examination of the alien shall be made in open court, and provides for two witnesses to be examined before the court. Now, that is it, in a general way; I suppose I have omitted some other provisions, and while I did not, perhaps, mention the one, two, three, or four to which the gentleman from New York has referred, it includes those and some others that I have heretofore mentioned.

Mr. COCKRAN. The gentleman has misapprehended my question. I did not ask what all the features of the bill were, but how far they modified the requirements and conditions of naturalization—not the procedure of naturalization.

Mr. BONYNGE. The procedure can be put under one head as one feature of the bill. I think that is a very, very important feature; that we should exercise the authority given to us by the Constitution of the United States to establish—to use the exact language of the Constitution—"to establish an uniform rule of naturalization." That this bill does; and I think it is very important.

Mr. COCKRAN. Nobody disputes that. I merely wanted to know what particular modifications were proposed in the conditions to naturalization, not the procedure.

Mr. BONYNGE. Those I have mentioned, and the educational qualification; and one that may not seem very important at first, but we think it will correct some of the evils—that the applicant shall declare that it is his intention to remain permanently a citizen of the United States.

Mr. COCKRAN. Let me ask the gentleman this question: If he has stated it before I came in, of course I shall not ask him to repeat it, for I can read it in the RECORD. Has the gentleman informed the committee of the reasons that have impelled such an important change as this? Has he shown any damage that has resulted to the country, any peril to its institutions, any danger to its Government from the lack of these provisions?

Mr. BONYNGE. I have attempted to call attention to some of them, and in the discussion of the bill, when its various provisions are considered during the reading of the bill by sections, probably will refer to others.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Colorado yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. The gentleman has stated what purpose he desires to accomplish by this bill. Is it the idea of the gentleman from Colorado that he is to establish through the influence of this enactment uniformity in citizenship and franchise laws of the country?

Mr. BONYNGE. We did not take that into consideration, although I have no doubt it will have that tendency.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. If you did not have that in your mind as a desirable end, lack of uniformity may lead to confusion.

Mr. BONYNGE. I do not know how any State can legislate upon that subject at all.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Why, certainly.

Mr. BONYNGE. The entire power and control over naturalization is confined to Congress.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. The gentleman does not understand me. Your State, for instance, requires a man to take out his second papers before he can vote.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is a different subject.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I am talking about section 9 now. We will assume for the sake of argument that the State of Indiana allows a man to vote on his first papers, and some of the other States do. Would not confusion result, just as the gentleman from New York states—that one State would permit a man to vote for every officer to be chosen, while another deprived him of that right?

Mr. BONYNGE. My answer is, there would be no greater confusion than there is now. In some States a person is permitted to vote upon his first papers, as the gentleman has stated, but in others they require final papers. In some States women are permitted to vote; in others they are not. That subject is left entirely to our State governments. The question for us to determine here is whether we shall have a uniform system of naturalization. We can not undertake to regulate the right of suffrage in the different States in the Union.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. No; that is very true; but I want to emphasize this. In my Congressional district, for instance, there are thousands of Hollanders, who speak, read, and write the Dutch language. There are no better citizens in this country than the Dutch. They know what good government is and what the blessings of liberty mean. Their ancestors fought and struggled for liberty. They are patriotic people. They are among the best citizens of our State. They are frugal, enterprising, and prosperous. They are Christian people. I would not, for anything, have these people discriminated against.

Mr. BONYNGE. Let me ask the gentleman, Does he not think that those people can, in the course of five years, qualify themselves to meet the provisions of this bill?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. If they were people of leisure; but they are not. Having resided among them for many years, I am unable to speak their language, and they are unable to speak my language; and yet those splendid people have their own vehicles of public thought. Their own newspapers and magazines, printed in their native tongue, furnish to them the daily news and keep them in touch with the best public thought. I say that any attempt to impose an educational qualification upon citizenship is an abridgment of patriotism [applause] and an unfair discrimination against unfortunate people, whose hearts may be alive to every national responsibility.

Mr. HOGG. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Certainly.

Mr. HOGG. Is any injury to come to American citizenship from being intelligent?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I hope not. This is the most intelligent citizenship in the world.

Mr. HOGG. Is there any reason why the American people should not preserve the rights they guarantee to every citizen, that the people who exercise this right should be Americans?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. The gentleman presupposes that we inherited this Government.

Mr. HOGG. Well, we did.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. We did not inherit it. It was taken away from our oppressors; and I say to the gentleman that many of the battles of this nation have been fought by men who did not understand our language.

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, not altogether. I would not detract from them any of the credit to which they are entitled, but, while they undoubtedly contributed to our success, it is not true that many of our battles have been fought by men who did not understand our language.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Over and over again.

Mr. BONYNGE. If the gentleman will permit me, nobody will dispute the fact that those who can speak our language and understand it will, as the gentleman from Missouri said, more readily assimilate with us and our institutions.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I am not so sure of that.

Mr. BONYNGE. The gentleman is sure about it?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I am not so sure about it.

Mr. BONYNGE. Does the gentleman contend that men more readily assimilate with our institutions if gathered together in local communities where they use the tongue of their native land rather than the tongue that is in use throughout the United States?

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. Good citizenship, as the gentleman from Colorado knows——

Mr. BONYNGE. I did not say good citizenship.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. But I am talking about good citizenship. I am talking about citizenship that stands for your country's ideals. I am talking about citizenship that educates its children to be patriotic and country loving, that breeds no vice or disasters, that harbors no unworthy influences. I am talking about citizenship that lives in the heart of the American patriot as well as the head. I am not talking about fortunate citizenship segregated and set apart by early education. I have known many men to fill with credit high public station whole situation in early life barred them from even common schools.

Mr. BONYNGE. I have no question about it.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. I have known many a man in high public place that could not parse a sentence, and I say that one of the best evidences of the greatness of your country, of its stability, of its permanency, of its right to lead, is the fact that men come from every quarter of the globe, and, shaking off their environment, link their fortunes with ours, lead in the battle of good citizenship that uplifts the entire country; and I say further that any mere book learning that circumscribes their rights or keeps them from participating in our Government when they are otherwise well qualified is an act of absolute injustice. [Applause.]

Mr. BONYNGE. The provisions of this bill do not prevent anybody from coming to our shores. We are not dealing with the immigration question. We simply say to them, "Come here and enjoy the blessings of this Government if you wish to. We open our schools to you; we give you every possible facility to fit yourself for naturalization and become a part of our citizenship. All we ask of you is that during the five years that you are living here qualifying yourself for citizenship you shall acquire a sufficient knowledge of our language to satisfy the court to which you make application for naturalization that you make yourself able to understand our language."

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. But you fix no standard.

Mr. BONYNGE. No; because I think it would be impossible to fix a standard that would apply in all cases. If I was sitting on the bench as a judge, I certainly should not regard the grammar of a man as a qualification.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH. But some other judge might.

Mr. BONYNGE. All a man would be required to do under the provisions of this bill would be to satisfy the court that he could read and understand the language, regardless of whether he used it grammatically or not. If he could understand our language so that he could familiarize himself with our laws and take part in the discussions and listen to the discussion of questions affecting the welfare of the nation, that would be sufficient.

Mr. COCKRAN. Will the gentleman allow me?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes.

Mr. COCKRAN. Does not the gentleman realize that if the language is as valuable as he says it is, taking liberties with its grammar must be almost a crime? [Laughter.]

Mr. BONYNGE. No; and the gentleman from New York does not so regard it, nor do I think the gentleman's remark adds anything at all to the discussion of this question.

Mr. COCKRAN. If the gentleman puts a knowledge of the English tongue at such a high valuation as to make it a qualification for citizenship, can he afford to treat as of slight consequence that which goes to the very vitals of the efficiency and value of the language?

Mr. BONYNGE. The gentleman from Colorado has no difficulty in satisfying his own mind—I do not know whether he can satisfy the gentleman from New York or not—but there is a vast difference between trying to establish a standard of knowledge of the language and saying that a man shall be able to write and understand a language; that he is better fitted for citizenship by that knowledge I have no doubt, whether he uses the language grammatically or not.

I have no question that the gentleman in his practice as an attorney has examined many witnesses who could not use the English language grammatically, but who were even able to understand the intricate, difficult, and complex questions that the gentleman from New York propounded to them.

Mr. COCKRAN. But surely the gentleman does not pretend that knowledge of the language was ever made a qualification for admitting a man to the witness chair?

Mr. BONYNGE. It has often been made the qualification as to whether or not he should have the aid of an interpreter, and it was not required before he should speak in our language that he should speak it grammatically. If he could speak and understand it he was denied the assistance of an interpreter; so that the gentleman will readily see that it is possible for the court to determine whether or not a person can read and understand the language, whether he uses it grammatically or not.

Mr. COCKRAN. Would the gentleman consider that a person who spoke two languages badly, ungrammatically, was more intelligent than a person who spoke one language well.

Mr. BONYNGE. It would altogether depend upon the individual.

Mr. COCKRAN. But under this bill a man who could speak two languages badly would be eligible, while a man who spoke one grammatically might be ineligible for citizenship.

Mr. HOGG. Mr. Chairman, I think we can all well understand that there are many men from other portions of the country who speak the language quite well who are not entirely intelligible. [Laughter.]

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has just proved it. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. HOGG. And if the gentleman is in doubt about it, I shall apply it specifically. Many a man can parse and not be fit for citizenship. Many a man may come from Ireland, as we have, and still not understand the genius of our Government.

Mr. COCKRAN. That proposition, Mr. Chairman, I challenge. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOGG. I will admit this much to the gentleman from New York, that a gentleman who comes from New York or from Ireland always understands everything. [Laughter.]

Mr. COCKRAN. There is at least one exception, and this time the gentleman from New York proves it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOGG. It is one of the inherent things that belongs to the race, that they understand everything. Now, I desire to ask the gentleman from Colorado one question with reference to what the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH] said.

Mr. BONYNGE. If the gentleman will confine himself to the bill, I shall be glad to answer it. I have already occupied the floor for two hours.

Mr. HOGG. The purpose of the bill is to make our citizenship more intelligent.

Mr. BONYNGE. With reference to this particular provision, the educational qualifications, that would be true, but that is not the sole purpose of the bill.

Mr. HOGG. Why should it not be?

Mr. BONYNGE. Because we want to guard against these frauds and abuses, to which I also called attention, and have a uniform system of naturalization throughout the country.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. And also because there is no power in the Federal Government to reach the illiterate natives of the States. The only illiterate the Federal Government can reach is the alien.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH] has given us a very beautiful definition of liberty. I desire to ask the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BONYNGE] if he thinks if all the Members of the House present here this afternoon had been Dutchmen they could have understood the argument he has made and the argument the gentleman from Michigan made?

Mr. BONYNGE. No; and I am afraid some who speak the English language may not have understood it [laughter], but the difficulty has been with those gentlemen who have not understood it and not with the expression of the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. Chairman, I have looked through the bill rather hurriedly, trying to listen to the gentleman's remarks, and one point I have not been able to make clear in my mind, and that is, as to whether or not the naturalization of an alien naturalizes his children?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; it does.

Mr. MCNARY. Where is that in the bill?

Mr. BONYNGE. We have not changed existing law in that respect. We have not repealed it. We have repealed certain specific statutes. We have a repealing section in this statute, but have not repealed that feature of it.

Mr. MCNARY. I understand.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BONYNGE] argues that an educational qualification here in regard to obtaining the right of naturalization to become an American citizen would elevate the standard of American citizenship. I want to know whether or not in his opinion an educational qualification for voters throughout the States would elevate the standard of citizenship.

Mr. BONYNGE. If the gentleman asks for my individual opinion, I would say yes.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I would like to ask the gentleman this question: Does not this discriminate in favor of that class of immigration coming over here——

Mr. BONYNGE. No; it does not deal with the immigration question at all.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Is it not a fact it is going to have this effect, that it is going to permit people coming from Great Britain to take public land while it is going in a very large measure to prevent those coming from other countries——

Mr. BONYNGE. No; because on a declaration of intent to become a citizen——

Mr. VOLSTEAD. He must be a citizen before he proves the homestead.

Mr. CHANEY. I would like to ask the gentleman if in the study of the language the bill does not restrict the immigrant to any particular school? It enables him to learn the language in any school?

Mr. BONYNGE. Yes; whether he learns it in school or by contact with the people. It makes no difference.

Mr. SMITH of California. It seems to me the theory of the bill and its discussion to-day as well have been on the matter of voting almost entirely.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is what I endeavored to make clear, that the discussion of that did not really relate to this bill.

Mr. SMITH of California. That is what I think. Now, then, putting the matter of citizenship entirely aside, what evils have ever been apparent in this country growing out of the naturalization of foreigners who come into this country? As I interpre the bill from a hasty examination it endeavors to make naturalization quite difficult.

Mr. BONYNGE. No, sir; it endeavors to guard against the commission of fraud in naturalization, but in doing so there are some provisions which will make naturalization not as easy as it has been heretofore, and that must necessarily be so.

Mr. SMITH of California. Have there ever been any considerable number of frauds committed in the matter of citizenship except in connection with the elective franchise?

Mr. BONYNGE. Oh, yes; thousands of them.

Mr. SMITH of California. What is the difference between the foreigner and the naturalized citizen outside of the matter of the elective franchise?

Mr. BONYNGE. You asked whether there were other frauds except election frauds committed against our naturalization laws. Here are the certificates to which I called attention early in the day.

Mr. SMITH of California. What were they used for?

Mr. BONYNGE. Used for the purpose of gaining admission to the country, used for the purpose of claiming the protection of the United States Government by an alien living permanently abroad and holding in his pocket a certificate of naturalization in the United States.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And several hundred were sold by United States consuls in China recently.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. HASKINS having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 3506. An act for the relief of Henry E. Rhoades, assistant engineer, United States Navy, retired; and

S. 4952. An act making an appropriation for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia River.

BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION, ETC.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. BONYNGE. I yield to my colleague on the committee, who has asked for a few minutes' time.

Mr. HAYES rose.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Chairman, before the gentleman sits down——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado was given permission to conclude his own remarks. The Chair does not understand that he can yield time to another. Now, the gentleman from Colorado having concluded his remarks, the Chair will ask if there is a member of the committee who desires to be recognized in opposition to the bill.

Mr. STEENERSON. Before that is done, I would like to ask the gentleman from Colorado——

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I would like to ask, as this comes with a unanimous report from the committee and as there is no agreement for a division of time, I would like to inquire whether some arrangement could not be made so that the opponents of the bill could have time if they chose?

Mr. BONYNGE. Very well; I shall be very glad to do anything reasonable in that respect.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I shall request some time.

Mr. BONYNGE. When we get into the House some arrangement of that kind can be made.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the Chair state the parliamentary situation. The gentleman from Colorado, in charge of the bill, having been heard, now it is in order under the rule for any member of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization to ask to be recognized in opposition to the bill, and the Chair will ask if there is any such member of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization?

Mr. BURNETT. I am a member of the committee, and I desire to be recognized in opposition to section 9—just a suggestion or two on that proposition and that alone.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair first will ask if there is anyone on the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization who desires to be recognized in opposition to the bill as a whole? If not, he will then recognize any Member of the House.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. If my colleague from New York who is on the committee were here, I am certain that he would yield to me. So certain am I, that on an occasion heretofore he said that I might be recognized in his time. He is not present. May I therefore ask to be recognized in his time? I ask unanimous consent that I may be recognized.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will again ask if there is anyone on the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization who desires to be recognized in opposition to the bill as a whole?

Mr. BURNETT. The entire bill?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. BURNETT. I do not.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GOLDFOGLE] is recognized for one hour.

Mr. STEENERSON. I will ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. GOLDFOGLE] to yield to me, so that I may ask a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from New York [Mr. GOLDFOGLE] yield so that the gentleman from Minnesota may ask a question?

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Five minutes.

Mr. STEENERSON. I would like to ask the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BONYNGE] if he answered the question put by my colleague from Minnesota, as to what effect the adoption of this bill and its becoming a law would have upon the operation of the homestead law? The gentleman is well aware that no one can prove up a homestead until he is a full citizen of the United States.

Now, the result would be, it seems to me—and I will ask if it is not true—that all of those immigrants who can learn the English language in five years will be able to make final proof, but those who are unable to acquire that tongue, although they may be as well educated as any gentleman present or anywhere else in the world, would be deprived of the right to prove up their homestead?

Mr. BONYNGE. He can file on the land without having his final papers.

Mr. STEENERSON. Yes; but he can not prove up; he can not get the patent. If he does not prove up in seven years, it is forfeited to the United States.

Mr. BONYNGE. That is a matter for discussion—that is, what effect that will have on this requirement.

Mr. HAYES. Will the gentleman from New York [Mr. GOLDFOGLE] yield to me for half a minute until I can correct a misapprehension?

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Certainly.

Mr. HAYES. I want to state that I have satisfied myself that the southern district of New York, which was referred to in the discussion, embraces the whole city of New York, and the clerk of that court was before us and stated that on an average there were 5,000 naturalized in his district in one year. That includes the whole city of New York.

Mr. COCKRAN. If the gentleman will permit me to interpolate a statement here, I would inform him that it does not include Brooklyn, which is a separate district. The city of New York includes Brooklyn, Flushing, and a large part of what was Queens County. What the gentleman undoubtedly means is that the Borough of Manhattan—the old city of New York—is in the southern district.

Mr. HAYES. The gentleman is right. I thank him for the correction.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 13538. An act to incorporate The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION, ETC.

The committee resumed its session.

[Mr. GOLDFOGLE addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. GOLDFOGLE. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time, and ask leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LAWRENCE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 15442) to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States, and had come to no resolution thereon.

CHANGES OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent the Committee on War Claims was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 4348) for the relief of Augustus Trabing, and the same was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to change the reference of some papers from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which they were sent by inadvertence, to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads. They were papers put in the basket to accompany a resolution introduced by me yesterday, which resolution was referred to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

The SPEAKER. Touching what subject?

Mr. COCKRAN. Touching the admission of a certain publication to the use of the mails. The papers in question were official transcripts of judicial proceedings in the State of New York, to which reference was made in the resolution.

The SPEAKER. That is sufficient to identify them. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

Mr. SOUTHWICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Education be considered to have been passed without prejudice in the call of committees at the last call and that it shall be called at the next call of committees.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 3288. An act to authorize the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania and Newark Railroad Company, or their successors, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River; and

S. 4128. An act permitting the building of a dam across the Red Lake River at or near the junction of Black River with said Red Lake River in Red Lake County, Minn.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 4952. An act making an appropriation for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia River—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

THE ZEBULON MONTGOMERY PIKE MONUMENT ASSOCIATION.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 13783) to provide souvenir medallions for The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of aiding in securing a proper and adequate celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the southwest expedition of Lieut. Zebulon Montgomery Pike and of the exploring of the territory of the upper Arkansas Valley, including portions of the States of Kansas and Colorado and of the Territory of New Mexico, said celebration to be held at some proper place in the immediate vicinity of Pikes Peak, Colorado, in the year 1906, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to have prepared, in the United States mint at Philadelphia, two dies for medallions, of such design and size as may be designated by The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Colorado, and approved by him; and he shall have made and struck, at some one of the mints of the United States, from these dies such number of medallions of silver and bronze, not to exceed 100,000, as may be requested by the said monument association, the net proceeds from the sale of the said proposed medallions to be applied exclusively to the fund to defray the expenses of construction and erection of a monument to said Pike and of the exercises in dedication thereof under the auspices of the said monument association.

SEC. 2. That the material from which said proposed medallions are to be made shall be furnished by the Director of the Mint of the United States to the superintendent of the mint at which the same shall be struck, on or before the 15th day of April, 1906, in such amounts and in such proportions as the president of the said The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association may request, within the limits of cost provided by this bill, and the said superintendent of said mint shall deliver said medallions, when made, to the said president of said The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association; and there is hereby appropriated for the purposes of this act the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, out of any funds of the United States not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendments, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

In place of section 2 insert the following:

"SEC. 2. That material from which said proposed medallions are to be made shall be furnished by the Secretary of the Treasury on or before the 1st day of May, 1906, in such amounts and in such proportions as the president of such The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association may, in writing, request, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall deliver said medallions, when made, to the president of such The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association upon the payment to the Secretary of the Treasury of an amount not less than the cost thereof."

Amend section 1, page 2, line 9, so that the same shall read: "Silver or bronze not to exceed in the aggregate 100,000 and in such quantities as."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill just reported with the amendments offered by the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I do not object to the consideration of the bill if it be considered as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill as amended? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BROOKS of Colorado, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

DAVID A. JONES.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President be requested to return to the House of Representatives the bill (H. R. 8494) granting an increase of pension to David A. Jones.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the House, under its previous order, adjourned until Monday next, at 12 o'clock.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of Pawtuxet Cove, Rhode Island—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting an estimate of appropriation for additional clerks in the Office of Commissioner of Indian Affairs—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Secretary of Commerce and Labor submitting an estimate of appropriation for the Coast and Geodetic Survey—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, with a favorable recommendation, a draft of proposed legislation relative to leasing lands of minor Indian allottees—to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. VOLSTEAD, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2296) restoring to the public domain certain lands in the State of Minnesota, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2173); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WANGER, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 14316) to further enlarge the powers and authority of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service and to impose further duties thereon, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2174); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MARTIN, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15328) to approve certain final proofs in the Chamberlain land district,

South Dakota, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2175); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 8278) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue patent to Keystone Camp, No. 2879, of the Modern Woodmen of America, to certain lands for cemetery purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2176); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 15259) to authorize the North Mississippi Traction Company to construct dams and power stations on the Bear River, on the northeast quarter of section 31, township 5, range 11, in Tishomingo County, Miss., reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2177); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. DAWSON, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1649) providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2178); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1804) providing for the use of certified checks to secure compliance with proposals and contracts for naval supplies, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2179); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. JENKINS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the House resolution (H. Res. 350) requesting information from the Secretary of the Treasury relative to extra compensation received by the United States district attorney for the southern district of New York, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2180); which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. COUSINS, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13851) authorizing the appointment of dental surgeons in the Navy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2181); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bills of the House H. R. 117 and H. R. 1232, reported in lieu thereof a bill (H. R. 16484) to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act relative to the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1901, accompanied by a report (No. 2182); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ROBERTS, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 283) to provide suitable medals for officers and men of the Navy and Marine Corps who participated in certain engagements of the civil war, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2183); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. MEYER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 13895) to correct the naval record of Michael Sheehan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 2184); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LITTAUER, from the Committee on Appropriations: A bill (H. R. 16472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes—to the Union Calendar.

By Mr. SHERMAN: A bill (H. R. 16473) to amend section 2826 of the Revised Statutes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 16474) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint commissioners to estimate damages done to planted oysters and oyster beds in Raritan Bay and adjoining waters in New York and New Jersey, and to make compensation therefor—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BABCOCK: A bill (H. R. 16475) to incorporate The Washington Auditorium Company—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: A bill (H. R. 16476) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Honolulu, Hawaii—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 16477) to authorize the erection of a monument at Fort Seybert, W. Va., to commemorate the capture and massacre of Captain Seybert and a number of men and women at that point and in the South Fork and South Branch valleys of the Potomac by the noted Indian chief Kill Buck and his band of Indian warriors in the year 1758—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. SMITH of California: A bill (H. R. 16478) providing a means for acquiring title to private holdings in the Sequoia and General Grant national parks, in the State of California, in which are big trees and other natural curiosities and wonders—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BRANTLEY: A bill (H. R. 16479) to make spirituous, malt, vinous, and intoxicating liquors of all kinds in interstate commerce a special class in such commerce, and to regulate in certain cases the transportation and sale thereof—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TAWNEY: A bill (H. R. 16480) to levy a tax upon the issuance of coupons, prize tickets, and other devices, and on the redemption, payment, purchase, or exchange of coupons, prize tickets, tags, bands, or other articles, things, or parts of articles or things that shall have been attached to, packed in or with or formed a part of, or encircling any manufactured tobacco, cigar or cigars, cigarette or cigarettes, or snuff, or any stamped package or receptacle thereof—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: A bill (H. R. 16481) appropriating $10,000 to enlarge the public building at Toledo, Ohio, to meet the necessities of public business—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. GILLESPIE: A bill (H. R. 16482) to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission under Senate joint resolution No. 32, passed by the present Congress, and to make an appropriation for carrying out the purpose of said resolution—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WADSWORTH: A bill (H. R. 16483) requiring certain places of business in the District of Columbia to be closed on Sunday—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, from the Committee on the District of Columbia: A bill (H. R. 16484) to amend section 1 of an act entitled "An act relating to the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia," approved February 28, 1901—to the Union Calendar.

By Mr. TOWNSEND: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 115) amending joint resolution instructing the Interstate Commerce Commission to make examinations into the subject of railroad discriminations and monopolies, and report on the same from time to time, approved March 7, 1906—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GILLETT of California: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 116) accepting the recession by the State of California of the Yosemite Valley grant and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove, and including the same, together with fractional sections 5 and 6, township 5 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo meridian, California, within the metes and bounds of the Yosemite National Park, and changing the boundaries thereof—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. HAYES: A concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 23) calling for a survey and estimate for removing certain rocks in San Francisco Harbor—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. SULLOWAY: A resolution (H. Res. 363) classifying employees of the House cloakrooms as skilled laborers and fixing their compensation as such—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. CAPRON: A resolution (H. Res. 364) authorizing the employment of a machinist in the heating and ventilating department of the House in lieu of a fireman—to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDRUS: A bill (H. R. 16485) for the relief of the estate of John T. McCord, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. BOWIE: A bill (H. R. 16486) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Bosworth—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 16487) granting an increase of pension to Mrs. Martha Lavender—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16488) granting an increase of pension to Charles Hopkins—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CHAPMAN: A bill (H. R. 16489) granting a pension to Minnie Strange—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16490) granting an increase of pension to Peter Anderson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16491) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Denson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16492) granting an increase of pension to John M. Logan—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 16493) granting an increase of pension to W. T. Sallee—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16494) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Clark—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CONNER: A bill (H. R. 16495) granting a pension to M. L. Bennett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16496) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Daily—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DAVIS of West Virgina: A bill (H. R. 16497) for the relief of John Edwards, alias John D. Edwards—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16498) for the relief of the estate of James Watson, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16499) granting a pension to George W. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16500) granting an increase of pension to Robert A. A. Collins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GREGG: A bill (H. R. 16501) for the relief of Edward Haines, John Haugland, Wallace L. Reed, W. D. Davis, Martin Monson, Johann Bottjer, and the legal representatives of J. P. Ferweda, deceased—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: A bill (H. R. 16502) for the relief of John H. McKenna—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 16503) granting an increase of pension to Wesley C. Sawyer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HILL of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 16504) granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Barnum—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HILL of Mississippi: A bill (H. R. 16505) granting an increase of pension to Narcissa G. Short—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: A bill (H. R. 16506) granting an increase of pension to Kate S. T. Church—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUBBARD: A bill (H. R. 16507) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of John Schmitz—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16508) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Jacob L. Lynn—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16509) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Charles F. Chamberlain—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16510) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William M. Carroll—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JONES of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 16511) for the relief of Joseph O. Smith—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KLINE: A bill (H. R. 16512) granting a pension to Ebzena Rambo—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LONGWORTH: A bill (H. R. 16513) granting a pension to Bridget M. Duffy—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOUDENSLAGER: A bill (H. R. 16514) granting an increase of pension to John W. Barton—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McCARTHY: A bill (H. R. 16515) for the relief of Robert Gray—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. McGAVIN: A bill (H. R. 16516) granting an increase of pension to James B. Fairchild—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MANN: A bill (H. R. 16517) granting an increase of pension to S. W. Tanner—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MADDEN: A bill (H. R. 16518) for the relief of George F. Dewey—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MARTIN: A bill (H. R. 16519) granting an increase of pension to Erwin G. Dudley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 16520) granting an increase of pension to Edward C. Farrell—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16521) directing the Secretary of the Interior to convey a certain parcel of land to Johnson County, Wyo.—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. OTJEN: A bill (H. R. 16522) granting an increase of pension to Charles Meyer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PADGETT: A bill (H. R. 16523) granting an increase of pension to Charles P. Hopkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PAGE: A bill (H. R. 16524) granting an increase of pension to Samuel S. Hunter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PATTERSON of North Carolina: A bill (H. R. 16525) granting an increase of pension to M. A. Nash—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16526) granting an increase of pension to James R. Hilliard—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16527) granting an increase of pension to William Martin—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16528) granting an increase of pension to Catherine Price—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16529) granting an increase of pension to James M. Sykes—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16530) granting an increase of pension to William H. Gautier—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PATTERSON of South Carolina: A bill (H. R. 16531) for the relief of the trustees of Columbia Baptist Church—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. PAYNE: A bill (H. R. 16532) granting an increase of pension to William Barber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. POWERS: A bill (H. R. 16533) granting an increase of pension to Otis L. Keith—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 16534) for the relief of the heirs of William A. Redman, deceased—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. SMYSER: A bill (H. R. 16535) granting an increase of pension to Jonathan I. Wright—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16536) granting an increase of pension to Cyrus S. Case—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. VAN WINKLE: A bill (H. R. 16537) granting an increase of pension to Mary L. Beardsley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16538) granting an increase of pension to Catharine Eucke—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEBB: A bill (H. R. 16539) granting a pension to Mary A. Hampton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16540) granting an increase of pension to Sarah M. Evans—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16541) granting an increase of pension to Ambrose Y. Teague—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16542) granting an increase of pension to Samuel J. Kent—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16543) to complete the military record of Reuben K. Deaver—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WOODYARD: A bill (H. R. 16544) for the relief of the heirs of James H. Cooper—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CHANEY: A bill (H. R. 16545) to correct the military record of George W. Dunning—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WACHTER: A bill (H. R. 16546) granting an increase of pension to Louis F. Beeler—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16547) granting an increase of pension to John Rutter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of Albert Godchaux, for quarantine in charge of the National Government—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Fifth Baptist Church of Philadelphia, relative to affairs in the Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ANDRUS: Petition of the Dayspring Presbyterian Church, against bill H. R. 7043—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BARTHOLDT: Petition of Fred Swaine, protesting against the parcels-post bill—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BEALL of Texas: Petition of the Iron Molders' Union of Dallas, Tex., favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of members of the F. E. and C. U. A., Local No. 1760, for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BOWERSOCK: Petition of citizens of Blue Mound, Kans., against bills H. R. 3022 and 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Manufacturers' Association of Chicago, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BROWN: Petition of citizens of Wood County, Wis., protesting against passage of bill H. R. 3022—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Martha Lavender—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CASSEL: Petition of Bureau Brothers, of Philadelphia, relative to free entry of bronze sculptures—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of residents of Lancaster County, Pa., relative to the People's United States Bank—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of the National Bank of Manheim, Pa., for bill H. R. 8973—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of residents of Lancaster County, Pa., against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the German-American Alliance, relative to the franking privilege—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Division No. 104, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, for the Bates-Penrose bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of residents of Pennsylvania, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Delaware Valley Naturalists' Union, for preservation of Niagara Falls—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CONNER: Petition of 300 persons of Fort Dodge, Iowa, for an amendment to the Constitution to suppress polygamy—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CURRIER: Petition of Pilot Grange, of Percy, N. H., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia: Petition of the Tucker (W. Va.) Democrat and Times, for removal of the tax on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of West Virginia, in favor of bill H. R. 180, the good-roads bill—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, resolution of Ridgedale Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, for the further restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, papers to accompany bill for the relief of George W. Johnson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DAWES: Petition of citizens of Ohio, favoring restriction of immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of citizens of Ohio, against intoxicating beverages on Army transports—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, joint resolution of the Ohio assembly, for bill H. R. 7046—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of Ohio, relative to restoration of the old National Road as a historic landmark—to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DUNWELL: Petition of C. C. Carpenter et al., of Ellenburg Center, N. Y., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Charities and the Commons (a journal), relative to charities in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, of Chicago, Ill., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of citizens of New York, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FLACK: Petition of George W. Harper, against the tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of American members of the Educational Association of China, relative to admission of Chinese students—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GILLETT of Massachusetts: Petition of 164 residents of Athol, Mass., against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of trustees of the Boston Athenæum, protesting against the proposed amendment to the copyright law—to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. GRONNA: Petition of C. A. Benninghause, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John H. McKenna—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HASKINS: Petition of Vernon (Vt.) Grange, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYES: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Wesley C. Sawyer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of banks of San Francisco, against bill H. R. 48—to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. HERMANN: Petition of the Theatrical Stage Employees' Union, of Portland, Oreg., against bill S. 27—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of citizens of Oregon, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HILL of Connecticut: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Thomas W. Barnum—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, petition of Franklin Bartlett Camp, No. 11, Sons of Veterans, against bill H. R. 8131—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Painters' Union No. 481, of Hartford, Conn., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Herbert E. Smythe et al., of Bridgeport, Conn., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HITT: Petition of citizens of Warren, Ill., against a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey: Petition of J. B. Day, of Red Bank, N. J., for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Randall Spaulding, of Montclair, N. J., favoring the National Educational Association—to the Committee on Education.

Also, petition of the Wednesday Morning Club, of Cranford, N. J., for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of C. J. Baxter, for reincorporation of the National Educational Association—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. HUBBARD: Petition of citizens of Sioux City, Iowa, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HUFF: Petition of Loyal Freeman Hall, of Butler, Pa., for reincorporation of the National Teachers' Association—to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. JENKINS: Petition of citizens of Wisconsin, against bills H. R. 3022 and 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska: Petition of citizens of Nebraska, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. KINKAID: Petition of citizens of Nebraska, against repeal of the oleomargarine law—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. LAMB: Petition of citizens of Richmond, Va., against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LEE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph J. Good—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of the American Wine Growers' Association, for a pure-wine law—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LITTLEFIELD: Petition of citizens of Maine, relative to reform in the Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. LIVINGSTON: Petition of citizens of Georgia, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LLOYD: Petition of citizens of Missouri, against religious legislation—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LORIMER: Petition of citizens of Chicago, Ill., against the Hepburn-Dolliver bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McCALL: Petition of manufacturers of Boston, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McGAVIN: Petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief of heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, petition of the Lake Seamen's Union, relative to the merchant marine of the Great Lakes—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MOON of Tennessee: Paper to accompany bill for relief of estate of Austin Hackworth—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Jasper Hackworth—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of estate of John A. Easterly—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of heirs of John A. Pickett—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of heirs of Burrell L. Bennett—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of D. J. Rodgers—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of heirs of Margaret Sivley—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mrs. M. J. Roberts—to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Edward D. Pickett—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MOUSER: Petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity, for relief of heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. OTJEN: Petition of Burdick Allen et al., of Milwaukee, Wis., against the anti-injunction bill—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Daily Kuryer Polski, of Milwaukee, Wis., for removal of the tax on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. OVERSTREET: Petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PADGETT: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles P. Hopkins—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PAGE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of S. S. Hunter—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PATTERSON of South Carolina: Paper to accompany bill for relief of trustees of Columbia Baptist Church—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. ROBERTS: Petition of Charles Wellington, professor of chemistry of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RYAN: Resolution of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, favoring free alcohol in the arts—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHACKLEFORD: Petition of the Association of Mexican War Veterans, for increase of pension—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHARTEL: Petition of citizens of Missouri, against bill H. R. 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SMITH of Texas: Petition of citizens of Texas, for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. SOUTHARD: Petition of the faculty of the University of Washington, for the metric system—to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. STERLING: Petition of citizens of Bloomington, Ill., against bill H. R. 3022—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. THOMAS of Ohio: Petition of the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, of Chicago, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of citizens of Ohio, against bills H. R. 3022 and 10510—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of citizens of Ohio, for a parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of the National Grange and H. S. Gargett, for repeal of revenue tax on denaturized alcohol—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. TIRRELL: Petition of many citizens of New York and vicinity for relief for heirs of victims of General Slocum disaster—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: Petition of John Zobrist, of Billingham, Minn., for the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WACHTER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Louis F. Beeler—to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of John Rutter—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WEBB: Petition of the Hibernian Benevolent Society of Wilmington, N. C., for a statue of Commodore John Barry—to the Committee on the Library.

SENATE.

MONDAY, March 12, 1906.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. EDWARD E. HALE.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Friday last, when, on request of Mr. KEAN, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

CHOCTAW INDIAN FUND.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of the Interior submitting a draft of an item for incorporation in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1907, for the appropriation and disposition of certain moneys due the Choctaw tribe of Indians under treaty stipulations and agreements with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians aggregating $600,657.92; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

JOHN HUDGINS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 5th instant, a report and statement made by the Auditor for the Post-Office Department relative to a balance of $246.57 found due John Hudgins, of Grand River, Mo., for carrying the mail from July 1, 1858, to November 5, 1861, etc.; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and ordered to be printed.

INDIAN LANDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the draft of a bill to afford relief in cases where the United States holds land in trust for a minor Indian allottee or minor heir of a deceased allottee; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution requesting the President of the United States to return to the House the bill (H. R. 8494) granting an increase of pension to David A. Jones; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 523. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin G. Hawkins;

H. R. 533. An act granting an increase of pension to Sumner F. Hunnewell;

H. R. 552. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Nortrip;
H. R. 1027. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Friend;
H. R. 1241. An act granting an increase of pension to John G. Wallace;
H. R. 1322. An act granting an increase of pension to Katherine F. Wainwright;
H. R. 1468. An act granting an increase of pension to Morris B. Drake;
H. R. 1655. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry A. Wheeler;
H. R. 1895. An act granting a pension to H. Edward Goetz;
H. R. 1897. An act granting an increase of pension to William R. Duncan;
H. R. 1913. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Conley;
H. R. 2034. An act granting a pension to Cora F. Mitchell;
H. R. 2082. An act granting an increase of pension to Siotha Bennett;
H. R. 2090. An act granting an increase of pension to Ellen M. Brant;
H. R. 2195. An act granting an increase of pension to Hannah A. Sawyer;
H. R. 2202. An act granting a pension to Ellen Harriman;
H. R. 2267. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Rupert;
H. R. 2341. An act granting an increase of pension to Helen H. Hulbert;
H. R. 2396. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Hull;
H. R. 2640. An act granting an increase of pension to Decatur Harmon;
H. R. 2697. An act granting an increase of pension to Rufus G. Childress;
H. R. 2765. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Benson;
H. R. 2780. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Fifield;
H. R. 2984. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Gildersleeve;
H. R. 3007. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Carder;
H. R. 3197. An act granting an increase of pension to Milo G. Gibson;
H. R. 3223. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas G. McLaughlin;
H. R. 3233. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucius R. Simons;
H. R. 3281. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas F. Underwood;
H. R. 3344. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Sanborn;
H. R. 3456. An act granting an increase of pension to David B. Ott;
H. R. 3484. An act granting an increase of pension to Edson J. Harrison;
H. R. 3541. An act granting a pension to Dora A. Weathersby;
H. R. 3660. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Hill;
H. R. 3978. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Greenlee;
H. R. 4209. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin Callahan;
H. R. 4261. An act granting a pension to A. Louisa S. McWhinnie;
H. R. 4352. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Wolcott;
H. R. 4593. An act granting a pension to William C. Short;
H. R. 4598. An act granting an increase of pension to James B. Barry;
H. R. 4633. An act granting an increase of pension to Fannie E. Morrow;
H. R. 4691. An act granting an increase of pension to George L. Janney;
H. R. 4717. An act granting a pension to Marshall U. Gage;
H. R. 4766. An act granting an increase of pension to John Deardourff;
H. R. 4888. An act granting an increase of pension to William Moore;
H. R. 4946. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Lewis;
H. R. 5252. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Howard;
H. R. 5403. An act granting an increase of pension to John Lines;
H. R. 5485. An act granting a pension to Horace D. Mann;
H. R. 5486. An act granting a pension to Margarett Carroll;
H. R. 5725. An act granting an increase of pension to John G. Davis;
H. R. 5726. An act granting an increase of pension to Cate E. Cobb;
H. R. 5917. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry G. Bollinger;
H. R. 5936. An act granting an increase of pension to Caroline Neilson;
H. R. 6058. An act granting an increase of pension to Emilie Scheldt;
H. R. 6110. An act granting an increase of pension to Abram W. Davenport;
H. R. 6128. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Patterson;
H. R. 6142. An act granting an increase of pension to David Davis;
H. R. 6407. An act granting an increase of pension to William Blair;
H. R. 6465. An act granting an increase of pension to Augustus Joyeux;
H. R. 6488. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank Osterberg, alias William McKay;
H. R. 6775. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. Lincoln;
H. R. 6888. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Hannah;
H. R. 6946. An act granting an increase of pension to Elias Claunch;
H. R. 7225. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary O. Arnold;
H. R. 7331. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Porter;
H. R. 7495. An act granting a pension to Susie M. Gerth;
H. R. 7515. An act granting an increase of pension to Firman F. Kirk;
H. R. 7588. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas F. Dowling;
H. R. 7609. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles W. Henderson;
H. R. 7681. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Miller;
H. R. 7738. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin J. Keck;
H. R. 7806. An act granting an increase of pension to Johanna Walgwist;
H. R. 7807. An act granting an increase of pension to John D. Atwater;
H. R. 7823. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie E. Peters;
H. R. 7876. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius Beier;
H. R. 7951. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Pitchford;
H. R. 8042. An act granting an increase of pension to Bottol Larsen;
H. R. 8062. An act granting an increase of pension to John K. Miller;
H. R. 8137. An act granting an increase of pension to Marion L. Holvenstot;
H. R. 8206. An act granting an increase of pension to Carner C. Welch;
H. R. 8315. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Cannedy;
H. R. 8316. An act granting an increase of pension to William Smith;
H. R. 8328. An act granting an increase of pension to Ira Grabill;
H. R. 8530. An act granting a pension to Benjamin Q. Ward;
H. R. 8565. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew La Forge;
H. R. 8578. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin G. Mattern;
H. R. 8665. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram Long;
H. R. 8722. An act granting an increase of pension to Arthur M. Lee;
H. R. 8725. An act granting an increase of pension to Moses B. Davis;
H. R. 8823. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles C. Briant;

H. R. 8930. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret Becker;
H. R. 8942. An act granting an increase of pension to Marquis L. Johnson;
H. R. 9053. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Jones;
H. R. 9093. An act granting an increase of pension to Farrie M. Allis;
H. R. 9126. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathan Parish;
H. R. 9296. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth D. Hoppin;
H. R. 9406. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis W. Preston;
H. R. 9661. An act granting a pension to Charles R. Hill;
H. R. 9813. An act granting a pension to Harriet P. Sanders;
H. R. 9839. An act granting an increase of pension to Jesse Siler;
H. R. 9888. An act granting a pension to Abigail Townsend;
H. R. 9924. An act granting an increase of pension to Carrie A. Conley;
H. R. 10019. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonathan Shook;
H. R. 10230. An act granting an increase of pension to Clark A. Winans;
H. R. 10252. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Vincent;
H. R. 10293. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah F. Galbraith;
H. R. 10300. An act granting an increase of pension to George C. Sackett;
H. R. 10326. An act granting an increase of pension to Edmund Chapman;
H. R. 10396. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Malone;
H. R. 10404. An act granting an increase of pension to John Moules;
H. R. 10448. An act granting an increase of pension to George M. Frazer;
H. R. 10450. An act granting an increase of pension to Silas H. Ballard;
H. R. 10490. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucius A. West;
H. R. 10562. An act granting an increase of pension to Alphenis M. Beall;
H. R. 10622. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Ward;
H. R. 10753. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Keller;
H. R. 10785. An act granting a pension to Thomas J. Chambers;
H. R. 10816. An act granting an increase of pension to August Bauer;
H. R. 10879. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas E. Myers;
H. R. 10900. An act granting an increase of pension to Arthur R. Dreppard;
H. R. 10907. An act granting an increase of pension to John N. Boyd;
H. R. 10923. An act granting an increase of pension to Matilda Rockwell;
H. R. 11076. An act granting a pension to Marion W. Stark;
H. R. 11143. An act granting an increase of pension to Levi B. Noulton;
H. R. 11168. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert R. Matthews;
H. R. 11206. An act granting an increase of pension to John Wilhelm;
H. R. 11409. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah H. Seabold;
H. R. 11484. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. Wilson;
H. R. 11509. An act granting an increase of pension to Josephine Hoornbeck;
H. R. 11563. An act granting an increase of pension to John Henderson;
H. R. 11597. An act granting an increase of pension to George M. Apgar;
H. R. 11622. An act granting a pension to Martha A. Remington;
H. R. 11667. An act granting an increase of pension to George E. King;
H. R. 11690. An act granting an increase of pension to Lewis Lowry;
H. R. 11691. An act granting an increase of pension to John Clark;
H. R. 11702. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucy A. Pender;
H. R. 11716. An act granting an increase of pension to Warren B. Tompkins;
H. R. 11856. An act granting an increase of pension to Luke McLoney;
H. R. 11866. An act granting an increase of pension to David H. Allen;
H. R. 11868. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Dougal;
H. R. 11873. An act granting a pension to Joseph B. Fonner, alias John Havens;
H. R. 11926. An act granting an increase of pension to John Hornbeak;
H. R. 11946. An act to amend section 6 of an act approved February 8, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and the Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes;"
H. R. 12099. An act granting a pension to Charlotte A. McCormick;
H. R. 12122. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert G. Shuey;
H. R. 12182. An act granting a pension to Sallie W. Mason;
H. R. 12187. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary L. Davenport;
H. R. 12192. An act granting an increase of pension to William Cummings;
H. R. 12194. An act granting a pension to Minnie Irwin;
H. R. 12205. An act granting an increase of pension to George Holden;
H. R. 12241. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth E. Barber;
H. R. 12498. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Runnels;
H. R. 12509. An act granting an increase of pension to Benjamin Botner;
H. R. 12532. An act granting an increase of pension to Zachariah George;
H. R. 12533. An act granting an increase of pension to Zadick Carter;
H. R. 12541. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward V. Miles;
H. R. 12578. An act granting an increase of pension to John B. Craig;
H. R. 12651. An act granting a pension to Louis Grossman;
H. R. 12880. An act granting an increase of pension to Lorenzo D. Mason;
H. R. 12884. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucinda Gain;
H. R. 12992. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry G. Klink;
H. R. 13079. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Griffin;
H. R. 13110. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Moomaw;
H. R. 13153. An act granting an increase of pension to George Budden;
H. R. 13170. An act granting an increase of pension to John R. Mabee;
H. R. 13198. An act granting an increase of pension to Josiah F. Allen;
H. R. 13217. An act granting a pension to Joshua Barnes;
H. R. 13255. An act granting an increase of pension to William J. Hays;
H. R. 13336. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Horn;
H. R. 13341. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert C. Pate;
H. R. 13526. An act granting a pension to Levi N. Lunsford;
H. R. 13537. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth B. Busbee;
H. R. 13597. An act granting an increase of pension to Abram J. Bozarth;
H. R. 13723. An act granting an increase of pension to John Underwood;
H. R. 13783. An act to provide souvenir medallions for The Zebulon Montgomery Pike Monument Association;
H. R. 13803. An act granting a pension to Henry H. Forman;
H. R. 13822. An act granting an increase of pension to Augustus D. King;
H. R. 13823. An act granting an increase of pension to William Van Keuren;

H. R. 13866. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac Place;
H. R. 13884. An act granting an increase of pension to Helen Augusta Mason Boynton;
H. R. 14078. An act granting an increase of pension to Catherine Summers;
H. R. 14113. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac N. Perry;
H. R. 14131. An act granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Simpson;
H. R. 14143. An act granting an increase of pension to Zacur P. Pott;
H. R. 14235. An act granting an increase of pension to John Williams;
H. R. 14241. An act granting an increase of pension to Lydia M. Edwards;
